VOL. 1. BONTHE SHERBRO, WEST AFRICA. JANUARY, 1885. No. 12

An address delivered at the Sabbath-school Anniversary of the Wesleyan Church Bonthe. December 21st, 1884 by

REV. I. A. EVANS.

The Sabbath school was first introduced more than a hundred years ago. Its earlier objects seems to have been rather to instruct in the rudiments of letters, those who from whatever circumstances had not the opportunity of attending week day school; whether the original idea was that this instruction should be used, merely as getting a knowledge of the Holy Scriptures, thus it was for general literature I am not well informed; yet I should think that it was early turned into this channel, and ere long the religious idea prevailed over the secular and the promoters of Sunday schools began to consider more and more the spiritual wants of those for whom they laboured. As this idea advanced, Sunday-schools became more general in their character, and were no longer restricted to the poor and destitute nor yet were they carried on so much for literary instruction as for the instilling of principles; not so much to tutor the intellect, as to train the mind, and influence the heart, to the reception of the truth of the gospel. Hence the aim of the Sunday school to give religious, or catechetical instruction, especially to the young; as such then they are the nurseries of our churches, where the religious impressions must be made and largely matured; for this reason then parents and guardians cannot give too much of their concern to these Schools or institutions; therefore instead of treating them as many do as places for the children, their teacher and one or two adults every mother and father (I speak thus of mother because she is the first with the child) ought to give particular and punctual attendance to the Sunday-school on account of the formatory processes that are constantly going on in them; every parent ought to be interested, deeply interested, in the matter and manner of their children's training. Again if it be accepted that the Sunday-school is the training institution of the youth for the church; another duty devolves upon parents, teachers, guardians, and in fact every lover of the good, and that is the duty not only of personal attendance but also of getting others to attend the school Go out into the streets, farkies, and along the river or water side and gather them in, gather all you can find of all conditions rich and poor, high and low, heathen and civilized; constant and persistent effort ought to be made to not only keep up, but increase the attendance. An evil almost every where to be found is the almost total absence of parents from Sabbath school this I have already hinted ought not to be. Parent's attendance would greatly increase the numbers, and, in very many cases, be a source of encouragement to Pastor, Superintendent, and Teachers; it would also insure in most cases more thorough work on the part of all; and by the way many of the of the parents could lend assistance as Teachers and Officers, and in all cases they would be the personal inspectors of the training of their children in the most important department of instruction which in itself should be sufficient reason to urge for your attendance and interest, but when I must tell you that the building up of your church depends as largely, yea more largely upon your Sabbath-school than any other agency you can employ, then you must admit the importance of the institution to the Church for training the minds of your children during the time of the formation of thought, habits, and principles. The child who receives proper religious impressions at such a stage in life, will have them so indelibly impressed upon the mind that time itself cannot efface them.

The Sunday-school too, greatly improves society; for the teaching and instilling of such good precepts and doctrines as are taught in the Sabbath-school cannot fail to improve the condition of any locality where they are inculcated so that as I have before hinted every lover of the good, and the promotion of the same should be interested in the success of the Sabbath-school. A great Catholic prelate, once said, that give him the children of any place for seven years and he would take it for his church, convert its people to his religious tenets. Now if it is possible for a man by the control of the children for seven years to change that place from the faith and religious practices to which it formerly adhered to that of a religion so formal as Roman Catholicism to transform the faith and practice of men in so short a time, what must be the influence of a church possessing experimental religion, real spiritual life, exerted upon the youth of a community for a like period? It certainly must influence them largely to the faith of that church; hence then you may depend upon it that you will strengthen your church in proportion to the number of children you can bring under your control. Society will be improved by the practice of the religious principles taught by your Sabbath school.

The great men of the civilized nations of christendom are those who early in life became impressed with the proper principles of justice and right and thus have been enabled to adorn society with their righteous and able councils in the deliberations of men; and as there is no other institution so well calculated to rightly impress the early minds of men as the Sunday-school then every one should labor for its promotion. Your song was right go out and bring in one, yes bring two, and be determined what you are able to do, do it with your might; yes children do all you can, it is a great work a noble work you are engaged in therefore put forth every effort to increase your attendance. The Sabbath school is alike useful to all peoples, lands and tongues of the Earth, has spread itself abroad over all christendom. China India, Japan, and Africa have alike shared its beneficial influence together with the Christian and highly civilized land of England, America, and continental European countries. It teaches the truth that begits the earth and binds all lands together yea and if fully taught will cause wars and commotions to cease. Will ultimately bring about the long desired period in the world when righteousness shall fill the earth as the waters do the channels of the great deep. Yea it teaches the truths of Jesus which shall triumph over error, vice, and superstition. The truth that holds all hearts in one — The truth that transforms the vilest men into saints of light — The truth that changes the lion's nature to that of a lamb — The truth that elevates mankind in the scale of being — the truth that raises the world and draws the heavens down until mercy and truth shall kiss each other and righteousness shall prevail in the kingdom of men; with whom they get more heart in their work. Be it understood now, and always that those employed in our missions must do their duty, or go elsewhere. Drones, and more time servers, and those who engage in private business, to make a little money for themselves, cant stay with us, any longer than the time necessary to inform them to leave. Mission money is too sacred, and hard to get to waste on such persons, and it will not be done knowingly.

Thirty years ago this month, I sailed from New York City the first time for Africa. The appearance of this Sherbro country then was quite different from what it is now. Bonthe was then a small ragged village, and Good Hope station, and Mr. Nathan's factory were then the only additional institutions there, and they were small affairs. No religious services were then held by any except the A. M. A. Missionaries, in all that country. Now there are a number on Sherbro Island and there about, who are laboring to lead the people to Christ The Commerce of this country has also grown to wonderful proportions from what it was then.

Much as there is yet to be done to develop and make both the country and people what they ought to be, a great change for the better has taken place in 30 years. As a matter of course there are as degraded heathens now as there were then, and there are now as great sinners in England and America as there were fifty years ago. This does not weaken the fact that the cause of Christ has made great progress in these countries in the last half century. Nor does the fact that there is so much heathenism here still, weaken the fact that these Missions, with their day and Sunday Schools have greatly improved the condition of many people here.

Of the over 1000 who are upon our books as learners in the school of Christ suppose only one in ten are christians. This with the fact that at least a couple dozen have died within the last 14 years at Shengay, giving satisfactory evidence in their last moments that Christ was their Saviour is something to encourage the friends and supporters of our Missions. How many have gone to Heaven as the result of the labors of Missionaries of Sherbro, Mendi, and Bompeh Mission, in the last 30 years, God only knows; but it is safe to number them by scores, and more will follow. Of the hundred being taught to read God's word, and to whom our itinerants preach we have reasons to believe scores more will be saved.

December 16. We have just returned to Shengay Mr. Gomer and myself having now seen all our mission stations, and decided on the course to pursue for the year 1885.

As what was to be a short article has grown to one of considerable length, I will say but little of Rembee, Mambo, Mofusa and Mocobo stations. Their locations make it easy for those in charge to reach many people, and for the work which has been done, they are succeeding well Better work must be done at some of them, and no doubt will be under the new arrangements.

THE DECANTER'S SONG.

There was an old decanter and its mouth was gaping wide; the rosy wine had ebbed away and left its crystal side;
And the wind
we it humming humming up and
sides it flew,
and through the reed-like hollow neck the wildest notes it blew. I placed it in the window, where the blast was blowing free, and fancied that its pale mouth sang the queerest strains to me; They tell me—puny conquerors! the plague has slain its ten, and war its hundred thousands of the very best of men; but I—'twas thus the bottle spoke—but I have conquered more than all your famous conquerors so feared and famed of yore.
Then come, ye youths and maidens, come drink from out my cup the beverage that dulls the brain and burns the spirit up;
that puts to shame
the conquerors
that slay their
for this has deluged millions with the la-
va tide of woe.
Though in the path of battle darkest waves of blood may roll, yet while I killed the body I have damned
the very soul. And still
I breathe upon them and they shrink before my breath, and year by year my thousands tred adown
the dismal road to death.

Dear Sir,— Alas, my promise to furnish you an article for your January paper was forgotten until this morning. In two hours, Mr. Gomer and myself start for Cockborough side to visit the four mission stations we have there, and hence a short article this time.

Last week we spent five days and traveled 240 miles, in row boat, going to Manoh, Kookoong, Mambo, Avery, Good Hope, Charmany, and Tongkolah stations. We saw much to cheer and encourage us, and something to grieve us at some of the stations. There has been some carelessness and indolence upon the part of some of the native helpers which led us to dismiss several, and others will be thus dealt with unless they get more heart in their work. Be it understood now, and always that those employed in our missions must do their duty, or go elsewhere. Drones, and more time servers, and those who engage in private business, to make a little money for themselves, cant stay with us, any longer than the time necessary to inform them to leave. An address delivered at the Sabbath-school Anniversary of the Wesleyan Church Bonthe. December 21st, 1884. by

REV. I. A. EVANS.

The Sabbath school was first introduced more than a hundred years ago. Its chief object seems to have been rather to instruct in the rudiments of letters, than to impart whatever religious knowledge and the opportunity of attending each day school; whether the original idea was that this instruction should be used more for the purpose than the glory of the Holy Scriptures, that it was for a certain literature and not for religion, I should think that it was early formed into this channel, and on being the subject which prevailed over the nation and the promoters of Sunday schools began to consider more and more the spiritual wants of those for whom they laboured. As this idea advanced, Sunday schools became more general in their character, and were no longer restricted to the poor and destitute of your city, they entered on so much larger field of instruction as for the instilling of principles, not so much to tutor the intellect, as to, train the mind, and influence the heart, to the reception of the truth of the gospel. Hence the aim of the Sunday school to give religious, or rather practical instruction, especially to the young as such as they are supposed to be found in such places, where the religious impressions could be made and largely instilled, for this reason their parents and guardians cannot give too much of their attention to these Schools, in addition to sending instead of treating them as mere places for the children, their leader and one or two adults every mother and father (I speak this of mothers because she is the first with the child) ought to give particular and punctual attendance to the Sunday school on account of the children. Progress. That go constantly going on in every young parent ought to be interested, people to be interested, in the matter and manner of their children's teachings. A word it be accepted that the Sunday school is the training institution of the youth for the church, another only receives upon parents, teachers, guardians and in fact every lover of the good, and that is the duty not only of personal attendance but also of getting others to attend the school for out into the streets, lanes, and along the river or water side and gather them in, gather all you can find of all conditions rich and poor, high and low, heathen and civilized, constant, and persistent effort ought to be made to not only keep up but increase the attendance. An evil almost everywhere to be found is the almost total absence of parents from Sabbath school this I have already hinted at before. Parents' attendance would greatly increase the numbers, and, in very many cases, be a source of encouragement to the Superintendent, and Teachers; it would also insure in most cases more favourable work on the part of all and in the case many of the parents could render assistance as teachers and Officers, and in all cases they would be the best of inspectors of the training of their children in the most important of all instruction, that in itself sufficient reason to urge for your attendance and interest, but when I must tell you that the building up of your church depends as largely, yea more largely upon your Sabbath school than any other agency you can employ, then you must admit the importance of the institution to the Church for training the minds of your children during the time of the formation of thought, habits, and principles. The child who receives proper religious impressions at such a stage in life, will have them so indelibly impressed upon the mind that time itself cannot efface them.

The Sunday school too, greatly increases society for the teaching and instilling of such good precepts and doctrines as are taught in the Sabbath school cannot fail to improve the condition of any society where they are inculcated. I have before hinted every hour of the week, and the promotion of the same should be interested in the success of the Sabbath school. A R C Catholic prelate, once said, that give him the children of a city place for seven years and he would take it for his church, convert its people to his religious tenets. Now if it is possible for a man to the control of the children for seven years to change that place from the faith and religious practices to which it formerly adhered to that of a religion so formal as Roman Catholicism to transform the faith and practice of men in so short a time, what must be the influence of a church possessing experimental religion, real spiritual life, exerted upon the youth of a community for a like period? It certainly must influence them largely to the faith of that church before they can have arrived upon it that you will strengthen your church in proportion to the number of children you can bring under your control. Society will be improved by the practice of the religious principles taught by your Sabbath school.

The great men of the civilized nations of christendom are those who early in life became impressed with the proper principles of justice and right and thus have been enabled to adorn society with their righteous and able counsels in the affairs of men and as there is no other institution so well calculated to rightly impress the early minds of men as the Sunday school then every one should labour for its promotion. Your song was right, come out and bring in one, yes bring them, and be determined what you are able to do, do it with your might; you child remember all you can, it is a great work a noble work you are engaged in therefore put forth every effort to increase your attendances. The Sabbath school is alike useful to all peoples, lands and kingdoms of the Earth, has spread itself abroad over all christendom, China India, Japan, and Africa have alike shared its beneficial influence together with the Christian and highly civilized land of England, America, and continental European countries. It teaches mankind that begets the earth and binds them together as one, but fully taught all causes wars and commotions to cease. Will ultimately bring about the long desired period in the world, when righteousness shall fill the earth as the waters do the channels of the great deep. Yes it teaches the truths of love which triumph over error, vice, and superstition. The truth that leads all to arts. The truth that transforms the savage into the civilized, the light of truth that changes the lion's nature to that of a lamb — The truth that elevates mankind in the scale of being — the truth that raises the world and draws the heavens down until mercy and truth shall kiss each other and righteousness shall prevail in the kingdom of men.

May the Lord add His blessings and save us for His name and mercy's sake.

In another column will be found a correspondence from an Observer, giving an account of the recent visit of the Commandant to the Kittim, and the results that followed We sincerely hope that the good effected, may be permanent. This fact suggests however the necessity of frequent visits to the different parts of his district, by the Commandant of Sherbro. Our official staff is too small to meet the wants of this large and important district, and the Commandant too heavily burdened by duties which should rest upon other shoulders. The revenue of the district, paid by the Merchants and traders whose interest are often imperilled for want of a timely visit and interposition, is more than enough to keep a magistrate in Sherbro so that the Commandant unencumbered with the duties of magistrate may have ample time to visit and hear the complaints of the Native chiefs. Although a Commissioner or other officer in the Kittim might prove a great boon to traders and chiefs in the Kittim. this would yet be unable to meet the wants and demands of the people in other portions of the district such as upper and lower Bargroo, and the Boom rivers. We hear it said that an ounce of prevention is worth more than a pound of cure. We hope these suggestions are timely CONFIDENCE has been so far restored since the recent trip to the Kittim by the Acting Commandant of Sherbro, that Our Merchants and traders are making preparations for a re-opening of their trading factories in that section of the country. We learn also that the firm of Messrs. Randall and Fisher intended to open extensively at M'Palmah and Korauker in the Kittim. Mr. S. B A. Macfoy is also similarly engaged in the same River.

WE have been informed that some time during last month two clergymen connected with the Wesleyan Missionary Society visited Chief Tucker at his town Mogombo, and prior to their departure obtained his permission to erect a Church in a town adjoining Gambia. In addition to the Chief giving his consent to the desirable object, he promised to contribute posts for the building, and to allow his men to assist generally in the work. During a recent visit of the Acting Commandant Mr. Moseley to Gambia, that gentleman selected a spot on which the church is to be erected, and we understand, the ground has been brushed and made ready to build upon.

The hearty welcome extended to Revs Messrs Thomas and Peacock on the occasion of their visit to Mr. Tucker, convinces us that he hails with delight the prospect of having the Word of God preached to his people.

AT the Mission Church lately erected by Mr. Collier of Mokate the Rev. G. Nicol B. A. occasionally officiates. As a rule however the services are conducted by laymen. We are pleased to notice the rapid strides towards the spread of the gospel amongst the heathen. And if the services are conducted in a simple manner, there is no doubt but that good result will follow.

IT may not be out of place for us to suggest that a Young men's Christian Association be started in Bonthe as there is considerable work to be done by its members. The cause richly deserves the attention of our young men whose time we feel sure could not be better employed on the Sabbath than in trying to convert the heathen. Institutions of that kind tend to do good; and we hope soon to be in a position to state that the hints thrown out by us to our readers will be acted upon. And the work it undertaken be crowned with success.

THE RIBBEE BOY who was mentioned in our November issue as one of a party of young men who boarded and created disturbance on the 'John Brown' while anchored in the Shengay harbor, has sent us a letter of explanation. The letter is too lengthy for publication in this crowded space but it is fair to him to state in substance his explanation, that, being in Shengay at the arrival of "John Brown," and learning that his employer Rev. J. M. Lesher was on board with his wife both being in poor health, he proceeded on board. On reaching the pier he saw a company of young men in a boat and asked them to put him on the steamer which they did, and he left them to go into the Cabin where his master was. The scene which occured was without his knowledge and he regrets that notwithstanding his explanations to the authorities at Shengay, he should be mention'd in connection with the disgraceful affair.

We hope this explanation will satisfy his friends, and that the blame will rest only where it belongs.

MR T. J. ALLDRIDGE, M. S. A. F. Z. S. &c. left on the 30th instant for England, on a short leave of absence, by the s. s. "Benin". We believe Mr. Alldridge will return to the Sherbro, the latter end of April next.

It would seem that our contemporary the W. A Reporter, tired of its old dress and about to resume a new, is to retire from public view, at least for some time as is evident from the following which appeared in its issue of Dec 31st.

With this number we cease to publish our paper for a while, it is our intention to replenish our office with new types and all modern appliances for good printing. We hope at no distant date to resume our work. Meanwhile, if found necessary, we shall send out fly-sheets for the benefit of our readers. Those of our readers, whose term of subscription has not yet expired are at liberty to apply for any balance they would claim to THE MANAGER. The public will regret this temporary retirement of the Reporter, which has not been silent upon matters of public interest.

Miscellany.

"You Americans," said an Englishman to a young lady, "have no ancestry to which you can point with pride." "That is very true," she assented. "Most of our ancestors came from England, you know."

"A penny of your thoughts, madam," said a gentleman to a pert beauty. "They are not worth a farthing, sir," she replied; "I was thinking of you."

A lawyer who was pleading the cause of an infant plaintiff, took the child up in his arms, and presented it to the jury, weeping very much. This had a great effect, until the opposite lawyer asked the child. "What made you cry?" "He pinched me," answered the little innocent. The whole court was convulsed with laughter.

AMENITIES OF THE BAR.—Counsel is making a long dreary speech. Judge involuntarily shuts his eyes. Counsel notes the fact and exclaims: "I shall stop speaking if his lordship goes to sleep." "And I never go to sleep except when you are talking," replied the judge.

"Well," said Dumps to his wife indignantly, 'I guess I know a liar when I see one.' "Ah, indeed! was her calm reply: "been looking in the mirror, have you?"

Scene—a Sunday-School. Young lady catechising the children on the plagues of Egypt. Young Lady: 'And what became of the plague of locust?' A pause, then small boy at bottom suddenly "Please, miss I know. John the Baptist ate them."

A priest on his way to church on the Lord's Day, saw two lads with their lines and rods by the side of a stream. The good man was fond of sport, but true to his creed and cloth. "Boys" said he in a stern tone, "do you not know what day this is? Have you not been taught that it is a sin to ——" At this point down went the float with a jerk. "Pull him out pull him up!" broke out the priest. "You young fools! don't you see you've got a bite!"

A cast of arms—The garment bestowed in charity.

Wesleyan Methodist, Williams Street, Pastor,	Rev. J. C. THOMAS.
Mendi Mission, (Congregational.) Good Hope Pastor,	Rev. J. A. EVANS.

Rev. D. K. Flickinger D D our distinguished Secretary from the U. S. A. is visiting the stations in connection with the Shengay and Mendi Missions. He will remain on the coast till March next, returning in time to be present at the next General Conference and quadrennial meeting of the Board of Missions which will be held in the month of May.

Rev. J. Gomer Superintendent of the Shengay Mission, accompanied the Secretary in his rounds of the stations in connection with both Mission districts.

Rev. J. M. Lesher and wife have removed from Avery station where they have been stationed for six months and are now at Shengay. As both had poor health at Avery the Colonial surgeon said they must leave the river and get nearer the sea.

Rev W. S. Sage and wife, have taken charge of Kookoong station; a delightful place facing the sea a good society, a fine school, and farm are there.

May great success be theirs.

Coporal Crowther's police force have succeeded in capturing two canoes that were smuggling spirits from the north.

The ss John Brown towed them from Shengay to Free Town with their cargo of death when they were confiscated and sold.

A slight misunderstanding at Mr Evans seekers meeting at the Mendi Mission school house last sabbath morning, he had gathered in, a large number of Mendies, just imported from the interior; he read the 65th Psalm and made some comments, explained how and why all men should praise God he then asked if there were any present that had anything to say, for all should learn to talk and pray for themselves; the interpreter made them to understand that Mr. Evans had told God that they were very wicked and now they must pray. One man said to Mr. Evans you bring us here you must pray for us, then several others began talking, the interpreter explained that every man must pray for himself, the first speaker made answer if so you do we, I will come; and he took up his hat and left. And not until after he was gone did Mr. Evans fully understand the difficulty.

YOUNG GENTLEMEN'S CLUB.

The above named club gave its first annual entertainment of Athletic sports on Friday the 9th. instant, in the field adjoining the Mendi Mission premises. The day being fair about 300 persons witnessed the sports, among the number were the Commandant, Collector, Surgeon, and other officials, together with a number of prominent citizens of Bonthe.

Prizes were awarded for the highest jump, and also for winners in foot races of from 100 to 300 yards.

In the Tug of war between the police and government boat-men the former carried off the palm.

Our young men, many of whom are employees in Her Majesty's service, having laid aside the restraints of office life, took a part in the various sports, it was pleasant to note that no distinction was made but that many of the Mendi and Sherbro inhabitants participated in the exercises of the day and succeeded in the snatching a few of the prizes from their more civilized brethren.

In a country where boat men are indispensable as they are here, and where such great number of them are constantly in demand I claim that they should receive more attention than is commonly bestowed on them, no class of people are more neglected, more despised or worse treated, than are the very men who should receive our best sympathy, our kindest attention, and be well paid; 1st. Because they have more souls, each one worth as much as the soul of a Governor or a Prince. 2nd, Ott times our lives are largely in their hands in tornadoes and storms. At sea our deliverance depends largely on the skill and bravery of these much abused boatmen. It is they who must take us in their arms, or on their shoulders and wade through mud and water; it is they who must pull away at the oar through the scorching rays of the sun, or through the heavy dew of night, through the pelting rain, or oft times against wind and tide, it is the poor boatman that has no regular time for work but any time and all time is his to work. True, there are lazy boatmen and there are many stupid ones, they are all too more to be pitied, for their's is truely a hard lot, their scanty pay is cut, they receive a double share of abuse, a end of insult and kick and cuffs are heaped on them, Oh! pity the lot of the poor boatman and speak one kind word for him.

Tousiant.

A BAD FEE.

"Editor of the Early Dawn" Dear Sir, It was a sad and touching sight to witness the arrest of a youngman on the 24th day of December last for receiving and appropriating the money belonging to his employer. He was tried and found guilty and sentenced to one month imprisonment. I had known him to have been long without an employment. Having obtained one, he soon fell under temptation of a few shillings, how much better would it have been for him if he had continued to be honest, even though his salary was small. An employee is bound to be honest under all circumstances and it is better for a poor man to hold fast his integrity. But when we look at the salaries received by many employees, it is hard to imagine how a man can live on such wages and continue honest. It is true that there are men possessed of minds not easily led into temptation, such men would rather endure suffering than to act contrary to their principles; rather suffer in this life than lose the benefits of eternal life. But in order that an employee should continue honest, he should be paid such salary as to keep him above want. Good pay means honest men and honest work, poor pay means something else. Let employers seek out men who would not condescend to mean things, and let them give them a fair salary and there will be no fear of dishonesty on the other hand each employee will seek whatever will be of advantage to his employer. Knowing that success of his master's business means his own personal advantage.

I am yours,
FACT.

LAVANAH

January 20, 1884.

Dear Mr. Editor,—In your last issue you informed your readers that the Commandant had left Bonthe with the intention of visiting the Kittam. That Official arrived at Lavanah on the evening of the 24th of December in the Government Steamer. The Colonial Ensign flying at the Custom House the following morning indicated that his long anticipated visit had been realized.

On the following day Chief Fahwoondoo of Manoh with his speaker and followers waited upon Mr. Moseley. I have since been informed that the result of the visit was the payment of stipends to the Chiefs, consequently it is to be hoped that Fahwoondoo will now be in a position to reward his warboys for services rendered during the war, between himself and Bocary Governor and thus enable them to return to the interior. For the past two years the country has been infested with those notorious thieves much to the detriment of traders.

I may say that peace in the country has been restored and tranquility now reigns. Messrs Randall and Fisher's Steamer "Kittam" arrived here last month with their Agent Mr. Allbridge. The object of that enterprising gentleman's visit was to make arrangements to enable him to trade in the country, and I understand that he has obtained Chief Fahwoondoo's permission to build near Manoh. I am told that it is the intention of Messrs Randall and Fisher to erect extensive factories in these parts. Other Merchants and traders also contemplate starting business at an early period, which, is a sure indication of peace. There is a large field of wealth in the Kittam and I trust good results will be realized by those who intend locating in that vicinity.

Chiefs Bannah Lewis and Momoh Jimmy have been executed. The life of the former was put an end to earlier than was expected, it being the rule to torture with starvation an enemy of war. What hastened matters was, I am told, Fahwoondoo's observing smoke in the offing, and thinking the Commandant was approaching in the steamer ordered that his prisoner be killed with the possible delay. The steamer however turned out to be the Kittam much to the disappointment of chief Fahwoondoo. The old custom of allowing the corpse to rot untouched was adhered to, a spike being driven through the body.

It is pitiable to perceive the number of half starved children and adults going about in a state of nudity. These people have subsisted principally upon palm cabbage and leaves owing to the fact of their not being able to work their field on account of the war.

The Commandant's visit will undoubtedly prove beneficial and cannot but lead to good results. The chiefs not being able more frequently to show their palavers to a responsible Government Official is much to be regretted. Matters I am sure are often misrepresented to them by parties who appreently take a delight in making mischief, and until a resident official is appointed satisfaction will not be given.

Yours truly,
OBSERVER.

THE LAUGH IN SCHOOL.

Hold on for a moment, teacher!
You had better ignore the rule,
Than to punish that little urchin
Who has just laughed out in school.
Had he done it out of malice,
It would be a different thing;
But he could no more help it
Than a lark can help to sing.

I know by his cloated jacket,
And his shoes tied with a cord,
That a laugh is the only luxury,
Of childhood he can afford;
And he hasn't much time left to him
For even that trivial joy.
For he will have to earn his living
While he is yet a boy.

You ask why I defend him?
Well, the fact is, yesternight
I found a dog-eared primer,
That I used when but a mite;
And, in imagination,
As I turned its pages o'er,
I saw some wonderful pictures
That I never found before.

I saw a certain urchin,
(Called Clarence by the boys)
Go toddling into the school-room,
Making his share of noise;
I saw him during school time,
Play pranks upon the sly,
With the rosy little Agnes,
Till she laughed as she would die.

And I think we are all better
When we grow up to be men,
If we have something to make us
Look backward now and then
And therefore I insisted
You had better ignore the rule
Than punish that little fellow,
Who had just laughed but in school.

TOO SMART FOR THE TEACHER

Mrs. Stowe gives a characteristic account of a grammatical exercise at which her brother, Henry Ward, assisted in his schooldays. Young Beecher was about 11 years old, and is full of fun and mischief as at present. The teacher was drilling her pupils in the rudiments.

"Now, Henry," said she, "I'll give the indefinite article, you see, and must be used only with the singular number You can say 'a man,' but you can't say 'a men,' can you?"

"Yes I can say 'a men' too" was the rejoinder. "Father says it always at the end of his prayers."

"Come Henry, dont be joking. Decline he."

"Nominative he, possessive his objective him."

"You see, 'his' is possessive. Now you can say 'this book' but you cannot say 'him book.'"

"Yes, I do say hymnbook, too," said the impracticable pupil, with a quizzical twinkle.

Each one of these sallies made the young teacher laugh, which was the victory he wanted.

"But now, Henry, seriously just attend to the active and passive voice. Now, 'I strike' is active, you see, because if you strike, you do something. But 'I am struck' is passive, because if you are struck, you don't do anything, do you?"

"Yes I do. I strike back again."

After about six months Henry was returned on his parents' hands, with the reputation of being an inveterate joker and indifferent scholar.

WHY KEROSENE EXPLODES.

In the first place, kerosene never does explode. Ordinary kerosene is a mixture of oils which are converted into gas, or vapor, at different temperatures. This gas, when mixed, in certain proportions with the air, forms a most explosive compound.

The danger, therefore, from kerosene comes from this gas, which, of course, cannot be seen. From the best quality of kerosene all, or nearly all, the oil which evaporates at a low temperature, and thus becomes explosive, has been removed. This latter oil is naphtha or benzine. So long as this is kept confined, so that its vapor cannot mix with the common air, it is safe. But the moment the gas mixes with the atmosphere it becomes explosive and dangerous. These facts give the reason why it is a safer safe, under any circumstances, to fill a lighted lamp, or to pour kerosene from a can upon a burning fire.

The lamp needs filling; therefore there is a space over the oil filled with the gas of the oil evaporated by heat and air. It is confined, and as long as the cover is screwed down no spark can get to it.

But when the cover is taken off, the gas is pushed out by the oil entering the lamp, mixed still further with the common air, becomes explosive, communicates with the flame of the lamp, and immediately explodes.

So too, there is explosive gas in the top of a half-emptied oil can, and when the oil is thrown on the fire the flame communicates with that gas and causes an explosion.

The sellers of cheap oil, frequently declare in selling the dangerous fluid that it is so safe that a lighted match can be thrown into it. That this can be done with safety only shows that the conditions for making the explosive gas are not met in the experiment. But if the same oil were used in a defective lamp, or with any but the extremest care, there will be an explosion.

Always remember that it is a gas which explodes and not the oil, and that you can see the gas. And if you value your lives, be sure that you do, not bring a spark near any place where there may be a mixture of air and oil gas.

INDUSTRY AND PERSEVERANCE.

The habit of industry is a notable characteristic of true manliness. It is an unalterable law of our being that success can not be achieved in life without labor. From the days of Eden till this hour the decree of the Almighty has been ringing in the ears of men that bread is the price of labor. Many, however, have disregarded this law to their own shame. They have sought to reverse it and to live in idleness, vainly hoping to be fed. But the universally recognized though unwritten law of true manhood is that idleness is a sin against our higher nature.

Many hope to succeed in the professions or in business without patient, persevering labor. Many are in haste to be rich and are not satisfied to await the results of the slow plodding methods of our fathers. So in all the walks in life, in every vocation many young men are hoping to succeed without proving themselves worthy of success. One of the most striking tendencies of this age is a desire to attain that which is wished for by one bound. The cause lies in the restlessness of our nation and country men. Less energy is not what is needed, but more perseverance and work. We must apply the remedy, and that remedy is to learn that objects and ends of real merit and worth are not to be obtained by a single leap but by steady growth. Life is a field in which it is the duty, and to the interest of every man to be an industrious and honored worker. Indolence never led to any real distinction, unless it was in being the laziest man in town, nor has sloth ever opened the path to independence and true nobility.

Let no one, then, think that he can arrive at any position of deserved honor or make any great or positive acquirements in knowledge, wealth, or skill, or attain to eminence and usefulness in any calling without honest and continued work.

The motto of the late A. T. Stewart, that prince of American merchants whose business extended over two continents, was work! Work! WORK! He considered honesty and industry the chief aids in gaining a fortune. This fully accords with the proverb of Solomon: "See thou a man diligent in business and he shall stand before kings, he shall not stand before mean men."

If the young would attain unto liberal mental culture, if they would acquire large stores of useful knowledge, if they would arrive at eminence as scholars, public speakers, or become known, and honored in any field of literature or science, they must first give themselves to years of patient and persevering study. The solid acquirements of learning, the acquisition of a thorough and practical education, are within the reach of all young people, but only such as are willing to pay their price can ever possess them. There is no excellence worthy the name without great and continued labor.

The young men of to-day must educate if they would be able to successfully cope with the generation that is rising up behind them. Men who have attained to eminence in any department of life in the past, have almost invariably attributed their success to the mental preparation and discipline they received for their work through years of diligent application to study and books in early life. This is true of the eminent Archbishop Paley, who has won the enviable title of "Defender of the faith," of Dr. Adam Clarke, the distinguished biblical scholar and commentator, Dr. Albert Barnes, honored throughout the world, Richard Watson the theologian, John Locke the philosopher, and Charles Summer the statesman. Demosthenes was five years engaged in preparing his famous oration on the crown. He wrote and rewrote, considered and reconsidered every word of that immortal speech.

Cicero applied himself with such studious industry to his literary pursuits that he came near losing his life.

Bishop Butler was twenty years writing his celebrated "Analogy of Religion." The marvelous excellence of Shakespeare's work is due to the same studious habits of life. The author of the unrivaled "Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire" is another example of the triumphs of manly perseverance and persistent labor. When he once decided to give himself to the undertaking of tracing the vicissitudes of Rome, he first devoted years to laborious study and research. The task before him was great a one, covering as it did a thousand years of change from the Antonines to the conquest of Constantinople by the Turks. But it was perfected, and now remains the grandest historic monument ever raised by any English man. It is the precious fruit of honorable toil. "Labor, all labor is noble and holy."—Religious Telescop

CATTLE RAISING.

Gleaning here and there, whatever information, there is to be had, on the subject:—It appears quite evident, to me, that keeping cattle, or cows, (as they are generally called) could not fail to be profitable as, in most places they thrive well and in many parts wonderfully. At Shaingay it is true they have died off at times, and perhaps in a few other places, but not, to our knowledge, to any great extent, and even the fatality at Shaingay is not alarming: for it most likely came in consequence of turning the animals out to feed on grass, too early in the morning; when I am told, that there is a kind of worm, sometimes, on the grass, that gets into the cow's nose, and from thence into the head, where it causes the death of the animal. About Bendoo across from Bonthe, I am informed there is abundance of pasture, and that cattle do well; they even seem to find a living in the streets of Bonthe. The Bargroo seems admirably adapted to cattle, I have been a close observer of this, in that part for a considerable time, and have seen fatter cows in the vicinity of Manoh Bargroo, than any where else in Africa; and these had, in some cases no extra care. An illustration of the suit ableness of the Bargroo district, to cattle growing may now be seen at Avery Station; two Bullocks taken to that station by the Revd J M. Losher, agaunt and hollow have in a short time become as fat, and round, as you would wish to see. The above being true of many other places, of this vast coast district; I can see no reason why, with the facility with which land for pasture, may be obtained, this branch of industry might not be carried on, with immense returns on Capitol invested; o' this I hope to write again, as well as other topics, of a kindred nature.

Dear Brother D. F Wilberforce,

It is with very great pleasure that I have seen and read the October number of the Early Dawn, the first I have seen since I left Africa nineteen years ago. I could not refrain from expressing my joy upon the first page of which I once wrote and toiled and I had supposed had passed into history, has reappeared enlarged, improved, and enriched with valuable facts and thoughts

Permit me to greet you and your fellow workers in the name of the Lord. I know not whether any of your people will remember my wife and me. If your father and mother are living they will remember, so will brother Samuel Goodman and Thomas Caulker, so also will brother Geo. Jowett, whose son I have met in this country. I want to say to them all and to others whose names I do not now recall, that I have not ceased to pray for the redemption of Africa, nor forgotten those whose Christian lives are the fruits of missionary labor. We were providentially hindered from returning to that field, and the Lord gave me another work. I am growing old in its prosecution. I often become weary in the way but am never weary of it. The evils with which you have to contend, Slavery, Polygamy, Intemperance, and secret societies, are (with the exception of the first) the great evils of our land against which we labor and pray, trusting that inasmuch as God overthrew slavery so he will also destroy all the other works of the devil. It is a great pleasure to see that the "Early Dawn" speaks out on these questions in no vague or uncertain way. I frequently lecture on Africa I expect to do so in the coming week. There is a growing interest in Africa, not only in America, but throughout the world. The great nations of christendom have recently met by their representatives to consider how best to promote the welfare of the people in the valleys of the Congo, and the Niger. Surely Ethiopia doth stretch out her hands to God, and her cry is not forgotten.

I will add that my family now reside in the city of Washington D. C., and that I am laboring for a time in this State.

With Christian love to all and hope that my dear wife myself and our three children may be remembered in your prayers.

I am
Yours truly
H. H. HOWARD.

A FRENCHMAN who visited England was so afraid of being at a loss for words that he always carried a Johnson's dictionary about with him. One day having spent a pleasant evening with a very merry old gentleman, he asked him who he was. "I am a stock-jobber," said his companion. This last puzzled the foreigner, who consulted his Johnson, and replied, "yat, sare, you are den a low wretch who gets money by buying and selling in the funds," which is the explanation given by the great colossus of literature. It is needless to add that the Frenchman descended the stairs quicker that he came up.

A TEACHER OF BOYS.—In order to be a successful teacher of boys it is necessary to be their friend. It is necessary not only to take an interest in seeing that their lessons are properly recited, but to be sure also that they understand what they are doing, and take an interest in it. Make them feel that it is their business now, and that their future success in business depends on their doing their work well in the present. Boys like a friend and not an overseer.—Practically Teacher.

One of the most accomplished ladies in Kansas City is Mrs. F. D. Bourly, who scolds her husband in eight different languages, sings her baby to sleep with the grand operas, and shoves the servant girl out of the house as Richard III.

The Senate of Bombay University has decided that the masculine pronoun "he" shall include "she". The important feature of this grammatical decision is that women can now enter schools.

What if God should place in your hands a diamond, and tell you to subscribe on it a sentence which should be read at the last day and shown then as an index of your own thoughts and feelings what care, what caution would you exercise in the selection? Now that is what God has done. He has placed before you the immortal minds of children on which you are to inscribe every day and every hour, by your instruction, by your spirit and your example, something that will remain and be exhibited for or against you the last day.—Payson

With this issue we commence the Second Volume of our Paper, and necessity compells some changes, the first is the absence of the Editor from the Office, this we regret very much as it leaves the management of the Paper in the hands of others of less experience in such work however we will endeavor to do our best, feeling that what may be lost to our readers in the Local management will in due course be amply made up in the excellent Editorial, Correspondence that an enterprizing wide awake Editor will most assurdly furnish us with for the future numbers of our little Journal that is just now entering upon its second year of existence and we most sincerely hope of increased interest and usefulness. Another change we wish to note is that we shall in future endeavor to get out the paper a little before the end of each month; therefore Corresponsdents will feel themselves hereby requested to have their communications reach this Office by the 15th of the month Items of interest can be received up to the 20th after which we expect to go to Press. Trusting that a number of our correspondents from whom we have not heard this month will be in time for our next issue we ask the indulgence of our readers for whatever may be wanting in interest in the present number.

We regret the disturbances that have for some time kept the Bargroo district in an unsettled condition not so much from the danger we have felt of any considerable actual hostillities but from the mischief liable to be done through the various (and usually largely false,) reports of war; for it is a fact that in any parts of the country when a rumour is started of war app oaching it never fails to accumulate as it goes and worse than all always finds many to assert its truth or certainty while the rarest few consider for a moment whether there is any reason or truth in these flying reports. Such has been the case in the Bargroo for more than two years past, but of late the rumours have been of a more startling nature than had been for some time previous, owing largely I believe to the presence of WAR BOYS at Gbanghiah. But as above stated the danger has not been so much of the war boys as of straggling non-responsible Vagabonds tac authers in many cases no doubt the war rumour hightening other away while they hang about to carry on their nefarious work of thieving and robbing.

We highly commend our city authorities, for the faithful administration of the various sanitary ordinances, which must not only conduce to the health of the inhabitants of our place, but greatly improves the appearance of the town and although many having estensive grounds to keep clean may feel the burden much yet we ought willingly to sacrifice a little when the end sought is so desirable and beneficial to all.

The time of holding the Annual District Meeting and Teachers Institute, of the U. B. C. Church at Good Hope Station in this place; has been fixed, to commence on the first Friday in March, (being the 6th day of that month) at 7 p. m. Business service to commence at 7 a. m., on saturday. It is expected that all the members will be present, and many friends of the Gospel cause also. And that during the four days of the meeting much good talking and preaching may be done in and near this place; may the Lord grant great Wisdom, in the deliberation of the Conference and Association, afterward proper the best plans for the execution of his Work, under the charge of the various laborers, that may be sent out.

NEEDS OF SHERBRO MISSION.

The annual report of this mission shows that there are over 1400 names upon our church books, as members of the church in full standing, and as seekers of the religion of Chris. There are near 500 in our day and Sunday Schools and our itenerants go into over 250 towns.

As a matter of course there are new buildings, and other improvments greatly needed which, owing to the unexpected outlay of money because of the disaster which befell the steamer "John Brown" before she reached Africa, and to our failure to obtain as much money from England and Scotland, as we had hoped we should, receive these cannot now be made.

There is one need of this mission, which ought to be supplied soon, viz: a Training School in which to qualify young men to act in the capacity of Teachers and Preachers. Our System of itenerating into as many towns, as can be reached from the different mission stations requires a number of men who can travel about, and do a good deal of it and who can sing, pray, and preach in a manner that will interest and benefit the people. One of the difficulties now attending this work, is that an interpreter must accompany many of our itenerants, this is expensive, and the work is not so well done, as it would be, if native youngmen who could use the language of the people would do it.

As one of the members of the church in America has given us encouragement to believe that he would contribute from one to two thousand pounds for this purpose, I hope to be able to assist in the building of a suitable house for a Training School ere I return this time, I am expecting to hear from him every time letters come to me from America, that the money will be forthcoming from him or others in the near future for this important enterprise, I doubt not.

Another important step to be taken, at no very remote day, is a system of collecting money to assist in defraying the expenses of the mission. Bishop Cheetham at the meeting of the Church Missionary Society, held in London in 1882, stated that the people of his diocese support all their own Catechists and Teachers in Sierra Leone, and did it well, except his support which was otherwise provided for.

This country is rapidly increasing its commerce, which doubtless will continue, and which will bring into circulation considerable money within the next few years, among the Sherbro, Mendi, and Timmineh people. Many of these with others, are now carrying on a profitable trade throughout this country, and will contribute toward the support of the mission if kindly solicited, which we hope will be done about once a quarter hereafter. With the number of natives employed, about 150, including Mechanics, foremen, teachers, itenerants, and laborers, which are paid from £1 to £5 a month each, and the expenses of furnishing food, books, and clothing for over 100 mission children, and of keeping one dozen American Missionaries here, considerable money is required, and I believe quite a respectable part of it can be obtained from the people in whose behalf we are labouring, if they are properly requested to contribute for this purpose. With such support and a training school, and our financial embarrassments overcome which will be the near future no doubt greater success will atten l our labors in the future than at any time past in this Sherbro country.

Billy Alldridge, the Religious Goose.

At the American Mission Station near the town of Shaingay is a large white goose, that was a present to Mrs. Gomer one of the ladies of the mission by an English Gentleman. Mr. T. J. Alldridge residing at York Island, the morning of the 16th instant I attended the early morning worship, which was held in the large dining hall at the boys home, I saw this goose standing at the corner of the hall during the whole of the service which consisted of reading scripture lesson, explanation, singing and prayer, when the Amen was pronounced he gave one quack and marched out, I learned that he attends regularly every morning, the first time he was present he undertook to sing with the others and for this he was put out and feeling the insult did not attend worship for several mornings after, every morning now as it draws nigh to 6 o'clock he comes close to the mission residence where he can hear the clock strike and as soon as it strikes he sets a quacking until the bell is rung and then immediately walks off up to the hall, through out the day he follows the old yardman at his work at 10 and 11 o'clock every day he comes near the house where he can hear the clock strike and then gives the alarm for the bell to be rung, there are other geese about the premises but he is the only a civilized one.

We regret to note that Mr. C. H. Harley Moseley Acting Commandant has been quite unwell during the past month and that his duties have been heavy and required much exposure which has no doubt been the cause on part at least of his illness.

We have been saddened by intelligence of the Death of Mr. William Melville Larboarde Civil Commandant of Sherbro, at Madiera Mr. Larborde has only been away from the Sherbro for a few months on leave to England.

Messrs. Conway and Grant of the Sulymah and Sherbro Trading Company were in the place passing to Freetown.

We call attention of our readers to an interesting article on the "Needs of Sherbro mission" from the pen of Revd Dr Flickinger our distinguished general secretary from America who is now spending a short time in this country supervising our mission work; we regret very much that his communication was too late for our first page not reaching us until after we had gone to press. We have not time or space to speak more at length of this contribution but would ask the reader to turn to the second page at once and read it for himself.

Just as we are going to press the Government Steamer Countess of Derby arrives in this port with His Excellency Sir Samuel Rowe, K. C. M. WISE COUNSEL.

Endeavour to be, as innocent as a dove, but as wise as a serpent; and let this lesson direct you most in the greatest extremes of fortune. Hate idleness, and curb all passions; be true in all words and actions; unnecessarily deliver not your opinion; but when you do, let it be just, well-considered, and plain. Be charitable in all thought, word, and deed, and ever ready to forgive injuries done to yourself, and be more pleased to do good than to receive good.

What's in a Name?—A man said to a little boy: "What do you call your dog, sonny?" "Palm, sir." "Psalm. Psalm, that's a curious name for a dog. What possessed you to give it that name?" "Because the animal is not a hum, sir."

"No, sir!" thundered an irate father—"no sir! my daughter can never be yours!" to which the young man quietly replied, "I don't want her to be my daughter; I want her to be my wife."

No More Questions for Him

—Rev. Dr. Ritchie, of Edinburgh, although a very clever man, has met his match. When examining a student as to the class he had attended, he said: "And you attended the class for mathematics?" "Yes." "How many sides has a circle to turn to the second page?" "Two," said the student. "What are they?" What a laugh in the class the student's answer produced when he said: "An inside and an outside." But this was not compared with what follows! The doctor having said to this student, "And you attended the philosophy class, also?" "Yes." "Well, you would hear lectures on subjects. Did you ever hear one on cause and effect?" "Yes." "Does a effect ever go before a cause?" "Yes." "Give me an instance." "A man wheeling a barrow." The doctor then sat down, and proposed no more questions. Rochester Express.

Industrial Mission Work No. 3.

My last article might simply that I was making a plea for Industrial Work in itself which I have admitted to have been practiced by all Missions from the earliest times hence it is not so much the labor but the kind of work to be carried on that be of the greatest advantage in every way all circumstances being considered. Farming might in some parts of the world be the most suitable, and profitable employment for industrial missions to engage in and certainly in almost all places it is a needful employment where the soil is reasonably productive; but the great drawbacks on Agriculture is that the soil on the immediate Coast here is barren and too much exposed to injurious currents of air; and furthermore almost every useful product, of the soil, has so many insect and other enemies; to overcome these obstacles alone requires largely the aid of scientific knowledge, the time for the application of which cannot be reasonably devoted to such work by those employed for the preaching of the Word of Life, and still it may be possible that persons of another order ought to be sent out for this scientific work whose spare time could be largely useful in teaching or conducting Sunday Schools and Prayer Meetings; also in deliberating on the higher or more advanced topics of education and other matters of importance in the refinement and building up of society. Intellectually, morally and religiously. But just here the important item of expense steps in and at once all our flowery visions of these highly cultured gentlemen's presence vanishes, ther too we see a vast falling off in the prospects of success; the consequence of which is, that few persons can be found to engage in farming extensively on account of the meager returns. If an enterprize does not pay its way there must be provision made in some way to make up the dificit, and it a mission be burdened with a number of such enterprizes, it must become expensive in its operations no matter however economical its management in other respects. In order then to avoid such expenses, it will not be necessary to stop all industrial work but only to choose such Branches as may be most productive in returns and that can be managed to the best advantage by the help employed or procurable on the ground. The fewest possible foreign agents and materials should be employed so as to save expense, and to facilitate the supply of each as necessity may require. On this account raising native crops are as a rule so far as they can be made a source of profit, are preferable to foreign, because more readily managed by native labor and the seed less difficult to procure, hence less expensive. Of course, it naturally follows that several natives can be employed at less cost than foreigners if for no other reason than the fact that they can live cheaper by subsisting on native products instead of those from a distance. This perhaps will account for the larger profits realized from trading than any other Branch of industry, because native agents can readily be found to engage in it to good advantage. This being the case then perhaps Missions may engage in it for financial reasons; but there are better and infinitely higher reasons for which the Missionary may enter the arena of commercial trade in Africa of these reasons we hope to speak again.

J. A. EVANS.

What is a gift. Some rare and costly thing—
Which only wealth is privileged to bestow!
A joy that opulence alone can bring?
A boon that poverty may never know?
Nay! nay! the sweetest gifts that life adorn,
Ne're left the loving hearts where they were born.

More humble gifts than e'en the "widow's mite"
Whose fame rolls down through the applauding years,
Shall live in memories, safe from Lethe's blight—
Preserved in love, embalmed in holy tears:
Our rarest gifts are hungerings to bestow
The good that e're may come to us below.

All that in man is best, the stamp shall bear,
Of that which we call immortality:
And fond, good wills, defeated now shall share
The glad fruition of the time to be:
God frames our purpose true in purer gold
Than eye of mortal ever may behold.

There is a wealth descending from the sky.
That falls on every loyal gift we bring,
A heavenly fragrance that can never die,
Breathing through all our true heart-offering.
If with each gift unselfish love we weave,
"More blessed 'tis to give than to receive."—The Record

"The Morning Light Is Breaking, The Darkness Disappears."

VOL. 2. BONTHE SHERBRO, WEST AFRICA. MARCH, 1885. No. 2

Office of "Early Dawn."

While attending the annual meeting of the Wilberforce District at Bonthe, which with the proceedings of the Teachers Institute kept me there four days and nights, I learned much of the needs of Sherbro Island, and the country adjacent thereto. The fact that many people upon the Island and close to Bonthe are yet in heathenish darkness is a strong argument in favor of enlarged operations in this part of our field. But what is true here, is equally true of almost every portion of the field now occupied by us in Africa, Mission Stations, and missionaries ought to be multiplied. The country is open to us, and now is the time to increase schools, and visit many towns which up to this time have never heard the Gospel. The Action of the late meeting, providing for the more efficient services of Teachers, and preachers, and looking toward the establishment of a training school, and in other respects making the missions of the U. B. Society more permanent, will no doubt be promotive of greater prosperity in the future, than has yet been realized by us in this country.

The few days and nights spent under the hospitable roof of the Good Hope Mission house in which the "Early Dawn" is now printed, were exceedingly pleasant and profitable to myself and judging from appearances, to all attending the meetings.

God was with us of a truth, giving us great harmony, and the assurance that he who has so signally blessed our labors in the past would be with us still, and make us more successful in winning souls to Him if we but do our duty in the future than in the past.

Where is Heaven!

Plato points to the snowy summits of cold Olympus, and says, It is there. Swedenborg beholds spiritual presence in all space, and says, it is everywhere. Wordsworth lives again through his youth, and replies, "Heaven lies about us in our infancy." Sage, theologian, and poet, I turn from you all and ask the little blind girl, and she replies, Heaven is where God is.

EDUCATION.

An address delivered at Teachers Institute Bonthe March 9th 1885 by

REV J. A. EVANS.

Mr. President—Ladies & Gentlemen,

One year ago we had this subject very properly defined to us; as a drawing out, or leading forth; that is of the powers and faculties, not only of the intellectual, but may I not say of the Physical, Mental, Moral and Spiritual; as you will most readily perceive, this Order is not according to pre-eminence, but rather to the natural course of their coming into action; in this order I wish to discuss their drawing out or training into proper usefulness, hence we proceed to notice.

First. The physical, an infant in its earliest stages cannot make use of any of its powers, as it can of the physical; it commences with possibly the limbs, then the lungs, the lips, the tongue, perhaps all so nearly together as to be supposed to be simultaneous, but whether so or not all are physical. In due time the child begins to creep, to walk &c., all the while bringing into exercise the Physical, and there is given, in some way or another direction to these powers; perhaps by another child, more advanced, or the fostering mother whose eye is ever on her tender charge, making its first efforts to struggle into the great drama of human life; however insignificant and small may seem these early beginings, and however trifling the assistances rendered, they are all developing, they are all training the powers, were all necessary in your infancy and childhood; and if time shall last will be as necessary to a thousand generations yet unborn; and upon us rests the responsibility, not only of the proper training of infancy and childhood, but of youth and manhood; and I would only hint here, that it would be well if parents and Teachers especially would give more attention to the physical movements of their children and pupils; for there can be no doubt but the movements of children, youths, and men, would be far more elegant, attractive and really more useful, were they better trained and let me here emphasize again that this must, in a large measure, be done by the teacher, and that too by example more than precept; and my friends what is more hateful than the uncouthe waddle, as it were, of the girl, or young woman, that moves about us, one side at a time or what more disgusting, than the young man, who drags himself, here and there as though he had been built, for stationary, rather than portable uses. On the other hand what is more beautiful than the graceful movement of the softer sex; or grander than the manly bearing of the properly trained young gentleman; then Teachers if you would have such, train the Physical.

Secondly the mental comes before us in the order of discussion. As to just how soon a child begins to exercise the mind, we cannot positively say, but it certainly before most children enter school, and hence at a very tender age; their training then in this respect, ought to commence early, and should be from the first very carefully conducted; I may indeed, venture the assertion, perhaps, that too great care cannot be exercised, in even the very beginning with little ones, as they generally have a desire to become acquainted, with the world, of their surroundings; and consequently are led into the field of inquiry, which is indeed the great vantage ground, for the grandest attainments of knowledge; on this very plane the greatest Philosophers of the past have stood and stand to-day yea and must ever continue to stand as long as they wish to progress. If then the child has entered the proper field, and is in possession of the right faculties for investigation what then remains for the instructor? Why indeed the most important work; that of leading forth the child, the youth in the right paths, left to wander at random without a director it would often miss its way, spend its time with trifles, gathering the gravels and leaving the diamonds. The child must be led, not driven to think the; to think aright, think to advantage in order to this there must be incentives placed before it, it must be encouraged, must be kept awake, and moving from one object to another, as rapidly as it can be made to understand one after another. The great work of teaching, is to keep the mind interested; with this you succeed, without it you will fail miserably fail. These remarks you will have noticed, keep close to the child because we have, or expect you to have, most to do in the juvenile line of instruction; yet I may just remark here that in a greater or lesser measure the same course is to be pursued with persons of maturer years it is ever the same leading forth to higher aims. teachers you will no forget, that your own minds must ever be exercised upon problems, many of which will be hard to solve, but as mental leaders you must of necessity encounter yea as far as possible master them.

In the Third place, we glance at the Moral faculties, we cannot tell you, at what age a child becomes accountable, nor does that belong to our subject of consideration we shall always find a sufficient number within this pale of accountability, to engage our attention, and our dealing correctly with those will always bring all others, coming to such maturity, within the range of our influences at the proper time; so if we lead on in the paths of a sound morality, and lead the young in the channels of right thinking; thinking how best to elevate and lift up a fallen race. My friends I scarcely need to tell you that you will find much to oppose you, in this line. In a land of vice, filled with iniquity, as this is a thousand, harder, and more subtle, obstacles, than those you meet, in either physical or mental training, will rise, mountain like, before you, and assail you on every hand; you will need more than a fixed purpose, and a strong will, to withstand the gigantic powers, that contest in hard conflict, every step of progress attempted by a sound morality for such is either ever in advance or unsuitable to the perverse taste of a corrupt world; hence even those who profess to be its friends, often secretly disregard its demands; in fact you will too often find your own natures in spite of all your efforts, revolting from your own precepts and sense of right-living, hence example, will here be found to surpass precept. Then to lead forth, in this more important line, you must be exemplary in your lives; living, pure, upright, above suspicion above every [illegible] of the great Teacher your exemplar.

Fourth and lastly we come to the consideration of the Spiritual, the highest of the faculties, which perhaps, may be regarded as a divine emmination, from the deity himself, and will not be at rest or complete until it returns to the God who gave it being. But alas; its Tendency, by some means, is not in that direction. Fortunately, however, for the race, the Almighty having had a desire for the work of His hands, has at great cost, and sacrifice, provided a remedy, that is able not only to arrest our downward spirits, but is sufficient to bring them again to himself. Yet He in his inscrutable Wisdom has seen fit to commit the application of the remedy to the hands of men, from whence comes our bounden duty, to call sinners from the way of destruction, and to lead them forth in the path of life, to Train them up in the way back to their God; from whom they have been blindly fleeing, ever since men tasted of the forbidden fruit, in the Garden of Delight, and was driven thence and the flaming sword of God's justice, forbade his return, I am aware, by this time, that you begin to say within yourselves, we have not called you here to listen to us about the fall of man, but to tell us how to educate him to his highest usefulness; and indeed this is just what we must do; and no system of education, among christians at least, can be complete, that does not touch this the highest faculty of man and train it up in the direction of heaven; leading man's spiritual part back to his spiritual God; unfolding to him that loving Being, which not only gave him existence, but redemption from eternal ruin. Therefore I feel sure that I am not transcending, at least the bounds of a discourse to a body of Missionary teachers, who if called at all (and I trust every one of you are called) have been called to go forth not only as heralds of the Gospel but, as Teachers of the truth, to teach, train, educate all nations in the way of life, and salvation through faith, in the atoning Blood of Christ, to lead forth the grand school of the discipled world, into a larger and better understanding of the worlds Redeemer; to draw out the spiritual nature of men and lead them on to grander conceptions of the spiritual World. Until every other aspiration shall have been lost in the all absorbing desire to attain the high estate of a glorified immortality; where those that have learned Wisdom and won many to righteousness by their teaching shall shine as the Stars in the constellations of the heavens forever and ever.

A Scrupulous Witness.—Some years since, in the York Police Court, a man was arraigned for assaulting kicking, and otherwise much maltreating another individual. At the trial there was present a very conscientious witness for the plaintiff, who, after having sworn that he "would tell the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth," was asked if he saw defendant kick plaintiff. "Well," said he, speaking very slowly and cautiously, "I can't say that I did; but I saw him take his foot away three times."

Sherbro Mission District Meeting.

We have just closed at this place the sixth Annual Meeting of the African District, and the second of our Teacher's Association. This has been the most enjoyable of our District Meetings. The very first gathering was characterized by the presence of the Holy Spirit which continued throughout our sessions. Our beloved brother, Dr. Flickinger presided over the meeting and favored us with his counsel and advice. That this has been a most prosperous year in the history of our African Missions is evident from our statistical reports of Sherbro and Mendi districts—which show that work has been done in 204 towns, and a membership of 1526, a gain of 1000 members. Our itinerants found themselves at the close of the year, far into the enemy's land, where satan had for unnumbered years held undisputed sway, having pushed their way into towns and villages hitherto not reached by a preacher of the Gospel. The warm reception of divine truths, and the eager desire to be enrolled upon our Seeker's books is an evidence that the heathen has felt and acknowledges the superiority of the Christian religion and hopes for it to gain future bliss.

Many interesting incidents were mentioned in connection with the life and labors of a itinerant, some of which are touching. We had before us the case of one who was driven from his home by a war-party. Some time after this while engaged in another town he heard late one night, a noise near the house in which he lived remembering his former experience and thinking that another war party was upon him, he became exceedingly frightened. While reflecting upon the means of escape, he heard loud knocks at the door and calls for the school-master. What was his joy when upon opening the door he beheld a congregation gathered to learn the word of God, these people had come a long distance from another town, and desired the word of God to be preached to them that night.

The Bompeh District has suffered much from war, yet good work was still being done. The prospect for that Mission is that with the dawn of peace prosperity will abound.

It would be painful indeed if after all the labor and sacrifices of this noble band of itinerants and at so important a point in our history with the Captain of our Salvation evidently urging us forward into the conflict, we should be called upon to beat a retreat. As a Church with our itinerant system we are better adapted to the wants of the heathen in Africa than any other. And it is true that success is only attainable by aggressive movements on our part.

Two young men were examined and received into the Ministry. The subject of a training school was freely discussed, and a petition placed in the hands of Dr. Flickinger to be presented to the General Conference. On Sabbath morning meetings were held in the chapel and school house, and to the people in the Farkies, Dr. Flickinger gave us an impressive sermon at 11 a. m., followed by a Sabbath School convention, at 2.30 p. m., and a service in the evening by J. B. W. Johnson. The U. B Church notwithstanding its sacrifice of money, the church, I say is richer by all those sacrifices, and the time is not distant, yea even now is when the church in America may point with joy and justifiable pride at the result of those sacrifices—the infant church of Africa.

The authorities of this place have posted notice informing the public that nudity will not hereafter be allowed in our streets and that persons violating the law in this respect will punished for this, as for other offences. This is we repeat a step in the right direction for we have for years been pained with the sight of persons of both sexes up to the age of 12 if not in many case 15 years old with out any or sufficient clothing to hide their nakedness. However if there was any good excuse for this it would be better but there is none but shameless negligence in most cases on the part of people who are able to do better. Hence we most heartily trust that this ordinance will be strictly enforced, not that we desire to have any one punished, but for the good that will assuredly arise from the enforcement of such a regulation, as it will greatly aid in the work of refining the tastes of the people and ultimately result in raising them up from a base and degraded condition to that of civil and refined people.

The Rev. Dr. Flickinger took his final farewell of Shengay on the 10th inst. at 4 p. m. as the s. s. John Brown steamed out of the quiet little harbour at the foot of water street and as it rounded the point opposite the mission residence Monkey island the Dr, was seen standing at the stern of the ship taking the whole situation, what thoughts filled his bosom at that time it would be hard to say but it is safe to say that it was full of anxious concern for the future welfare of the work that he had given so much time and suffering for this last visit has put on the climax. Liver, fever and jiggers all have combined and caused much suffering, until the vessel was far out at sea and mission residence and chapel was fast sinking beneath the waves he turn his eyes in that direction.

It was easy to see that the one great subject occupied his mind the salvation of Africa.

What can be done Mr. Editor to break up and drive out these small petty rum sellers that are peddling out such a vast amount of misery, while I am opposed to licensing rum shops, I believe it would be just the thing to apply here at Shaingay, where there is I believe not less than a half dozen women who will buy one or two cases of gin and a demijohn of rum and then set up the business of preparing some for torment, and many is the poor struggling seeker or weak apostle of the Savior that the subtle enemies of the human family have deceived from the right and narrow way, the judgement day only will reveal the vast amount of misery and suffering that they will have to account for. A poor fallen victim of theirs said to me, its these women, yes it is these women, that brought me where I am to-day; reflecting a moment, he said no I will not blame them it is myself I bought the gin from them I paid for it, no I alone am to blame. The only way I see to rid the community of them is for the Sierra Leone Government to make them pay a license of about 50 pounds a year, this they cannot do, let the police stationed here report all persons that sell without license, as we cannot hope for prohibition here for some time yet, let us have the next best thing, and send these people to the bush to raise ginger cotton and arrowroot what say you Mr Editor. Tousant

We regret very much that although the minutes of the Annual District Meeting and those also of the Missionary Teachers Institute of the U. B. C. held in this place between March 6th and 10th were prepared by the Secretary it appears they faile in time to reach this Office early enough in the month for insertion in this issue of our paper. Also some other interesting matter among others an Article on Agriculture from the pen of Mr. J. A. Benson. However we wish to say that we will not hereafter hold ourselves responsible for the insertion of late articles. Correspondents must bestir themselves

NEWS ITEMS.

Rev. D. F. Wilberforce, returned early in the month from his country seat and tour to the interior. His family much improved in health by the change

One of the most marked signs of the Master's Presence at the recent Annual Meeting of the U. B. C. Church in this place was the great harmony that prevailed throughout the sessions of the Conference and Teacher's Institute that was held.

Mr. C. A. Barthelme Agent of the Senegal Co. of this place has gone on leave to France, & Mr. Mailott formerly agent of the same house has taken charge. Mr. B. will return soon.

It was rather a touching sight at the Mendi Mission House and Wharf on the morning of Tuesday March 17th when Mrs. D. F Wilberforce took her leave of Bonthe amid the crowd that gathered to witness the occasion. After a short visit at Shaingay she with her esteemed companion will proceed to Freetown and from thence after a short stay direct to America on leave after six years residence in Africa

A Smart Sherbro Girl.

A young girl living at Shaingay formerly a mission girl but now trying for herself, has within the last year paid £11. 4 for a tombstone for her father's grave, she herself went in the bush with hoe and cutlass, raised and sold arrowroot for which she received £7. 8. 9. In preparing this she had some children to help her, shew me another girl half that will do likewise

Rev G. G. M. Nichol having been ordained on the 1st inst in Freetown has returned in full orders to his charge in this place we wish him much success in his high and holy calling.

NOBLY DONE.

The heathen children of Gbamgbiah school, have recently been recipients of a box of clothing, from the African mission Band of King street U. B. C. Church in Chambersburg Pa (U. S. A). The kind friends who so generously provided for the children of that place have also been paying for the support of a teacher for more than two years. About three years ago, the members of the African missionary Band resolved to do something for the children of this country, and planned to raise collections and otherwise provide means for the support of a school in Africa.

Their wishes were made known to the writer who at once wrote to the secretary of the mission Band promising to provide a house for a teacher and children at Danville near Gbamgbiah, if that society would carry out that resolution. The offer was accepted, and a school opened, which was for the time being called the Chambersburg school. The disturbed condition of the country has prevented a gathering together of a large number of children but we are sure that this station promises to be of great good to people from the interior as well who almost always come in contact with the place. The work done so far is encouraging. The box contained besides 31 gowns, needles, pins, combs, buttons, slates, pencils, towels, papers, pictures, one splendidly made quilt and numerous other articles.

God bless the African Mission Band, and their secretary Miss. Sallie Fohl to whose enterprizing energy is due the establishment of the school.

GIVING FOR CHRIST.

A man gives away a sovereign in Christ's name and for Christ's sake. Look at the elements which constitute that act and give it value. The man made the sovereign honestly; it is his, in point of fair service, by what is called right. If he keeps that sovereign he will break no law in commerce; if he will it away to his family, he will violate no law in social equity; if he spend it upon himself, society will not condemn him. Yet the man deliberately gives that sovereign away to a poor child, to a friendless stranger, to a Christian society. See what lies behind the deed. The man says, in effect if not in words, "The money may be mine, but I myself am not my own how then can anything be mine, except temporarily, and under laws of stewardship and responsibility. I have property in myself; I am bought with a price; I am God's agent. So far as I have given society an equivalent for this sovereign it is mine; but the strength, the skill, the knowledge, by which I gained it are the gifts of God. The image is Cæsar's, but the gold is God's. I will hold what I have as Christ's; holding it so, I instantly yield it at His call, saying—Thine—oh wounded blessed Christ—shine is the right." So the giving away of the sovereign is not an off hand deed; it is not done flippantly; it is not done to save appearances; it is not done from external social pressure; it becomes a great religious act, a solemn sacrifice, a holy thank offering.

"I should like to be excused, your honor," said a Chicago man who had been summoned on a jury. "What for?" "I owe a man five dollars and I want to hunt him up and pay it." "Do you mean to say you would hunt him up and pay a bill, instead of waiting for him to hunt you up?" "Yes your honor." "Do you belong to Chicago?" Yes, sir." "You are excused. I don't want any man on the jury who will lie like that."

"I saw you at the funeral the other day," said one lady to another yesterday. "Yes, I saw you too." "How natural the corpse looked!" "Just like marble." "I never heard a more affecting funeral sermon; did you?" "Never. And just think of it, when everybody was crying, I reached for my handkerchief, and found to my horror that it was a red one I had in my pocket." "Goodness! What did you do?" "Why, I didn't cry. How could I, when everyone else in church was using white."

"I beg a thousand pardons for coming so late." "My dear sir," replied the lady graciously, "no pardons are needed. You can never come too late."

Two sportsmen were on a journey on a hot summer's day. "Have you anything with you, John?" "Yes, a bottle of wine." And what have you got?" "A dry tongue." "Good, then we'll divide our provisions." "Very good, begin." John drew his bottle of wine our of his wallet, and its contents were honourably devided. After this had been done John wiped his mouth, and asked his fellow-traveller to bring forth his provisions. "I!" answered the other. "Why, yes; your dry tongue—" "I haven't got a dry tongue any more!" was the little comforting answer.

Do you suppose eating angel-cake will make an angel of me?" asked a young lady of a gentleman. "I've no doubt it will," he answered, "if you eat enough of it."

FRATERNITY.

1 'Tis coming up the steep of time,
And this old world is growing bright-er,
We may not see its dawn sublime,
Yet high hopes makes the heart throb lighter,
We may be sleeping in the ground
When it wakes the world in wonder;
But we have felt it gathering round,
And heard its voice in living thunder—
'Tis coming! yes, 'tis coming!

2 'Tis coming now the glorious time
Foretold by seers and sung in story;
For which, when thinking was a crime,
Souls leapt to heaven, from scaffold gory:
They passed nor see the work they wrought;
Now, the crown'd hopes of centuries blossom!
But the live lightning of their thought,
And daring deeds doth pulse earths bosom—
'Tis coming! yes, 'tis coming!

3 Creeds, Empires, systems rot with age,
But the great people's ever youthful!
And it shall the future's page
To our humanity more truthful!
The gnarliest heart hath tender chords,
To waken at the name of "brother,"
And time comes when brain scorpion words
We shall not speak to sting each o-ther—
'Tis coming! yes 'tis coming!

4 Fraternity Loves' other name;
Dear, heaven connecting link of being!
Then shall we grasp thy golden dream,
As souls full statured, grow far-seeing;
Then shall unfold our better part,
And in our life-cup yield more honey;
Light up with joy the poor man's heart
And saves our world with smiles more sunny,
'Tis coming! yes, 'tis coming!

5 Aye, it must come! The tyrant's throne,
Is crumbling with our hot tears rusted!
The sword earth's mighty ones have leant on
Is cankered, with our heart's blood crusted.
Room! for the many mind make way,
Ye robber rulers, pause no longer,
Ye can not stay the opening day!
The world rolls or the light grows stronger!
The peoples advent's coming.

CATTLE RAISING No. 2.

Mr. Editor.—I promised more on this and kindred subjects for future numbers of your paper, the profits on capital invested accummulate from two sources the first from the growth of the cow either in size as from calves to full grown beasts or in the condition of the animals as from Poor to Fat from this source alone I have known on good pasture cows to gain 50 per cent in 6 months which is equal to 100 per cent in 12 months or the doubling of capital invested every year provided no disease gets among them. Secondly there profits from increase in numbers by breeding this alone ought to yield at least 50 per cent per annum in the course of years and would be more than sufficient to pay the expenses of a cattle farm, and I may remark that much of the land cleared and used for pasture could and ought indeed to be cultivated in crops of various kinds while at the same time trees of almost all kinds could be grown along the fence lines from which much advantage may be gained

Then again would not the grazing and feeding of cattle greatly enrich the soil? and thereby render it far more productive than it is at present.

Aside from the pecuniary benefits to be derived from this branch of industry it would lead to the clearing away of many of the forests and jungles and the permanent fencing and improving of many tracts of land and the erection of more substantial buildings also ultimately to the general use of cattle for conveying produce and other Material by land this would render broader & better roads necessary which by the passing of cattle & carts or wagons over them frequently would be easily kept clean.

It i hardly necessary to say that cleared fields full of fine cows traversed everywhere by good roads would add much to the beauty wealth and health of the country and grass which is now the greatest foe to farming in these parts, could by the introduction of cattle raising be made a valuable product, and thus turned to account in the development of the wealth of the country.

VOL. 2. BONTHE SHERBRO, WEST AFRICA. APRIL. 1885. No. 3

Minutes of Sherbro Mission Conference.

At 7 P.M. on Friday March 6th 1885 the Members of Sherbro Mission Conference of the United Brethren Church met in their sixth annual session at Good Hope Station Bonthe.

Rev. J. M. Lesher preached a good practical sermon from Heb. 10. 23. After the sermon Rev. D. K. Flickinger the presiding officer called a business session and made some timely remarks.

Rev. W. S. Sage reelected secretary The roll was called and R. N. West, J. C. Sawyer and H. J. Williams were absent.

The standing committees were then announced as follows, Day schools W. S. Sage, Sundays J. B. W Johnson, Missions & Church Erection D. F. Wilberforce, Publishing Interests J. M. Lesher, Moral reform J. A. Evans, Resolutions J. Gomer

The time of meeting fixed at 7 a. m. a short time was spent in relating incidents connected with the work in different parts of the field. Motion to adjourn carried. Benediction by Dr. Flickinger.

Morning Session.

Conference met promptly at eight o'clock and was opened with singing "Come thou fount of every blessing" followed by prayer and Scripture reading by Dr. Flickinger. Lesson read Phil. 4th Chapter. He dwelt at some length upon the words "I can do all things through Christ strengthening me." He spoke of the work 30 years ago when he was first trying to open a mission station ,the years of toil and labor and the grand results of the past year.

By motion the bar of conference was fixed and Revs. Rowden, C. T. grey, K. C. Taylor, T. N. Joah, J. C. Thomas and Mr. S. B. Morison were admitted to advisory seats.

Mrs Lida West and Mrs E. B. Sage were also invited to advisory seats.

The following resolution was presented by J. A. Evans Resolved; That we are indeed cheered by the presence with us of Rev. Dr. Flickinger our honored general secretary and we are highly gratified to have him preside over our present session. We regret however that he has suffered so much from ill health, that he has not been able to spend more of his time at the out stations but trust that by the blessing of the Lord he may speedily recover his health on leaving this coast.

The presiding Elders reported and were passed. Conference then proceeded to the examination of its members taking up each one seperately also examining into the work of each station all the teachers and missionaries examined were favorably passed.

R. . Taylor C. A. E. Campbell were heard on their call to the ministry and were referred to the committe on examination of applicants to preach.

Committe on examination of applicants J. Gomer, D. F. Wilberforce, J. M. Lesher.

Adjourned with prayer by Rev. J. C. Thomas.

Conference met in afternoon session at 12 noon scripture read and prayer offered by Rev. G. N. Jowett.

Roll was called and minutes of previous sessions read and approved,

Examination of members continued all roll was exhausted.

The following paper was presented concerning the names of certain absent members. Whereas the conduct of the following persons has been unbecoming as christians, and in some cases immoral and whereas they are absent so that we cannot dispose of their names by ordering them to a committe for trial, therefore Resolved, That the names of Messrs. J. C. Jones, C. A. Charles and G. B. Thompson be erased from the roll and they be no longer members of this body.

R. N. West, J. M. Lesher and J. A. Evans were elected presiding Elders for the ensuing year. Chairman announced committe on boundries and finance as follows:- J. M. Lesher, R. N. West, H. J. Weeks, Thomas Tucker, D. F. Wilberforce, W. S. Sage, and J. Gomer. The standing committees reported (see report in connection with the subject of Day Schools) J. M. Lesher offered the following resolutions.

Whereas, the indications are favorable of receiving money for a training school, and whereas said money may come into our hands during the coming year, and whereas this may be our only time to consider, and determine the location and dimensions and plan of building for that purpose. Therefore Resolved 1 That the location be left till after General conference takes action on the subject.

Res. 2nd that a committee of five be appointed by the chairman whose duty it shall be to draft a plan for said building and report to this body for its approval.

The subject of Sunday schools was freely discussed and adopted Committee on resolutions presented the following petition to General conference.

To the General Conference of the United Brethren in Christ of the United States of America in conference assembled at Fostoria O.

Dear Brethren—We the undersigned missionaries of the U. B. Mission in West Africa namely beg leave to present to your Honourable Body the following petition praying that you will give it your careful consideration.

1st We beg that you will authorize the establishing of a training school here for the purpose of training native missionaries on the field both male and female. The building to be erected for this school be large enough to comfortably accommodate fifty students.

2nd We beg farther that you will authorize that a principal teacher be sent from America who shall have the entire control of said school and that said teacher have at least three years experience as a teacher and preacher well qualified for the work.

3rd Your petitioners request farther that you authorize that the building be erected of either stone or brick and be ready for use within the next year or two.

We request farther that you send from America a first class, practical farmer whose sole business it shall be to put in proper shape and over see the mission farms. Also that you appoint a proper business man who shall devote the whole of his time to the business affairs of the mission.

These two last will pay their own way and they are branches of industry that ought to be taught the people and there are no better factors to the missionary work, the proper cultivation of the soil and honest legitimate mercantile business. After a residence here of over four teen years and carefully watching the habit of the people the author of this paper, J. Gomer, understands pretty well what is necessary in order to civilize and christianize this people, he also believes that since the labors of this society have been so signally blessed in the past, we may safely take it for granted that the great Head of the church wills that this society should undertake and prosecute a still greater work here for him feeling sure if we trust him fully and do right abundant success will crown our efforts.

Your petitioners beg also that prior to the setting of the next General Conference one of the Bishops of the Church be sent to visit this mission and that he remain at least three months on the field and examine the work critically .we ask this not that we have ought against Dr Flickinger on the contrary he has done nobly for Africa and we are all well pleased but we think it unjust that he be required to endure so much for this mission when it is the property of the whole Church and when his coming here impairs his health as much as it did this last time, then it is high time some other minister of the church be in preparation for this work. The sending of a Bishop would tend to give prominence and tone to this work.

Faithfully submitted, &c

J. M. Lesher presented a paper relating to the John Brown steamier as follows Whereas the steamer John Brown has been a source of loss to the society to the amount of £467. 14. 2 which loss was brought about by the disater which befell her in England and because she was registered as an English vessel which required us to employ a crew for three months at a time and pay them whether we could used them or not also that we had to pay pilotage every time she went into or came out of Freetown harbor. And whereas she has more than paid the expense of operating her during the last two months, therefore resolved 1st that the John Brown has been and is to us a great convenience and that she has saved us much time and expense in getting goods and provision from Freetown and brought them in good condition instead of being damaged as was often the case aforetime. This enabled us to make our business more profitable than it could have been otherwise then we too could go against head wind and tide and our mails come to us regular and she has contributed much to our confort, we believe she has saved us in money fully one half of the loss charged to her to say nothing of the comfort and convenience she has been to us and the other halt we had to pay the captain who brought her from England the day he arrived here Res.2d that the management of the J. Brown has been as economically conducted as was possible to make all save.

Res.3d That as we are to have the use of her for three years yet, as well as the sawmill at Avery Station we much regret that we cannot use this favorable oppotunity to supply the needed building material at several stations including those for a training school and open still more new statio n.

Res. 4 That another good accomplished by the presence of the "John Brown" is a weekly steamer plying between Bonthe and Freetown which will now be a permanent thing and which is of incalculable value to both the mission and all this country.

Committee on applicants for license to preach reported as follows.

We have examined Mr. C. A. E. Campbell and find him clear on all subjects and he gives very satisfactory answers. We recommend that he be received and continence at once with the first years course of reading.

We have also examined R. C. Taylor and find him quite clear in doctrine and ready with Scripture proof we also recommend that he be received and that he commence at once with the first years course of study.

J. Gomer.
D.F. Wilberforce
J. M. Lesher.

The following resolution was presented by R. N. West resolved that all the members of this body who have not pursued the course of study as required by our book of Discipline be required to begin at once to study the first years course of reading and that they be examined at the next annual session.

Report of committee on missions laid on table till evening session. Adjourned to meet at 6.30 p. m.

Evening session opened with singing "All hail the power of Jesus name."

Minutes of Sherbro Mission Conference.

Shaingay District

It is somewhat difficult to give a suitable report of Shaingay District for the conference year from the fact that the field has been thoroughly canvassed by our secretary Dr. Flickinger and detailed report sent to America. However I submit the following. Whatever may be said of the secular or financial side of the work it is a fact that the spiritual work is most encouraging. At every station and in every village that I have visited the people have paid marked attention to what has been said, and seem willing to do almost anything when it is made plain to them. It is true much more might have been done had all the teachers labored more as unto the Lord and for the salvation of souls Then the time and talents of the missionaries have been too much engrossed in the secular work so that they could not do for the people as might have been done. Yet God has blessed the work and about four hundred have joined our ranks in this district alone. For my own part I have held up to Dec. 31 about 115 regular services, visiting about 60 towns and walking more than one hundred miles.

Truly the outlook is good and the Lord is on the giving hand may we not expect a rich harvest of souls during the coming year.

Mendi Mission District

Dear Brethren,—The Mendi mission District as bounded by your committee at your last annual session extended from the Sasom River on the north and includes Sherbro Island and the Bargroo country.

Debia station was closed quite early in the year because of discouraging circumstances arising from a want of interest on the part of the people. Konnany station was opened shortly after under the auspices of the missionary aid society of Shaingay. The close of the year found us far into the enemy's land where satan had for unnumbered years held sway. Our itinerants having pushed their way into towns hitherto not reached by a preacher of the Gospel The warm reception of divine truths and the eager desire to be enrolled upon our class books is an evidence that the heathen has felt and acknowledges the superiority of the christian religion and hopes by it to gain future bliss.

To me it is a painful thought that after all the labor and sacrifice of this noble band of itinerants and at so important a period in our history, with the captain of the Lord's host evidently urging us forward into the conflict we should be called upon to beat a retreat. If as a church we wish to succeed, it must be obtained by aggressive movements on our part. Christ certainly meant this when he commanded "Go ye into all the world." Be assured dear brethren ye whose labors and whose advance into the darkness of heathenism has been through dangers and privations and bodily discomforts, your labors are not lost. He who has commanded, has promised to be with you even unto the end of the world. As a church with our itinerant system we are better adapted to meet the want of the people in this country than any other church.

Mando and Conkonany are comparatively new stations. At Avery and Good Hope the results far exceed our expectations when we consider that much had to be removed from an old structure to lay a new foundation.

Bompeh Mission District, not reported in writing.

Day Schools.

The day schools in connection with our work rank next in importance to the preaching of the Gospel itself. But comparatively few of the older people will give up their country customs and superstitious habits and accept the gospel. It is only while the mind is young before it has become hardened and absorbed in such things that lasting impressions can be made for good. Then how much depends on the work done in the school room. The success the destiny of the rising generation depends largely on the work done in the school room. Attention should not only be given to the prescribed lessons but also to the manners, the habits, the morality and the religious training. The teacher should see before him in every scholar a living soul struggling to rise above the common to a higher and nobler life.

During the year I have visited several schools and have taken particular attention as to the manner in which instruction was imparted and I do not think it is the best that could be used either for the scholar or teacher. This system is known as the learning in process, that is the lesson is repeated over and over by the teacher or monitor so that it may be memorized by the scholar." This is more frequently done with those who are trying the Alphabet or short sentences. Again after the monitor while they gaze carelessly about the room with the elder ones if the lesson is well repeated in class it is thought to be a good recitation when perhaps the real meaning has not been comprehended.

In this way the pupil learns to depend on the text book and the teacher. The better way would be to teach the child how to study, how to prepare his lesson, to think for himself. Then will the mental faculties commence to develope, and the greatest good be accomplished.

Sunday Schools

As Sunday Schools are a means by which the Bible is taught to the Young in truth and simplicity and is a plan of storing the mind with truth which may be a means of lifting them up and drawing them away from sin therefore Resolved 1st That we as minister of Christ do all in our power to establish schools and gather in the people to hear the Gospel read and explained.

Res. 2 That as teachers we will study with care and much prayer every lesson that we may teach nothing but the truth.

Missions.

Whereas the command of Christ our Savior is to teach all nations and inasmuch as we have enjoyed special tokens of His presence and blessing upon us during the year therefore Resolved 1st That we are devotely thankful to Almighty God for His providential openings in this continent of Africa and that we will redouble our efforts in the future prosecution of our mission work.

2nd That we acknowledge with thankfulness of confidence which come to us from our brethren of the several conferences in America and hope that they will continue to stand by us in contributing means for a more vigorous prosecution of this mission work in Africa.

3. That our confidence is unshaken in the Board of Missions and Executive Committee and pray them that so soon as possible they so arrange for the finance of the African Mission as not to embarrass us in the work of extending the borders of Zion.

4. That the sympathy of this meeting is with Brother and Sister West of the Bompeh mission and also their teachers in the trials through which they are called to pass in consequence of wars that have ravaged the Bompeh country and greatly disturbed the work there and furthermore as a meeting commend Brother and Sister West for their noble and daring conduct under these trying circumstances.

CHURCH ERECTION.

We believe that, wherever Missionary operations are conducted a suitable house of worship ought and must be erected therefore

Res. That we will not fail to urge the people particularly headmen of towns in which we preach to erect Chapels or Barras for worship of Almighty God.

MORAL REFORM.

In an evil age like the present in the most enlightened and religious countries of christendom it is highly necessary to put forth great efforts for the preservation of the morality of mankind, this then being true how much more necessary it must be in semi civilized and heathen lands on the borders and in the limits of the darkest paganism on the face of the globe. Such a overshadows the fields of our labors with the gloomy shades of moral night. Be it resolved therefore 1st That as members of this body and ministers of Christ we put forth every effort in our power to live pure and holy above suspicion and thereby teach by example a pure morality.

2nd That we use our influence as teachers against every form of vice and superstition and that we especially preach, pray, and talk against the rum traffic of this coast which threatens the distruction of all christian effort by drawing away many in various ways from right and dragging them downward

Owing to the fact that much matter had accumulated in the Office we are ourselves largely crowded out this time but will try to make up for it when our turn comes. We trust however our readers may be interested in the proceedings of the Annual District Meeting to which we have devoted larger space in this issue than was originally intended feeling that there might be many who would like to read them who may not be able to obtain the pamphlet in which they were ordered to be published

KONCONANY STATION.—Mr. J. W. Baker in charge of the work at Konconany reports a good religious interest among the people in that vicinity and feels that the work only needs to be pushed in order to abundant success in that quarter. He is very desirous of enlarging and wishes very much to obtain more seats for the Chapel or place of meeting as also to commence at once to erect a mission house he returned about the 7th inst to his charge to take steps toward building.

SIR SAMUEL ROWE AT SHERBRO.

To the Editor of the Early Dawn.

Sir,—On Tuesday the 24th inst. the "Countess of Derby" made her appearance on this little but important island of Sherbro, with his excellency SIR SAMUEL ROWE on board;

As soon as the steamer was seen at the point, there was great joy in the hearts of every Sierra Leone, Mendi, and Sherbro man, at the thought of SIR SAMUEL being on board; and there was to be seen almost in every street of Bonthe people winding their steps down to the Government wharf to welcome the newly arrived Gov. Rowe. At 2. 30. p. m., the steamer anchored when C. H Harley Moseley Esq.; acting Civil Commandant, W. J. P. Elliott Esq collector, and Dr. M. L. Jarrett went on board to welcome his excellency. The boatmen filled with joy and gladness, thought by hurling would be too long for them, bore it in triumph to the waters, to go for the gov. who when he landed on shore was escorted by Capt. Douglass The women welcomed him by singing and claping their hands, spread their Allaree, country clothes, silk shawls etc. etc. on the way all along to the Court Hall, that his excellency might walk on. During his short stay here few of the merchants paid him a visit, thinking that he would make a long stay. But on his returning back to the steamer about 2 50 he informed the women who kept singing in the Aku. language, that he did not come to stay this time, but he only came to see them and to tell them that he has arrived: He spoke in brief words of the kind reception that was given him and that he thanked them for same, and promissed that as he has come to them again, he will do all in his power to quell the petty wars that are now raging, so that they can once more go on with their trade.

I wish him good health to do as he promissed, so that he may make a longer stay in this West coast Africa. You will hear again from me as His excellency pomissed to give another visit to Sherbo in short. Meanwhile thanking you for the space occupied in your valuable journal I subscribe myself to be yours faithfully,

Ahenobarbus.

Miscellany.

This is the reason why cats wash their faces after meals: A cat caught a sparrow and was about to devour it; but the sparrow said; "No man, no gentleman eats me till he has first washed his face." The cat, struck with this remark, set the sparrow down and began to wash his face with his paw; but the sparrow flew away.

This vexed Puss exceedingly, and he said: "As long as I live I will eat first and wash my face afterward." Which all cats do to this day.

GIVING A TENTH.

When all called Christians offer the tenth of their incomes in worship as regularly as they pray or praise, then the Lord's treasury will supply the wants of His servants. Then neither selling nor renting pews will offend Him who said, "Make not My Father's house a house of marchandise." Then Christians shall cease to plead for fairs, sociables, and receptions against the plain direction of the Church. "Be not conformed to this world." Some men are lovingly taught by providential dispensations, and we doubt not for the good of all.

A layman in Indiana began to give the Lord His portion when he began to work for himself. He found little difficulty so long as he made but little. But during the war he became a partner in a hominy mill, which the war kept busy night and day, so that his income was over two hundred dollars a day Now came the trial. Shall I give over twenty dollars a day? the sum seemed so great, and his necessities and designs so growing and important, that he resolved too much. The very night that his covetousness mastered him, he awoke to see his mill in flames; He lost the mill, but but learned a most valuable lesson. He has never had any trouble about giving one-tenth since. Had this man known that no circumstances can justify us in forsaking the principles of honesty to the Lord, he would have been able to resist the temptation. It is not every one that has his hominy mill burned, but such a disaster would be worth more to many called Christians than millions of dollars. "If the Lord be God, follow Him; and if Baal, then follow him." Let the will act, and let feelings, desires, hopes, and fears, wait upon its action.—Pacific Churchman.

The New Machinery having arrived for the Meadi Mission saw Mill at Avery station Manoh Bargroo Mr. E. T. Tucker of Good Hope Station Mendi Mission, was despatched by the Agent on the 14th instant to the Bargroo to put the Mill in proper repair for the speedy execution of their many orders for Lumber.

The Madi seems at length successful in the Soudan and for the time at least Mohamedanism seems victorious in the Upper Nile region.

Thieves not all dead yet—Mr. E. A. Lewis came hastily into our Office the other day complaining of the bad deeds of one of them in the Bargroo who had been trying his hand on Mr. Lewis' goods in store at his Factory. Shortly after a reporter informed us that depredations had been committed by some of the same brotherhood at the shop of Mrs M. A. Collier, Otto Street, in this place. The same evening or night following we were startled by a terrific noise at the Mendi Mission Wharf near our Office and upon enquiry were informed that it was the police with others arresting some of the lovely fraternity. Mrs. Rebecca Rogers also has of late suffered from the hands of felons and also others that we can not now mention; which facts lead us to believe that they are not all dead yet, and that it would be well to sleep with one eye open at least for a while.

In this age of extended Literary means the mind of the young man to dispute every inch of it to usefulness of life. But what errors are more widely spread and so hard to eradicate, from the minds of young men, as those that have interlinked themselves with the dietetic and social use of alcoholic liquors, and from what other errors do consequences flow more disastrous to the moral and religious interest of Society! You could not confer a greater boon upon this community next to the spread of vital religion, than by rooting up these delusions, and by implanting in their stead knowledge of the real destructive and pernicious action of intoxicating liquors. Nothing has given more pain to the advocates of Temperance here than to witness the coldness, not to say antagonism, with which our Temperance movement has been treated by a portion of the residents of this country; the readiness to find fault rather than applaud; the willingness to seize upon incidental imperfections in the Temperance organizations while nothing is said of the tremendous evils inevitably and additionally arising from the drinking customs of the age. But some are honorably distinguished by a different Spirit and that the whole should be like minded is a desideratum it would be difficult to exaggerate. The good to be effected is beyond estimation and how, then can the absence of that good fail to be heartily lamented! Mr Editor! your pens and printing press may powerfully assist to knock out intemperance from our young men! and to what other object can they be more legitimately and monthly directed! The work is one which makes demands on your utmost energies, and even these can be of no sufficient avail unless they are employed in discountenancing all the causes of intemperance. It is your high and honourable office to guide the public mind, purify the public morals, and infuse into public life a healing virtue. All this you might be doing more than is now done if you place intoxicating liquors in their true character before you readers, urge them to seperation from all drinking customs, and impress them with the previlage and duty of uniting the interests

Temperance in a Negro Version

A Observer

Cannibal King. (to missionary:) "I think that the best thing I can do is to eat you."

Missionary (in earnest protest): "I do not agree with you sir." Cannibal King: "Well, I must'nt eat anything that, don't agree with me."

In H. H's concluding illustrated article on the Franciscan Missions of California, in the June Century, one effect of white example upon the Indian is described thus: "In a curious pamphlet left by one of the old friars, Father Boscana, is told a droll story of the logical inferences some of them drew from the political situations among their supposed betters. It was a band of San Diego Indians. When they heard that the Spanish viceroy in the city of Mexico had been killed, and a Mexican made emperor in his place, they forthwith made a great feast, burnished up their chief and elected a new one in his stead. To the stringent reproof of the horrified friars they made answer: 'Have you not done the same in Mexico? You say your king was not good, and killed him. Well, our captain was not good and we burned him. If the new one turns out bad, we will burn him, too,'—a memorable instance of the superiority of example to precept."

MANY REGIMENTS—BUT ONE ARMY. Think of a man saying that he has been looking round and sees that there are so many denominations, that really he has made up his mind to give up the whole thing! Does he know what he is talking about? Is he really serious when he speaks so? Shall I follow his example? If I do it will be to show how great is his folly. "I have been looking round, and see so many different regiments in the country that really it is impossible to tell which is right and which is wrong, and I do not think I shall have anything to do with the country." Yes, there are many regiments but one army, many denominations, but one Church, many creeds but one faith, many aspects but one life, many ways up the hill but one Cross on the top of it. Don't lose yourself among the diversities, which you might save yourself by looking at the unities. "There are so many mountains about that I really do not know that there can be any truth in geography."—Many mountains—one globe.

VOL. 2. BONTHE SHERBRO, WEST AFRICA, JUNE. 1885. No. 5.

SPECIAL AND CONSTANT PROVIDENCE.

"Are not five sparrows sold for two farthings, and not one of them is forgotten before God? But even the very hairs of your head are all numbered!" (Luke xii. 6, 7.)—These encouraging words were spoken by the blessed Lord "when there were gathered together an innumerable multitude of people"—not the self righteous, hypocritical Pharisees lawyers, and scribes, over whom he had just pronounced the woes that must overtake them, but those who felt themselves unworthy of his attention, yet needy and in want of such blessings as they saw he had imparted to others. Therefore he spoke of the special providence of God in the least things, adding "Fear not therefore; ye are of more value than many sparrows."

A great deal is said in the Scriptures of God's strict account of reckoning with the people. Does this appear to us as the Lord's special care that none of his blessings may prove unprofitable to us, or do we only see in it a critical supervision of our behaviour? A person regards God in the Scriptures and in nature according to his own spiritual state. "If any man will do his [God's] will he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God." (John vii. 17.) In nature, plants, each according to its kind, are seen to grow out of the earth from their proper seeds under the favorable distribution of rain and sunshine, and produce their beautiful foliage and flowers, and finally the ripe seed with which the wonderful process may be again repeated. How do we ascribe this marvelous work to the living God?

We believe that the hairs of our heads are all numbered by our heavenly Father, because the scriptures say so; and we must therefore also admit that he notices every blade of grass on the whole earth, and every leaf on all trees, even every fiber and least particle in these, and in every human being and animal. But in all this God may be recognized as only a superintendent. Even when recognizing that God created the earth and the heavens in the beginning, with all that is in them, we may regard their motions developments, and continuation too much as the effects of powers then put into creation, and ever since operating under the guidance and supervision of the Creator; for all things work as by immutable laws. And has not God established these laws?

God, as the Word which in due time was made flesh, did create "in the beginning;" but self-existence, which he alone is, can not be imputed to any of his works, and therefore maintenance is a continual creation. The laws of nature are not properties of matter, but the extended power by which matter is held in existence and life dispensed. Natural forces and life do not proceed from God in a mass. God must continually and most minutely extend them. Every Christian admits that God creates and maintains all things, even to the minutest parts, according to his divine love and wisdom, making these his creative power. What looks to us as law is, therefore, from this creative power of God; and every iota of this power goes forth on a special mission.

A person may thoroughly understand what are called the immutable laws of nature, but there is not one complete development or phenomenon in nature that he can altogether ascribe to their undirected action. How do they produce a sudden storm or rain or cold wave? What law causes the variety of color in a litter of pigs or cats, and some to be male and others female? Philosophers ascribe the motion of the heavenly bodies to the centrifugal and centripetal forces; but with these bodies scattered throughout space the attraction must be constantly varying, so that these forces, left to themselves, would soon divert the planets from their orbits. The eight satellites of Saturn, all attracting each other, how are they kept in their "beaten track" by the forces named? The attraction of the moon upon the earth is said to cause the ocean tides; but the tide always rises simultaneously on opposite sides of the earth, both from and toward the moon.

The unconscious forces called laws of nature apparently accomplish much that can only be accounted for by the fact that they proceed from the Almighty directing hand of the all-wise God of love, the word made flesh in Jesus Christ. All things of spirit and nature, all existence and life, being therefore made and maintained by Christ are subjects of Christianity; but only persons who live according to the precepts and pattern of Jesus Christ are Christians.

Man is rewarded according to his works: and this is also providence. In the beginning man was placed in the garden of Eden, with dominion "over all the earth" and when he sinned the verdict came, "Cursed is the ground for thy sake. * * * Thorns also and thistles shall it bring forth to Thee." Hence the change in man caused this corresponding change. Providence being therefore according to the character of the people, who should learn from nature even what is the character of the human race. While weeds and venomous and devouring animals abound, and floods, fires, storms, and pestilence rage, let all men cry out "We are sinners!" Let no one accuse his neighbour as being the cause of these trials, but may all learn what is implied in loving our neighbours as ourselves. If we do suffer a little for the sake of others, may all remember that there are very few comforts of life to which, in the divine providence, our fellows have not contributed.—J. R. Hoffer,—In the Rel. Telescope.

DRUNKENESS.

To the Editor of the "Early Dawn."

Dear Mr. Editor,

All stories and all ages have too many of the examples of the evil of drunkenness. It let loose the reins of all those evils to which a man is by his nature or by his evil customs inclined. Its consequences are evil for it puts out the spirit of God in man, therefore the Apostle Paul says in Ephesians v, 18, "Be not drunk in wine wherein is excess, but be filled with the Spirit." Let us bring forth our Saviour's words on this subject and try to elucidate actual and habitual drunkenness. "Take heed to yourselves lest at any time your heart be overcharged with surfeiting and drunkenness." There is sin both in the effect and affection of drunkenness. He that drinks but little, if that little makes him drunk, and if he know beforehand his infirmity is guilty of surfeiting not of drunkenness. But he that drinks much and is strong to bear it, and is not deprived of his reason violently is guilty of the sin of drunkenness. It is a sin to present such uncharitable effects upon the body and understanding and therefore a man that loves not the drink is guilty of surfeiting if he does not watch to prevent the evil effect, and it is a sin and the greater of the two inordinately to love or to use the drink though the surfeiting or violence do not follow. The counsel of the son of Sirach is good to follow, "Show not thy valiantness in wine, for wine hath destroyed many." The evils and bad effects which it produces and so many arguments to avoid this sin are pent down by the writer of the Holy Scripture and other wise Personages of the World. It causeth woes and mischiefs, wounds and sorrows, sin and shame, it increaseth rage, and lesseneth strength it causeth redness of eyes and a loose and babbling tongue. Solomon in enumerating the evils of this vice adds this: "Thine eyes shall behold strange women, and thy heart shall utter perverse things. It hinders the action of the understanding, and makes a man become brutish in his passion, a fool in his reason; and differs nothing from madness.

Why does man take a delight in drunkenness when it exposes the soul in all its weakness and follies, it adds sin to sin and makes a man incapable of being a private friend or a public counsellor, it taketh a man's soul into slavery and imprisonment more than any vice and therefore it commonly grows in him till he becomes more than a fool and less than a man. We need not add sad examples, since all stores and all ages have too many of them. The drunkenness of Noah and Lot are upon record to eternal ages, God might show that very great evils are prepared to punish this vice; no less than shame and slavery and incest the first upon Noah, the second upon one of his sons, and the third by the the person of Lot. Ammon was slain by his brother Absalom when his heart was merry with wine. Simon the high Priest and two of his sons were slain by their brother at a drunken feast, and all the great things that the Prophet Daniel spake of Alexander were drowned with a surfeit of one night's intemperance. If it be enquired concerning the time and distinct sign of drunkenness, and when a man is said to be drunk, it can be answered that drunkenness is in the same manner to be judged as sickness. As every illness or violence done to health in every part of its continuance is a part or degree of sickness, so is every going off from our natural and common temper, a degree of drunkenness. He is not only drunk that can drink no more,—for few are so. But he hath sinned in a degree of drunkenness who hath done any thing towards it beyond his proper measure. Its parts are usually reckoned thus. Much talking, immoderate laughing, dullness of sense, abusive language, useless understanding, stupid sleep, beastly vomittings. Let those who are indulging in this vice, endeavour to avoid it, by not being often present at feasts, nor at all in dissolute company when it may be avoided, for variety of pleasing objects naturally steals away the heart, and company is either violent or enticing, and man is weak, or comeddling or perhaps sometimes desirous to be amused. Never urge any man to eat or drink anything beyond his own limits and his own desires. He that does otherwise is drunk with his brother's surfeit, and falls with his intemperance, then the sin of drunkenness is upon both, and they both lie wallowing in the guilt. Let us use St. Paul's remedy for drunkenness: "Let us who are of the day be sober, putting on the breastplate of faith and love, and for an helmet, the hope of salvation. Faith, hope and Charity are the best weapons in the world to fight against intemperance. The faith of the Mohamedans forbids them to drink wine, and they abstain religiously, so also the sons of Rechab, and the faith of Christ forbids drunkenness to all his followers, and Christ is infinitely greater; when we remember that we are Christians, and to abstain from drunkenness and gluttonyis part of the faith and discipline of the Lord Jesus and with these evils neither our love to God nor our love to God can possibly consist. Therefore let us listen to what St. Paul says, "The end of all things is at hand, be ye therefore sober, and watch unto Prayer."

AVERY STATION.

On the 31st of May the Rev. G. N. Jowett by request of the Presiding Elder, the Mendi District of the Sherbro-Mendi Missions held a Sacramental Meeting at Avery Station Manoh Bargroo, which is reported to have been a time of refreshing indeed. On the first of June he examined the Day School which he found in a prosperous condition, making commendable progress under the direction of Mr. S. B. Morrison and his daughter Miss A. N. Morrison. On the 14th inst., the District Superintendent visited the Station and held interesting Services. During the Sabbath and on Monday evening, held the quarterly Conference which showed that Mr. S. B. Morrison in charge and his assistants had done good and faithful work during quarter, and although there has been a withdrawal from a number of places formerly occupied (in consequence of the retrenchment ordered by our Home Authorities) yet it appears the falling off in the membership has not been as large as was at first anticipated, however it will be nearly two hundred or more than half the number reported at our last Annual Meeting. To retrieve these heavy losses as far as may be possible, the Supt. intimated the employment of another Teacher, whose chief duty should be to itineriate, and he has already added a man to Avery Staff of Headmen, who will relieve Mr. Morrison in some of his too numerous secular duties, and thus give him a better opportunity for religious work. If the funds for the support of these additions to the Avery Staff can be raised, it seems pretty evident that a good work may yet be accomplished in the Bargroo.

It has been reported from the Kittam that His Excellency Gov. Rowe really advanced further toward the interior with his Peace Expedition than any one expected that he would go. The natives were astonished on every hand not only at his facility in the management of their difficulties, but also at the progress of his journeyings through a country so forbidding to European travel. And indeed we believe that few men could be induced to feel the necessity of such perseverance in a matter of the nature that Gov. Rowe has had in hand; the disposition of too many men is to sit down idly and magnify their own importance until they cannot see why others do not come to them. Such seems not to be the feelings of Her Majesty's present Gov. in-Chief of the West Africa Settlements. But on the contrary, he is a man of Prowess and Energy; who when he has determined upon an enterprize, leaves no stone unturned, until he has accomplished his purpose; and herein lies doubtless the sequel of his various achievements in the past and his present success in the Settlement of the troubles that have for so long kept these regions from the enjoyment of peace and prosperity.

THE RAINS.

Our Correspondent Tousant reminds us that the Season has come in this Country, when it is by no means hard to get a wetting, a real soaker, followed up with a genuine African cold. A time of overflowing rivers and swelling Tides, a time, not of soft South Winds, such as poets like to sing of, but of the Sokpkah, the south-west wind, that makes the strong man tremble at its power. Yes it is more than all that; it is a time of scarcity for food, when those who have danced during the Drys, or wasted their time in any other way, must suffer the consequences of their own indolence and wastefulness.

During the rains in all parts of the Land there is a scarcity of work and it is really trying to the most industrious to labor, under the inclemency of the weather, at times. Then too as navigation is, the most general employment and that too in all kinds of craft from the smallest Crew-canoe, to the Great Steam Ship of 1,800 tons burden; the frequent and sudden storms of the season render it very unsafe, and not a few on the river and sea loose their lives.

Mrs. G. B. Thompson in the way returning from Bananas together with a party of several Ladies and others in a small boat on the 9th inst. were overtaken by a Tornado not far from Bomplake, we believe, and after they had anchored, narrowly escaped death by lightening which was superinduced in the direction of their Boat, by an open box of tools belonging to one of the party. The boat and sail were damaged but none of the party were hurt.

On the 3rd page will be found an interesting Article on Governor Rowe's visit to the Gallinas, but we are sorry that another giving particulars of Mamiah has to lay over for the next Issue.

REPORT of AVERY STATION, Mendi Mission, For the Quarter Ending June 1885.

REV. J. A. EVANS,

Dear Bro,

In attempting to make this my second quarterly report to you I can say with much thankfulness that the Lord has dealt graciously with us, notwithstanding the various discouragements with which we have met.

There have been some drawbacks since my last report, arising from the want of a thorough working of the spirit in some of our members, who I am pleased to state the Master has won back into the fold; and the present state of the work is good and hopeful. Our services both on the Sabbath and week nights have been very encouraging. My occasional visits to the people at Manoh Village have been successful.

The itinerating work is advancing gradually. There is still in this department some decrease resulting from the want of men to carry on the work. At present our Seekers' Classes have been reduced to 5, yet we rejoice for an increase of 9; making in all 179 Members. Communicants 25, Seekers 154; Hitherto hath the Lord helped us.

Sabbath-School—This department I regret to report, is the same as had been since the commencement of the year. We pray for the time when our friends, especially young men and women, who have for years enjoyed the blessings of Education will feel to accept with burning anxiety the honor of being either Teachers or Scholars in Sabbath Schools instead of spending their Sabbath leisures at the Bone, Warree, and Gambling. Officers 2., Number of Sabbath Scholars, 26; Total 28.

Day-School.—This part of our work which had suffered much for want of a Teacher in the earlier part of the year, has had a very careful management during the quarter. Two of the elderly boys have gone to complete their trade at Shengay. The rest consisting of the Boarders and other children residing in the Station, are making due progress. Number on the Roll is 34 of both sexes.

Missionary aid Collections £6. 4. 0.

We look forward to him who is the giver of all needful blessings for numerical increase, both in the religious and educational part of our work in this Station. Craving your prayers on our behalf.

I remain, Dear Brother,
Yours in the same Bonds,
SAML. B. MORRISON.

OUR TRANSATLANTIC CONTEMPORARY.

To the Editor of the "Early Dawn."

Sir,—By reference, you will observe, that the Religious Telescope of May 13th contains the report of the proceedings of the Pennsylvania and East Pennsylvania Conferences.

Among the crowd and pressure of financial considerations engrossing the time and attention of the members of those Conferences, you will see that their ultimate resolution is in favor of dispensing with the office of a paid Treasurer for the Missionary Society, and also that they disapprove as unwise trips to England and Africa, by their Officers."

Now Mr. Editor, your Church discipline strictly forbids all connection with any secret society. I am a good Templar, and, although no member of your Church accordingly, or any other Religious Body, yet being a descendant of America, and having resided in and about Sierra Leone for some 15 years, I have watched with deep interest the wonderful progress of your Mission-work and with great pleasure the harmony with which your Missionaries work together both colored and white. A spirit of harmony seems to prevail, not often found even among Christians. We believe the frequent visits of the Secretary to gether with the great interest he takes in the work during those trips to Africa, are productive of great good, to Mission operations.

Again, the fact that the Treasurer himself having spent many years as a Missionary here, which offers every opportunity for personal information with respect to the necessary requirements for successful mission operations &c., I have thought perhaps might have something to do with it.

I ask is it right or is it the spirit of your religion to ask people to work for God without pay. "The laborer is worthy of his hire" Luke x. 17.

There can be no doubt that great improvement in various respects has been, and is going on here wherever the influence of your Mission has reached. This improvement is hailed with great joy by the friends of the Mission, and hopes are high that no change shall take place that may effect the evil the work of your Missionaries. This change meets with no favorable response whatever from the friends of your Mission in our neighbourhood. We are certainly in favor of economy. The man who practices economy is a prudent man, but one of a miserly turn of mind cannot be considered prudent. There are certain continent expenses attending all undertakings of a business nature, which one cannot honorably shirk.

No object of much importance can be secured without the feeling of responsibleness in the individual employed; to secure this the feeling of responsibleness a salary adequate to the position of trust should be paid. Time will not allow us to be as lengthy as we had intended to be.

Yours,
21st June, 1885. OBSERVER.

Narrowly Escape from Drowning.—In the Manoh Bargroo river near the Mission Coffee Farm at Avery Station. Two children and an elderly woman on Sunday June 21st.

We regret to note that after all that could be done the health of the Rev. J. M. Lesher and Wife of the Shaingay Mission failed to such an exient that they have been compelled to return home to America.

We also learn that Rev. W. S. Sage of the same Mission but stationed at Kooloong is now ill at Shaingay.

It is reported that a party of Gberry's War boy's made an attack on Bogo a Town in the Imperi within the jurisdiction of Chief Beah Boom. The party however we understand were repulsed and driven away further particulars have not reached us to date.

It is reported that Capt Curphy Agent of the Sulymah Company has been plundered by Bandits at Bandakoh Kittam river has reported here and proceeded to Freetown on the 27th of June.

The Mamiah affair of last month was but another instance of the robbery and murderous plundering constantly committed on the Border and within Jurisdiction largely because it is known that the Parties committing such depredations by slight Technicalities of the Law are almost certain to escape death or even long confinement.

Coroner's Jury was held at Bowmah on Monday 22nd inst., over the body of one of the murdered in the late robberies near Bendo.

The Bridge crossing to Vandahoi Factory is getting fearfully bad, but as one of our Reporters assures us that he saw His Worship the Commandant and Mr. J. W. P. Elliott looking at it. We have every reason to believe that it will soon receive proper attention.

Just as we are going to press the Mail, brings us a package from H. L. HASTINGS SCRIPTURAL TRACT REPOSITORY 47 CORNHILL BOSTON MASS. U. S.A. containing more than one dozen Anti-Infidel tracts and and papers, having read the Excellent Literature from the above named house, look forward to an enjoyable feast in the papers before us and most sincerely thank the Donors for the same.

THE RAINS HAVE COME.

The Farmers now are very busy, planting their rice, the Cassada is already up, and looking fresh and nice, these are the principle Crops, throughout this part of the country; and these crops are quite insufficient, to properly support a man and his family, had he nothing else to fall back on, there would be great suffering, and why is this so? It is simply because the people will not cultivate the soil, as it ought to be, they will not raise the crops that the soil is capable of producing; they insist on cultivating with the same little narrow hoe, from 2 to 4 inches wide with a handle from 18 to 24 inches long, that has been used by their forefathers, for many generation back, why will not some intelligent native undertake and prosecute some of the modern civilized modes of agriculture; as the Hon. Samuel Lewis, Mr. Taylor, and a few others of Sierra Leone. Why cannot some of the native men of the Sherbro, take the initiative, and introduce something better? The women of Shengay, be it said to their praise, are doing nobly; for not less than a half dozen of them, are cultivating very nice farms of Arrowroot, and Coffee, and some have Cotton growing: it is true these farms are small, but they are properly cleared and are being resolutely cultivated. The fact, that the Palm tree, yields such an abundant supply of Oil and Kernels, that can be had without the trouble of cultivating is perhaps, one reason why the men do not trouble themselves about improved methods of agriculture. While the Palm tree is a very great blessing, I believe it is also indirectly the cause of much indolence, for the men simply cut the clusters from the Trees and the women and children must extract the oil, crack the nuts, and get out the Kernels after which the men come in again for the Lions share of the receipts which is usually nineteen twentieths and not unfrequently twenty twentieths.

Yes the rains are upon us and are very heavy, and we thank the giver of all good, for the palm tree, pray that the Day may not be far distant when our Sherbro men will take lead, in the more improved methods of Farming.

VISIT OF SIR SAMUEL ROWE TO THE GALLINAS DISTRICTS.

The visit of Sir Samuel Rowe to the Gallinas Country and eastward has taken place and is over. Peace has been established among the belligerents in those regions and commercial activity has been assured by the treaties signed. What remains to be done is the immediate withdrawal of the war boys from pacified countries. This task we understand cannot be performed by their employers without Government coercion, or such heavy payments as the already insolvent chiefs cannot afford. From what we learn, His Excellency's plain speech, his firmness and determination together with his bold display of steadiness for war to attain his end, the main inducements contributing to the ready execution of the valuable agreements secured. It is impossible to expect perfect reason among the natives and dwellers of savagedom, and rather than allowing important interests to suffer for lack of reason on the one side the resources of civilization should be brought to bear and a wholesome control exercised by the well-disposed for the good of all. Sir Samuel was prepared to adopt this alternative, and the shrewd Chieftains more than half expected it, hence the speedy accomplishment of the first part of His Excellency's present mission to this country.

One or two commissioners may with advanage be placed at central parts of the newly opened country to protect life and property more certainly than the local chiefs can do or care to do, by which means the Peace so happily brought about will be preserved, friendly relations with the neighboring tribes appreciated, the Government respected, and the agencies of civilization introduced. Bocarry Governor, Fah Woondoo, Mormor Kie Kie, Foray Gorgrah and other country magnates of that class as well as Queen Nyawah of Bandasumah in the Barrie Country are now on friendly terms with the Government and with one another. It is to be wished that timely advantage will be taken of the conditions so wisely established by Sir Samuel whose next visit is anxiously looked for in the interests of the Boom and the Bompeh Districts.

Mr. Editor,—Your Correspondent Tousant, in the March number of your paper asks what can be done to break up and drive out those petty Rum Sellers? Refering to those non-responsible low and miserable small dealers, Male and Female in many country villages who for the paltry Margin on the sale of a few bottles of Poor Gin and Worse Rum, are degrading themselves and debasing Society, dragging not only men but women, and even our youth down to ruin. I would to say that I like the Licensee Idea, if the Government could undertake the enforcement of such regulations, however I with Tousant have my objections to Licenses, yet if it would check-mate the progress of this deplorable business I would urge it as an alternative. However such an alternative would only be a relief, a remedy, but not a cure for the evil; hence I should suggest something more thorough as a gradual reform in commercial trade, from dealing so largely in Spirits to the sale of more useful articles as clothing, cottons, provisions, tools &c. Such at first would perhaps not yield such large profits, and Foreigners may not feel sufficient interest in the country to promote such a traffic but natives ought to remember, that it is to their interest to promote the morals of Society, in every possible manner, even at the sacrifice of their commercial gain; and this cannot be done in any other way, to greater advantage than by the elimination of the Rum Factor, from their business, and thus put themselves in a position, to advocate boldly the Temperance Cause which is now so feebly supported, on account of the relation that Spirits bear to Commerce. Which very naturally causes every Trader, who is at all consistent, to hold his peace, even while he beholds the demon alcohol, in his own shop, yea in his own house, depraving the apetite, vitiating the taste and corrupting the morals of his own children. In conclusion let me say in the success of Temperance is the death of the Rum Traffic.

THE MAN WHO HURRIES.

The bustling, hurrying man, as a matter of fact, is a poor worker. Too much of his steam power is expended in kicking up dust. The habit of hurrying is fatal to good work, and diminishes the amount of work a man can do. The friction is too great. So little of practical value is accomplished that he cannot go home at night with a sweet consciousness of a duty done, of a day's work completed.

The men who accomplish most never seem in a hurry, no matter how much they have to do. They are not troubled for lack of time, for they make the most of the minutes by working in a cool methodical manner, finishing each job properly and not expending their nervous force in bustle.

They never complain of overwork; but are more likely to hunt up new work in order to give their faculties more varied employment and to exercise some which are not sufficiently used.—Herald of Health.

The other evening a traveler endeavored to walk into the Washington Hotel, temporarily closed for repairs, but was unable to effect an entrance.

"That house is closed, mister," said a pedestrain as he passed along. The traveler banged away on the door and the pedestrian called out:

"You, there—that house is closed!" The traveler twisted away at the knob, and once more the pedestrian called out:

"I say that house is closed!"

'Don't you suppose I know it, you fool!" "What I'm trying to do is to open it!"—Vicksburg Herald.

A rural swain visiting Dayton with his doxy, they were observed at evening standing near the ticket office at the depot, waiting for their train. It was cold and dreary, and the temperature was touching up the girl's ears and nose with a blending of purple and red. "Look here, Josh!" she exclaimed, petulantly, "I'm tired standing up here, I am half froze. Let's go to that place (ladies' room). Every body else goes in there!" "No you don't!" said Josh; "no sir-ee! I've spent enough money now, and I ain't agoin' to pay to go in there!"

"Yes," said the merchant, "I always mark the most expensive of my goods as sold during the holiday season. Then when women read the signs it makes them crazy to have the same article, and they are so disappointed that I finally promise to try and get them another—which, of course, I have no trouble in doing. Oh it's a great scheme, I tell you, and never fails."

Mrs. Bramble lost no time in getting ready for the auspicious event. Indeed, so excited was she, and so apprehensive of being late, that she arrived at the Mansion House half an hour too early, and had to request her coachman to drive her round and round the Bank untill the doors were opened.

But at last she was in the great hall, and took a place on a conspicious-looking cushioned seat, to listen to the band while the people trooped in. All at once she gave a start. Surely that couldn't be her Benjamin in a faultless dress suit, and leading in the eldest unmarried daughter of the Lord Mayor? However, Mrs. B. could see as far through a brick wall as anybody and whenshe had assured herself that it was her Benjamin, her temper rose, and she bore down on him with annihilating force of a whirlwind.

Bramble saw her coming, and hazarded a faint "Good evening, dear."

"Don't you 'Good evening' me, sir! Let go of that young hussy's arm, and go home" she exclaimed in a loud voice.

'But, my dear——"

"Now, do as I tell you!"

By this time everybody's attention in the room had been drawn to the trio, including the Lord Mayor and party who had just then entered.

Bramble felt his blood run cold at the thought of a probable exposure before the whole roomfull of the people.

"March, sir," majestically cried Mrs. B., and Bramble marched, with his wife at his heels.

Next time Bramble is invited to a Lord Mayor's ball it is just probable he will stay at home.

A CYNICAL old bachelor says that "lovers are like armies: they get along well enough till the engagement begins."

The meanest man in the world lives in Leeds. In helping him out of the river once, a man tore the collar of his coat. The next day he sued him for assault and battery.

VOL. 2. BONTHE SHERBRO, WEST AFRICA, JULY, 1885. No. 6.

SOME FACTS IN CONNECTION WITH THE MAMAYAH RAID.

It is unfortunate for Chief Beah Boom of the Imperreh Country, that he has profited so little by painful experience, and that he has under his nominal control, such subjects as would always get him into trouble with the Sierra Leone Government, in spite of the extreme leniency that notoriously characterizes the foreign policy of the Government now a days. One portion of his country has been under the rule of an odius Sub-Chief called Kah Tegbeh who has generally distinguished himself by real acts of scoundrelism, planned out with admirable tact, and ill-befitting one who professes friendship with the Government, and is in almost daily contact with civilization but who as much as, and perhaps more than his superior lord continues to remain a savage and a nuisance.

The Imperreh people have done mischief enough, and it is hoped that the recent affair at Mamayah will bring matters to a crisis. It is said that immediately after a report of the last said Joy a party from that local ty was submitted to Sir Samuel Rowe. His Excellency despatched messengers to Gbambayah the notorious capital of that Disirict with a letter threatening the Chief with extensive punishment, if certain parties were not surrendered. We watch with increasing interest the preliminary proceedings in progress at the Police Court, and whatever may be the ultimate fate of the culprits by law, the country that furnishes a retreat for such wretches, should be visited with that wholesome chastisement which it has so long deserved.

The facts of the raid are briefly these.—

About two months ago a marauding party at Bowmah, in the Imperreh country organized by one Malegeh the son and heir of Kah Tegbeh, conceived the pleasant idea of conducting a raid into the villages of Kamp and Yhandahu in British Territory, situated about six miles at the head of a creek running at the back of Mamayah. This place is a frontier town opposite the Imperreh Territory and separated from it by the Jong branch of the Sherbro river, and less than half a mile across. The leaders of the raid evidently intended a big business, judging from the number composing the party. Mamayah at that time could only boast of a solitary Police man for itself and the neighbourhood, but as events proved, he was well qualified to fill the post. Four canoes conveyed the marauders across; their leader being one Doogbeh a repulsive looking ruffian the guide was one Kpandeh Yainkam, whose looks indicate him capable of any trick. The whole party numbering about twenty. True to their purpose, the villages were attacked on the night of Sunday the 18th of May and pillaged, women and children to the number of thirty were kidnapped, and in the course of the raid, an importunate sick man in the village of Hump, was wantonly murdered. In returning with their plunder, the canoes were intercepted by the Policeman where the creek enters the river, and most of the captives rescued. Too much cannot be said in praise of that officer who single handed, confronted the tricks of the marauders. Seven of the offenders are now in custody, some of them undoubtedly perished during the encounter at the barmouth, the rest together with the remaining of the captives are being demanded by the Government.

A FORETASTE OF HEAVEN.

Did you ever lie down on the top of a mountain, whence you beheld a wide landscape, with its fields and cottages spread, in silent repose, before your very eyes? In your bosom, also, perfect quiet reigned. You forgot your cares. No sorrow weighed upon your spirits; no unpleasant remembrances disturbed the calm; no intruding passion dared to break the holy peace of your soul; and a voice within whispered "Blessed were I, could I remain forever thus!" What you then felt was a fleeting foretaste of heaven, which sometimes even passionate, unquiet spirits are allowed to enjoy, in order that they may look into themselves, and earnestly reflect how they might perpetuate this tranquil and blessed state. You were happy because you had forgotten yourself; because you were free from earthly desires.—Zschokke.

SINGING FOR BREAD

Almost four hundred years ago some boys attended school in the quaint old German city of Eisenach. Some of them were very poor, and used to go up and down the streets singing their German songs and then asking for bread for God's sake,—Panem propter Deum. One of these lads, who was about fifteen years old, attracted the attention of a good woman, Ursula, the wife of Kunz Cotta, and she called the hungry little fellow into the house and gave him bread, and sympathy, and motherly comfort; for his own mother, the miner's wife of Eisleben, was far away and could not see his tears nor sympathize in his sorrows.

So the good Ursula helped the schoolboy, and strengthened his heart, and cared for his needs, and he grew up a diligent student, keen in intellect and eloquent in speech.

In 1501, when he was eighteen years old, he entered the University of Eafort; the next year took his bachelor's degree, and was made master of arts in 1505. His parents hoped to make him a lawyer, but the sudden death of a friend, who was stricken down by lightning at his side, increased the sense of sin and guilt that was in his own heart, and he turned himself to God; and after years of blind seeking and vain striving, he finally was directed to the word of God, and in studying the sacred Scriptures the light of the gospel dawned on his soul.

He soon began to proclaim salvation, and rebuke the sins that prevailed around him, and of course suffered persecution and opposition. His life was one of storm and conflict, but of wondrous fruitfulness and usefulness in the Master's cause. He was a bold soldier of the Cross, a faithful warrior in the army of the Lord. He preached the gospel with power to great Congregations; he wrote books which have been read in all lands; and the lad who sung for bread on the streets, of Eisenach, composed hymns and tunes which have been sounding through Germany and through the world for more than 350 years. He translated the Bible into the German tongue, and made it the household book in the homes of Germany; and yet when he was the companion of princes, and his name was known throughout Europe, in his poverty he used to labor with his hands, and turn wooden bowls for a living; and he gave the presents he received from princes, to feed the poor and supply the wants of the needy.

It seemed a little thing when kind-hearted Ursula Cotta fed the hungry school-boy who sung before her door and begged for bread, but was it a little thing when that woman fed, comforted and strengthened Martin Luther in his days of poverty and toil, for the work which was before him which was to bless the world and save a multitude of souls? Let us never neglect or despise the poor; for those whom we despise, God may yet exalt and honor. H.—In The Little Christian.

CATTLE RAISING No. 3.

Sometime ago I tried to set forth the advantages to be derived from Cattle Raising and in my second Article on that subject I spoke of the enterprise as tending to develop the country but as we are apt to be somewhat more selfish than enterprising I remarked that such general development would in turn not only make some men richer but it would largely enhance the opportunities of all to become more independent.

For it must be kept in mind that the price of cattle or cows is such that almost any frugal laborer of the land may become the possessor of a cow or two with which to make a beginning in this productive line of industry and the opportunity as we have already remarked for getting lands for Pasturage is such that all may obtain a place for keeping their cattle.

I might have felt some timidity in troubling you again with remarks on this subject; but for the fact that since my last, in your March number a young man of moderate means has to my knowledge made a deposit with the Agent of Mendi Mission at at Bonthe for the purpose of purchasing cows; and another gentleman in conversation the other day seemed much in favor of the writers' idea of using cows in the cultivaton of the soil which that gentleman thinks would greatly facilitate the better preparation of the soil for the reception of the seed and thus increase the in the returns of the same. Now Mr. Editor if I can increase the interest of others on this and kindred subjects that relate to the prosperity of the country I shall feel that I have been amply rewarded for my efforts.

J. Albert.

ORATION FOR A LITTLE BOY.

Would I be a Prussian, or a French man, or a Russian, or a Turkey? No, no; a thousand times no! Constantinople is in Turkey, and Paris is in France, and Napoleon used to be there; but what do I care for any of them? The star spangled banner is worth them all, and George Washington can whip any prince or king on any Fourth of July that you may mention. I am an American boy, and in America we are all princes and imperials as soon as we are born. We can all sing "Hail Columbia!" as soon as we can walk, and ye go to school every day, and learn how to vote. When we put on our first pair of boots we give a tremendous stamp and say "Down with tyrants;" and under our jackets our hearts are always thumping out the word Liberty!—Good Times.

DISCOURAGEMENTS & ENCOURAGEMENTS.

We had determined from the commencement of the present Volume of our paper, which was issued on the 25th of February; to get out each number earlier, in the month, until it would be possible, to issue each number at the beginning of the month, of which it bears the date; and of course containing the News of the previous time up to within a few days, of its appearance from the Press. Our first efforts in this line were thwarted by the absence of our foreman for the press, who was away on leave at the time that the paper should have been prepared. We had sufficient matter but no one to set it up, and hence the paper could not be issued; this gave us no little disappointment and chagrin. However, as it was unaviodable, we determined not to sit down, and whine over the past; but get abont it and try again, and thus far we are being successful, and this issue goes out much earlier than usual: and we are pleased to note the fact that it has a much greater variety of writers and Topics, and more different individual contributers, than any previous number of the present volume, and we have every reason to believe that this variety would have been largely increased, if we had awaited the usual time to go to Press. Again it is a source of Encouragement that almost every issue draws in more New Subscribers and Contributers.

We are glad to be able to fulfil our promise in last issue of giving further information of the Mamayah Affair.

We have been surfeited with the extensive reports of the Meetings of General Boards and the General Conference of the U. B. C Church in America, and while we have not had sufficient time to read all of these reports, yet we have read the greater part of those published in the Religious Telescope, the official organ of the Church and have indeed been gratified with that which the Lord has been pleased to accomplish through the instrumentality of this body of Christians. And especially have we noted with pleasure the interest taken in the work on this dark continent. The election of a Bishop of Foreign Missions will no doubt be of great advantage in many respects to the African work and the choice falling on Rev. Dr. Flickinger will in every way be suitable to the German field as well as the African. His acquaintance abroad in England, Scotland, and in Germany, and experience, in Missionary operations, in America, Europe, and Africa are eminently calculated to fit him for the arduous task of a Foreign Missionary Bishop, a Novel title it may be true, yet it seems just the novelty much needed at this time for the furtherance of our Foreign Work in Europe and Africa.

As an Evidence of the Interest felt in the African and Foreign Work by our Church in America, we insert below a Report on Missions by one of the Conferences as published in their Pamphlet Form of Minutes for March 1885.

The Virginia Conference renews its covenant relation in the bonds of Christ to the great cause of Christian missions. The progress of each year, and the triumph of the Gospel over false religions in all parts of the world, demonstrate the universal adaptation of Christianity to the moral condition and wants of the entire race, and the practicability and wisdom of modern missionary methods. Within the cycle of this century God is making a new manifestation of the power of the Gospel. While combined opponents have made a "century of failures in attacks upon Christianity," the friends of Jesus have carried the Gospel of salvation around the world, and its missionaries, men and women, are everywhere making disciples of the crucified but ever-living Lord. The triumph and success of Christian missions in this century is the wonder of the ages. The world is preparing for the second coming of Christ.

During the past year God has continued his blessing upon our mission work in Germany. The good work of Rev. J. Sick, Superintendent of our German mission, with his associates, is destined to continue to bear much good fruit. We assure them of our deep sympathy and prayers for their success, in that father-land.

In Africa, though a part of the work has been disturbed by local wars, and the lives of some of our missionaries and their people put in great peril, still no great hinderances have been suffered, but on the other hand the work has enlarged until in more than two hundred and fifty towns the Gospel is now preached in the Sherbro and Mendi countries of West Africa, where a few years ago the name of Christ was unknown, and where the darkest forms of heathenism prevailed. More than half a thousand persons have been judged worthy of membership in the church, while we have good reason to believe that very many more are believers in Christ, and hope in him for eternal life. We assure the Parent Board, and all our missionaries in that far-off field, that our heartiest sympathy and co-operation are in this great work. While to our superintendent of the African mission, Rev. J. Gomer, and to all his associates, we would send good cheer and renewed assurance of our confidence and good hope in their sufferings and trials, we would send very special greetings to our brother Rev. J. A. Evans, a member of our own Conference, and to his family, assuring him of our remembrance of his faithful life as a minister of Christ in our midst in former years, and of our sympathy and prayers for his health and Divine guidance and support in his present responsible and arduous work.

We pray that the present visit of our Secretary, Rev. D. K. Flickinger, who is now in Africa, may be productive of much good, and that he may be spared to return again in due time.

We have an abiding sympathy with the Domestic mission work of our church, and believe that our home and frontier work should be prosecuted more earnestly in the spirit of the Master Jesus, and with the best possible planning for the effective preaching of the Gospel in destitute places

It gives the Conference pleasure to refer to the good work of our sisters in the cause of Christian missions. We bid them God-speed not only in their work in Africa and Germany, but also among the Chinese of Portland, Oregon. Their latest and present effort to secure a mission residence, chapel, and school building in Portland deserves hearty support and patronage.

May God bless every agency of our times which seeks the moral renovation of our world, and welcomes the coming of our Lord.

J. W. Horr.

We note with deep feeling and regret, the death of Dr. Robt. Smith, Assistant Colo'l Surgeon of Freetown, and for many years the most popular and successful Practitioner of the Colony; his place in the Medical Practice of that City will be difficult to fill, and many will no doubt find themselves at a loss to obtain such council and advice on matters of health as they used to receive from him. He was buried we learn on the 5th inst.

BARGROO ITEMS.

On the morning of the 1st instant, the dead body of a young man named Pessimah was found adrift in Manoh River near the Mission farm. Which was brought to the shore and was buried the same day about 11 at night. The relatives of the deceased who were sent for by the Police Coporal R. S. Moore made their appearance the next day; from their information we understand that, Pessimah was pursuing a water Deer on the 29th ult.; the animal trying to escape jumped into the river; and poor Pessimah having followed in a hot chase, was swept off by the currents and met a watery grave.

Died at Manoh village Bargroo on Monday 29th Ultimo, M'Rugba-Fuay Mother of the late Anthony and George Davies, formerly she had been the elected queen of the east Bargroo under the administration of His excellency the late Sir Arthur E. Kennedy C. B.

She was buried on Wednesday the 1st inst. in the same village.

Died sudenly at Yokeh on Sunday the 5th instant Bah Ndaho Chief of that place, and elder brother to the late M'Rugbah Fuay of Manoh.

NEWS ITEMS.

We learn from the Religious Telescope that the Rev. Daniel F. Wilberforce and family arrived safely in the City of New York U. S. A. on Tuesday May 26th, and that they will visit friends and after a few months rest will return again to this country.

A little too late for our last issue, we were informed of the illness of Mrs. M. W. Gomer, wife of the Rev. J. Gomer our Genl. Supt., and that they were taking a change from Shaingay to Freetown.

Revd. G. G. M. Nicol of St. Matthew's Church, left this place on the 2nd per s. s. Igara, to attend some important meeting we understand in Freetown.

LOST.—The Africaine, a beautiful little Vessel belonging to the Senegal Co., was drifted from its moorings at Manoh Gbendeh and broken to pieces on the Beach on the 12th ult. Crew all escaped safely.

Mr. J. Macaulay the new catechist for the Wesleyan Connexion arrived here on the 1st. of July from Freetown by the s. s. Igara, he gave us a call on the 8th inst., he was accompanied by the Rev. J. C. Thomas Pastor of the Wesleyan Chapel in this place, whom he is to assist in the Gospel work here, and we most sincerely hope they may have great success.

Letter from J. W. Baker.

We insert the following let ter from Mr Baker in charge of Koncounny station, in order that his friends, and others may hear of his late bereavement and with us sympathize with him in the same.

Conkonany,
23rd June, 1885.

Rev. & Dear Sir,—In taking up my pen to write you these few lines, my hand actually trembles for burning affliction which I least expected that Providence would have thought fit to bestow on me but such is the will of God. You will be extremely sorry and surprised to hear of the death of my dear little boy Christopher, which took place yesterday morning at 1 o'Clock, his remains were interred at 4 p. m. of the same day. If I had known that my baby boy would have died, I would have taken him down to the Doctor.

To the Editor of the "Early Dawn."

Sir,—The Seekers Class Meeting at the Good Hope School Room on Sunday morning, not having been so well attended for some time past. I started out on the 20th of June to visit some of the Farkies in order if possible to persuade whoever I might find idling away their time to repair to the house of prayer. I was well aware that except I pursued some such course, that we should not be able to gather in even many of the members whose names are upon our Rolls for they seem never to heed the tolling of the bell for Service. In my rounds I came to a village where once we had visited, a man, we invited him to attend the morning service at the School room, but he roughly refused and told us to be gone from his place. The following Monday his house caught fire and was burnt down. Since then I have seen him attending the morning services. In the same Farkie I met a young woman at the entrance of her small hut, I asked her also to attend the meetings; she replied that she was not the only one living in the Farkie, and hence I should leave her alone: as I turned to go to a near neighbour, I saw an old hoary headed Mohamedan, looking angrily at me as though he would like to say something, but he held his peace: I learned afterward that he was then making Sebbeh for Keynee the young woman that I had spoken to just before. My heart indeed burned to speak to him of the Blessed Saviour and I now much regret that I did not speak to him of the way of Salvation and I expect yet to do so the Lord willing. I had almost forgotten to say that Keynee did after all attend the service in the early morning at the School Room and was also present at 11. a. m. Service at the Chapel.

I am, yours,
C. W. TUCKER.

Bonthe,
July 2nd, 1885.

To the Editor of the "Early Dawn"

Dear Mr. Editor,

The June number of your paper was put into my hands yesterday and I have read with interest the communication from the pen of Mr. H. J. Williams which is of vital importance.

I quite agree with H. J. W. in the arguments he has advanced as to the evils resulting from the use of spirits when taken to excess, but I hope you will allow me to differ with him in two particulars that are set forth in his communication.

First, He says "He that drinks but little if that little makes him drunk and if he knew beforehand his infirmity, is guilty of Surfeiting not of drunkenness." I argue differently—I say that "He who takes a little and is affected by that little is guilty of Surfeiting and drunkenness. For he knew that by taking that little, he was taken it to excess, and thereby he is guilty of surfeiting himself, and as by that little he is overwhelmed and loses his reasons, he is guilty of drunkenness.

Second, He says "But he that drinks much and is strong to bear it and is not deprived of his reason, is guilty of the sin of drunkenness. I say that this person is not guilty of the sin of drunkenness, for I understand one who is in a state of drunkenness to mean one who is overwhelmed with spirituous liquors, so that his reason be disorded and he commonly reels or staggers in walking. And he who is drunk is one who is stupified or inflamed by the action of spirits on the stomach and brains, and a drunkard is one who uses liquors to excess, and is habitually drunk.

Sir, I have endeavored as much as possible to point out the oversight in H. J. W's communication and I believe you and your readers will agree with me in the arguments I have advanced. Meanwhile I await H. J. W's opinion on the subject.

I am
Mr. Editor
E. L. E.

The Lake,
July 2nd 1885.

To the Editor of the "Early Dawn."

Sir,—Permit me through the medium of your valuable Journal to call the attention of the Authorities at Sherbro to the bad and unhealthy condition of York Island, at this time of the season.

None can question the importance of this Island, from a commercial and religious stand-point, hence Sanitary attention is a desideratum. The poor inhabitants have done what they could to improve the healthy condition of the Island by digging treaches to keep the streets dry during the rains; but their treaches may be rightly termed aqueducts or pools for fishing purposes. What remains is that these treaches be opened onward to the sea, which, if attended to in right earnest, every obnoxious matter will be swept into the sea by the heavy rains.

If the Authorities at Sherbro will adopt prompt measures for the Sanitary improvement of this Island, all sicknesses derived from the miasma of the settled putrid matter, will be lessened and the health of the inhabitants will be improved.

Thanking you for occupying your columns,

I am Mr. Editor
Yours truly,
CIVIS.

REV. CHARLES MARKE.

The Rev. Charles Marke, Superintendent of the Second Freetown Circuit of the Wesleyan Mission, sailed for England in the s. s. "Lagos" on the 3rd instant.

The connection of Mr. Marke with the mission work dates from the year 1855. He had been a young man been engaged in commercial business; but after he felt it his duty (to labour in Christ's vineyard he gave up a lucrative employment to enter upon his present calling. On the Nupe mission he was anxious to engage in work among his own people on the Niger and devoted himself to the study of the language, which he so mastered as to be considered an authority on matters connected with its literature. Archdeacon Johnson when engaged in the Nupe translations submitted some of his work to the criticism of Mr. Marke. He always refers with much feeling to the disappointment he experienced in not being permitted to labor in his ancestral country.

It has for many years been his desire to visit England both for recreation and rest and for the intellectual and spiritual refreshment which he felt sure he would receive from contact and intercourse with the great minds of the church in that country. Latterly this desire has been intensified by the additional feeling that he might possibly be able to contribute something to the interest felt in African missions and secure special contributions for important work he has on hand.

Though he has been a long time coming to the realization of his cherished wish yet his visit could not have happened at a more opportune time. Having already distinguished himself as a successful church builder, he has now on hand the construction of the new Ebenezer Chapel and with very inadequate means. The memorial stones were laid a few weeks ago, before his departure, and it is hoped that he may during his visit abroad be enabled to add to the money he has raised on the spot for the thorough completion of the building.

We need not add that Mr. Marke is held in great esteem and enjoys the entire confidence of his brethren and flock. The purse of twenty-five pounds readily made up and presented so him by the members of his circuit bears te timony to their deep interest in him and to the earnestness of their prayer that the Lord may be with him and return him safely to his native land.

The vacancy caused by the absence of Mr. Marke from the second circuit cannot be supplied. This reminds us of the sad deficiency in our ministerial ranks; and urges us to renew our appeal to the Parent Church to aid us with the means of ministerial education on the spot. The harvest truly is plenteous but the labourers are few.—From the Methodist Herald June 24.

The following is a List of Prisoners sent to Freetown per s. s. Countess of Derby, on the 7th instant.

Dosgbah, Beah Cambeh, and Gobah, were charged for murder sent for Trial.

Mallikie, Kpandeh Yainkain, Canray Joe, and Samgba Woomlay were charged with accessories sent for Trial.

Kpandeh Yainkain, Mallikie, and Sasay Boahong were charged with kidnapping and murder sent for trial.

Peetibah, Beah Yong and Gobah were charged with assault and battery. Sentenced to 3 months imprisonment with hard labor each.

J. A. EVANS, Agt. M. Mission.
Bonthe, July, 13th 1885.

Mr. Ed.—Your Correspondent last month on your Transatlantic, Contemporary, said some things that might mislead the minds of some, on our American Conferences; for it would seem from his statements that those bodies were in favor of over-economy in the management of our Mission affairs at home and which sause in the form rather of Parsimoniousness might reach the Foreign field greatly to its detriment; but it seems to me that these Bodies had no thought of hindering the progress of the work here or elsewhere abroad, but rather that if competent men could be found to sacrifice a sufficient amount to do the work of a Treasurer without pay that much more money could be used for the furtherance of other interests. And as far as the visits of the officers to this Field are concerned they are a great relief to the Agents and Officers, and no one longs for, and enjoys those visits more than the writer, and yet may it not be a question whether or not so many such visitations have been really necessary?—And yet I am certain that a large amount of good has accrued from those visits.

A. READER.

The Shadow of His Wing.

Close sheltered by Thy side to-day
My soul at rest doth softly sing;
Earth's brightest glories fade away,
Unsought, unheeded, while I stay
Beneath the shadow of thy wing.

How could I live through all the years
E'er yet this presence Thou didst fling
About my way? My anguish fears
How could I bear my bitter tears
Out from the shadow of Thy wing?

And what am I of all the race
That thou, sweet Comforter didst bring
The spark of love, the touch of grace,
That led me through the fearful space
Up to the shadow of Thy wing?

Such rest! Where can its like be found?
Through land of promise, court of king,
Earths wanderers have marked the ground
In fruitless search with many a mound,
Nor known the shadow of Thy wing.

Brood thou, O holy Dove divine,
Where the fainting spirit clings
To one dim hope, so shall it shine
In growing love till lost in thine
Beneath the shadow of thy wing.

If you want knowledge, you must toil for it; if food, you must toil for it; and if pleasure, you must toil for it. Toil is the law. Pleasure comes through toil, and not by self-indulgence and indolence. When one gets to love work, his life is a happy one.

TRY THE EXPERIMENT.

A man speaking in a public meeting and inviting persons to embrace the gospel, said to them: "You can try it for a while, just as you try anything, and if you do not like it you can give it up."

We read no such teaching as this in the Holy Scriptures. No man ever finds salvation in this sort of experimental way. He must first know his lost condition, and then, renouncing everything else, give himself forever into the charge of Jesus Christ.

We are not dealing with one of our fellow-men; we are not making sharp bargains with some shrewd speculator. We are dealing with the Maker of heaven and earth, with the King of Glory with the Lord of all. We may be amazed that he condescends to notice us, we may be astonished at the mercy which he shows us, but we are making no experiment when we enter the path that has been trodden for ages by the faithful, who, like a cloud of witnesses, compass us around, and encourage us to trust him who has ever been faithful to his word, and who is still the helper of the helpless, the Saviour of the lost, and their refuge in every time of trouble and distress.

"Poor man!" said Mrs. Partington; "and so he's really gone at last. Ninety eight, was he? Dear, dear, to think how, if he'd lived two years more, he'd have been a centurion!"

"My case is just here," said a citizen to a lawyer. "The plaintiff will swear that I hit him, I will swear that I did not. Now what can you lawyers make out of that, if we go to trial?" "A hundred dollars easy," was the reply.

VOL. 2. BONTHE SHERBRO, WEST AFRICA, AUGUST, 1885. No. 7.

THE SPIRITUAL NATURE OF MAN.

Man has been, was of old regarded by even the heathen Poets, according to the Apostle Paul, as the offspring of God, and the inference from the Sacred Scripture seems, at least, to bear us out in the idea of his spiritual nature as being an emmination from the Diety, and it will not be at rest or complete until it returns to the God who gave it being. But alas! the tendency is by some means not in that direction the cause of which cannot be ascertained by any human wisdom, why the off-spring should be so diverse in its nature from the stock, why in other words the stream so foul, that issues forth of a pure fountain, yet is so. However there is help in the matter, Holy writ reveals the whole by informing us that an early diabolical influence was brought to bear upon the race that by means of it the nature of man has been changed, and that which was at the issuing forth pronounced very good, has become corrupted in its course and flows on through the length of ages, evil continually. Man that was formed spiritually in the image of the Almighty has become distorted and vile; he that was made Upright has sought out many inventions; he that received the impress of the Divine likeness, does not at length like at all to retain the thought of his Creator in his heart. Since the day of his shameful expulsion from Eden, for his conspiracy with the Devil to overthrow the happy destiny of his own nature, and thwart the plans of his Divine father and Rightful Sovereign, he has been traveling away from His God—his course has indeed led him in the hard way of the Transgressor, but he has persisted in it as if maddened indeed by his own downward career left to his own depraved understanding, his cry has ever been that of the fool "no God" no thought of the beneficent father that upholds his very nature, why this is so seems one of the profoundest mysteries even the dumb ox knoweth his owner but, vile and ungenerous man does not know his Lord, the stupid Ass too knoweth his master's crib, but man created only a little lower than the Angels endowed with high Intellectual Powers, doth not know doth not consider his Creator his God. Man was, it may readily be seen not only powerless to undertake his own deliverance, but was too blinded by the perversity of his own nature to see the need of it. Fortunately however for the race, the offended God having a desire for the work of his hands pitied the insignificant yet fallen creature deserving of death as he was and at once took steps for his rescue and doubtless the very best that could have been taken. The first was to expel him from his estate in Paradise, so that he might not continue in his corporeal state, but that a dissolution should take place resulting in the demolishing of the body into dust, as it was and the removal of the spirit into the unseen world to return no more as it was for probation here * * * * * * this was at first not made to take place until after man's existence had been long continued in this world. Another step was the promise that his seed should at length overcome through divine assistance the evil tendency of man's spiritual nature by the pouring out of his life (blood) as an oblation as an earnest of this and reminder of the death penalty for complicity with the Devil in the sin committed before the expulsion. God ordered the sacrifice of a beast (a lamb of the goats or sheep) for the sins of men and, made their chief fathers the priests of the families but none of these remedies were sufficient the first dissolution or death of the body and the departure of souls was soon disregarded by reason of his long continuance on the earth, man's life spanning over the space of from three to five or even more than nine centuries together, with the fewness of men in the world made deaths of such seldom occurrence that men cared too little to profit largely by them. While on the other hand, the offering of sacrifices was too simple by the fathers to always arrest the proper attention of the wayward at least of the sons, they saw no efficacy in the Blood of the victim, no penalty in the dying of the Lamb, and so pursue their own perverse course. This perversity of man manifested itself in a most lamentable manner in the first off-spring of the primal Pair. For the blood of a younger son cries from the Earth against the Elder, who denied his obligation and charge to keep his younger Brother. The recreant was exiled as a punishment, but the perversity of his nature was so great that it only increased, and his progeny grew rapidly into a race designated as the sons of men, and these were opposed to the offspring of the successor of the younger who retained more the Divine Favor and were distinguished for their better observance of the direction of their Creator and thus obtained the apellation of the sons of God.

Rev. D. F. Wilberforce,

Dear Bro.,

I have been pleased with the "Early Dawn" thus far. And I consider it a valuable pinion in the Mission machinery. My sincere desire is for its success. It is also interesting to me because I was once partially acquainted with you, Mr. Editor. Do you not remember that I was in U.B. Seminary at Dayton during the Seminary year of '74 and '75? I endeavoured to preach twice in the Ludlow St Church in Dayton. And I remember of meeting you there several times. I have always had a warm interest in mission work. And would not hesitate a moment to give myself to the work in person if my physical condition would permit it. I am able to carry the work of a circuit in America, but would not be physically able to endure the malaria of our foreign mission field. I can most truthfully say that the "spirit is willing but the flesh is weak." I wish you abundant success in your noble work in that distant land. I frequently feel, that if I had a few "of the thousands," the African Mission of our Church would suffer no longer. Now I know Bro. W. that you have all you can do; nevertheless I want to receive a few lines from you personally. Therefore I enclose you the postal card. If you write only a formal salutation it will be thankfully received. As I am in the midst of revival work of some interest here in Paris, I am very busy, and must therefore close.

Your Brother-in-Christ,
L. H. COOLEY.

REMEDY FOR TROUBLE.

Work is your true remedy. If misfortune hits you hard you hit somebody else hard. Pitch into something with a will. There's nothing like good solid, exhausting work to cure trouble. If you have met with losses you don't want to lie awake and think about them. You want sleep, calm, sound sleep—and eat your dinner with appetite. But you cant unless you work. If you say you don't feel like work, and go loafing all day to tell Tom, Dick, and Harry the story of your woes, you'll lie awake by your tossing, spoil your temper and your breakfast next morning, and begin tomorrow feeling ten times worse than you do to-day. There are some great troubles that only time can heal, and perhaps some that can never be healed at all; but all can be helped by the great panacea, work. Try it, you who are afflicted. It is not a patent medicine. It has proved its efficiency since first Adam and eve left behind them, with weeping, their beautiful Eden. It is an efficient remedy. All good physicians prescribe it in cases of mental and moral disease. It operates kindly as well, leaving no disagreeable effects, and we assure you that we have taken large quantities of it with most beneficial results. It will cure more complaints than any nostrum in the materia medica, and comes nearer to being a "cure all" than any drug or compound of drugs in the market. And it will not sicken you if you do not take it sugar coated.

EVERYTHING OBEDIENT BUT MAN.

Men are sent to the ants to learn diligence. They are sent to the conies to learn that there is a way which terminates in a great rock. They are sent to the locust to learn how littles, when combined, may become mighty, sufficient for all the duty and obligation of the day. What if it be found at the last that all the lower orders and ranks of creation have been obedient, dutiful, loyal—and that the child only has wounded the great heart? "The ox knoweth his owner, and the ass his master's crib; but Israel does not know, my people do not consider." God has no trouble with his creatures—no trouble

WHAT WE WANT.

It seems that many persons would write for our columns but they do not know what to write that would be acceptable, and find a place of insertion, hence we venture a word on the subject. Minding in the outset to remind the public of what was contained in the prospectus of the paper in the first issue viz:—"We propose to make it a News Paper that the public may know what kind of a country we are living in; what its advantages and disadvantages; what its wants and prospects for the future. Being limited in space there will be no room for personal feud or Political Discussion, but any enterprise that will tend to elevate, enlighten or in any way benefit the people shall find encouragement and room in these columns. We shall aim chiefly to keep before the public the great need of more schools, of enterprising people who will introduce manufactures, agriculture, mining, and like industries; that will help to civilize the people." Such were the utterances of the Publisher on the re-appearance of this little paper before the Public. And these remarks, seem so clear, to us that they admit of no comment, but only need to be studied with care and all is plain, except it may be in reference to Political Discussion which according to the Editor's explanation in the next (March) issue of the paper only refers to "so-called Political Discussions of our day * * * which aim not at the Public Good in the preservation of its peace and prosperity and the improvement of its morals, but are rather the outburst of personal and vindictive feelings; and though ostensibly written for the Public Welfare are in reality for the defamation of reputation, or character of others.—For such Political Discussion, The Early Dawn has no sympathy or room in its columns." From the forgoing remarks we trust that every one may readily perceive that the way is open for the admission of anything that can benefit the public or enhance the social, economical, or Civil Interests of the community at large.

We are pleased to note that several parties have been so much interested in our little Journal as to feel that it ought to appear oftener before the Public, and have even taken the pains to canvas the matter among their friends who are subscribers, and report much success in obtaining their consent to increase their subscription to at least Four Shillings per Annum for a Semi-Monthly; in another column will be found an article on the subject from our enterprizing correspondent L. L. E. And while we now have the consent of our Publisher to issue Semi-Monthly; if the proper inducement is held out, we believe that the subscription by Mail should be Five Shillings per annum. We also feel that we can give better satisfaction to the Public in a Semi-Monthly, than in a monthly, as by the latter, we loose a large percentage of news and timely matter that is stale before our paper can be made up. Of course we need scarcely hint to a generous patronizing Public that the subscriptions must be Cash (not promises) in advance to insure the above-named progressive movement. Who will be first on the Roll of Honor for a Semi-Monthly Early Dawn! and we will keep and publish a List of all those who enroll their names with 4*s* cash from the Office or 5*s* cash by Mail, and as soon as 75 names (with cash) shall have been received at this Office, will commence (D.V.) the issue of our Paper Semi-monthly.

The world owes me a living —provided I earn it.

KEEPING MEETING.

The teacher of the Lesher School was absent in Freetown when the Sabbath came, and there was no one to hold the Meeting; the headman of the town Mr. Funney Will, went to a Sierra Leone man that lives in the town and asked him to keep the meeting for them, he said he was not a meeting man, knew nothing about such things; Mr. Funney Will next went to another Sierra Leone man and asked him, he also refused: these men can read, and are Church members at home, and the headman supposed that as a matter of course they could conduct a Service, the man knew not what to do he called a council of his headmen and laid the matter before them; Sunday has come, said he, and our Misses that always keeps the meeting for us is not here and no person has come from Shengay, we can't sit this way all day, what shall we do, one man by the name of Sasay Noh Cohtil who many years ago lived at Boompehtook and had prayed in public said that he would pray; accordingly the bell was rung and the people gathered, Sasay offered a prayer, then Mr. Funney Will prayed earnestly imploring God's protecting power, and that he would make them to be good people and not let them do any work on Sunday, after which he delivered a short adress, assuring them that if they worked their farms on Sunday God would see them, he then dismissed the meeting.

IS IT RIGHT?

I ask for information, I ask all Christian Editors, Preachers, and Missionaries, is it right to receive blood money into the Lord's Treasury to be used in carrying on his work? The Jews, once denounced by Christ, as being hypocrites, but bad as they were they refused the thirty pieces of silver (for which Judas sold his Master), for the Lord's Treasury, because it was the price of blood, yet they believed that Christ was a wicked person and the enemy of God This much may be said for Judas who betrayed his master when he saw the mischief that would follow his wicked act he repented and attempted to undo what he had done. Now I do not wish to wound anyone's feelings, but the question I wish answered is this, Is it right to receive into the Lord's Treasury money that has been received for the sale of intoxicating liquors, when it it is well known that the mischief brought about by these liquors can never be told; Ignorance, Poverty Disease, Drunkenness and Murder are only a few of the fruits that grow on this tree. Intoxicating liquors separates husband and wife, parents and children, creates brawls, bruises and untold sorrows without cause, and what is worse than all, sends immortal souls to hell, may not this money be called the price of blood? Intoxicating liquors betray ignorant and innocent people into the power of the wicked one, who binds them in chains that nothing but the power of God can sever, thus God's children become slaves to his bitterest enemy, it is as though you were to entice a man's children away from home then seize and sell them into perpetual bondage and to pacify the father you send him a few shillings of the price received, what father would not scorn the money, would he thank you for your gift, and what would the heavenly Father say or think of those who have tempted and led away into the bondage of habitual drunkenness, his weak and ignorant children poisoned both body and soul and this they have done to put money in their own pockets, suppose they give even one half the money to the Lord will he be pleased? Is it right I ask to put this money into the Lord's Treasury? Is the Lord in need of such money? Many will say receive the money by all means, and use it to fight intemperance or for charitable purposes, take it and the enemy will have so much less capital to work with but it seems to me that this is a mere argument, it is encouraging evil that good may come, and moreover our Heavenly Father is not so pressed for means to carry on his work as to be compelled to resort to such measures. Tell that half naked wife that is yet sore from her last beating or those half starved and naked children that the author of their sufferings has given £5 or £10 to the cause of God, will they be pleased? will that intelligence be a panacea for their ills, you will answer that the liquor traffic is a legitimate business and sanctioned and supported by the Government and therefore it must be right and respectable, Governments are not alway- infallible.

We as Africans must wake up to the fact, viz: that for many generations we have been sinking lower and lower, until we have become an astonishment a hissing and a by-word to all nations, Christians in England and other countries seeing our degraded condition have pitied us and sent us christian Missionaries to teach us to civilize and christianize us, they have expended thousands of pounds and many precious lives have been sacrificed for our benefit. And I ask now is it right that we who have availed ourselves of the teaching of these good people to turn against them and their work by enlisting ourselves under the banner of the enemy and doing what we can to hinder the spread of the gospel and to increase the ignorance and degradation of our fellow country men. Our Heavenly Father sent us these kind Missionaries, is it treating our heavenly Father right by pursuing such a course? do we not prove ourselves very ungrateful to those dear Christians who have rescued us from heathenism? would it not be far more honorable for us to turn to, and rescue others? But alas how many after having themselves been healed of the dreaded leprosy forget to return thanks but seek only their own personal welfare, even though it be at the expense of the happiness of others.

Would it not be well for every Missionary to require each pupil taught in their schools to sign a written agreement that if taught in their schools they will never be engaged in buying, selling, or using, or in any way assisting in the distribution of intoxicants, for why should the Lord's money be used to educate people to do service for the Devil.

Yours Truly,
TOUSANT.

NEWS ITEMS.

Regent chief T. N. Caulker is at home again in Shengay after an absence of Several weeks in the rivers settling war palaver.

Mr. C. S. Brown who has for many years been the Catechist of St. Matthew's Church in this place, has been transfered to Bendoo Station of the same Pastorate, and we understand that a Mr. Matthew Wilson, B. A., has been appointed as Catechist of St. Matthews.

DIED.—On Saturday the 18th July at 6 o'clock p.m., at Lavannah, Mr. Moses D. Lake, Chief Examining Officer of Customs at Sulymah. His remains was brought to Bonthe and interred on Monday the 20th at 8 a.m., by the Rev. G.G.M.Nicol

Dr. M. L. Jarrett M. R.C. S. Assistant Colonial Surgeon of this place, we are glad to learn is recovering again from the severe illness that has for some time past unfitted him for his arduous duties.

Agreeable to our bright anticipation in our June issue prompt attention was given to Yandahoo Bridge crossing the repairs of which are good and substantial, are rapidly approaching completion, many thanks to the Authorities.

Dr. Renner of Kissy was here for a short time, but has returned again to Sierra Leone.

We regret to note the bereavement of Mr. C. H. Harley Moseley, (Acting Comdt), in the loss of his father, and we understand, a brother also somewhat recently, but we can assure this kind hearted officer, the general sympathies of our Community.

Since our last issue we have received on exchange a copy of the "Noon Day Sun," a bright little monthly, Edited and published at Attica, Ohio, U. S.A. by Rev. W. A. Keesy.

Great Scarcity of Rice,—prices on two of the principal Factories of the Bargroo river one man said a few days ago, in Konconany, that it was almost "As rare as gold dust" in that place.

Lumber Trade—For some unexplained reason, Timber men are not yet bringing down logs, to the Avery Saw Mill since there is delay in filling Orders for the Better kinds of Wood; Kronko, Wismore Foondoombah, Cedar &c.

Died.—James Williams, better known as Capt James at one of the small Farkies across the river from Manoh Bargroo on the 27th July. He was buried by the Mendi Mission, at Avery Station.

Shaingay Quarterly Meeting was held at that important Station the Head Quarters of the Sherbro Mendi Missions. On Saturday and Sabbath 25th and 26th July, Rev. J. Gomer the Supt preached on Saturday evening, after which the Rev. W. S. Sage, Pastor of Kooloong station, held the Quarterly Conference, which was well attended. On Sabbath morning there was a large gathering, to which Bro. Sage preached a very interesting Sermon. He also preached in the evening.

15 persons were baptized, 30 communed, and 5 were received into membership, (mostly seekers) Altogether the Services were really spiritual and interesting throughout; the Church is growing at that place, May the Lord Bless and prosper it abundantly.

ENGLAND AND RUSSIA.

For many weeks a heavy war cloud hung over Europe and Asia. There were days when it seemed inevitable that both continents would witness the shock of a mighty and uncertain conflict between the two greatest empires of the world.

But the danger, after long suspense, was, for the time at least, averted. The statesmen of England and Russia laboured patiently to bring about a peaceful issue of the dispute which had arisen between them; and their efforts seem to have been crowned with success.

The immediate cause of the trouble was that Russia, in her long march southward in Central Asia, had at last reached the confines of Afghanistan, th only country intervening between Central Asia and the British in India; and had even crossed what the English and Afghans believed to be the boundary of Afghanistan.

England has long dreaded that her traditional enemy, Russia, would some day threaten her great possession of India. She had again and again attempted, by diplomacy at least, to put a limit to the Russian advance south ward and eastward.

But Russia has gone on and on, until she arrived at a point where England felt bound to come to issue with her.

Afghanistan has for some time been in alliance with the English, and the English have promised the Ameer, or king, that they would defend his territory from all agression. The object of the English in this has been to have a State friendly to them, interposed between the Russians and India.

When Russian troops, therefore, crossed the frontier which the English believed or asserted to be that of Afghanistan, and occupied several points within the claimed Afghan teritory England was aroused to action. The Russian outposts, and those of the Afghan troops, now confronted each other on the banks of the river Murghat; and it was feared that a collision might occur between them. So Mr. Gladstone procured a promise from Russia that her troops should not advance any further, if it were possible to prevent it, until the boundary question was settled

Very soon, however in spite of this promise, a battle took place near Penj-deh between the Russians and the Afghans, in which the latter were defeated, with a loss said to reach five hundred men. The Russians then occupied Penj-deh.

This event at once brought about a crisis, which seemed at the time to threaten immediate war between the two great powers. England called Russia to account for not keeping the the promise she had made; Mr. Gladstone asked Paliament for fiftyfive million dollars of a war credit, and great activity began on both sides in the making of military preparations on a large scale.

Yet even at this critical moment wise and cautious counsels prevailed. A series of negotiations took place between the two courts. At last it was agreed that the question who was responsible for the conflict at Penj-deh should be left to an impartial arbitrator, and the two powers began to discuss the general question what should constitute the northwestern boundary of Afghanistan.

A year ago a commission comprising Englishmen and Russians was appointed to draw a boundary line satisfactory to all parties, on the spot. The English commissioner, Sir Peter Lumsden, went thither to fulfil his task. But Russian commissioner General Selensi, did not join him, and so the work delayed from month to month.

The negotiations as the general position of the boundary line, interrupted by the Penj-deh affair, are said to have resulted in an agreement. Russia is to hold certain positions which she now occupies, within the formerly supposed teritoty of Afganistan, and is to give up others. It is of little importance to state them. The essential thing is, that some boundary should be agreed upon.

The next step will be for a mixed commission to carry out, on the spot, the geographical details of the boundary, settled in its general features by the negotiations

Thus it seems that a great war has been, certainly for a time, averted by the wisdom and true statesmanship which have been employed to that end. But there are few men who know the history and the character of the two nations, who believe that the danger of a conflict between England and Russia has entirely passed away. Any day a new cause of disagreement may arise, or some event may occur which may plunge them after all into war.—Youth's Companion.

To the Editor of the "Early Dawn"

Sir,—The need of a journal for this place had been a long felt necessity, and I was glad when that want was supplied in the appearance of the "Early Dawn" in February 1884. Since then many articles have appeared in its columns, and many alterations have been made in different departments, which but for your paper would have remained in statuquo.

There is a suggestion, I would beg leave to make, which I hope will have the co-operation and support, of your subscribers, and the public generally; it is, that there being too much news of importance which is crowded out from time to time, it seems necessary that your paper should be issued semi-monthly, say on the 15th and 30th of each month at Four shillings per annum to enable the public to read from its columns, the news of the month. I believe your subscribers who are all intelligent men will not scruple to pay Four shillings per annum for your paper it would then be the cheapest on the West Coast of Africa.

Yours truly,
July 24, 1885.

We understand, but have not received official notice that the Board of Education and Executive Committee of U. B. C. M. T. association will meet at Shaingay, about the last Wednesday in September.

We regret that much interesting matter has been crowded out of this issue, some only of which will be suitable for the Next.

THE CAPTURE OF JOHN BROWN.

From an account in the June Century of John Brown at Harper's Ferry, written by one of his prisoners, who was in the engine-house during the insurrection, and afterward held the rank of captain in the Confederate army, we quote the following: "When Lieutenant Sharp came in the morning for the final reply to the demand to surender, I got up and went to Brown's side to hear his answer. Stuart asked, "Are you ready to surrender and trust to the mercy of the Government?" Brown answered promptly, "No! I prefer to die here." His manner did not betray the least fear. Stuart stepped aside and made the signal for the attack, which was instantly begun with sledge-hammers to break down the door. Finding it would not yeild, the soldiers seized a long ladder for a battering ram, and commenced beating the door with that, the party within firing incessantly. I had assisted in the barricading, fixing the fastenings so that I could remove them upon the first effort to get in; but I was not at the door when the battering began, and could not get to the fastenings until the ladder was used. I then quickly removed the fastenings, and after two or three strokes of the ladder the engine rolled partially back, making a small aperture, through which Lieutenant Green of the marines forced himself, jumped on the top of the engine, and stood a second in the midst of a shower of balls, looking for John Brown. When he saw Brown he sprung about twelve feet at him, and gave an underthrust of his sword, striking him about midway the body, and raising him completely from the ground. Brown fell forward with his head between his knees, and Green struck him several times over the head, and, as I then supposed split his skull at every stroke. I was not two feet from Brown at that time.

Of course I got out of the building as soon as possible, and did not know till some time later that Brown was not killed. It seems that in making the thrust Green's sword struck Brown's belt and did not penetrate the body. The sword was bent double. The reason that Brown was not killed when struck on the head was that Green was holding his sword in the middle, striking with the hilt and making only scalp-wounds."

DRIVING AWAY THE "BLUE DEVILS."

The following incident is related by Dr. T. D. Carruthers, the founder of an inebriate asylum at Hartford, Connecticut, U. S. Calvin B., a wealthy New York merchant, was walking up Broadway, New York, sadly under the influence of opium, to which he was greatly addicted. He strolled into a bookstore in a half-sleeping condition, and said to the store keeper, "Give me a book to drive away the blue devils." The man handed him a copy of Rev. E. Payson Hammond's "Conversion of Children." The merchant paid for the book without knowing what it was, put it in his pocket, and found his way to his beautiful home. There he threw himself on a lounge, and was soon buried in slumber. Awaking by and by, he said to his wife, "Where is that book I brought with me?" She handed him the book. As he looked at it, and being no longer under the influence of the drug he exclaimed, snalling, "Why, that bookseller has played a joke upon me; the idea of his giving me that book to read!" On second thoughts he added, "How can that be? He could not have known me; I must be a perfect stranger to him." Still he took the book and read it. He soon became deeply interested in it. He was led to see himself as a lost, guilty sinner, and to see Christ as the only Saviour. He fell down on his knees and cried for mercy. The prayer was heard and answered; the peace of God filled his soul. He at once abandoned the use of intoxicants and of opium, which had been ruining him soul and body. Dr Carruther states that from that time he has lived a consistent Christian life. He keeps in his office in New York a supply of "The Conversion of Children." When any of his old companions in sin come into the office, he urges them to read it, saying it has been the means of his salvation, temporarily and spiritually, and praying that it may be blessed to them in like manner.

"The Morning Light Is Breaking, The Darkness Disappears."

VOL. 2. BONTHE SHERBRO, WEST AFRICA, SEPTEMBER, 1885. No. 8.

UNION OF CHRIST AND BELIEVERS.

First, it is a visible union consisting in an outward profession of Christian Faith. "Every branch in me that beareth not fruit he taketh away, and every branch that beareth fruit he purgeth it that it may bring forth more fruit. Now ye are clean through the word I have spoken unto you. Abide in me and I in you. As the branch cannot bear fruit of itself except it abide in the vine, no more can ye except ye abide in me. I am the vine, ye are the branches: he that abideth in me and I in him, the same bringeth forth much fruit, for without me ye can do nothing. If a man abide not in me, he is cast forth as a branch and is withered, and men gather them and cast them into the fire, and they are burned." Then this union is vital or spiritual. It is formed in the moment of our regeneration. "I have declared unto them thy name, and will declare it that the love wherewith thou hast loved me may be in them and I in them. Hereby know we that we dwell in him and he in us, because he has given us of his Spirit." The union between Christ and believers is represented in the Scriptures by the strongest possible expressions. It is compared to the union between the Father and the Son. Hear Christ's prayer in behalf of all believers: "Holy Father keep through thine own name those whom thou hast given me, that they all may be one as we are: that they all may be one as thou, Father, art in me and I in thee that they may also be one in us. It is also compared to the union of the vine and the branches—"I am the vine, ye are the branches;" to the union of our food with our bodies—"He that eateth my flesh and drinketh my blood dwelleth in me and I in him, as the living Father hath sent me, and I live by the Father so he that eateth me even he shall live by me;" again to the union of the body with the Head—"May grow up into him in all things which is the head, even Christ, from whom the whole body fitly joined together are compacted by that which every joint supplieth according to the effectual workings in the measure of every part maketh increase of the body unto the edifying of itself in love." Likewise it is compared to the conjugal union—"For the husband is the head of the wife, even as Christ is the head of the church and he is the savior of the body, for we are members of his body, of his flesh, and of his bone." Again it is likened unto the union of the king and his subjects—"Then shall the King say to them on his right hand, Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world; and the King shall answer and say unto them, Verily I say unto you, inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren ye have done it unto me." It is also compared to a building and its foundation—"To whom coming as unto a living stone disallowed indeed of men but chosen of God, and precious; ye also as lively stones are built up a spiritual house, a holy priesthood, to offer up spiritual sacrifice acceptable to God by Jesus Christ, in whom all the building, fitly framed together, groweth unto a holy temple in the Lord, in whom ye also are builded together for a habitation of God through the Spirit." It is also represented by identity of spirit—"But he that is joined unto the Lord is one spirit;" by identity of body—"For as the body is one and hath many members, and all the members of that one body being many are one body so also is Christ. Now ye are the body of Christ, and members in particular." This union also represents identity of interest—"And the King shall answer and say unto them, Verily I say unto you, inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren ye have done it unto me." "Jesus said unto her, Touch me not, for I am not yet ascended to my Father, but go to my brethren, and say unto them I ascend unto my Father and your Father, and to my God and your God."

This union must not be considered as a mere intellectual union, a mere sentiment, nor as a physical union, but as a cordial spiritual union. It is an honorable union. "Behold what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us that we should be called the sons of God; therefore the world knoweth us, not because it knew him not. Beloved, now are ye the sons of God; and it doth not yet appear what we shall be; but we know that when he shall appear we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is." Again, it is a holy union—"He that keepeth his commandments dwelleth in him and he in him; and hereby we know that he abideth in us by the Spirit which he hath given us." It is a supernatural union—"But of him are ye in Christ Jesus, who of God is made unto us wisdom and righteousness and sanctification and redemption." It is a necessary union—"Abide in me and I in you; as the branch can not bear fruit of itself except it abide in the vine, no more can ye except ye abide in me." It is also an inviolable union—"For I am persuaded that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor heights nor depths, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God which is in Christ Jesus our Lord." It is a union which begets a new life—"Therefore if any man be in Christ he is a new creature; old things are passed away: behold all things are become new." It is a union of affection as well—"For the love of Christ constraineth us." Reader, are you thus joined to Christ? If so, all is well.—O. Knepper.—In Religious Telescope.

ENGLAND'S THRONE.

The throne of England, so splendid when covered with silk velvet and gold, is, in fact, only an "old oak chair," over eight hundred years in use for the same purpose. Its existence has been traced back to the days of Edward. The wood is very hard and solid.

The back and sides were formerly in various colors and the seat is made of a rough-looking sand-stone 26 inches in length, 17 in breath and 10½ in thickness, and in this stone lies the grand peculiarity of the chair. Numberless legends are told in connection with it, the truth probably being that it was originally taken from Ireland to Scotland and served at the coronation of the early Scottish kings.

INDUSTRIAL MISSION WORK, No. 4.

Mr. Ed.—I promised in my last on this Subject, published in your Feb. issue, to write again to you, of the higher than financial reasons for which Missions may engage in Trade: The first of which I would speak is that the work of Missions, however slowly it may operate is to change the customs as well as the habits of men and communities, and as such changes, when wrought, create new circumstances, different emergencies arise, demanding attention one of the cases produced by the Agency of Mission work, is some kind of employment that a religious man or woman can engage in, without destroying that religion, and will at the same time, be sufficiently remunerative to give the individual a living. Teaching and Preaching, have been in other times sufficient for the comparatively, few that received sufficient training, but as Missions increase, and the numbers of such persons multiply, there are not desks and pulpits enough for them all, neither are all men adapted to the same calling in life, and hence the necessity of more employments. Industrial Missions may supply almost any kind of work that is necessary for building up Society, if they are properly conducted. Many branches will be productive largely so, and so assist the non-productive. But you may ask why engage in the Trade? First: Because trade needs a reformation, in order to render it compatible with the changed condition of things sought or produced by the Agency of the Gospel Missions. Then again the social Fabric needs the aid of an honest Commercial Factor, such as the professional speculator, to say nothing of the low Barterer, is as little calculated to build up as a Camel would be carrying mails across the ocean. A third reason is that Missions usually precede Commercial Trade, and more than that they insinuate themselves into destitute and out-of-the-way places where there are resources, it may often be, but undeveloped, and hence offer little or no inducement to Mercantile effort. Missions having their own wants to supply may keep a Stock on hand, and little by little exchange articles with those whose spiritual wants they go to supply. These small beginnings in course of years may develope into large proportions and that too to the stimulating of Industry, encouragement of honesty, frugality, and thrift among those whose elevation the Mission seeks to promote. A fourth reason that I wish to advance, is that Industrial Missions, may engage in Trade, as a means of giving practical lessons of instruction in honest Commercial intercourse. As they are designed as training Institutions; it is certainly reasonable that they should train up those placed under their care, for such, legitimate callings as they may most readily obtain on leaving the institution, if at all such must ever to come to pass, and most assuredly it will, and that too, to a greater extent as Missions Increase.—J. A. EVANS.

VINEGAR BIBLE.—A name given to an edition of the Bible, published 1717 at the Clarendon press, Oxford. By a ludicrous misprint, the title of the twentieth chapter of Luke was made to read "Parable of the Vineyar," instead of "Parable of the Vineyard." Hence the name.

We were sumptiously entertained by his Worship C. H. Harley Mosely, Acting Comdt. of Sherbro at his residence in this place on the evening of the 25th of August the occasion was that of a dinner, at 7 p.m. given in honour of Mr. William Hughes, now for 17 years in the civil service in the Sherbro, and who for the faithful discharge of his official duties, has been recently promoted, to the office of Deputy Coronor, a highly respectable appointment. Mr. Hughes is said to be the first of the Commandant's clerks, who have been thus promoted, yet this gentleman is of such stirling qualities, that every one seemed ready, and willing to accord to him, the right of the peculiar distinction, thus conferred upon him; for our own part we most cordially spoke our PIECE in his favour, feeling assured that we shall not regret it in future. It was intimated by some of the speakers, that the occasion was a little unique, in that the clergy had been invited and were all of them present, quite to the satisfaction of the Company. The evening was passed most enjoyably, by the entire party and we wish our most worthy Chief, an early promotion to the office of Civil Commandant of Sherbro feelingthat although he would not ask for such a distinction, that we who live in these parts could not enjoy a greater boon than to have such a gentleman permanently settled over the affairs of this District.

Mr. J. A. Richards, Wesleyan Catechist Freetown, First Circuit, was in Sherbro in consequence of the death of his cousin Mr. Moses D. Lake, Chief Examining Officer of Sulymah. He landed here on the 13th Aug, was the guest of Revd. J. C. Thomas during his stay, and gave us two or three pleasant calls, seemed well pleased with the opening for Missionary Work in these parts. He left Saturday 22nd Aug. per s. s. Igera for Freetown, but not without contributing some items of interest and also adding his name to our Roll of Subscribers. We wish Mr. Richards abundant success in his Work and many pleasant returns to our place.

Konconany.—The Mission-Work for which we had felt some cause of apprehension of late, is, everything considered progressing quite well, the Mission House isbeing erected the Posts and Frame-work is about ready for wattling and lathing. The Chapel also is being furnished with new seats Unfortunately the people are not assisting in the work, as they should, this it is to be hoped, will be better in the future, when matters shall have been better explained to them.

PRACTICAL RELIGION.

We are standing at the centre of a vast circumference of observation. There are being placed upon us, at all times, the eyes of angels, men, and God. We We cannot see the inhabitants of other worlds, but doubtless they are able to see us. Our most hidden sin is under a brighter light than we can imagine. It is under the burning eye of God. Oh, the eye of God, so full of love, so full of pity, so full of mercy, and so full of compassion. How it outshines the day. How it peers through the darkness of the night. How it beams on the soul that is penitent, and how it glares upon the one who has offended him. Are you wronged? He sees it. Are you poor? He sees it. Are you weak? He sees it. Have you domestic trouble of which the world knows nothing? He sees it. Are you encouraging your ministers? He sees it. Are you supporting the gospel? He sees it. But you say, God is in one world and I am in another world. He seems so far off from me that I do not really think he sees what is going on in my life. Can you see the eye of a needle? Can you see the point of a pin? And has God given you that power of minute observation, and does he not posaess it himself?

Ah, what we want is more practical religion. We do not want a new religion, but the old religion applied in all possible affairs. When practical religion everywhere prevails it will manifest itself in business circles and everywhere else. It will go into all our businesshouses. It will go to all hypocritical professors of religion. It will not only rectify all wrongs in trade, but it also will rectify all wrongs everywhere. It will manifest itself on the farm, in the learned professions, and in all the various ranks and relations of humansociety.

The way to get this practical religion is to give the heart to God, and then fill the life with good works. Consecrate everything to him—store, shop, bank, factory, home—all. It is said no one will do this that. God wills just that consecration, and that should be the end of controversy. I must confess that a great deal of religion of this day is utterly insipid. Men and women go around humming psalms in a minor key and cultivating melancholy; and their worship has in it more sighs than raptures. We do not doubt their piety. Oh, no! But everything is flat in their experience and in their conversation. Religion does not seem to agree with them. All the pitiful books that have been written from Voltaire down to Herbert Spencer have not done so much damage to our Christianity as lugubrious Christians. Who wants a religion woven out of the shadows of the night? Why go growling on the way to celestial enthronement? Come out of that cave, and sit down in the warm light of the Sun of Righteousness. Away with your odes to melancholy.

Then let our songs abound,
And every tear be dry;
We're marching through Emanuel's ground,
To fairer worlds on high.

Miscellany.

Here is a ten-year old boy's biography, written by himself. His home is in Kansas City. It was recently printed in the Journal of that place. He was asked:

1. When and where were you born? Of what descent?
2. Where have you lived?
3. How have you spent your life?
4. What remarkable things have happened to you?
5. What should you like to become?

"I was born in Kansas City, Jackson county, Missouri, West Central States, U.S.A., Western Hemisphere, Tuesday, January 13, 1873.

"I am English descent. I have lived in Kansas City all my life.

"Once I tumbled down a well and was fished out with a clothes line. I fell down stairs two or three times and mashed my finger once. When I was a little kid I got in some jam once that had cayenne pepper in it, and it made me dance like wet hen on a hot brick.

"I want to become an angel."

While a doctor was visiting a sick woman in Rowlandsville, Pa., two children poured a pint of molasses into his silk hat, which he did not notice until he put the tile upon his head. Language cannot describe his feelings, but it is said that he will petition the next legislature to pass a bill making it a criminal offense for a child to be born under twelve years of age.

A lean young man who fell in love with a very fleshy young woman confessed that he was infatuated.

The head clerk in a Western recorder's office is a beautiful girl of seventeen. A sort of recording angel, as it were.

A Burlington mother has a special room for administering corporal punishment to her children. She calls it her box office.

"I take up my pen to inform you that I shall be absent on a brief vacation," remarked the Pig, as he arched his back, and carried the sty with him.

NAMES.—Surnames were introduced into England by the Normans, and were adopted by the nobility about 1100. The old Norman-Saxon Fitz which signifies son, as Fitz-herbert; the Irish O, for grandson—O'Neal, O'Donnell; the Scottish Highlanders used Mac as Macdonald son of Donald; the northern nations added the word son to the father's name, as Williamson. Many of the most common surnames, such as Johnson, Wilson, Dyson, Nicholson, etc. were taken by Brabanters and other Fleming who were naturalized in the reign of Henry VI, 1435.

CHEMISTRY IN COURT.

Persons intending to commit frauds of any kind should be warned that the chances are that they will be detected if those who are interested in detecting them are qualified for their duty. A woman was brought before a New York judge not long ago on a suit for money borrowed, and five weeks' board.

The step mother of the woman testified that the defendant was only eighteen years old in 1883, when the debts were contracted, and was therefore incompetent to make a binding contract. In proof of this assertion she produced the family Bible in which the date of the birth was entered as Feb 9 1865.

Judge Steckler asked if there had been an erasure in the date, and Mrs Karsh said there had a great many years ago. The Judge thought that the five in 1865 had been written recently, and sent for an expert in handwriting.

Mr. William Cavalho, expert, examined the entry in the Bible with a microscope.

"It's plain," he said, "that the five is written over and erasure, and recently too. I cannot out what figure was originally there. There is a flourish that may have been part of a 6." He took out a phial and said: "I will prove by a test that different kinds of ink have been used."

Then he dipped a camel's hair brush in the phial, which contained muriate of tin, and touched the figures. The 1 turned brown, and the 5 turned a vivid purple.

"The test shows," said the expert, "that the ink used in writing 1 had a base of nutgall; 5 was written with ink having an aniline base. Such ink as the latter was invented only fifteen years ago, and has been in general use only a few years."

Judge Steckler, moved by this and other testimony, gave a judgement for the plaintiff.

APPROACHING END OF TIME.

Mr. Editor,—The approaching end of time is seen in the restlessness of the age which does not at all tell or predict that the world is to last much longer. By Prophecies and Prophetic signs Divines have diligently investigated into the sacred scriptures and have found that the world is near her end. The present feature of the world unfolds to us a problem which thinking minds must solve. According to our Lord's instructions in Matthew chap. xxiv, 21, "For then shall be great tribulations, such as was not since the beginning of the world to this time, no, nor ever shall be," We are then to "be sober and watch unto prayer," and as soldiers of the cross to be in arms as the command goes from our Captain. Wars, and rumours of wars, distresses of nations, famine, pestilence, the transmission and settlement of the descendants of Abraham in the land of their forefathers, and the violent persecutions attending them in foreign lands are enough to prove that "the end of all things is at hand." Scoffers at religion, sceptics, the worldly, ought in pause for a while and reason at the present state of things, whether there is gain or loss at their profession which must soon end. There are many like Darius, the Mede who gave sanction to a decree that for the space of thirty days, no one should offer a prayer or petition to any god or man but himself, who also gave sanction to religion and yet would not be, religious, and yet it is to be borne in mind that the time is at hand when they shall come to themselves and like the King of Babylon, they will "extol and honor the God of Heaven." We cannot see or tell what is beyond the clouds, but by the present, a little of the future is known, since the Bible has much to do with the common affairs of our life, we are to watch closely and search diligently about its sayings concerning the present, and meditate deeply as to what we shall be when time shall be no more. The Christian anticipates that end of time, and as faithful steward is preparing for their Lord's appearing. The day for the restitution of all things is appointed, is evident from the truths of scripture for a careful study of the holy scriptures, brings the the mind to a close communion with divine truths. The end of time is necessary to vindicate the justice of God. The believers in Christ are looking for that object of hope viz. the glorious appearing of their great God and Savior, their Brother in their own nature to pronounce their destiny. Though the exact period for the approaching end of time is hidden from man's knowledge and is known only to God, yet it is the good hope of the Christian Church that that day is at hand. Despite of the religious advantages that man has, God has given him but a short time to live upon earth and upon this short time Eternity depends. During this interval which connects life and eternity there are great many things to do, the principal is our duty towards God and that towards our neighbour, besides our private and public cares many evils to prevent, much danger to pass through, many enemies to conquer, many difficulties to master and much good to do yet these are not encumbrances to excuse for not preparing for the end of time.

H. J. WILLIAMS.

Mr. Editor,—On Monday the 24th Aug. a Lecture was delivered at St. Matthew's, Church School-room, in connection with the Band of Hope Society. Mr William Hughes was the Lecturer, his Subject was the reign of Charles I., and the Chairman on the occasion was the Rev. G. G. M. NICOL.

The Chairman in his opening remarks said, what a pleasure it gave him to preside at a Meeting got up by the spontaneous efforts of the young men of Bonthe; and he took that opportunity of congratulating Mr. Hughes the Patron of the Band of Hope Society, and Lecturer for the evening, for the promotion he had received in being appointed Deputy Coroner of the Sherbro District.

The Lecturer was then called upon to read his Lecture.

He gave a succinct account of the reign of Charles I. until its tragic close; and though his effort was merely a sketch—considering the wide and extensive range of the Subject, it was marked with interest and judicious treatment. After the Lecture, Refreshments, Cakes, Ginger-Beer and Sweets, were handed round, and then the Meeting opened for discussion. Before the reading of the Lecture I should have remarked, that the Acting Commandant, C. H. Harley Moseley Esq. spoke on the subject of Mr. Hughes' promotion, after the Chairman; and stated publicly that he would never have recommended Mr. Hughes for the distinction of Deputy Coroner to the Governor-in-Chief, had he not the confidence and reliance on him; and the audience enthusiastically re-echoed every sentiment uttered by the Acting Commandant relative to Mr. Hughes.

The discussion upon Mr. Hughes' Lecture was opened by Mr. H.R Williams, Postmaster, whose speech was lively and amusing, but based somewhat on a misapprehension of the Lecturers' arguments. He laboured to prove as against the Lecturer which he never denied, that Charles I. was tyrannical, and was responsible to God and man alike.

Mr. John Songo Davies, of the Sulymah District next spoke in a careful and well thought out impromptu speech which took well with the audience. Next came Mr. Obadiah Turner whose remarks evinced some degree of intelligence—and who from his apparent familiarity with the Subject, acquitted himself very creditably.

The next speaker was Mr. Punshion Thorpe His remarks set the meeting in roars of laughter—for he contended against the Lecturer that Charles I.'s life did not end ingloriously, by a process all his own;—and end by the remarkable expression that "the mind was rendered "opaque."!! by the word "inglorious," used by the Lecturer in connection with Charles' reign. Mr Crown followed,—who impressed by the remarks of the Acting Commandant on Mr. Hughes, said that it would be his aim to walk in the footsteps of that gentleman who had just been so well spoken of by his chief, and so signally honoured by the Governor himself.

Before the Meeting closed, Mr. Obadiah Turner spoke some sensible words. He spoke of the necessity for some literary Society in our midst, and asked the help of the Chairman in such an important matter. In proposing a Society of that kind before the audience, he said it was "an emanation not of the head but of the heart." The chairman spoke on the points which Mr. Turner had touched upon;—and promised his help, provided that the young men themselves would first make a move, to show that they all had the one desire and a community of feeling on the subject. The Meeting was well attended, and among those present, we noticed M. M. Mailliet a Priest of Gundumah Factory.

It was all very enthusiastic, and unquestionably, it was the best meeting the Band of Hope ever had;—we congratulate them for their success, and trust that if Mr. Turner's suggestion is carried out, they will merge themselves into one body under a different and more comprehensive name.

The proceedings terminated about 10.p.m.

On Tuesday 25th August, Mr. Moseley gave an Official Dinner at his residence in honor of Mr. Hughes being appointed Coroner—All the Government officers were invited, and the Revs. J. A. Evans, J. C. Thomas and G. G. M. Nicol were included in the party. The room was tastefully decorated with choice flowers—and 18 sat down to a sumptious feast. Various toasts were drunk, to "our host"—the clergy, the Government officials; but the Toast of the evening was that to Mr. Hughes, proposed by the Acting Commandant, and which was enthusiastically drunk—All the guests spoke in very fitting terms of Mr. Hughes' qualifications, and when the Acting Commandant avowed of his appreciation of his chief clerk, the whole table vibrated with murmurs of approval and rounds of applause. As one of the guests said, Mr. Hughes' advancement was owing not only to the undoubted qualities which he possessed, but to the tact, Foresight, and discrimination of the Acting Commandant, who had drawn them out, when otherwise they might have lain dormant

Mr. Moseley is certainly to be congratulated for his manifest popularity among his officers, due doubtless to his geniality of manner and consideration, while from the prudence and judgment which he characterised his management of this District, for the past 18 months, he has shown qualities which if left to be entirely and permanently developed here, no one would reasonably object. It is hoped that he will continue to manifest that kindness and consideration for his subordinates which have doubtless prompted his recommendation for Mr. Hughes' advancement; and it is expected that the officers will learn from Mr. Hughes—his patience his assiduity, and his worth, that the path of honor is the path of integrity and uprightness, and that a good heart is a jewel of which any one might justly be proud.

To the Editor of the Early Dawn.

Sir,

Permit me a small space in your valuable paper, to express my opinion, on the manner in which attention has been paid to the roads and streets in Bonthe.

The public has felt some satisfaction of late in this matter, and praise is due to our indefatigable Commandant for his exertions.

The skill and management of the Overseer of roads &c. are obvious to all—streets repaired, high weeds, trees, and above all country well cleared; preventing disease from creeping into our homes, this sanitary measure does give comfort to our little community.

The present appearance of Bonthe nearly serves to remind us of the creditable management of Commandant Davies, whose exertion during his short stay among us, is almost beyond description; he had treaches digged in the uppermost part of the town, freeing the streets from swamps if this step be adopted yearly the difficulty of moving about in rainy days will disappear.

Passing through several streets they are beautiful to behold with the exception of a few passages especially approaching Nathan street a popular road leading to Dumborkoh or to any of the Parkies on the Western part of the town must of necessity pass through it, but it is frightful to behold, the gutter unrepaired, water remained or settled on the highway with miserable swamps, the path in a word is simply impassable.

It is to be hoped that the authorities will soon give attention to the repairs required especially to this important thoroughfare, so as to give a uniform appearance to Bonthe, and save the public from inconvenience.

I am, Sir

Yours truly

Cero.

HE WAS A HERO.

A country gentleman going his rounds after his dinner in the dusk of the evening, saw a great snake coiled up in his garden walk. With singular bravery and presence of mind he immediately got an axe, cut the creature into a hundred pieces, returned to the house, told every body about the exploit, and went to bed. Next morning his gardener came to him in great tribulation

"Well, George?"

"A curious thing has happened in the garden, sir."

"Yes, George."

"It's cut to pieces, sir some villain must ha done it."

"A villain, George! 'Twas I did it, with my own hand, George!"

"You, sir?"

"Yes, I, George. I don't suppose there's another man in the country with the pluck to do it but myself."

"To do what, sir?"

"To cut to pieces, and kill that frightful snake."

"Lawk, master! 'twasn't a snake—'twas only the garden hose!"

THE REV. DR. CLIFFORD ON TOTAL ABSTINENCE

"A Tree is known by its fruit." Look at the tree of alcoholism and the tree planted in the world of the temperance reformation. Imagine a blackboard, and let him represent its two sides—first, the results of drinking, and then the results of the temperance reformation. On the one side what would he have to present? Pauperism, crime, misery, dirt, houses, wretched wives, still more wretched children, and ruined men—all the consequences of this demon of drink. Was there any thing to set off against this? When we contemplate this ruin, and askel whether the drinking custom had anything to set off against this, what was the response? Was the wife ever heard of who thanked God because her husband had become so much kinder, and brought home so much more money, and attended so much more thoroughly to the comforts of home since we went to the "Royal Oak?" Were the children ever heard of who she prepared to declare that that which had done their father the most good had been the public-house? The supposition was absurd. He knew of no set-off.

Strong drink was a curse, wholy, continuously, and completely. That was one side. "By their fruits you shall know them." And what was the fruit of the temperance reformation? Hundreds and thousands of men had been plucked as brands from the burning. And had been brought to Jesus and made apostles to others, and had wrought righteousness, which was issuing still in benefit and blessing to the world. More has this an enormous preventive work had seen done, and in truth time would fail him o tell the story of the wonderful results of the temperance reformation. As surely as strong drink was the foe of God, so surely was the temperance reformation a friend o God.

THEY FELT HIM.

It is not always desirable to be universally popular. No man ever assumed the role of the reformer without incurring enmity, and the more necessary the reform advocated, the more severe the attendant hatred. A certain senator, says the San Francisco Chronicle, was engaged in some very radical measures which sorely tried many people, whom he rightly thought in need of reform.

They abused him roundly, but he maintained the fight in in all honesty. A friend of his visited him in Sacramento, while the measures were pending.

"Well, what do they say of me in San Francisco?" inquired the Senator.

"They dont speak very well of you."

"What do they say! That's what I want to know."

"Well, they say very hard things about you. I don't care to"——

"Speak out!" cried the reformer. "Tell me just how they talk."

"They call you a liar, an ignoramus, a scoundrel, a thief, an idiot,—in short, every thing they can think of that is bad."

"Ah!" said the Senator, rubbing his hands in glee, and chuckling with perfect enjoyment. "They feel me my boy, they feel me."—Youth's Companion.

VOL. 2. BONTHE SHERBRO, WEST AFRICA, OCTOBER, 1885. No. 9.

ALMAMI SANANKOROH alias ALMAMI SAMODU,

His early years and Conquests

By X. Y. Z.

Almami Samodu is the son of Lamfia Ture, who is still alive, and was born in Sananko-bah, capital of Koniah district of West Africa, situated in a tract of country lying between lat. 9 and 11 N., and long. 7 and 7. W., West. He is a Mandingo, and about forty years of age, and his family is superior to most of the families of his land.

He visited Sierra Leone as a trader some years ago, and has not received much education; but being of a studious and enquiring nature, he became a pupil of some of the learned priests of the Mohammedan religion in his native place and afterwards in Kankan in the Bate district. Increasing in the knowledge of Arabic and of the Koran, he became a zealous son of the Prophet and gathered around him many admirer. Thinking it desirable to evince his belief, he called upon the Pagans in his own country and a-mong the surrounding tribes to renounce their ways and adopt his religion. They refused; and from that time he began to enforce his views at the point of the sword.

As in most countries, the exalted Princes of the church have invariably endeavoured to exercise a powerful influence over their sovereign and with success, so did Samodu. People in consequence flocked around him, and his ambition increased as did the king's jealousy. At last there was a rupture between them; the sovereign, Almami Ibrahima Sisi, could not brook the ascendency of one of his subjects, and a battle was fought. Samodu was victorious and took his prisoner, his followers called upon him to put him to death, but he significantly replied, "No, I will not kill my king," but the king remains in distance vibe and Samodu is virtually in his dead Early in the year 1878 Samodu, being irritated at the constant attacks made by the various tribes near at hand upon traders passing down to the sea coast, determined to put a stop to it. He was a true son of the Prophet a rigid disciplinarian and staunch Musselman. His fame had already reached the banks of the Niger, full a month's journey to the northward, and he could ill brook any interference with the trade of his country.

The marauders were Pagans inhabiting a large regions to the west of the country called Trong, and without any more ado he attacked one town after another, finally annexing the whole and enforcing his religion at the point of the sword. All who would not embrace it were ruthlessly put to death.

Having once fairly started on his proselyting mission and with a natural thirst for conquest, he passed on still more to the northward, swallowing up Kolonkalu (the Kolakonta of the Mapes) a portion of Manding and

WAR CLOUDS AGAIN.

During latter part of September we made a tour of the Bargroo Country and proceeded as far as to Konconany the head of Canoe navigation on the Big Bargroo River. We also visited Manoh and Avery Towns on the Manoh Bargroo River. One of our Agents also sent a special messenger to Gbangbiah a notable chief town at the head of navigation on another Principal Branch of the Great Bargroo River. A Reporter was also sent to Bengaloh who reports that repairs are being made on the Stockade at that place, and from other sources we learn that Sorey Behyo a chief warrior intends to sit down in that town, whether this is true or not, the repairing of a stockade within six miles of British soil in a time when the Government is putting forth extra efforts to secure peace does not seem very favorable to its continuance especially when we remember the menacing effect of these same Savage Bands while under the nominal controll of Besh Boom of GBangbiah, from whom now they seem to be turning because of the restraints he put upon their reckless ambition, and when one remembers Mamayah raid of only a few months ago and also the wretched character of these merciless hoards of savages at our very doors, we cannot but feel that the peace of the country is thereby endangered and although we have been informed that Bengaloll and other Impereh Towns are out of jurisdiction yet we do hope that there is some means by which troubles that arise in those Quarters which as they are, calculated, to spread over the surrounding districts greatly to the disturbance of the general peace of the country and Sherbro trade, may be remedied. The remedy is easily provided a mere handfull of Police men at Manoh Bargroo with instructions to keep a vigilant watch out for night Raids which will doubtless be the plan of Procedure, these may often be largely sent forward during the day or two previous, to a range with allies and to be ready at the approach of their leader with a few others to plunder Traders and others who have anything they may want; in this way their work of plundering will be easily accomplished, without the usual parade of war beforehand yet the same paralizing effect will be felt upon the industries of the country.

SUSPENSION OF BUSINESS.

We regret, very much, to learn from Revd. J. Gomer the Agt. and General Superintendent of the Sherbro Mendi Missions, that he intends shortly to close up the Trade Business which he has so successfully built up, and carried on for many years in the Sherbro Mission, and which has been the means of almost untold Spiritual Blessing, as it has largely led to the building up of a Christian community at Shaingay, that has originated a successful itinerant system in the Sherbro country, and has also given birth to a native Aid Society, that has done and is still doing a great work in destitute parts of the Land. This Mission Trade has also given Employment to a large number of young men trained up by our Mission; who must now seek a livelihood elsewhere, many of whom, it is to be feared, will be lost to the Church. Many of those, who have intenerated in past years on Sabbaths, were otherwise employed during most of the week and thus earned their support, but with the suspension of Trade, most other profitable Employments will cease, and hence many Itinerants will be discontinued for want of means to support them and thus many Towns that used to hear the Word of God will be deprived of that Blessing.

THIEVES.

Shengay mission has been visited by thieves quite frequently of late, all were hungry for casada; No. 1. was caught in the very act, and sentenced to cut three cords of wood which he did, No. 2 & 3 were followed to their homes and then reported they plead guilty and each paid a fine of ten shillings, No. 4 was caught while pulling the casada, said, he was hungry, had eaten nothing the whole day, he was sentenced to clean a patch of Arrowroot, but ran away without completing the job. No. 5. had filled a bag about half full he saw the watchman coming, and ran left his medicine called mayumbo, which was intended to protect him, he was caught however and is working out a fine of ten shillings goes home every night, but comes prompt at 6 o'clock in the morning to answer at Roll call and be present at morning Worship,—When will the people leave off stealing and go to work, I hear it said that people steal more from Mission because they never put medecine on their farm, and then Mission people never flog them it they are caught. No. 5 however got flogge d.

HOW SHALL WE CORRECT THE MORALS OF THE PEOPLE?

Dear Mr. Editor,—This is a subject that has long puzzled my brain, I live up here in a country village, where I see so much of immorality that I become quite disgusted with it, I was highly pleased some months ago when His Worship the Manager of Sherbro Mr. Moseley put a veto on persons appearing in the streets without sufficient clothing to cover their nakedness.—All honor to his name, what a pity that there is not more men of his stamp in authority in the country. In British territory where you have civilized laws, it is not so hard to manage these dress matters, but how are these evils to be corrected in the country, and especially where British subjects fall right in with the customs of the country people, Practicing not only their country fashion but imitating them in their style of dress or no dress, as the case may be, also in their lewd practices, I am quite sure Mr. Editor that these things ought to be corrected, but who is to do it? you will say at once that it is the duty of your head man, but Mr. Editor you know yourself that as a rule all of these headmen are as deep in the mud as the people are in the mire, custom has become the law here, so that there is no hope for any reform from those in authority.

Why, you will say you have a Mission ary there he should start the reform. A very proper thought that, but when the Missionary is a Sierra Leone man and there is a half dozen Sierra Leone people in the town that are practising all of the immoralities of the heathen, the Missionaries' influence is greatly weakened. Tell me Mr. Editor how to correct the morals of the people, and then I shall have hopes of their becoming christians. "The whole head is sick, the whole heart is faint."

AN EYE-WITNESS.

Dear Mr. Editor,—My attention has been drawn to a Report which appeared in your last issue, of the Lecture delivered on the 24th August, by Mr. W. Hughes, in connection with the Band of Hope Temperance Society recently organized in Bonthe, In the first place the proceedings of the meeting in which the Lecture was delivered could not have been reported by any responsible or authorized person; otherwise the name of the reporter would have appeared, I think it would be well that a report of the kind should bear the signature of the person making it, if it is intended to give any authentic information at all. It is difficult to place any reliance on a Report of such nature in the absence of the writer's name; and I am almost convinced that the Public would not receive the Report above referred to with confidence, since the author was afraid to append his name to it.

I am Sir, yours truly,
AN OBSERVER.

Bonthe, 16 Sep. 1885.

A WISHED FOR SCENE.

To the Editor "Early Dawn."

Dear Sir,—The series of entertainments recently given by the Acting Civil Commandant of Sherbro has enlivened Bonthe in a great measure and served materially to dispel the monotony for a time which had reigned supreme in this District. But let me ask Have not Merchants' Clerks the right to expect similar entertainments from their Employers? I believe they have; it may no doubt be regarded as an impossibility, seeing that not all of them are in the same Employ as in the Civil Service. If large Firms of Merchants who employ from six to twelve clerks in an Establishment would give them a kind of annual entertainment or treat, I do not think the former would loose by it, on the contrary, I presume to say that it will bring much closer the existing relations between the two, and tend to inspire unbounded confidence in each other, at any rate it would be an innovation should a trial be made here; I should very much like to see it tried, that its outcome may be seen As I am rather busy now, you will hear from me again on this Subject, Thanking you Mr. Editor for the space occupied. I remain Mr. Editor,

Yours in haste,
CERO.

NEWS ITEMS.

Mr. D. L. Collier, Agent in charge of Mokate Factory, arrived here on Saturday evening the 12th September on a visit to his Family.

We learn with deep regret of the death of Mrs. Sarah Cole, of Hastings, Aunt of Messrs. R. T. & C. B. Collier, Sherbro.

We regret to state that Mr. James Williams, known chiefly as Bamboo man, of this place, died on Friday morning 11th Sept and was buried on the evening of the same day Distant friends will please accept this information.

Capt. F. C. Halkett Inspector General of Police, and Mr. R. E. Pownal Colonial Surveyor, arrived in this place per. s. s. Igara on the 24th Sept. from Freetown. They gave us a call together with Capt. Hanbury of s. s. Igara but unfortunately we were absent at the time.

The Public will be gratified to learn that although the Mails for Freetown are generally closed the same day of the S. S. "IGARA'S" arrival, a Supplementary Mail is always made up on the following morning, of all letters &c., found in the Post Office Letter Box bearing sufficient Postage stamps.

We are informed that the Wesleyan Sunday School Members are preparing for an Entertainment to take place this month. We wish the promoters all success.

DIED.—Mrs. Nancy Marke, widowed mother of the Revds. W. G. and C. Marke, Wesleyan Ministers, (former deceased last December) at her residence, at Wellington on the 13th of September at the age of 85. The Rev. C. Marke is away to England, and with him and the large family we deeply sympathize. Also with the death of the infant daughter of Sol. Bright Esq. Freetown.

Mr. Thomas Tucker Pastor of Mofuss Station Cockboro died at Mofuss Sept. 13th. A very triumphant death—Told his wife in the morning that that was his last day, that his master had called for him—Called the Mission children, and bid them to be good children—Told Frank, (Mr. F. C. Dixon) his assistant, to be faithful etc.

It has been reported from the Impereh that Soree Behyo one of principal Warriors called by chief Beah Boom to fight against GBerry has become disaffected in some way with Beah Boom and that he now intends to attack GBangbiah meanwhile he will make his head-quarters at Bengaloll the stockade of which town is now being repaired for that purpose.

Dr. Renner is again in our place in the capacity of Colonial Surgeon during the absence of Dr. Jarrett who, we believe, is now attending the grand court in Freetown

Mr. C. H. Harley Moseley acting civil Commandant has been out of town since about 25th September on a tour to Sulymah; he is accompanied by Mr. R. E. Pownall, we believe, and Capt. F. C. Halkett is in charge here, for the time.

Mr. C. S. Brown has been appointed Agt. for "Early Dawn" at Bendoo and will be glad to receive subscriptions for us in that place.

A METHODIST SERMON.

On Wednesday evening the 9th Sept., at the Methodist Chapel here, a very Special Sermon was preached in behalf of the Mission, by a Mr. J. B. M'Cormack, a recognised Local Exhorter of the Freetown first circuit.

Before 7. p.m, the time at which the Service commenced, were to be observed a concourse of men, women and children eagerly finding their way to the chapel to obtain convenient seats; in a few moments after, the Chapel was full to overflowing, and those that had no seats, contented themselves in leaning on the windows. This gentleman deserves the highest eulogy possible, not only for the success achieved but for the painstaking manner in which he preached to the satisfaction and understanding of all present.

We learn from good authority that Mr. M'Cormack is a brother-in-law to Mr. J. D. Macaulay, Chief clerk and Warehouse Keeper of Customs in this District. Mr. M'Cormack leaves today by the s. s. Igara (11th) for Freetown.

OCONNORSON.

REPORT of AVERY STATION, Mendi Mission for the Quarter ending September 30th 1885.

Mr. President,

I am glad to be able to report, that there is reason for us to rejoice. Although, greater success has not been not been realized from our labors than usual, it is cheering however, to know, that the word has been faithfullly preached, and our Itinerants have been zealously engaged, every Sabbath during the quarter. The great boon to our work has been instability in some of our weak members; nevertheless, there are some, who are trying to walk aright and to be more devoted. Our week night services have not been appreciated as as much as we desire; but this I doubt not has resulted from the inclemency of the weather.

Mr. Elias T. Tucker, who was recently added to strengthen our staff here, has been changing appointments with me, in the Itinerating work fortnightly. We regret the loss of one in Manoh seekers class. The other brethren are trying to regain our lost grounds. Brother James Miah has been very regular in his weekly routes; and has reported 568 persons, who have listened with due attention to the words read and explained.

We have 9 Seekers Classes at present consisting of 227 members; showing an increase of 4 Seekers Classes and 74 members; Communicant 1. Number of Membership Com 26, Seekers 227. Total 253.

A CORRECTION.

We regret very much that in our last issue we blended two items of News in one, and spoiled the sense of both. By reference to that number it will be found that we said "The Rev John Williams "newly appointed European Missionary" is expected shortly to succeed The Rev James Booth, Superintendent of the Limbah mission who had returned home with his devoted wife on sick leave, is expected to return to that mission" which is nonsensical in the extreme. We should have said First that "The Rev John Williams "newly appointed European Missionary" is expected shortly to succeed The Rev. E. W. Adcock who had been appointed to Fourcarriah in the Limbah mission." Secondly that "The Rev. James Booth Superintendent of the Limbah mission who had returned home with his devoted wife on sick leave is expected to return to that mission.

THE CHURCH OF PHILIPPI

Was the first society of christians planted, in Macedonia, in obedience to the vision of the Appostle Paul at Troas; and although the work was early disturbed, by persecutions, it no doubt acquired much of stability from that which was intended to destroy it; for there can be but little, or no doubt as to the evil intentions of those who caused the arrest of Paul and Silas, and of their desire to get them out of the way and thus put a period to the christian work in that place, and it seems the Magistrates justified the action of the proceedings against Paul and Silas by sending them to prison, with a charge strictly given to the jailor to keep them safely; they must have shared in the conviction, that these men had been injured by the Leaders of this new religion in their midst and that they ought to be punished for exorcising of the evil spirit from their maid of gain. But it seems equally evident also that it was this very circumstance that led to the conversion of the jailer, and that added to the strength of the infant church, just then struggling into existence under the patronage of the purple dyer of Thyatira. For the imprionment of Paul and Silas not only brought about the conversion of the jailer, but also the humiliation of the Magistrates in compelling them not only to release the prisoners but to attend in person their liberation, and to beseech them to leave the place. The jailer's conversion added official dignity to the little band of christians and gave great prominence to the church, and no doubt greater influence, the result of which a faithful, earnest society was built up. Which growing in all the graces of a true piety, soon excelled in the most excellent grace of giving, the fruit of which was early exhibited in their sending help to the apostle to the very next city in which he was called to labor and that too within a very few months after he had left them for in his letter to the Philippians written from Rome, the Apostle says, "even in Thessalonica ye sent once and again unto my necessity," he also speaks in the same letter of their willingness, but want of opportunity to assist him, and on the occasion of their sending to him to Rome they had sent a bounty, we know not what this bounty consisted in but the appreciation by the Apostle was the highest so much so that he spoke of it as filling all his wishes, he said "I am full, having received of Epaphroditus the things which were sent from you, an odour of a sweet smell, a sacrifice acceptable, well pleasing to God. O how much there is in the language of the Apostle's gratitude which redounds to the praise of the Church at Philippi, but we cannot expatiate on these words, and must close by saying that the more we think of this loving and beloved Church we cannot but wish the same abundant grace of free will sacrifice were now present in all the churches of vast christendom. Oh what a wonderful impetus would be given to the cause of Christ in the World.

SUBSTITUTES FOR MATCHES.

Countless accidents, as every one knows, arise from the use of matches. To obtain light without employing them and so with out the danger of setting things on fire, an ingenious contrivance is now used by the watchmen of Paris in all the magazines where explosive or inflammable materials are kept. Take an oblong vial of the whitest and clearest glass and put into it a piece of phosphorus about the size of a pea. Pour some olive oil heated to the boiling point upon the phosphorus; fill the vial about one-third full and then cork it tightly. To use this novel light remove the cork, allow the air to enter the vial and then reocrk it. The empty space in the vial will become luminous and the light obtained will be equal to that of a lamp. When the light grows dim its power can be increased by taking out the cork and allowing a fresh supply of air to enter the vial. In winter it is sometimes necessary to heat the vial between the hands in order to increase the fluidity of the oil. The apparatus thus made may be used for six months.

MEMORY.

A man's memory is like his stomach. To do its best work it must have good treatment. It must neither be neglected nor overloaded. It can easily be so abused by neglect, or by irregular and unsystematic employment, as to become chiefly a cause of annoyance and discomfort; or, again, it can be so overworked and heavily taxed that it becomes practically the chief organ or agent of the entire system, every other portion dwindling in its comparison.

The latter course is the greater danger of those who value the help of a tenacious memory.

Both memory and stomach are valuable, not in proportion to the burdens they can carry, but in proportion to their training for their part in the work of the system as a whole; and either of them is made effective as much by what is kept from it, as by what is packed into it.

DIVINE PROVIDENCE.

Providence, says a learned author is "that care which God exercises over the world and all things therein, so as to preserve and provide for the being which he has given them and the direction of all their motions and actions for the accomplishment of those purposes for which they were made." Under the considerations of this subject one may be easily led to exclaim, What a mystery there is in Providence. Oh what a depth so unfathomable! This puts me in mind of the Venerable Apostle when he expresses his admiration of the riches and the wisdom and knowledge of God, "O the Riches both of the wisdom and knowledge of God! how unsearchable are his judgments, and his ways past finding out." "Thou God seest me," the words of Julian in the earlier ages of the Church are words that describe the special providence of God. It was that solid trust in Providence which prompted the the primitive Christians immediately after conversion to sell their possessions and goods and to have every thing in common. It is like the fog in the morning seen in tropical regions and the morning cloud which puts every distant object in a veil, neerring faith penetrates deeper into the cloudy sky. I admit from experience that a person hitting his foot against a stone it is not so much felt while it is hot as when it is cold so then the providence of God is most appreciated when manifested in the midst of despair. In all ages of the Church she has been watched and preserved and guarded by that Being whose providential arrangements are unquestionable.

It has been observed that the christian's greatest extremity is the time of God's gracious opportunity and yet few things are more evident than that some of the darkest dispensations in the experience of the saints have been opportunities for the divine care and God exercesies toward his creatures. How often do christians shudder when immediate providence is not exercised on their behalf! not considering that it is the purpose of the Almighty to make a trial of their faith as to their belief in his omnipotency. One with a genuine piety piety in a time where Divine aid is needed will readily join with the Poet and say,

Joy of the desolate, Light of the straying
Hope when all others die, fadeless and pure—
Here speaks the comforter in God's name saying—
Earth has no sorrow that Heaven cannot cure.

Providence often produces great changes which are seen in our daily life, for the direction and appointment of all events are elements in Divine Providence. When Moses stood at the verge of the Red sea with so great a responsibility his trust was only in Providence for the performance of that extraordinary act by which they crossed the Red sea.

It was Providence that brought about the fortune of France to be saved by the instrumentality of a girl from the torrent of the English arms. It is the pleasure of God to make known his providence to us in various ways and while we are on this side of the grave in our state of probation, some enjoy almost uninterrupted health and prosperity through a long life and come down to the grave in a good old age, others are the subjects of affliction and distress during nearly the whole of the time given them to live upon earth, yet there is not an occurence in connection with a single man but is arranged by God. If our case be even brought to the last extremity we are not to despair but patiently submit every thing to the Divine will. The mystical workings of providence is often seen in the case of a sinner in that the Almighty in a wonderful way and far more above our comprehension brings to pass changes which are the results of bringing many a stray one back to the fold of the Cross. How often too do we wander from the paths of rectitude and stagger almost into the pit of destruction and and yet a smiling providence rescues many a loved one when on the brink of an eternal death. It shoul l be our earnest prayer that we be deeply impressed with a sense of divine providence. In the midst of all our blessings and comforts, we should rejoice with trembling and in all our trials and sorrows, cast our care upon Him who careth for us knowing if we always put our trust in Him, He will guide us through every stage of this life, and when we shall be called to quit this life He will receive us unto eternal glory, where we shall be forever with God.

To the Editor of the "Early Dawn."

Sir,—I have pleasure in directing my attention to the writer "Harmless" appeared in the last issue of your Journal, which I think must have been perused by some with amusement. "Harmless" focus in Review ing my letter, has brewed an extraordinary revival contemporaneously of a dislike character in the Community "of a few," however, admit that he was expressing himself by Reviewing and emphasizing, which tends to the just development of a country improvement and of Public knowledge, but it appears to be imperspicuous for my part, it would befit his characterize the motion, if the insinuation cast had not met with excitement and enthusiasm, he forgetting the old adage that "what is meat for one, is poison to the other." It was to be not to great a surprise to see the flimsy effusions "Harmless" dispose to make of my letter, he prentised by remarking that, "as if I was induced by a sense of folly to write, "That the satisfaction felt by the Public" etc. and "That the skill and management of the Overseer of Roads etc." are words fell into his net for criticism, pointing the statement as curious and conflicting, only to satisfy his curiosity on a pretence to paralize my discussion; this I regard as mere regaling concupisance; I was surprised to see him in such garb, thinking he would sport like the Roman addressing a freedman at Pompey's funeral "permit me to share with you the honour of your humble opinion," in the event of recording such dramatical hypothesis, "Harmless" impatience however was but subordinate to his cruelty.

I would you and your readers Mr. Editor, will please peruse my paragraphs in your issue of September, does it show anything worth to bear the cruel sword of "Harmless" that he intend to use on me with impunity? I answer, No; because it was never intended for any unjust purpose, he chose to saddle me for not giving praise to whom it is due, altho' he had proof and tangible reasons to believe from a gentleman expressing his wish to in perusing my report, and have been directly informed—I set the horse before the cart, as facts are facts, but they are generally stubborn things; nothing can be done with out a foundation, quoting his own words, "The labourer is worthy of his hire" this as we all know is a common thing to shake off truth from the minds of peaceful readers.

As I do not intend to create a paper squabble, only pointing out my views, that you and your readers may see and participate with me for the frivolous remarks accosted my report without thinking twice to mark once, meantime requesting you to accept the report without any indifference as they are true and conscientiously written, leaving "Harmless" to think of sense, which he termed "nonsense" and sensical as "nonsensical"—The Directory of this noble sheet affirmed my statements, and I have frequently seen Notices placarded from the Government yard bearing the title under signature "Overseer of Roads," no opposition was ever manifested, and who besides, unless "Harmless" would say that the Overseer of Roads has become "careless and illiterate appreciter," quite a new appellation indeed, doe'nt worth the title of a Donkey enough to send a criminal senseless to the confused rest of infernal fiend. I would advise my friend Harmless (if he is) that reviewing is neither triumph for conquest, he might in proposal loose nothing in this decisive engagement, but may be lost when biased through the influence of another. By insert ing this Mr. Editor, you will greatly oblige,

Yours Sincerely,

CERO.

Bonthe, Sherbro,
14th Oct. 1885.

Mr. Editor,—Sir, I have read carefully your issue of October 3rd containing a communication (or correspondence) from the pen of CERO, who makes mention of the "recent Entertainments given by the Acting Civil Commandant to his subordinate officers. Asking "Have not Merchants' clerks the right to expect similar entertainments from their Employers? I believe they have" &c. Taking into mature consideration all that Cero has remarked, I am persuaded to state that I cannot in any way conceive the absolute necessity for such an interrogative—nor even its propriety. Every man is a free moral agent; consequently he is disposed to act as he pleases, that is to say, he may be thus charitable or otherwise. The Merchants' Agents our employers, must be considered as stewards of the property intrusted to their hands, which they are expected to improve or increase to the best of their ability, but which if imprudently and unwisely dispensed, will produce results, which will not tell well to their credit or honor. It is a known fact that the present state of the country involves a very lamentable reason. The wars which have been the means of injuring trade, have not only proved detrimental, but overwhelming to commerce, consequently, Merchants and traders have had to suffer from the dullness thereof; it is therefore only to be hoped that after peace shall have been established in the rivers and trade become brisk, then the Merchants' Agents may feel it a pleasure to give some kind of treat to their clerks, as a manifestation of their good will and appreciation of their faithful and honest services.

I am, Mr. Editor,
Yours respectfully,
SELON.

Bonthe, Oct. 1885

To the Editor of the "Early Dawn."

Sir,—If my memory is not deceiving me, I think I read in your August number a letter from a gentleman expressing his wish to see your Paper published twice a month. Being of the same opinion, and seeing the benefit and great advantages to the Sherbro community by a more frequent Publication of your valuable Paper, I beg to suggest to those interested in the matter, my idea on the subject.

The suggestion of the gentleman is very good indeed, but without the great lever of our age £. s. d., as you justly observe, I do not see how you could favor us with a double ration for the same price. Therefore the question is simple, and it is quite fair we Subscribers wanting a double Publication monthly, should contribute to it by paying instead of Two Shillings and Six Pence, the sum of Five Shillings.

No one, I hope, in Sherbro would not see at once the clearness of my arguments in the matter as also the advantage we shall derive from it if all of the subscribers accept this just increase in price I propose. Therefore leaving to your readers to form their own opinion about it. I beg to answer in advance this question; and with those who are agreed to have double copies every Month and will pay 5s. per Annum for the same?

What is 5s.? it is mere nothing to have a paper twice a month in which every one is free to express himself, to have the exchange of opinions etc., which in every country tends to the advancement of the place in which every one to a certain degree is fairly interested? Kindly circulate a List to all to which those agreeable to my proposal may sign their names; then we shall know who are willing; for my part I must inform you that I shall be too glad to be the first one to sign it, and trust that every one will do the same.

I Remain, Sir, Yours truly,

H. MAILLAT.

IMPRISONED TALENT.

One of the saddest thoughts in connection with the heathen world is the mental force which for want of Christian culture can not assert itself. Even in Africa, whose people are supposed to be less favored with natural endowments than those of other countries, this is true. Latent forces, powers asleep, are there, and which will never be aroused except by the magic touch of Christian culture. This culture must reach the African people through the labors of Christian missionaries. God could use the imprisoned powers in many ways to bless Africa itself. The country must be redeemed, but it can only be done by its own children. The boys and girls are now living by whom the redemption of Africa can be wrought. The white man may be the instrumentality of this blessed work, but will be little more.

A training school for native workers is an absolute necessity. The unhealthy climate so unhangers the health of white missionaries as to require a different method. The work of developing native talent and directing it to Christian effort is one of the most important interests now before the Church. Here is an opportunity for some one with wealth to do a great work and confer a lasting benefit on the people of west Africa. Ten thousand dollars would enable us to commence the work of training natives for the work of regenerating Africa. The imprisoned intellect in this sorely land would, in many instances, be set free, and God would be glorified by talent which otherwise must be utterly worthless.

The Church can take a practical view of this matter, and do it very soon. We have invested thousands of dollars in the Christian culture of Africa, but we must expend many thousands more in order to save that which has been already expended.

We were surprized, to hear of the effect, produced among the inhabitants of our Town, by a letter review in our last issue, signed HARMLESS and as we thought, the name accorded very well with the spirit of the review, for certainly as CRIMO (the writer of the letter reviewed) has remarked to us since, there was nothing libellous in "Harmless" review nor was there anything worthy of the trouble and noise that was afterward made about it. Our candid opinion was then, and is now that an ounce of common sense with half as much prudence, would have cured the whole matter, and all parties would have felt a thousand times better; and we do sincerely hope that our better people will at least allow this bit of sheer folly to teach them a lesson that in future it will be far better to let trifles pass unnoticed than to try to avenge them as in such cases they are sure to get the worst of it.

We learn that the Trial in the Grand Court, in the City of Freetown, of the participants in the Murderous Raid on Mamayah last April, has resulted in the conviction, of three of the parties, two of which are sentenced to be hanged, and one to imprisonment for life. That this is hard, no one will deny, but all must remember that the Sacred Scriptures point out to us, that the way of the transgressor is hard, and also further assure us that he who sheds man's blood, by man shall his blood be shed. We speak thus at this time because of the prevailing leniency of our natures to a false sympathy toward those who though justly convicted for the perpetration of the vilest acts against humanity, we shrink as it were from their proper punishment on the ground of its being too hard, and there is every reason to expect that much of this same false sympathy will be elicited toward the parties now under sentence and that too, by persons whose lives have been often in jeopardy by this same class of desperadoes forgetting altogether the deliberate intentions and planning of these identical parties against the lives of the defenseless and peaceable inhabitants of the village of Mamayah and then too, how without mercy they ruthlessly murdered a poor helpless invalid that could offer no resistance in their diabolical work of plunder and rapine. Much too as we might wish that these parties could be punished in some other way, we must not forget that should a reprieve be granted to any or all of them to-day that they would instantly ascribe the cause to their medicine or charms to which they committed their lives when they Embarked on their bloody mission and they would thus be emboldened to undertake, it might be with more precaution, but greater confidence the same nefarious work, as much as ever to the annoyance of peaceably disposed persons.

HONOURS WHOM HONOUR IS DUE.

We were much surprized to learn from the Artizan one our esteemed Freetown exchanges in its issue of October 14th of the new Public achievements of a Mr. T. A. Palmer, sone Richards of Oxford and Liverpool Street to Freetown who we are told he that Journal and accomplished the only public task of repairing the Rev. John Brown's "" Boiler Now we happened to converse with the whole matter of John Brown Brown's Boiler repairing at this place, for our Office, is hard by the Wharf where we could observe the progress of the work and were conversant with the workmen, who as every one here knows were under the personal supervision of Mr Nathaniel Joshua Stevens, a native we believe, who we understand was in former years in some way under the tuition of the Mendi Mission of this place; but subsequently spent many years in England learning his trade, and has since been a practical Mechanic, for many years in England and on this coast. The other facts as to the accomplishment the work, the trial on the river, and success of the undertaking, were substantially true, and much praise is due not to Mr. Richards but to Mr. Stevens, but for whom the work would not have been accomplished.

"THE HOPE OF SHERBRO'S FUTURE GREATNESS."

To the Editor of the "Early Dawn."

Dear Sir,—We are happy to observe from the Religious Telescope that a lecture bearing the above title delivered by J. A. Cole has been published by the United Brethren Church; we cannot say much on the merits of this lecture, but from the fact that 1000 copies are being sold in America and judging from the opinion of our Church Organ published in Dayton Ohio we believe it a successful and interesting lecture. The Religious Telescope of August 12 says "Our Missionary society has published an address entitled "The Hope of Sherbro's Future Greatness," delivered at Shaingay by J. A. Cole, a native of Western Africa. It makes a neat pamphlet of 24 pages and is dedicated to Bishop D.S. Fluckinger, at the request of Chief T. N. Caulker, as a grateful acknowledgement of his great interest and anxiety for the evangelization and civilization of the Sherbro country." The address, which shows the author to be a man of good intelligence and culture, closes with the clear and forcible utterance: "Christianity, Education, Commerce and Agriculture shall scatter the gloom that now overhangs the Sherbro country, and make all to be free both soul and body" Every true minded African ought to read this lecture which can now be had of Rev. J. A. Evans, Mr. Samuel Tamoh, Bonthe Sherbro Rev. J. Gomer, Shaingay, at one shilling per copy. J. A. C.

"MISSIONARIES & MISSIONS," is the Title of a Pamphlet of Forty Seven Pages written by Capt. Judson A. Lee an U.S.Consul Resident at Sierra Leone for the past 7 years. it is an Excerpt from a partly written Book on Sierra Leone and Surroundings by the above named Author, and gives a Business man's views of the subject treated in a terse, lively, and yet faithful manner. We take pleasure in commending the Work to the reading Public it is neatly got up and published at T. J. Sawyer's Excelsior Printing Works, Freetown Sierra Leone, and may be had for the low price of one shilling.

We have received a Copy of the September issue of "SAWYER'S TRADE CIRCULAR." It is certainly a creditable mark of progressive enterprise in that Prince of West African Stationers, and knowing as we do the value of an advertising Medium can safely predict greater success to Mr. Sawyer's now flourishing House.

To the Editor of the "Early Dawn"

Sir,—The Review on Crimo's letter purporting to be written by "Harmless" which appeared in your last issue, has created a considerable stir in Bonthe.

"Harmless" commention the Overseer of Roads over infelicitous and unnecessary terms, I am told that when the Review was in the eyes of the unfortunate OVERSEER it sent him raving like a Maniac. "Harmless" launched forth on the Public in the character of a Pedagogue displaying the great resources of his matchless literary powers. If "Harmless" had contented himself with simply an attempt to instruct the Public in what he considered to be Grammatical Construction, he would have no doubt been passed over, but when he so far forgot himself as to enter into Public Matter his proverbial modesty in placing his learned powers at the disposal and contempt. The Bonthe appeal to the Overseer of Roads such as "Ignorant Apprentice" by "Harmless" was simply relished to natural the Public, and to lower the respect hitherto entertained for that Officer. It will be obvious to "Harmless" if he will trust on matters that he is fully acquainted with, and which will benefit the Public, than his rashness in attempting to reflect on the doings and conduct of those who are better known than himself.

I am, Sir, Yours truly,
ROUSE.

NEWS ITEMS.

The Acting Commandant Mr. C. H. Harley Moseley & the Colonial Surveyor Mr. R. E. Pownall returned from Sulymah on Thursday the 8th and the latter after a moment's call on us, left for Freetown on Friday the 9th per s.s. Igara.

Capt. F. C. Halkett left this place for the Bargroo on his further tour of Inspection of Police on Saturday 10th Oct. From the Bargroo he proceeded overland via Kongomany, Cockloro, Serebro, & Rotufunk, to Freetown.

Mr. Theophilus W. Williams, formerly a Teacher in this place for the Wesleyan Connexions has recently been employed by the Mendi Sherbro Mission and sent to Avery Station as an Itinerant Worker for the purpose of strengthening the Work of that Station. He left this place for that field on Oct. 1st.

OBITUARY.—We regret to announce the death of Miss Rosaline Macaulay the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. Z. Macaulay of Bonthe Sherbro which took place at Freetown on the 7th Oct., after eight days Illness.

The s.s. Countess of Derby arrived about 9 a.m. on Tuesday Oct. 27th with Capt. Halkett and Dr. Jarrett, the former to relieve the Comdt. Mr. C.H. Harley Moseley who left in the same vessel few hours later with Dr. Renner for Freetown.

Sir,—I have heard from some of those around me, the frequent enquiry made—"What are the reasons that Sherbro produce is not in favor, and will not command the same prices in Europe, as similar produce from other parts of the West Coast of Africa?" in answer, I will endeavour to say briefly the chief reason of the defect, as far as my knowledge has taught me to believe from what I have gathered during my few years experience in Sherbro. But before entering upon such explanation, I would have it impressed on you and your readers, that there is a remedy, and the time has arrived to awake from slumber, to carry out the duties imposed on us; my motto in writing is:—"kill two birds with the same stone." First, to be heard more widely and second in hope that the Merchants Traders, and Natives will have the knowledge to make best their profit of it, whatever they may be whether designate I as exporters or not.—My humble experience has taught me, if I am well advised from Europe, or in position to judge rightly, or not, on the spot imbibing a belief in minuting that the gravest faults lie on all; Merchants, traders, and natives. "It is only necessary to believe that it is optional with traders to purchase or not to purchase Palm-kernels from the natives, when they have too many shells, which is a loosing game. Merchants facilitate such buying by taking such kernels off the traders hands without making the proper discount for quality, the natives meantime seizing an advantageous opportunity, without calculating the injury it does to the Trade by offering shells with kernels for sale; and as such are received, they are not forced to remedy this prevailing evil—another great trouble is, that traders buying kernels with shells, when quite out allow the same to remain purchasely in store for weeks, and even months, without turning them over, to prevent further damage; when landed for the lower Sherbro, the place of delivery, a distance of two or three days, they are often exposed to the rains, and some parties give wilful orders to their gurmettas to apply water to the contents in the canoe or craft, which will produce heat, cause the kernels to swell and thus give rise to fermentation this is done to make a monstrous gain in the weight or measure; Mr. Editor, such is practiced on an extensive scale, in our midst: why do they not apply Tarpaulin to prevent the delivering kernels in bad condition and avoid at the same time their depreciation, in value in European Markets! For the fermentation which is the result of wetting in a great measure depreciates the principal qualities, the oil and starin, contained in the nuts, a cause that merchants at home calculate well before making their offer. It may then be easily understood why better prices are offered for the same produce, well cared for, than for that which has been exposed for months under fermentation. It does not tend alone to lessen the oil but also the starin for which kernels are in demand. These are tangible reasons why kernels from Sherbro barely give from 42 to 45 per cent Oil, when Lagos and other West Coast afford from 50 to 55 per cent, making the considerable difference of about 30s. to 40s. per Ton more offered in Europe over our Sherbro productions in general.

If we refer to Palm Oil, we find that the injurious practices of the natives, whose Chiefs, or Headmen object to the cutting of the Nuts when full, by placing excessive duty laws (called Rotah) which no native dare to break. This law is generally taken off too late ("at their will") when it is impossible for them to obtain (from dry and putrefied nuts) pure and virginal oil, but have to contend with oil, nasty, filthy, and dark in appearance, the quantity diminished and quality unfit to be introduced or classified in European markets except as common and irregular classification this is also due in a measure to the carelessness of many traders, who are not particular, to purchase produce of any description, by quality, especially in this time with regard to Palm Oil affected by water and dirt of all kinds. It would take too much space to explain fully the subject before me fearing to fill up your columns, as I am aware of the many articles you have on hand for publication, perhaps more than you can place in your monthly sheet, I will therefore close with these principal remarks, wishing and expressing my hope to see that Merchants and Traders be active, not blind to their best interest; It would be proper for traders to direct the natives in every possible way, by encouragement and otherwise to do good work for mutual benefit to avoid the evils consequent upon their neglect of duty, and enforcing if possible rigid measures through their influence to do away with all dishonesty, even by refusing to buy such depreciated produce if necessary; hope also that Merchants will assist traders by taking the lead in those operations; meantime advising traders to discontinue the practice of watering kernels against time of delivery and not to allow produce in their possession to become damaged for a fishonest gain.

Sherbro was saved in 1881— 2 by by the strict, measures adopted as regards shells in kernels, which was from 15 to 18 per cent, we have now from 4 to 5 per cent only—1 per cent is about Two Shillings and penny half penny per Ton; what a vast difference,—the difficulty is, yeah watering kernels &c., brings failure in our midst—let us strive to attain to a better position, the interested parties, Merchants, Traders and natives will lose nothing but will gain wealth and prosperity at our command, all lays at our door provided if little more attention be paid to the best interests of our calling. Hope I am not preaching in a desert full of stones, but on a ground rich with intelligence, energy and good will as I think and that I may have no cause to regret the trouble taken, but trust that what has been said will, when it shall have been duly considered, meet the general consent of all concerned in the Business and that all may be mutually aided in the future by it when Sherbro Produce shall bring as good prices in European Markets, as any other. Thanking you Mr. Editor for the kind hospitality of your columns

I am Sir, yours very truly,
H. MAILLAT.

A Parson reading the first line or so of a chapter in the Bible, the clerk by some mistake or other, read it after him. the parson reads as follows—"Moses was an austere man, and made atonement for the sins of his people." The clerk misunderstanding him spoke thus—"Moses was an oyster man" and "made ointment for the chins of his people."

3. A Lady once consulted a doctor, she began to describe her complaint when was what he very much disliked. Among other things she said "Whenever I lift up my arm it pains very dingly." You are a fool for so doing, replied the Doctor. "But you know my usual fee," said he. Two Guineas were instantly laid on the table. He put them in his pocket, and pulling out a six pence put it into her hand "There," said he "go and buy a skipping rope rope for all your illness proceeds from want of exercise."

5. Among the addresses presented to James I., on his accession to the throne, was one from the town of Shrewsbury, in which the loyal inhabitants expressed a wish, that his majesty might reign as long as the sun, moon and stars endured. "Faith, man" said the king, "if I do reign so long, my son must be govern by candle light."

6. "Sam" said one little urchin to another, "does your school master ever give you a reward of merit?" "Yipse he does" was the rejoinder "he gives me a flogging every day, and says I merit too.

MALAY PROVERBS.

The Malays express themselves in neat, pithy sentences, and clinch an argument with a proverb. Some of their proverbs resemble those wise sayings which we use to point a moral, while others are peculiar to themselves.

A Malay enjoins secrecy by saying, "If you have rice, put it away under the unhusked grain."

"What is the use of the peacock strutting in the jungle?" is the Malay equivalent for throwing pearls before swine.

When a Malay wishes to indicate that an offer will not be refused, he asks, "Will the crocodile reject the carcass?" He apprehends the obstinacy of hereditary instincts, for his proverb says: "Though you feed a jungle-fowl out of a gold plate, it will nevertheless make for the jungle."

Those who think human nature may be changed by external influences should muse over this Malay proverb: "You may plant the bitter cucumber in a bed of sago, and manure it with honey, and water it with Molasses, and tend it over sugarcanes, but when it is cooked it will still be bitter."

Those who take trouble for nothing are said "to fight in a dream," and the man who is all things to all men is one who "plants sugarcane on the lips."

"Hand chopping wood while the shoulder bears a load" indicates the man of expedients and enterprise. "Freed from the mouth of the crocodile only to fall in the jaws of the tiger," is the equivalent for our "Out of the frying-pan into the fire." "The creel says the basket is coarsely plaited," is a more delicate expression than our proverb about the pot calling the kettle black.

We say, "It is an ill-wind that blows no one any good;" the Malay says "When the junk is wrecked the shark has his fill."

"The yam remains still and increases bulk; iron lies quiet and wastes away the more;" is a Malay proverb which indicates that similar circumstances will not answer for unlike things.

IS THERE ANY HARM DIRECTLY IN SELLING SPIRITUOUS LIQUORS?

Mr. Editor,—In attempting to solve the above problem, which I do not pretend that I fully understand, as there may be meaning in it which may not be obvious to our perceptions, yet to avoid all prejudicial feelings that may likely arise from the minds of your readers, let me say to you and them that I am a good templar and a staunch abstainer of spirituous liquors, and this I would never have written, but for the multiplicity of articles in your valuable paper against the Liquor Traffic.

To my estimation, whatever can be made for the comforts and enjoyments of others without abuse is not against the laws of nature, nor the principles of morality. Therefore, since it has been proved by the best and most scientific physicians on whom our health depends, that ardent spirits are in some measures medicinal to the human system, neither the Importer, nor the Distiller, nor the retailer, should be blamed But if extremes are errors, and consequently sins, then those who use it to excess, against their consciences, and contrary to the rules of morality, and thus brutalize and vilify themselves are in the wrong. And if because some choose to make themselves vile and reprobate by using ardent spirits, that traffic should be closed and destroyed, according to the tenure of some of your correspondents' articles then for the same reason the Store of all other commodities, as provisions etc, must be closed, merely for the sake of those who choose to eat to excess, either to gratify their appetites or from the pleasantness of the food, and so poison their blood and weaken their constitution, by the indigestible substance. And supposing this be the case throughout, what would follow? "Famine." As it would not be sufficient to prove the problem practically, let us look into the Scripture. We are fully aware that the scripture is neither a fiction, nor a fraud and that this Holy Book is authentic and truthful throughout, not cunningly devised fables, but a document which will bear the severest tests by which it can legitimately be tried. Now in perusing this Book carefully, there is not one verse nay a word, in the whole that goes directly against the traffic. It abounds on the contrary, with numerous cautions and warnings against the abuse of it. Hence "He not filled with wine wherein is excess etc." Noah would have been a murder righteous man, had he taken sufficiently of his wine, and not excessively as to make him drunk, wherein his sin lies. Therefore the traffic is not so bad a trade as some folks think, or make it, though whether good or bad, all depends on how we use it.—Thanking you Mr. Editor, for your valuable space.

Yours,
ZENO.

A CANDLE IN THE POWDER.

A merchant was celebrating the marriage of his daughter. While they were enjoying themselves above, he chanced to go to the basement-hall below, where he met a servant carrying a lighted candle without a candlestick. She passed on to the cellar for wood, and returned quickly without the candle. The merchant suddenly remembered that during the day several barrels of gunpowder had been placed in the cellar, one of which had been opened. Inquiring what she had done with the candle, to his awful amazement her reply was that, being unable to carry it with the fuel, she had set it in a barrel of "black sand" in the cellar

He flew to the spot. A long, red snuff was just ready to fall from the wick into the mass of powder, when, with great presence of mind, placing a hand on each side of the candle, and making his hands meet at top over the wick, he safely removed it from the barrel. At first he smiled at his previous fear, but the reaction was so great that it was weeks ere he recovered from the shock which his nerves sustained in that terrible trial.

There are candles in many a barrel of gunpowder to-day. Many homes have been blown to ruins by them. There is a candle in the cellar of the wine-bibber. It burns brighter with the added fuel of every cup he drains, and ere he is aware, all his hopes for this world and the next will be blown up with a ruin more terrible than any destruction that gunpowder can bring. There is a candle in the cellar of the liquor-dealer, burning slowly but surely. He who is dealing death to others will be startled by sudden blasting of his own peace, when the wrath of God, restrained no longer, shall fall upon him in a moment. "Every way of a man is right in his own eyes, but the Lord pondereth the heart." "He that by usury and unjust gain increaseth his substance shall gather it for him that will pity the poor." The man who is willfully destroying himself may be deluded and see no danger; the man who is destroying others may say, "I do not see it;" but the eyes which ponder both their ways see not only the evil but the sudden "destruction" which is before them if the do not speedily repent and reform. See to it that no righteous anger burns against you. See to it that no burning candle is endangering you in your cellar.—Sel.

Annual Report of Avery Station, M. Mission, for the Year ending November 30 1885.

Mr. President,—This report should have been my third for the year, but from some unavoidable circumstances it comes under the present heading

"MARRIAGE IN HIGH LIFE."

ON Thursday the 10th inst, Bonthe was unusually crowded with every description of people who flocked in from every part of the neighbouring villages to witness the event that was destined to eclipse all others of its kinds ever Bonthe and for which elaborate preparations for been made. It was the marriage of Dr. M. L. Jarrett, Asst. Col. Surgeon, to Miss Julia, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs C. B. Collier of this place.

At 10 30. a. m. (being the hour fixed for the Ceremony) was seen in Otto Street the Bridegroom, accompanied by Mr. Daniel Jarrett and children. Quietly moved on to St. Matthew's Church, whither the marriage was to be solemnized and immediately after was seen a concourse of room, where very soon converted into beaming smiles, at the approach of the gentle bride neatly stormed in her elegant Bridal costume, which with her person, at appearance was up to the mark and gave general satisfaction. At 11. precisely was seen the bride drawn in a chair by her father Mr. C.B. Collier and her uncle Mr. R. T. Collier, accompanied by her bride's maids Missa R. and C. Parkinson, Alice Davies, Betsy York, and Misses Ranso and Jane Collier also Mrs C. B. and R. T. Collier.

The grand procession commenced from their premises, Heddle Street and quietly proceeded to Otto Street then to Victoria Road On reaching the church gate the bridesmaides went before, gorgeously attired and forming a sort of semi-circle just at the entrance of the church which seemed to form a semi-arch for the reception of the bride. She was taken in by her father who held her by the two middle fingers in the most elegant and graceful style, and led her away to the altar.

The bridesmaids followed after, and every one interested was now waiting for the Grand performance of the ceremony. The church on this special occasion was well decorated with palms, evergreens and bouquets. All being arranged, the minister put in his appearance and the ceremony began at once. This over the clergyman did not fail to address the assembly, and with his brief but interesting address he left the adience to disperse. The guests then proceeded with the bride to the residence of her parents, followed amid a throng of people playing their different parts in singing and dancing.

Under a kind of Pavilion or Tent erected on the premises of the bride's parents, decorated with palms, flags, and flowers, producing a grand effect,

The grand procession connected with the premises, Hedde Street and briefly proceeded to Otto Street then to Victoria Road. On reaching the church gate, the bridesmaids went before, gorgeously attired and forming a sort of semi-circle just at the entrance of the church which seemed to form a embrach for the reception of the bride she was taken in by her father who sold her by the two middle fingers to the most elegant and graceful style, and led her away to the altar.

Under a kind of Pavilion or Tent erected on the premises of the bride's parents, decorated with palms, flags, and flowers, producing a grand effect, the table was spread and the waiters, in unique dress [illegible] by Mr. C. A. Kelson M.P., of York Island. Before breakfast was ready, a group photograph of the Bride and Bridegroom, including a portion of their family and friends was taken by S. Albert St. John Esq., who also took another group immediately after the guests were seated at the table, this was done instantaneously. The health of the Bride and Bridegroom was proposed by the Chairman, who in a neat speech expressed his congratulations to the new pair for the happy sight they were permitted to witness. The Bridegroom responded to the proposed health, and thanked the Ladies and Gentlemen who honored him with their presence. The health of the Ladies and Gentlemen was proposed by Mr. R. T. Collier and respond to by Mr S. Albert St. John who in his usual style interested the audience.

After several Gentlemen had spoken briefly the benediction brought the affair to a close. Among those who honored the occasion with their presence, we noticed some distinguished Ladies and Gentlemen viz:

Happy NEW YEAR to All.

VISIT TO ROTUFUNK.

We left this place on Dec. 8th in a very small boat at 11½ o'clock, with head winds and tides, but reached Shaingay in 38 hours and 45 minutes. Saw many friends from the various parts of the Shaingay and Sherbro Districts—Teachers and Preachers en route for the Bompeh District, after spending the night at Shaingay we left in a fleet of three larger Boats at 4½ a. m., 9th inst. one of them the famous Olive Branch perhaps one of the swiftest sailing crafts afloat: we reached the Town of Bompeh at 3½ p. m. where we had to await the tide for 2½ hours which time we spent in visiting. Chief R C. B. Caulker was away to a neighbouring town. We had a view of Teachers house and Barra furnished by the people of the town for Mission Purposes, but the finest sight was the Children's Home kept and supported by Mr. H. T. Coker, a planter of that place here we found an interesting group of 19 Children under training all so neat and clean, their kindly host, their dignified matron all conspired to make up a Picture that can better be imagined than described,—especially when you think of these little ones all singing beautiful hymns as they did for our party on that day. Another interesting feature of Bompeh is Mr. Cokers plantation of cocoa Colar, Coffee, Arrowroot, and ginger, with many other edibles growing beautifully, he has also found a means of keeping off the various beasts that often destroy a large share of the crops, in the country, he has for this purpose several trained dogs which he says will drive away all the Monkies and other such enemies of the crops. Leaving Bompeh about 6 p. m. we reached Rotufunk our destination at 9½ p. m. where we were hospitably received by Revd R. N. West, Supt. of the Bompeh Mission, who with his estimable wife spared no no pains to make us feel at home. On Friday, we were engaged in Teachers Examination, 16 persons entered for examination as Teachers, and made indeed an interesting class. We regret that the result of the Examination has not yet been ascertained but it will doubtless be creditable to all. As one of those interested in a higher standard of Teachers, we were glad to hear from the Gen'l Supt. of Sherbro Mendi Missions, that after the year 1886 no teacher will be given full pay that does not receive a certificate, and may not be employed at all except by permission. The Teachers institute continued its work in the evening and carried out in part the Programme, but with less time given to each exercise, however, the Meeting was interesting, and we believe profitable to all. Saturday was spent in Three Sessions of Conference and the entire work was disposed of in a very pleasant and we believe profitable manner.

On Sabbath the Services were all well attended. The Love Feast at 6 30 a.m. was truly a happy season. Bishop Flickinger's discourse at 11 a. m. was listened to by all with great attention, the Ordination of Bro. J. C. Sawyer was a solemn service, the baptism of 11 adults (and infants then followed: after which 46 communed. In the evening the writer preached to an appreciative audience, which closed a blessed day of worship. At half past 1 o'clock on Monday morning, we left Rotufunk passed the night at Shaingay and reached here (Bonthe) on Tuesday the 15th. inst. at 3. p. m.

THE SHERBRO MISSION CONFERENCE—Closed its seventh Annual Session on Saturday the 12th inst. In many respect it differed from former Sessions and that too for the better one, and perhaps the chief difference in the eyes of a great many, was that of a Bishop to preside; which added in popular estimation very materially, to the dignity of the body; for it seemed that there was very much difference in name—i. e. between the name of Secretary and Bishop—it seemed that there was a prevailing sense of much higher esteem for Dr. Flickinger, as Bishop than we had noticed for him, as Secretary, whether this was only imaginary on our part, or the mere out-growth of the Doctor's many repeated visits filling or convincing the minds of every one, of his great love for this dark land, and its perishing people, I cannot tell, but really there seemed a greater veneration for our Bishop. Another difference was the early arrival of the members. All were on the ground in time for the Educational Meeting, a day before the Conference. The promptness of coming together at the appointed hours, was noticeable every one was in his place, no waiting on this or that one to arrive, unless on special leave, I should also have said a larger percentage of the members (available) were present than usual. No one I believe was absent on account of sickness during the Conference Session. Every report was ready when called for, no one asked to be excused or for more time, we had abundance of time for every thing. It is almost needless to say after what has been stated, that business was done with great dispatch The Holy Spirit was doubtless present with us and great harmony prevailed, with much earnestness and devotion. The Sabbath following was just what one could have expected—After such a harmonious business meeting.—A Feast of Holy Love, akin to that above, a foretaste indeed of Heaven.

COMMUNICATIONS.

WE feel obliged to say a few words again on this subject, in which we wish to speak as we most assuredly feel very kindly toward each of those, who of late, and in fact for some months past, have favored us with contributions. But we have been pained to note at times a dangerous tendency toward the use of high sounding words crowded, in many cases, into meaningless phrases for which we could see no excuse. But more lamentable than this has been the tendency to controversy, which in many cases is very personal, and so far as our humble judgment goes, of no profit to the general public or in fact to any one beyond a few individuals. We believe the best Journals of the day allow no such controversy, and we do hope that while our colums are open to any one to express their opinions on any suitable subject (which must be left in a measure at least to our discretion) that no one hereafter will venture to urge upon us the importance of publishing a list of all the high soundings words and phrases that he can conveniently think of, or just what his opinion is of his neighbour, unless he has something very good to say. Again, articles to insure insertion, must be short half column is preferable; but of course, we have no objection to a full column if it be good and interesting. Now, let us hear from you all along the line in short, Instructive Articles.

DISAPPOINTED AGAIN.—By some means our Type order was made up, from an American Catalogue and although the general terms were fairly plain yet our European Agents did not feel sure in filling this Order hence defered the execution untill further advice and Instructions from us This added to the many former disappointments, weighs rather heavy on us but we are determined (D. A MERRY XMAS

AND A

Happy NEW YEAR to All.

VISIT TO ROTUFUNK.

We left this place on Dec. 8th in a very small boat at 11½ o'clock, with head winds and tides, but reached Shaingay in 3 hours and 45 minutes. Saw many friends from the various parts of the Shaingay and Sherbro Districts—Teachers and Preachers en route for the Bompeh District, after spending the night at Shaingay we left in a fleet of three larger Boats at 4½ a. m., 9th inst. one of them the famous Olive Branch perhaps one of the swiftest sailing crafts afloat: we reached the Town of Bompeh at 3½ p. m. where we had to await the tide for 2½ hours which time we spent in visiting. Chief R C. B. Caulker was away to a neighbouring town. We had a view of Teachers house and Barra furnished by the people of the town for Mission Purposes, but the finest sight was the Children's Home kept and supported by Mr. H. T. Coker, a planter of that place, here we found an interesting group of 20 children under training all so neat and clean, their kindly host, their dignified matron all conspired to make up a Picture that can better be imagined than described,—especially when you think of these little ones all singing beautiful hymns as they did for our party on that day. Another interesting feature of Bompeh is Mr. Cokers plantation of cocoa Colar, Coffee, Arrowroot, and ginger, with many other edibles growing beautifully, he has also found a means of keeping off the various beasts that often destroy a large share of the crops, in the country, he has for this purpose several trained dogs which he says will drive away all the Monkies and other such enemies of the crops. Leaving Bompeh about 6 p. m. we reached Rotufunk our destination at 9½ p. m. where we were hospitably received by Revd R. N. West, Supt. of the Bompeh Mission, who with his estimable wife spared no no pains to make us feel at home. On Friday, we were engaged in Teachers Examination, 16 persons entered for examination as Teachers, and made indeed an interesting class. We regret that the resul: of the Examination has not yet been ascertained but it will doubtless be creditable to all. As one of those interested in a higher standard of Teachers, we were glad to hear from the Gen'l Supt. of Sherbro Mendi Missions, that after the year 1886 no teacher will be given full pay, that does not receive a certificate, and may not be employed at all except by permission. The Teachers institute continued its work in the evening and carried out in part the Programme, but with less time given to each exercise, however, the Meeting was interesting, and we believe profitable to all. Saturday was spent in Three Sessions of Conference and the entire work was disposed of in a very pleasant and we believe profitable manner.

On Sabbath the Services were all well attended. The Love Feast at 6 30 a.m. was truly a happy season. Bishop Flickinger's discourse at 11 a. m. was listened to by all with great attention, the Ordination of Bro. J. C. Sawyer was a solemn service, the baptism of 11 adults and infants then followed: after which 45 communed. In the evening the writer preached to an appreciative audience, which closed a blessed day of worship. At half past 10 o'clock on Monday morning, we left Rotufunk passed the night at Shaingay and reached here (Bonthe) on Tuesday the 15th. inst. at 3. p. m.

THE SHERBRO MISSION CONFERENCE—Closed its seventh Annual Session on Saturday the 12th inst. In many respect it differed from former Sessions and that too for the better one, and perhaps the chief difference in the eyes of a great many, was that of a Bishop to preside; which added in popular estimation very materially, to the dignity of the body; for it seemed that there was very much difference in name—i. e. between the name of Secretary and Bishop—it seemed that there was a prevailing sense of much higher esteem for Dr. Flickinger, as Bishop than we had noticed for him, as Secretary, whether this was only imaginary on our part, or the mere out-growth of the Doctor's many repeated visits filling or convincing the minds of every one, of his great love for this dark land, and its perishing people, I cannot tell, but really there seemed a greater veneration for our Bishop. Another difference was the early arrival of the members. All were on the ground in time for the Educational Meeting, a day before the Conference. The promptness of coming together at the appointed hours, was noticeable every one was in his place, no waiting on this or that one to arrive, unless on special leave, I should also have said a larger percentage of the members (available) were present than usual. No one I believe was absent on account of sickness during the Conference Session. Every report was ready when called for, no one asked to be excused or for more time, we had abundance of time for every thing. It is almost needless to say after what has been stated, that business was done with great dispatch The Holy Spirit was doubtless present with us and great harmony prevailed, with much earnestness and devotion. The Sabbath following was just what one could have expected—After such a harmonious business meeting.—A Feast of Holy Love, akin to that above, a foretaste indeed of Heaven.

COMMUNICATIONS.

WE feel obliged to say a few words again on this subject, in which we wish to speak as we most assuredly feel very kindly toward each of those, who of late, and in fact for some months past, have favored us with contributions. But we have been pained to note at times a dangerous tendency toward the use of high sounding words crowded, in many cases, into meaningless phrases for which we could see no excuse. But more lamentable than this has been the tendency to controversy, which in many cases is very personal, and so far as our humble judgment goes, of no profit to the general public or in fact to any one beyond a few individuals. We believe the best Journals of the day allow no such controversy, and we do hope that while our colums are open to any one to express their opinions on any suitable subject (which must be left in a measure at least to our discretion) that no one hereafter will venture to urge upon us the importance of publishing a list of all the high soundings words and phrases that he can conveniently think of, or just what his opinion is of his neighbour, unless he has something very good to say. Again, articles to insure insertion, must be short half column is preferable; but of course, we have no objection to a full column if it be good and interesting. Now, let us hear from you all along the line in short, Instructive Articles.

DISAPPOINTED AGAIN.—By some means our Type order was made up, from an American Catalogue and although the general terms were fairly plain yet our European Agents did not feel sure in filling the Order hence defered the execution untill further advice and Instructions from us This added to the many former disappointments, weighs rather heavy on us but we are determined (D. V.) to succeed.

NEWS ITEMS.

Rev. R. N. West and wife, of Bompeh Mission are expecting shortly to return to America, by invitation of their Home Committee, who feel feel anxious for their health, and think they should have a change; and we believe they well deserve it, as they have now been out for several years, and have indeed endured much privation, and been exposed to great danger from war and disease; it is however a trial for them to leave now as their work is in such a prosperous condition at present.

Bishop Flickinger sailed for England on the 23rd inst. he will spend some time in London. and proceed to Germany sometime in April next (1886) to preside over our German Conference, or Annual District Meeting.

Rev. J. Gomer is to have the General supervision, of the Bompeh Mission, during the absence of Rev. R. N. West the Superintendent. It is however understood, that he cannot visit the field very often.

It is reported that a murder has been lately committed near Manoh Bargroo.

Mr Timothy Pratt Police Constable stationed at Mosam is reported to have been drowned with another young man native of Waterloo, Sierra Leone, in the Tucker River about 12th or 13th inst.; bodies not yet recovered.

The Wesleyan connection of this place celebrated their Annual Sunday School Anniversary on the 20th and 21st instants. We were present on Sabbath and heard the Address which was delivered in a very eloquent manner by Mr. S. Albert St. John. We regret however to note that some of the speeches on Monday evening are reported not to have been so able as that of the Sabbath—see report in another column.

The York Island Church we believe gives as an Entertainment on 1st of January Under the Distinguished Patronage of Mr. T. J. Alldridge—Mr. G A. Metzger is the Manager.

It is reported that the members of the Band of Hope Temperance society will be having their 2nd Annual Musical Entertainment at the Court Hall on Friday the 1st. January 1886 under the kind and distinguished Patronage of William Hughes Esq., Deputy Coroner of Sherbro &c &c.

The Mendi Mission School will D.V. give an exhibition at their School room in Victoria Road, Bonthe, Jan. 8th 1886.

S. S. Start Point from Glassgow consigned to Randall & Fisher, arrived in this port on the 26th. We understand that she had a rough passage out.

The s. s. Benito Capt. J. Evans, of the African Steam Navigation Co., left Liverpool about the 20th ult. arrived here on the the 27th inst and we understand is the first ship of the kind that has, up to date come inside of the Keileh Bar and the sight was really novel to the oldest residents.

REVD. M'DOWEL FOX.—An Evangelist of the church of England gave us a a call while in this place in the early part of the month. Mr. Fox is a Europeon Minister and we understaud after his return from the Coast will hold special services in this place.

Mr. A. O. Walker Inspector of Roads has returned from his tour to the Country we believe, he is pushing work in his Department.

The Revd. G. G. M. Nicol with his assistants seem to be pushing forward their arrangements for Sunday and Day School Entertainments.

Capt. J. Evans, s. s. Benito, gave us a call this morning (30th inst.) He is a pleasant gentleman, neat in appearance and cordial in his manner. We were pleased to learn from him that he expects very nearly a full cargo.

We very much regret the delay of this issue and also that much important matter is crowded out.

Yambah Cograh whose dream or visit we gave in our last Issue, is dead he died on the 27th of Nov. a few days before we published his statement; he lived however long enough to accompany one our Itinerants on the Avery charge for a while testifying to his conversion and pursuading others to seek for pardon and forgiveness of their sins.

Chiefs R. C. B Caulker and Sourrie Cassabie were present at several sessions of the Sherbro Mission Annual District Meeting.

BOMPEH ITEMS.

Mr. H. T. Coker has a fine plantation consisting of several acres, well set in Coffee, Cocoa, and Colah trees, all except the latter in full bearing; he has also many other crops as Arrowroot, Ginger &c. growing nicely.

Bompeh town has a fine Mim. school with daily attendance of 96 pupils. The people of the town and especially Mr H. T. Coker are largely supporting the school.

Although the old Chief town of Bompeh is being rebuilt and enjoying Sabbath and Sanctuary privileges yet the present Chief R. C. B. Caulker is residing at Bantasimah.

Rotofunk at the head of Navigation on the north Branch of the Bompeh is the seat of a great war against the Yoloney people and has a walled enclosure in the scar of the old town which is dwindling away without and and building up within the wall as a new town, which is dens ly crowded.

The Frst U. B. C. Church of Rotufunk was organised lately in that place others will likely follow fellow'st Pali, Marmoo and Bompeh.

Miscellany.

The Increase of Wealth.

Concluded from the first page.

1774 the average was £136 per head. In 1882 the population was 35,000,000, while the total property of England and Wales amounted to £8,720,000,000, or £249 per capita. The same writer points out that this increase of wealth has been real, and large in excess of the rise in prices which accompanied it. He also claims that the distribution of wealth is becoming more general as it increases. Judging, for insance, by the number of carriages, there relatively three times more wealthy people today th n fifty years ago. In 1840 only three per cent of the population had deposits in the saving-banks; in 1882, eleven per cent were depositors in those institutions. Henry George, a well known American writer, has been trying to prove that poverty increases with the advance in civilization, due to the monopolizing and enchantment of the value of land; but these figures, and the improveb condition of the mass of our population as well as those of Europe, show that he must be mistaken. Still, the problem of poblems is, how to increase the material prasyerity of the great mass of mankind. All who love their race look forward to the time when extreme poverty will be unknown, and every man and woman will be decently clad, have comfortable homes, plenty of food, and a chance to gratify higher wants than those which appertain to our mortal body.

ANOTHER L.—If you could enter in a certain gentleman's Room, as you did few days ago, no need of your going the kicking to give us your value.

Two Sick Fowls.—I was glad and did laugh on the two occasions. You are indeed very rude, and you merit too—well what you have called for.

FROM MANOH BARGROO.

If you want a favour of a married woman, brag of her baby. If you want to obtain her eternal quality, let her turn round and catch you making mouth at it.

It is said that there are two greatful periods in the life of a woman, one, when she wonders whom she will have, and the other when she wonders who will have her.

A fellow who wrote a wretched hand, had made almost as bad a first at spelling and grammar.—gave as an excuse for the deficiencies of his education that "He never went to school but one afternoon and then the master's was n't there."

I have lost my appetite "says A. B to J. W. I hope says the latter—"no poor man has found it, for it will ruin him in a week.

GOMBOO—How now Old Fellow, Is the Fire still blazing? If so, I shall see that it be put out. Only a few lines on the last sheet you became a Raving Maniac in Bonthe. Go down man, and spend your New Year with Bert when he is going, he'll protect you from the Wild Dogs.

How should we with what exactness we ought to search and examine ourselves in order to acquire this important self science which alone suits us to exercise. We are to be more studied of a small [illegible] another character than at a greater rate. The Saviour in Matt. 7. 3-5 speaks with just severity. Self knowledge is the foundation of all practice which is good, what we are, and do, and ought to be, in order to live comfortably here and be happy life to come. Some rejoice when faults find them out, and seem to call the attention of the world; and because their sins are covered, they clothe themselves with the garb of hypocrisy as if righteous. A due consideration of this fact was no doubt that which led sweet Singer of Israel to exclaim in the words of aspiration "Blessed is he whose iniquity is forgiven and whose sin is covered." If men would make it their [illegible] to study every day to cultivate self science, how soon should we see happy alteration in the manners and lives of men. But the misery is, men will not think, will not employ their thoughts in the earnest about things which most of all deserve and demand them. Self knowledge consists principally in the knowledge of ends which to attained by particular application to their various powers; for a man [illegible] is properly himself. Other knowledge is very apt to make a man vain but [illegible] humble." To know ourselves

KNOW THYSELF.

Mr. Editor,—In attempting to write on this subject I really feel my inability to do so and therefore ask your indulgence in accepting my apology for the partiality that is done to it, for the more I think of it the more important and extensive it appears.

Thales the Milesian is said to be the first author of it, who used to say that for a man to know himself is the hardest thing in the world. In the revelation which God has given us it is said "The heart is deceitful above all things and desperately wicked" and by this revelation we may behold ourselves as in a glass and know what manner of persons we are. Our Saviour upbraids his disciples for their self ignorance in not knowing what manner of spirits they were of. And the venerable apostle said "If a man thinketh himself to be something when he is nothing he deceiveth himself," and this is often done through self ignorance. This then shows us with what exactness we are to search and examine ourselves in order to acquire this important self science which it often calls us to exercise. We are apt to be more offended at a small blemish in another's character than at a greater in our own. The Saviour in Matt. 7. 3. 5 spoke on this with just severity. Self knowledge is that acquaintance with ourselves which shows us what we are, and do, and ought to be; so as to live comfortably here and be happy in life to come. Some rejoice when others faults find them out, and seem to call the attention of the world, and because their own sins are covered, they clothe themselves with the garb of hypocrisy and appear righteous. A due consideration of this fact was no doubt that which led the sweet Singer of Israel to exclaim in the words of inspiration "Blessed is the man whose iniquity is forgiven and whose sin is covered." If men would make it their chief business to study every day to cultivate this self science, how soon should we find a happy alteration in the manners and spirits of men. But the misery is, men will not think, will not employ their thoughts in good earnest about things which most of all deserve and demand them. Self knowledge consists principally in the knowledge of our souls which is attained by particular attention to their various powers, for a man's soul is properly himself. Other knowledge is very apt to make a man vain but this keeps him humble. To know ourselves is to know and seriously consider what sort of creatures we are and what we shall be if for want of this knowledge that men are vain of what they have, for the more true knowledge a man hath the more sensible he is of the want of it. The heathens were very sensible of the failings of human nature and imagined that every man carries a wallet or two bags with him; the one hanging before him, and the other behind him, into that before he puts the faults of others, into that behind his own by which means he never sees his own failings, whilst he has those of others always before his eyes. But self knowledge helps to turn the wallet and places that which has our own faults always before our eyes and that which has those of others behind our backs. Would we know ourselves we must be watchful over our hearts and lives. We must keep a vigilant eye upon our hearts in compliance with what Solomon says "Keep thy heart with all diligence" and whatever we neglect or omit, we should be sure we mind our heart.

After a deep contemplation on the subject what serious thoughts presented themselves, and after all I concluded that it is a most difficult science.

Every Christian should try to know himself. Self knowledge if despised will be the best preparation for death, and that which makes death so terrible is its uncertainty as to what shall become of the soul after death, were this uncertainty to be removed a thousand things would reconcile us to the thoughts of dying.

Horrors and darkness of a future state, is that which makes mankind to dread their fate.

Dying is nothing but to this we flee,
To be we know not what, we know not where.

Oh let us then be watchful and prayerful that the almighty may keep us from self deception and enable us always to know ourselves.

To the Editor of the Early Dawn.

Sir,—As was placarded in the streets, I was permitted to witness the celebration of the Anniversary of the Wesleyan Sunday School of this place.

On Sunday the 20th, the Rev. J. C. Thomas preached two elaborate sermons and in the afternoon Mr. S. A. Williams gave an excellent Address to St. John gave an excellent Address to the Parents &c. Sir, it was an address fraught with no ordinary labour and full of advice to the young as to the old. In his address, he carried away the minds of the audience with the pathetic style in which he delivered it, for when he made reference to the youths in the ragged and Educated schools, how did my heart bleed where I sat; how did tears fill my eyes to overflowing as with suitable words, he compared their state with that of the youths present. On Monday the 21st a Public Meeting was held in which several young men spoke well on the advantages and disadvantages of Sabbath school although as I believe that this, for a few at least is their maiden speech. I particularly took notice of a speaker calling the Sabbath school the Vestry of Bible Teachings; how sublime is this phrase! Among those I noticed on the platform, besides the Chairman, were the Acting Civil Commandant, Rev. J C Thomas, Messrs J. Macauley, C. B. Collier, J. B. Parkinson, S. A. St. John, J. A. Williams, Superintendent of the School, who was supported by dr. D. M. Pinshon. Thorpe his Assistant &c. &c.

The Songs were pretty and choice and the scholars sang with alacrity and delight. The Meeting closed at 9 p. m.

To Mr. D. M. Pinshon Thorpe, the Asst. Supt., is due the praise for the success which has attended them. Since the arrival of this gentleman in our midst, he has taken great interest in the Society here, especially the Sunday School in which he has been most energetic and laborious. If more of the other youngmen from Sierra Leone would imitate Mr. Thorpe's example in this way, the Society would be more prosperous and the country more enlightened. I have also caught a rumour that they are going to have a Pic-Nic in short, I wish them success. Thanking you for the space allowed me.

I am, yours truly,
Amicus.

IF WRONGS COULD SPEAK.

We find the following live[illegible] article, under the above heading, in an exchange, but without any intimation of its source.

It stolen money, like laying hens, could cackle, what a racket there would be in some men's pockets and premises. If stolen goods, like Chanticleer, could only crow how many persons would be 'broken of their rest and kept awake by night. If the hire of labourers kept back by fraud could talk, like Balaam's beast, what braying would din some employers' ears, if the wrongs of the widow and the orphan could speak, how many must just once would be continually troubled by the ringing of voices in their ears, saying "Give us our rights." If some lordly mansions, reared by ill-gotten gain, could utter late, many a stone would cry out of the wall, and many a brick and beam from the timber would answer it: "Woe to him that [illegible]eth wicked gain for his house, that he may establish his nest on high." If all things unfairly obtained and wrongly detained could be set free and remanded to their rightful owners, what a wonderful "exodus" would there be from house to house, from person to person, from purse to purse, from capital to labor, from labor to capital. If some individual, going from house to house, could enter the parlours and chambers, plain and splendidly, whose furniture was bought with other men's money, and could set the several articles in motion, each in the direction of its rightful owner, what a movement there would be among the mirrors; what a rattling of silver-plate, knives, forks, and spoons; what a hustling of chairs and tipping of tables; and would not many a bed take up itself and walk!"

If evil spirits at the present day could enter into the various forms of property obtained by fraud, some things besides swine would rush into the sea! Many a fair, fancied horse—in the carriage or under the saddle—would make its way rapidly down "the steep," and choke, rider and all, in the depth. "As the patridge sitteth on eggs and hatcheth them not, so he that getteth riches, and not by right, shall leave them in the midst of his days, and at his end shall be a fool." It is a great thing to have a conscience void of offence toward God and man; a great thing to be able to say, "I have wronged [illegible] one, oppressed no one, defrauded no one."

HOW SOULS ARE SAVED.

A dying [illegible]ardian's wife, in England, recently gave the following encouraging testimony, as narrated by the evangelist who visited her. He says: "I was asked to go to a public house in Nottingham and see the landlord's wife who was dying. I found her in a fearful state as her Saviour. I asked her how she found the Lord. 'Reading that,' replied, handing me a torn piece of newspaper containing an extract from one of Spurgeon's sermons, which extract had been the means of her conversion. 'Where did you get this newspaper from?' I asked. She answered, 'It was wrapped round a pound of which was sent me from Australia.' Think about the hidden life of a good seed! The piece of that—a sermon preached in London, conveyed to Nottingham, an extract out of the newspaper that [illegible]ed it, sent across Australia, part torn off for a parcel dispatched to England, and after all its wanderings, reviving the message of salvation to that woman's soul. God's word shall not return to him void."

GENERAL GRANT ON SMOKING.

BY THE REV. S. H. LEE.

In November, 1880, about ten days after the Presidential election, I was sitting in the office of a banker in Wall Street when General Grant came in. After an introduction, being then a resident of Ohio, I remarked: "I have read your speeches lately out in our state, with very great pleasure, General."

"It didn't take you long to read them," was the instantaneous, truthful, and humorous reply. Conversation on the political situation continued a few moments, in which I was impressed with his fullness of knowledge, and the felicity and force of his speech. Meanwhile the banker was pulling out one drawer after another of his desk, and reaching the lowest, waved his hand deprecatingly toward an empty cigar box. "What do you want?" said the General; and handing out a cigar "Here if you smoke one of my cigars you will know that you have had a smoke."

A few words were facetiously said about the quality of his cigars, and the number which he was accustomed to use, when he made a deferential remark to me, as a clergyman, and the only one present not smoking, whereupon I said

"General Grant, I would like to ask you a question."

"Certainly. I should be glad to have you."

"Did you tell the Girard College boys, the other day, as the papers reported, that you were glad that they were forbidden to smoke, because, it they did not smoke now, they would be less likely to do so in later years?"

"Did the papers say I said that?"

"Yes."

"Well, then, I said it!" Then, after a brief pause as if trying to recall the circumstance: "At any rate that is what I think. If I could have my way, I would let nobody smoke under twenty one years of age. It is much more injurious to boys than to adults. Whatever it may do to men it is certainly bad for the young." Then, as if the questionable side of the practice were still before his mind, he went on: "The newspapers are responsible for my smoking."

"How is that? Do they charge you with smoking more than you do?"

"Yes; but that is not what I mean. I mean that it is because of what they did that I am a smoker. Before the War I used to smoke very rarely; once in six months, perhaps, I would smoke a pipe; but I had no taste for smoking no habit, and was not a smoker. When I went into the army, at times of leisure I smoked more; but not much at first. In those days the papers did not think much of me. I did not pay much attention to their men in the army. I did not have them at my mess. They used to speak of me as inaccessible. They called me, you know, 'the man on horse back,' 'the silent man,' 'the man with a cigar in his mouth,' and when Fort Donelson was taken they got me into trouble. To be sure, I was promoted; I was made a Major-General right off; but the papers were down on me, and on account of what they said I was put under arrest, and my command taken away from me for a week. However, the people up North were so glad to have twelve or fifteen thousand rebels to feed that they said: 'If that man has a cigar in his mouth, he ought to have a good one;' and they began to send me first-class cigars; and from that time there was always a box of the best cigars of the United States on the table in my tent, open, and free to everybody; and I never bought any more cigars from that time until I came East. Of course such nice cigars were a temptation; every body else enjoyed them, I had continual opportunity, and I began to smoke as never before. That is what I mean when I say the newspapers are responsible for my being a smoker."

"Well General, one question more, if you please."

"Certainly."

"Did you ever suffer any inconvenience from the practice?"

"Not that I know of. I can not say what injurious effects it may yet produce; but I have never felt any. Yet I often wish I was not a smoker. Especially when I go to supper sit down at six, and stay till midnight, and there are ladies present, or for some other reason I do not feel at liberty to smoke. That is just the time I most want to smoke, and, if I cannot, I wish I was not a smoker."

A few more words, and I withdrew, impressed, in a conversation of which a small part is given, with the clearness of his vision, his rare command of language—always saying just exactly what he meant—his simplicity, genuineness, and unostentatious greatness. Would that the boys who admire him might heed his counsels to them! Subsequent events furnish adults: "I cannot say what injurious effects it may yet produce; but I have never yet felt any." In matters of health, feelings are not more authoritative than in religious experience.—Sel.

FROM POSTORIA, OHIO, (U. S. A.)

Dear Brother Hott:—We had a delightful time here yesterday. It was the Sabbath, and we had with us Rev. D. K. Wilberforce, who occupied my pulpit morning and evening, having lectured before the students of the academy Saturday evening. At the morning hour he preached a good sermon on "The Certain Harvest of God's Word," and in the evening delivered a grand lecture on "The Manners and Customs of the African" to very large congregations. He is a very pleasant and entertaining speaker. He made United Brethren rejoice because we have such an able colored missionary and because of the hope such laborers as he inspires for the future of of our missionary work and Christianity in Africa. Every body was delighted, and many were the words appreciative of his ability and efforts. Many of our congregations would do well to write to him at Cleveland and invite him to come and spend the Sabbath with them and then take up a collection that would pay his expenses and a little more. He is now twenty nine years old, and we here all hope he may live to be seventy five, to work for the salvation of Africa.—R. Rock.—In Religious Telescope.

such, ... say, has been our p... ...ocess, that we at the urgent request of numerous friends, venture on the publication of the third volume in Semi-Monthly Issues, which if materially supported, as, we hope it will be, will continue to be published and we believe we can make it interesting and profitable to our readers and the general public. Of course, many subscriptions have expired and have renewed by promise to pay but the advance must be made before their papers will be sent or delivered to them, so we shall expect prompt renewals with Cash or Produce at Market value at our office. The rates of Subscription (hereafter strictly in advance) will be 6s. per Annum by Mail, and 5s. delivered in Bonthe or from this office. Those whose paid subscriptions has not yet expired will receive the number of papers due them, and we shall be thankful for their renewals at any time they see fit to renew, and will make all proper allowance for present credit in their favour.

The Lesher School at Senehoo which we have had occasion to mention several times in former issues is progressing very nicely, and Rev. J. W. Pratt who was, and is still in charge of the Tassoh Mission of which Senehoo is one appointment reported 18 Day School Pupils, also an interesting night school and Sunday School, and as one of the Patrons of Lesher School says, he feels much encouraged to continue the work and expressed himself under many and great obligations to Rev. J. Gomer for having secured such a devoted Lady as Mrs Thompson for teacher in the School which has had much to do in making the undertaking a success. And we may perhaps venture to add that as this School has no permanent support but depends entirely on the voluntary subscriptions of a few friends that any one wishing to aid in this good enterprise may remit the am't. to Rev. J. Gomer or Rev. J. W. Pratt, Shaingay. Any contribution left at this office will be forwarded by us at any time and a due acknowledgement made of same.

SHERBRO MISSION CONFERENCE.

...rning Session.

...amed body met in its 7th ...al Session at 8. 30 a. m. Saturday Dec. 12th 1885 at Rotofunk Station Bompeh mission. Bishop Flickinger presiding. Devotional exercises were called and there were present J. Gomer, J. A. Evans, R. N. West, C. A. E. Campbell, J. C. Sawyer, J. B. W. Johnson, H. J. Williams, J. W. Pratt, F. M. Stewart, R. C. Taylor, J. A. King.

Absent D. F. Wilberforce, J. M. Lesher, W. S. Sage, H. J. Weeks, Thos. Tucker.

The Bar of the House was fixed, Bros. S. B. Morrison, R. P. Luke, J. W. Baker, T. A. Thompann, J. B. Goodman, Harry T. Yarn, A. R. B. Kirkie, J. H. King, T. N. Joah, H. T. Coker, Samuel Tamoh, C. T. Grey, J. H. Parkes, T. W. Williams, were admitted to Conference seats. The Chairman then called for reports of presiding Elders and J. A. Evans reported Mendi District, J. Gomer Shaingay District, and R. N. West Bompeh District, [these reports with all others will be published with Pamphlet form of minutes at the Early Dawn office.] Reports were addpted and character of Presiding Elders passed. Next came the examition of Preachers (their reports having been entered on the chart)those present gave a verbal statement of their work and were all passed, (present and absent) except H. J. Weeks who was suspended for one year for gross immorality, and Sec. directed to inform him of the action of Conference. Bro. Thos. Tucker's name being called an appropriate paper was read to the conference by H. J. Williams and very touching remarks were made by the Bishop, Gomer, Evans, and others. On motion the Confrce. adjourned at 10. 30 a. m. with prayer by J B. W. Johnson.

Afternoon Session.

Conference met again at 11. 30 p. m. with singing and prayer by F.M. Stewart. Bro. J. C. Sawyer. candidate for ordination was asked to withdraw while disciplinary enquiry was made into his moral character which resulting favorably he was recommended to Committee for further Examination. Standing Committees as follo ws reported [see reports in Pamphlet] Sabbath schools by J. Gomer, able remarks on same were made by Gomer and Evans. On missions by J. W. Pratt who also made some soul stirring remarks on the report embellished by some timely expressions by Evans: Publishing Interests by J. A. Evans supplemented by J. Gomer with remarks by the Bishop. Day schools by R. N. West, Resolution by J. C. Sawyer and others. After which S. B. Morrison and C. T. Grey were heard on their call to the Ministry, and after the usual questions had been favorably answered, were referred to Committee on applicants for license to preach

The Committee on first year's course of reading reported [see Pamphlet] Chairman announced Committees on Ordination J. A. Evans, and R. N. West. On Applicants J. Gomer and J. B. W. Johnson. J. A. Evans and J. Gomer and N. West were chosen P. E's. Chiefs R. C. B. Caulker and Sourie Cassabeh were present at this session especially the former who came early; they wereboth introduced to the Conference and seated within the Bar.

The Conference adjourned about 2. 30 p. m. with prayer by T. W. Williams in the s.s. Legos, and I was to have left on the 24th for Shaingay but the fates were against me, and I was doomed to spend a dry Christmas in Freetown, and my poor wife and scores of children straining their eyes across the bay looking for me or at least for their christmas biscuits, but such is life in Africa. It may be truly said there was many a slip betwixt the cup and the lip,—it is now 5 a. m., I hope to start again (for I did start on the 24th) at 7. for Shaingay, hope I shall get on better this time. The Committee at Home hope to send Rev. J. M. Lesher to relieve me, then I shall escape these troblesome and very perplexing trips.

Yours truly,
J. GOMER.

Doxology and Benediction by the Bishop.

Evening Session.

Opened at 6. 00 p. m. with singing and prayer by H. J. Williams.

Shaingay was fixed as the place of holding the next Conference and suggestions were made, but definite, as to time however the end of the civil year was thought by all to be the best.

Committee on Applicants to preach reported favorably and report [see Pamphlet] was adopted admitting S. B. Morrison and C. T. Grey to membership in the Conference.

Committee on Ordination reported favorably recommending J. C. Sawyer and Elders Orders report was adopted. Resolution on Church Commission (see Pamphlet) was moved by J. A. Evans seconded by J. Gomer and adopted unanimously.

A Resolution of thanks to the community for the attendance at their sessions and also their Entertainment of the Conference. Also to Bishop Flickinger for the able manner in which he preside over the body. On the last resolution touching our beloved Bishop J. W Pratt made a soul stirng speech setting forth in glowing terms the great devotion of that man of God in crossing the ocean so often for the sake of Africa.

J. A. Evans was appointed to send an abstract of the minutes to "Religious Telescope."

Conference adjourned about 7.45 p.m. finally to meet at Shaingay.

The services on the Sabbath were a Love feast meeting 6½ in the morning led by Rev. J. Gomer and largely attended; the interest was soul inspiring glorious experiences showed a deeper work of grace than I believe any one anticipated in the hearts of many preachers. Teachers and especially the people. At 11. a. m. Bishop Flickinger preached an earnest, plain, practical discourse which was readily interpreted by Bro. Parkes into the Timneh Language and was listened to by all present with rapt attention.

After the sermon Bro. J. C. Sawyer was solemnly ordained to the office of Elder in Church of Christ by the imposition of the hands of Bishop Flickinger, assisted by Rev. R. N. West and the writer. 11 Adults and 1 Infant were baptized by Bro West after which 46 communed. In the evening at 6 p. m. the writer preached to a fair gathering. Thus ended a very interesting Annual Conference with a most glorious day of religious enjoyment and praise and the servants of God go forth once more to the field of conflict with the hosts of sin; trusting in the God of all grace to keep us unto the end.

NEWS ITEMS.

We have seen among many ... from Freetown during ...son Miss Cummings the ...r of Mr H.B.Cummings ...nt of Freetown ... ...eive she on a visit to her sister Mrs. G. A. Taylor of Medina Street, of this place.

Revd S. T. Peacock of the Wesleyan high School paid a visit to this place he was the guest of the Revd J. C. Thomas we beleive while here He left per s. s. Igara on the 8th inst for Freetown.

War is raging again in the Kittam river we are repeatedly informed. Several Towns have been plundered already we believe.

St Mathew's Church Sunday School Entertainment on the 6th inst., was a grand success. Much praise is due to the Rev. G. G. M. Nicol and his co-adjutors in giving such a Treat.

Mr H. Maillatt Agt. Senegal Co., is out of Town he has been spending a week at Manoh and Sulymah.

Mendi Mission School Exhibition on the 8th inst presided over by. Capt F. C. Halkett noting Commandant was pronounced a success.

The Wesleyan Sunday School Pic Nic was held on the Mendi Mission Grounds on the 13th. inst, a nice lot of children and a good crowd of adults were present, and we believe a very pleasant time was enjoyed by all.

Our Reporter caught a rumour this morning (15th inst) that Capt. Peel had arrived overland from Freetown via Senehoo.

... is reported, from Shaingay that the Rev. J. Gomar, ... many years, the able ... ficient General Supt. of ...herbro mission is thinking ...mewhat of returning to America. Such intelligence will, doubtless, fall heavily on many hearts as it does on ours.

Mr. J. E. C. Link of the Freetown Eccentric Circle, but residing now at York Island, is becoming very popular, as a singer and performer in these parts, and certainly gives quite novel aspect to Entertainments.

MY VIEW OF THINGS.

Sir,—I have in the outset to offer you and your worthy staff my sincerest congratulations for having been able to complete the second year of your journalistic existence. It is indeed a work of great magnitude that you have done You have tided the waves of parsimony and non-assistance without any dilemma You have conglomerated that hypocondria, and like a Hydra you have wound through that excessive rigour of criticisms which often met you in a humourous way. Indeed you have crossed the seas of combativeness and you are not wrecked. You have resolved and without fail to be regular and punctual; and you have favourably declared to the public with what business-like energy you attended to your work. These are facts which must stimulate you to awake to greater earnestness determining always to be in the same locus standi and exerting all strenuous efforts to enlighten more and more this community of ours preparing too to meet your contemporaries in greater competition. Speaking of competition leads me to remark the success achieved in all the different entertainments given during the past two weeks; this indeed is a sufficient proof to believe that Sherbro is fondly progressing. During christmas week we noticed many strange faces from Freetown who seemed to have been here to spend the season with us. Among them we had the Rev. S. T. Peacock, who, during his short stay here, rendered many appreciative services and greatly relieved the Rev. J. C. Thomas in his many arduous duties. Sorry this gentleman has since returned to Freetown, we wish him all success and prosperity. Christmas has indeed come and gone; and we are now on the prime of a New Year: But the question arises—Are we resolved to live a new life? I mean the inhabitants of Sherbro, to whom the pleasures of a civilised world are at present denied. Let us by our lives and conduct show the heathen around us that "Jehovah" truly reigns. May we evince brave courage for a better future, and banish that stain from us which is immorality in its full sway. Shielded then by God's grace we can be able to give to the world our fears, and begin this year with a determined resolution to live in Christ.

We were glad to witness the Exhibition of the Mendi Mission School Children which came off successfully yesterday under the kind patronage of His Worship the Acting Commandant Too much praise cannot be given to the Staff of this Department, but in truth, I must declare that "labour itself is rest." How hard and zealously must they have worked to have insured such a mighty progress which was least expected. Truly may I exclaim,

"That a flower when offered in the bud
Is no vain sacrifice."

I learn with much pleasure that a Treat will be given to the school children for the creditable manner in which they acquitted themselves in their home and school work during the past year May they ever be successful, and may the labours of those in that Connexion ever increase.

Concluding, I should not omit to remark that, I wish Mr. Editor, his staff, readers and all friends, peace and prosperity, and a happy New Year. Thanking you for indulgence granted.

Sincerely yours
SERAPHINO.

ST MATTHEWS CHURCH SABBATH SCHOOL TEA FIGHT AND ENTERTAINMENT.

Dear Mr. Editor,—In assuring you that the above enterprise is worthy to be long had in the annals of Sherbro and you will undoubtedly grant me a little space in the columns of your most valuable and interesting Journal, to return my most sincere thanks to the staff of this School, especially the Rev. G.G. M. Nicol, whose manifest zeal is no less perceived for the able and peaceful manner in which they acquitted themselves on that occasion. I would have made some remarks on the performances and performers, but fearing I should trample on your generosity, I leave everything with you to determine for yourself. The tables prepared for Tea were more than attractive nothing there; too much cannot be said of the ladies who offered their kind services in rendering the affair a complete success. ...

Among this fair sex we noticed at the head of the ladies Miss Norman, (from Freetown) Mrs Matthew Wilson, The Misses Parkinson,s and Colliers, Mrs W. Hughes, Mrs S. Tamoh and few others.

After Tea, the audience was amused with the charming voices of some Ladies and Gentlemen who sang excellent songs and in all delighted them with their graceful countenances and performances. Mention might be made of J. C. E. Lamck Esq, of York Island, who was a novel to the audience of that night, and who in his usual sercomic manner, amused the assembly to loud applauses of encore. Too much praise cannot be given to our worthy Surgeon Dr. M. L. Jarrett who was the sole performer on the Piano all through the enterprise. Notwithstanding his position in the community, this gentleman has indeed set us bright examples to labour on for the progress of Sherbro.

Mr. Editor, may the Pastor have long life, and reap the benefits of his labour is the earnest wish of one whose opinion of this clergyman's services here is high. Thanking you in anticipation,

Yours very sincerely,
"SERAPHINO."

YAMBAH COGRAH.

Mr. Editor,—As the name of my subject will doubtless appear in in your paper for this month I deemed it proper just to give you a brief description of the man on the floor.

The man Yambe Cogra is by nationality a Timanese, his father's name was Par Simmerah, formerly king of Magbalie in the Sierra Leone River. He (Yambah) was born and bred up at Magbalie; is real name is Yambah Dabbah, but sometimes in 1879 when he was brought before Commandant T. A. Wall then he was called Yambah Cograh to distinguish him from those the same then present at Court. He was brought to this country by one Par Sumnah (deceased) for Timber trade some time in 1866 since then he has not returned to his country, and after all his wanderings up and down the rivers, he came 6 years ago to settle in this country, (Bargroo.) He was one of those to whom the word Atheist seems more applicable, for besides this, the house of God was a poison to him.

But just a few weeks ago I was called by Bro. Morrison to listen to a striking incident that occured on the 30th ult. Yambah after returning from his daily avocation went home after taking his dinner, he went to a neighboring town to get a leaf of tobacco in order to regale himself. The tobacco was obtained, he returned home, and after some conversation between himself and his wife (as you have heard from one of your correspondents) he laid down on his mats couch to rest himself from resting came sleeping, and from sleeping (as he saw) he found himself in an unknown land. And as the venerable Wesley beautifully represents it.

"A land of deepest shade
Unpierced by human thought
The dreary regions of the dead
Where all things are forgot."

It is needless for me to dilate on what one of your correspondence has written, but suffice it to say that from Wednesday at 1 p. m. when this man laid down to rest he was not conscious of himself till Thursday 12 p. m. when he came to himself he said "I had been traveling" when he spoke of many things that he saw and added, that he was sent by God to speak against the evils of the land, and believe me sir most of the words were based on scriptural proofs after he had spoken at full length (for he spoke through an interpreter) there was a great consternation amongst us who were present, some believed and others disbelieved, but he said that whether they believe or not they must remember that they shall stand before God at the last day. I said within myself that this man who was once so strongly opposed to Christianity, and who was altogether an unlettered man, should speak of things just as they are in Scripture, while I was thus musing the thought of Joel 2. 28 came to me, I will pour out my spirit upon all flesh, and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy. Your old men shall dream dreams and your young men shall see visions."

And could easily see that the man was Divinely inspired to speak of things that were revealed to him, for after he had made an end of speaking, he was asked by Bro. Morrison whether he had any more words to say, he said No! "I saw many things but what I am sent to speak, that I have spoken, and said he, I cannot add one more word nor take out any from what I have spoken. He was asked by the same Bro. whether he was a wicked man before, "Yes" says he, "I was a very wicked man before and I have treated my wife with the greatest contempt but now, God has forgiven me. He went further asked, if he would attend service on Sunday, he said master if I feel little better before Sunday I will attend. Bro M asked him, are you feeling pain any where? "No" said he "but after Sulimany has showed all things he then pushed him &c.

But this I must say as it is "A la mode" with all men, many predicted of his death, for he was all servicelss he could not possibly hold any thing, and the gift for speaking was rather burdensome to him. I should not narrate all the various scenes that passed but at the same time I feel to mention one fy two facts and leave it to the minps of all those who shall hear this story, and they who be able to solve for themselves whether the man is a changed man, or not.

To be concluded in our next.

PERSONALITIES.

The Philadelphia Press relates that the Earl of Shaftesbary lost his watch while walking in the New Cut, a neighbourhood infested with vile characters. He advertised his loss. Within twenty four hours his household was aroused by a ring at the street door and the wheels of a vehicle were heard rapidly departing On opening the front door, a sack was found filled with something that moved. On investigating, a boy of the Artful Dodger class was found in it, bound hand and foot and gagged. Round his neck was the missing watch, and underneath was placarded with the words: "Dash 'im up, Mi lord, he's a Disgrace to ourn Perfession, he or'ter known as how yer lordship was Free of the wind: giv 'im five years 'ard. Yer friends." The Earl kindly went to work to reform the young thief, and eventually he became an honest member of the London shoeblack brigade.—Independant.

Dr. Talmage on his return from his late European trip says, he saw the great English Statesman while he was gone, and saw him in his best mood—his domestic mood—at the christening of his grandchild as beautiful a baby as mother ever kissed. The wise doctor then said, "But all babies are beautiful to their mothers. It was well illustrated recently when six mothers came together with their babies and resolved that they would just ballot as to which child was the prettiest, and no one would know who voted for who, and after the voting the ballots were counted, and each baby had one vote. Sometimes babies are homely, although I never had any of that kind in my own house; but I have a friend in the ministry to whom I have said, 'How do you get along when a real, homely baby is presented to you by the mother, and she expects you to compliment it?' 'Well,' he said, 'I have hit on this plan. To avoid hurting the mothers feelings on one side and to avoid untruthfulness on the other side, I cry out, "Well that is a baby.—Religious Telescope.

To the Editor of the "Early Dawn"

Sir,—An affair took place here on or about the 31st of October last, which requires your notice as well as that of the public.

For a very trivial, or as I may term it foolish cause, one Gbannah Theigh, a headman of one of the towns here called Mentibye, took it on himself, (and which is quite contrary to the laws of this country) went and pounced on the peaceful inhabitants of the towns of Manoh and Themgbloh, chopping, wounding and plundering them of most of their effects.

As is natural in such cases, this at once threw the whole community into great commotion, the the offended parties were making sure and speedy preparations, their friends and relations pouring in from all parts of the country to assist them to retaliate this uncalled aggression on the peace of their homes and the inhabitants were flying in every direction along the coast, expecting every moment to see the country in a blaze and to hear the roaring of guns and the clash of fire-arms. This certainly would have been the case, but while these warlike demonstrations were being displayed, the report of cannons was heard at Shaingay, announcing the return from Freetown to Shaingay of our indefatigable chief T. Neale Caulker, where he went to, two weeks previous on a complimentary visit to His Excellency the Governor-in-Chief Sir Samuel Rowe. The news of the Chief's arrival soon spread about throughout the District, and much was the joy and satisfaction of many, but the aggressors and marauders quailed and quaked with fear and trembling, they being quite aware of his objection and solid detestation of these lawless deeds and the exertions he has always been putting forth to suppress any such acts within his jurisdiction, as they are the main causes of some of the countries adjacent to these Districts, being sunken into that deplorable condition in which they now are.

Matters having been duly reported to him on his arrival as to the cause of this uproar and who the ringleaders were, the Chief with his wonted energy and promptness for which he is well known throughout the country, at once convened a meeting of his Elders or big people, as is always his policy when anything of the like occurs or is about to happen in the country. After which six dozen good, sturdy, resolute youngmen were selected and sent against the rebels, who were totally routed: their leader Gbannah Theigh and the other miscreants, his accomplices in this outrageous raid, were captured, brought to Shaingay, and tried in the Barra, found guilty of infringing one of the particular laws of this country. He was punished according to deserts. Many thanks are due to the Chief for his energy and skill in governing the districts Order has been restored, and we are again enjoying peace throughout the Districts May he be spared to rule over his Subjects. Thanking you Mr. Editor for the space occupied.

I am, Mr. Editor,
Yours truly,

A LETTER FROM SHAINGAY.

Dear Bro. Evans,—I have just learned from Chief T. N. Caulker a few facts relative to the death of the late Bah Mattie of Bompehtooke. The Chief who has just returned from the funeral says that when the old chief Bah Mattie became aware that death was drawing nigh, he summoned a few praying people unto him and asked them to pray he also asked them to tell all the people that if any one has anything against him they must forgive him and he had freely forgiven all those that had wronged him; he was trusting in the Lord, and all was well with him; he talked up to the last, then closed his eyes;—they thought he was sleeping but he was dead, passed quietly away without a struggle.

This is another glorious victory on the Lord's side. You Bro. Evans were the first to preach the gospel to him fourteen years ago; you remember how eagerly he would listen to the word of Life, how when there was no Barra, and the rains were heavy, his house was always open for religious service, one by one he gave up his charms "gree gree," medicines etc., etc., he then asked to be baptized; of late years he has seemed much interested on the subject of Religion, he regretted very much having the school removed from his town to Kooloong, has always been very anxious to have the meetings kept up at Otterbein Station and quite frequently has had prayer meetings held in his house. As for years, he has been afflicted with a chronic complaint that rendered it impossible for him to attend service at the Barra. This is the third one of our Otterbein members that have gone on before, that I believe will greet us on the other shore the first was old Williams, as he was always called; Who willed his six children to the Mission. The next was Banah Sackey, Pieh William's father and now the old chief gains them; Jabbi who died at Bowmah about five years who was only a seeker ought to be number'd with these, for there was no church organized at Bowmah, and he died in the faith; Bowmah is near to Bompehtooke: We thank God for these trophies, and take courage, and will renew our attacks on the enemy's work.

Jany 20th 1886. J. GOMER.

VISIT TO MAMBOE.

Mr. Ed.—As I have lately had the opportunity, of visiting the above-named station, and there were some-things which I witnessed, that I thought worthy of your notice, and that would be of interest to many of your readers, especially those who were interested in our work here among the Sherbros. I was indeed, made to rejoice, when I saw that Christmas had become a high day among the natives, in this country. Three services were held during my stay in this place. The first on Christmas eve, at 7 o'clock in the evening. The second at 4½ o'clock on Christmas morning, and the third at 11 a.m. All of these services were well attended by the natives, and at each of the meetings everyone was very happy and morethan all this, the Power of God was felt in these meetings. There were 114 adults, besides a number of children present at the 11 a.m. service. The whole day was given by the people to rejoicings and giving thanks to God for His unspeakable love, in the gift of His Son on that day for mankind. I trust that all who are interested in this great work will lift up their prayers to the Great Head of the Church, for Mamboe and all the other stations of this Mission.

Mr. Ed., I am,
Yours in Christ,
Shaingay Mission J.W. Pratt,

STRANGE NOTIONS.

A person imagined that his nose was grown to that prodigious length and greatness that he thought he carried a long with him, as it were, the trunk of an elephant, which was always a great hindrance to him, so that sometimes he thought it swam in his dish. A physician was sent for, who, understanding his disease, lexicalously, and without discovery, holds a long stuffed thing to his nostrils, and snatching up a razor, and taking up some part of the flesh he whipped off his counterfeit nose, and then with a soporiferous potion and wholesome diet he completed his cure.

A Portuguese nobleman fell into a melancholy imagination that God would never pardon his sins. In this agony he continued pensive, and wasted away. Various prescriptions in physic were used to no purpose, as also all kinds of diversions and other means. At last the following artifice was made use of. His chamber door being locked, about midnight, at the roof of his chamber, the tiles having been stripped off for that purpose, there appeared an artificial angel, having a drawn sword in his right hand, and a lighted torch in his left, who called him by his name. He straightway rose from his bed and adored the angel which he saw cloted in white and of a beautiful aspect. He listened attentively to the angel, who told him" all his sins were forgiven him," and so extinguished his torch, and said no more. The nobleman, overjoyed, knocks with great violence at the door, raises the house, tells them all that had passed, and as soon as it was day sent for his physician and relates all to them who congratulate the felicity. He soon after fell to his meat, slept quietly, performed the offices of a sound man, and from thenceforth never felt anything of his former indisposition.

Pisander, a Rhodian historian, laboured under such a melancholy fancy that he was in continual fear lest he should meet his own ghost, for he verily believed, even while he was alive, that his soul had deserted his body. "Such another person as this was in Ferrara," saith Giraldus, "who could by no means be persuaded by Nicholaus Leonicenus his physician, that it was impossible for bodies to walk up and down without their souls. He approved of such reasons as were proposed, granting the premises. But whenever they went about to infer the conclusion, he would then cry out, 'I deny the whole of it.'"

There was one who thought he was made of glass, so that he did all he performed standing, fearing that if he sat down he should break.

Montanus tells us of one who thought all the superficies of the world were made of thin and transparent glass, and underneath there lay a multitude of serpents; that he lay in bed as in an island, whence if he should presume to venture he should break the glass, fall among the serpents and be destroyed; therefore, to prevent that misfortune, he was resolved never to stir from his bed.

Tharsilus, the son of Pythodorus, was possessed with that madness that he verily thought that all the ships which put to shore upon the Pyræum were his son. He would therefore number them, dismiss them, and, when they returned, receive them with that joy as if he were master of all there cargoes. Of such vessels as were wrecked he inquired not at all; but such as came safe he wonderfully rejoiced at, and in this pleasure did he pass in life. But when his brother returned from Sicily he committed this pleasant person to the care of physicians by whom he was cured; yet he affirmed that he never lived so happily as whilst he was mad. Sel.

YAMBAH COGRAH.

Concluded from our last.

Sometime in last week, a person who was forced through want to pledge some of her valuables for a few quarts of rice, returned it to him after the above incident had occurred but when she went the pledge was given back to her and the rice was not received she asked the reason for so doing. He replied, "since it was want than compelled you to seek for my aid, I will return your pledge But the rice I will not receive, for God says, If your brother hungry give him to eat, if he thirst give him to drink" These were the words of Yambah Cogra, a Timenee man, who knows not the difference between A. and bay. If an heathen man could give such testimony, Is he not a Christian? But although St. Paul says "Believe not every spirit but try them, yet we are told that a tree is known by its' fruits After he was strong enough to move about he has been attending divine service and other means of grace, even to Sabbath school, he has expressed his ardent desire to learn of Jesus, to know how to read and he desires to be baptized and that the sacrament of the Lord Supper be administered to him, well if such a man who desires to flee from the wrath to come, and also wished that his heathen brethereu may taste of the dying Saviour's love if he is not a converted man, then I believe I do not know what is conversion. I fear I am taking too much space, for I feel that I am perspiring and you know that after perspiration comes inspiration so I must simply add one more fact and stop for the present.

On Monday last the 9th inst after prayers I was going to my Office when Bro. M. called me to come and listen. I went several others and Yambah was amongst the company, he said that he had a very sleepless night that Matakia came to him and asked why he did not go and deliever his message he Queen Consuah Cumbeh, after he had spoken for some time, I was asked to accompany him to the Queen's palace, and no sooner was our arrival announced than the Queen made her appearance. It was a grand sight Mr. Editor to see Yambia standing like Paul on Mar's hill to reprove the Queen He said queen Consua Cumbeh, i am sent by me la ketmeaing the angel to ask you why you never go to church, it is no dream, nor country fashion but reality, you have been to Freetown, you have been civilized, and you forget position that you now hold that it is giving by God, and indeed spoken for a good while The Queen trembled like Felix before the majestic presence of truth, and before we left the queen promised that she will attend service on Sunday coming, and as I learn from good authority this queen had not trend the threnh hold of God's house for the past 6 years. Thanking you for indulgence, DISTURBANCES in the COUNTRY.

That had seemed, for a short time, after the arrival of His Excellency Sir Samuel Rowe, on the Coast, or rather in these Settlements, to be dying away have begun to re-appear in, if not more formidable, yet in more numerous and seemingly perplexing forms; for then a self-wasting war in the Kittam seemed of itself, to be wearing to close, at least such was the opinion of those we believe best acquainted, by long residence, with native wars; but it would seem, that the then nearly worn out Kittam warboys had now gained strength by the rest had in consequence of the Governor's visit and have now renewed the struggle afresh and again the wasting ravages of savage warfare destroying property, wasting produce depopulating the country interior-ward while trade and commerce are being stifled along the coast-line, and as a result the revenue of the settlement diminishing every day. It is not only the Kittam troubles, although these may be the most important to commerce and revenue, but these wars or plundering banditti are springing up in various places; look at the Imperch, the Boom and Jong, and the Bompeh river, the hoards of Mendis and Yonnies, that threaten the very existence of peninsular Sierra Leone with destruction. the late raid on Songo town is only a forerunner of deeds more daring by the lawless Bands of savages that surround us if such are not followed up (as they seem not likely to be) and visited with signal vegeance. The temporizing policy of the Imperial Government, may seem indeed humanitarian, and be well enough for English or other Statesmen to speechify upon at home and in civilized lands; but it seems indeed a merciless policy for those whose lives and property are daily exposed in border settlements like these. We are not politicians, and have hitherto, refrained from expressing an opinion upon these matters, but we feel now that the time has come, when we must speak in behalf of suffering humanity; for indeed if we are to have a revival of disturbances, and another inflow of refugees from the surrounding districts, great will be the distress; already we are beset on every hand, by those who have been thrown out of business, or employment, by the wars around us, they had begun to leave our streets, and were a few months ago telling us of fair prospects, in the various river districts but alas! alas! they have gone, but to return, disappointed, again to our doors with a more doletul cry.

YANDAIHOO SWALE.

The Crossings of the above named Low grounds, have had the attention of our vigilant Authorities but it seems to us that the Sanitary Inspector's attention, needs to be called to the growth of bushes and grass, that is allowed to grow in this swale from Victoria down to the Mission road Crossing. These Bushes &c., form an obstruction to the filth, that is washed down from Victoria road and even from the yards above which together with herbage in the swamp itself make a rather unhealthy deposit, from which malarious odors must continually arise even in the dries, for then the tides overflow and soak this noxious mass, for a part of the day, at times, and then receeding leaves it exposed to the verticle rays of a tropical sun to evaporate, into deadly miasma, filling the air with malarial poison, which being detrimental to the health of our community we feel it our duty to call the attention of the Authorities to it in hope that the place may have their early consideration.

REPORT OF KONCONANY STATION, MENDI MISSION.

Mr. Editor,

I am happy to state that the work of God in this part of Mission field is rpaidly increasing. The present year shows success in our labours. The work of God is taken possession in the hearts of the people and every thing in connection of the work assumes a delight ful appearance. Previous before Christmas week we had series of prayer Meetings and in those meetings the presence of the Divine Omnipotence was felt amongst all those who were present. Another was held before new year in which we also experienced the like. Many whose hearts were hardened against the saving of their immortal souls are now running down to be taught of the word of life. "This is the Lord's doing and it marvellous in our eyes." we trust that the Lord will work for himself so that all the heathens in this part of Sherbro land may turn from nature to grace. In fact to do justice to the work here is more than a single individual can do. This is a wide field, we therefore pray the Lord of the Harvest to send more labourers to His Vineyard—above All may the God of all grace strengthen his nowortiy servant to do his best to further on the cause of the Redeemer's Kingdom so that many souls shall be added to His church to inherit the bless' great life which he has provided for all those who work faithfully.

Day School. The Scholars in this department are regular in attendance and are making improvements they now make school as a pleasure and not as heavy burden as heretofore. Their parents seem to have special taste for the training of their children—but one thing they are in a state of nudity, as their parents and guardians are so poor and not in position to afford them clothing.

SABBATH SCHOOL

A Sabbath School has been organized of late and it is well attended by young and old; and every one seems interested in the same. Strangers coming down from distant places, and would visit here on the Lord's day would really feel that they are in the midst of Christian Community. The Holy Scriptures are explained to the people and they listen with rapt attention. The members of the station as follows. Believers 10 Seekers 106 Day Scholars 24 Sunday Scholars 21.

Rev. J. A. Evans,

Dear Sir,—We beg to inform you that the late Firms Fisher & Randall in Manchester, Liverpool, and Marseilles and the Firm of Randall and Fisher at Sierra Leone have been converted into a joint Stock Company Limited under the Company's Acts 1862 to 1883.

The title of the Firm on the Coast will now be known as Fisher & Randall Limited; late, Randall & Fisher, of which please take particular note.

Yours truly
Fisher & Randall Limited,

MY VIEW OF THINGS.

Mr. Editor,—Since writing you last everything has been going on steadily. The Colonial Government have indeed spared no effort to insure the healthiness of the country, strict sanitary measures are being adopted, and introduced. The Overseer of Roads seems busy all around the town, and has been insisting rightly upon owners of lots and lands to clear away weeds and high grass from their premises.

These are means by which the general good health of the public will be secured. I am writing on a very tender subject Mr. Editor, so do indulge me, so as your readers will candidly determine—a Pharisee's part—viz: Farki Dancing, or Samgba beating on Sundays, which prevalently exist here.

I will not say too much Mr. Editor, but would that God's commands were better obeyed. If the ministers here will go forth and preach His gospel "cess" to the mendis around them. Examples indeed have in many respects made matters worse. How well can I apply this scriptural adage—One sick ly sheep etc." to those immoralists who grossly indulge themselves in drinking deep of this actual sin which every one is accountable for. Immorality is indeed the burning question of the day at Sherbro, and I fully hope it will be handled by men who really abhor it.

The Mendi Mission truly has done her part, but who is there to follow her example.

I refer to those who profess and call themselves christians, but would heap up and cherish heathenism by connecting themselves in one or the other way with those who are the leading members in the "Samgbi Dance" on Sundays. I fear their end will be worse than their beginning.

Entertainments are not yet over. The last of the season will be a Concert under the auspices of a Christian Lady to be given in the Government yard, on Friday the 29th. My only wish is success to the co-operators in this enterprise. Week day Schools have been opened, and vacation is over; Little if the effort made to impart any instruction whatever to the unfortunate children in Bonthe that only a single teacher can be employed for each of three schools I can boldly say (but with an exception) The Colonial and Indian Exhibition will soon take place, and so far as my knowledge goes, great preparations are being made in Sherbro, and every effort has been put forth to gather various collections of African productions. If the announcement is correct we shall have the Rev Mr. Fox who is truly zealous in his work, and who seems to be the right man in the right place. This part of the Vineyard contains plenty to do. A Revival meeting is a desideratum, and frequent preachings will meet with the appreciation of all.

The Government has seen fit to discontinue the service of the s.s. "Igara" in bringing our mails, and the contract is now handed to another individual, who seems to be trying his utmost. The inconvenience accruing from this change is great, and prompt steps should be taken by the M.L.C. at Sherbro, to see that a mail steamer "is employed and not a Contract Boat" to bring their despatches as well as our letters, Sherbro will rise if assisted, but will remain fallen if left alone.

Africa is truly producing noble sons, we have been pleased to learn in one of the columns of the "Sierra Leone Weekly News" that the honorary degree of "Master of Arts" Durham and Cambridge, have been conferred on the Rev D. G. Williams, and the Venerable Archdeacon Johnson I cannot but say that I heartily congratulate these two clergymen for their new gradation and trust they will long enjoy their deserved honors.

Sincerely yours,
SERAPHINO.

VICE PRESIDENT DYING IN OFFCE.

Mr Hendricks is the fifth Vice President who has died in office. Both men elected with Madison failed to live out their terms. George Clinton, chosen in 1809, died in Washington April 20 1812, & Elbridge Gerry, elected in 1813, expired the following year. William Rufus King, of Alabama, who was made President pro tem. of the Senate after Fillmore succeeded Gen. Taylor, and who was elected Vice-President on the ticket with Gen. Pierce in 1852, died at his home April 18th, 1853. Henry Wilson, Vice-President, died in the Capitol at Washington, November 22nd 1875.

A Fight—On our arrival at Konconany on the evening of the 19th. inst at the hour nine o'clock we found a large groupe of persons gathered in front of the Police Station some of whom were talking very loud and on enquiry we learned that several persons belonging to two neighboring villages had been fighting about a bottle of palm wine and having used their cutlasses in the affray had chopped several parties in various places on the legs, fingers sides &c only one of which however seemed badly wounded of course all that could be had were put under arrest and brought down to Bonthe tried and fined

It is reported from Bompeh River that War Boys from Rotufunk have recently made another Expedition to Yonny in three divisions, two of which had returned prior to the 20th, but without success. The third had not returned, but was supposed to be on the way. It was reported further that the Mendi division would go again in short to the Yony country.

Mr S. B. A. Mc'Foy gave us a call on the 23rd. and handed us his subscription for the past and present year. Mr P. F. James also sent in the full amount of past and present year on the same day and we should feel extremely obliged if others would do likewise.

We had a call from Mr. A.S. York on the 22nd, he was in from the Rivers, and has since proceeded to Freetown per the s. s. "John Brown" 23rd instant.

Mr. E. Albert Lewis was down from the Manoh Bargroo lately, and gave us a hasty peep in, to enquire about Cupboard Corner, but it had faded out.

We learn from THE METHODIST HERALD, (Freetown), that Bishop William Taylor has recently returned to England for the purpose of obtaining recruits for his work.

It is now reported from America that Rev. J. M. Lesher has been appointed as the successor of the Rev. J. Gomer, (resigned) to the Agency of the Sherbro Mission Shaingay.

We learn also from the United States that the Rev. D. F. Wilberforce will return in short to open the (U. B. C.) Training School.

Mr. H. Maillatt Agent Senegal Co., gave us a call on 27th and left per s. s. Teneriffe for Freetown on the 28th he expects to return in course of three or four months.

Rev. J. C. Thomas, has recently made a visit to Mo-Moseley where we believe he dedicated a Chapel and held a very interesting serviceat tended by 71 Natives and 12 Sierra Leoneans

A CONCERT—The Wesleyan Christian Association, gave a splendid Concert last evening (29th inst) under a well arranged pavillion erected for the purpose within the Government yard, more particular notice of tice which will be given in our next issue.

Mr. Samuel Tamoh Head-master of the Mendi Mission school of this place has been quite ill, for a week past but is now convalescent.

We learn that it has been announced that the British Govt. has decided to send another Expedition to the Soudan, and that it was being prepared for immediate Départure.

Mr. J. W. Baker—Reports continued success on his charge at Konconany see report in another column.

BARGROO SICK LIST.—Miss. A. N. Morrison convalescent, Mr. E. T. Tucker, all right again, but regret to note that Mr. Albert Morrison was quite ill on the 28th instant with fever.

SHAINGAY ITEMS.

On the 1st inst., in Fleckinger Chapel at 11½ a. m., Mr. Providence Humphrey, 2nd W. I. Regt., and a native of Georgetown Demerara, took Mrs. Rebecca Wilson, a native of Philadelphia, PA., (U.S.A.,) for better or for worse. The English Marriage Ceremony was used, they were neatly dressed the Bride wore a long white veil and also a trail to her dress, A few special friends partook of refreshments at 3 o'clock—All were happy and everything went off pleasantly.

Our Sick List.—Mr. C. A. E. Campbell, Principal of the Shaingay Mission School is very ill; Mrs. Gomer is trying her best with Dr. Gunn's assistance to relieve his sufferings.

Arrivals.—Mrs. Corp'l Gordon arrived here from Freetown per s. s. John Brown.

Mr. J. H. Ashcroft has just opened a splendid assortment of first class Cotton Goods in the Shaingay Mission store. We understand that he will soon have an assortment of crockery-ware and Provisions This is a long felt want here, a first class store, where people can get what they want without the stench of Rum.

FUNERAL OF MR. HENDRICKS.

The remains of the late Hon. Thos. A. Hendricks, Vice-President of the United States, were committed to the tomb, in Indainapolis on Tuesday, Dec. 1st. The event was made memorable in many respects, by the presence of a tremendous concourse of people from all parts of the nation—including the members of the Cabinet and other personages of national fame. The city was heavily draped in mourning, every house displaying its sombre emblems of death. The cortege was second only to that which followed the body of General Grant to its last resting place, and afforded one of the most imposing scenes ever witnessed. After services in the church of which the deceased was a member, the body was borne to the cemetry where a marble vault had been prepared. The President did not attend the funeral, in deference to public sentiment and the duties that were his at the capitol.—The People.

THE LAST MATCH.

Few incidents of the famous Greely expedition to the northern seas make so vivid an impression upon the mind as one recorded by Sergeant George B. Rice who did not live to return to his home and friends.

A sledge party was detailed to visit and examine Hall's Rest on the coast of Greenland. In the course of this expedition the stock of matches that the men had brought was reduced to one. It was a miserably cold evening, when the shivering group of men gathered in their damp tent to watch the attempt to ignite, by this match, the spirit lamp upon which their lives depended.

The lamp once ligated, there was warmth and warm food at their command; the lamp unlighted, there was not vital force left in the party to resist the fatal chill of the Arctic night. With what breathless interest the experiment was watched we can scarcely imagine.

"The match, wrote Sergeant Rice in his diary, "snapped, crackled, and showed a little flame, which by dexterous management was communicated to the wood and triumphantly applied to the wick of the spirit lamp. But the wick is wet from the falling moisture of the tent, It sputters—fizzles—the match itself is burned up to the benumbed fingers of the holder, when one of the agonised spectators springs from his seat, and with admirable presence of mind withdraws from his breast pocket a document, which he holds to the expiring match in time to perpetuate its fire. They are saved!"

But this is not all the story. The sergeant intimates that the "document that saved their lives was far more precious than anything documentary. It was the last fond and tender epistle which its owner had received from his sweetheart before sailing. He had worn it as an amulet next his heart, and would have died rather than surrender it at any ordinary call. To save his comrades he drew it forth, and gave it to nourish the flame which alone could warm them back to life. —Sel.

KEEP THE BOTTLE OUT OF THE PARLOR.

The time was when in our own church the wine-bottle was by some set out to visitors; but that day has passed away. We quote the following from the Ohio State Journal, which a day or two before Thanksgiving in an editorial said:

The fashionable use of wine is one of the most dangerous things of Society. At banquets, spread dinners, parties, balls, and weddings it finds victims that would not be reached otherwise. The sideboard is worse than the bar. The writer remembers reporting a wedding in high life where wine flowed from an artificial fountain. The elite of the city were there. After midnight the groom had to be carried to the back in which the bride was seated, and afterward carried from the back to his "private car," while many of the distinguished guests were laid out or hauled home, and some of ladies could not keep from being tripped by their own trains. The New York papers now at hand give long, graphic accounts of a spread wedding among the millionaires of the metropolis, and one of them tells the whole story to the effect that the groom and the father of the bride got very full and skipped out as the guests were departing in exuberant spirits and confusion. The next morning they were fined five dollars and costs each in police court, having been picked up and hauled in by the patrol wagon. The bridal party was to start the same night on an extended tour of the South, and left the next day disgraced and chargrined. It was not the sunshine that should brighten a wedding day. The result is not always felt the same day but it is felt some day. It will come sooner or later—the goal is police court just the same. Within six weeks the custom of New year calls will be observed. This is a day for fashionable drunkeness, and the ladies who present the goblets are responsible for it. Keep the bottle out of the parlor. Rel. Tel.

BISHOP TAYLOR IN AFRICA.

Bishop William Taylor is pushing forward his missionary scheme in Africa with energy. About a dozzen of his company in one way and another have departed from him, but only two have died. The company has, however, lost a part of its leaders. In a letter written about the last of August, after speaking of various places of the work, he says:

"I have had no touch of African fever that I am aware of, but I have suffered here from want of fruit as I do every spring in the United States between the time exhausting the old crop and the bringing in of the new. Fruit ought to be plentiful at all times, but it is not cultivated to any great extent, and scarcely at all inland, where I have been for months. So, from indigestion and constipation (not at all peculiar to my African experience), and the wear and tear to mind and muscle to which I have been subjected for so many months I have become a mere skeleton of what you saw me, having lost fifty one pounds of my former self. Still, I can fulfill the proverb 'A poor dog for a long chase.' I expect to start next week on a tramp of one hundred and thirty miles. I believe it is conceded that I am the best walker in our crowd. I generally lead, but I have lot of good men who follow and keep up. In this country everybody who makes any pretension to respectability is carried, by two men, with alternations of four more, in what is known here as a 'toporya.' We can not afford that. I set the example, and all my men follow it, of walking. Sel.

PEOPLE WITH STRANGE DELUSIONS.

A young man, troubled with melancholy, had a strong imagination that he was dead, and did not only abstain from meat and drink, but importuned his parents that he might be carried into his grave, and buried before his flesh was quite putrified. By the counsel of physicians he was wrapped in a winding sheet, laid on a bier and so carried upon men's shoulders towards the church. But upon the way two or three pleasant fellows, appointed for that purpose, meeting the hearse, demanded aloud of them that followed it whose body it was that was there coffined and carried to burial. They said it was the young man's and told them his name. "Surely," replied one of them, "the world is well rid of him; for he was a man of a very bad and a vicious life, and his friends have cause to rejoice that he hath rather ended his days thus than at the gallows." The young man hearing this, and vexed to be thus injured, raised himself upon the bier, and told them that they were wicked men to do him that wrong which he had never deserved; that if he were alive he would teach them to speak better of the dead." But they proceeded to depriciate him, and to give him much more disgraceful and reproachful language. He, not being able longer to endure it, leaped from the hearse and fell about their ears with much rage and fury, and ceased not buffeting with them till he was quite wearied; and by this violent agitation the humours of his body altered; he awakened as out of a sleep or a trance; and being brought home, and comforted with wholesome diet, he within a few days recovered his former health, strength, and understanding. Sel.

ON A FEVER-STRICKEN SHIP.

The Rev. Duncan Craig, M.A., Vicar of Kinsdale, and Chaplain to Fort Camden, says: It has fallen to my lot, as a minister of the Gospel, to witness many strange and eventful scenes, both at home and abroad. Among them, I would describe the following as one of peculiar and startling interest.

My brother minister and I, one winter evening, were startled by the intelligence that a barque-rigged craft, the "Florence Barton," laden with palm oil from the African coast, had been brought into our harbour by the crew of the revenue cutter, who had found her drifting helplessly towards the coast.

Upon boiling her, a black face appeared over the bulwarks, and a voice replied that they were all dead or dying on board. Some of the crew of the cutter bravely volunteered to bring the barque into port, and she now lay at the mouth of the harbour, rising and sinking in the swell that rolled in from the Atlantic.

Our Wednesday evening service had been concluded. The worshippers had left the church of St. Matthew, and we walked down to the pleasant village of Cove, in order to procure a boat to put us

On board the Ill Fated Craft.

After some delay, partly arising from reluctance on the part of the boatmen to approach the ship, we succeeded in getting a four-oared whale-boat. We pulled towards the mouth of the harbour. The darkness of the winter's night fast shrouded the lessening shore, as we rapidly glided on our way and a dense black fringed bank of clouds hung away to seaward, between which and our boat's head the tracery of the African barque gleamed indistinctly on our view.

"There's the cutter on our starboard bow," said one of the men, as we swept by. We were now nearing the object of our journey. A light spray, driven in our face by the wind, told us that the breeze was freshening. All before us was thick murky gloom. A light suddenly gleamed out from the forecastle. We rowed alongside, and in a few moments found ourselves on deck.

A coastguard came forward. "I am truly glad to see you, gentlemen," he said; "the crew are in an awful state below. Here is the revenue doctor."

A young man in a sort of undress costume came forward, and welcomed us courteously, telling us that he would show us the cases most urgently requiring our attention. Under the guidance of the doctor, my fellow labourer went aft, and I moved forward to the forecastle.

"This case is one of the worst. I'll just strike a light—mind your head there. Ah! here we are." All around was deep darkness. The coastguard held the light. Presently its rays fell upon the black faces of three men who sat upon the floor. The white hammocks hung over their heads. The Kroumen gazed wildly upwards and then towards the ship's bank.

The moans of the sick and the dying in the berths all round mingled with the melancholy wailing of the wind through the shrouds. The light flickered, then fell steadily upon the pale, emaciated, almost ghastly features of a young lad. Scurvy had played fearful havoc with that face. The fever had clenched him in his firm grip. The cap upon the head and the pea-jacket told the tale that he had struggled to the last, and then turned in—never more to rise from that narrow, stifling bunk.

A horrible gloom filled the forecastle. I could scarcely hold on by the poor boy's side. The dying face was painfully and slowly turned towards me. "Boy," I said, "are you dying."

The reply, laughably short—then repeated, "I know it," he gently said, relapsing into the gloom—"I have a dear mother," he muttered; "she taught me to pray—I have been at Sabbath school—yonder in my box is my Bible."

There was a something in the way in which the words were uttered, and in and in the loving gleam that stole across the pale, sickness worn features, as he looked towards the Bible, that I felt the hopes, long since rested upon his Dad and Saviour. I therefore bent down and whispered,—

"Rock of Ages, cleft for me."

The words had barely passed my lips when he took them up, and feebly said,—

"Let me hide myself in Thee."

We passed into the Steward's Pantry, lighted by swinging lamp. Lying in his berth, the sides of his cabin filled with the various utensils of his calling, there we found the poor fellow. "Oh Sir," he cried, as his eyes glanced on me, Oh, sir! can I be saved? Oh, this voyage! this fearful voyage! Day after day lying here! night after night tossing about with this fever—no medicine no care, all lead or dying. Oh, my sins! my sins! How they stood round about me, night after night, like so many fiends coming to accuse me! I have been in many a scrape, sir; I have sailed under a God-forgiving master, who mustered us for prayer; but I have forgotten my God, and now—" He paused, and looked wild and terror-stricken.

"There is free pardon even for you, my friend," I said. "Look to Jesus. He came to seek and to save that which was lost." Ah! sir, but I have been too wicked!" he sadly answered.

"Man," cried the old coastguard at my side, "don't sin the more by refusing to believe what your God has said. He desires to pardon you. Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved."

"The Bible! the Bible! Oh, how I have longed for one all this weary voyage through! Have you a Bible sir?" I gave him the only Bible I had about me, and then, kneeling in prayer with him, I left him.

The scene was a touching one. From man to man we both had gone. The wind was freshening, and the barque rolled before it. One more glance at the dying lad—one more word of comfort—when mounting came, and they went to move him, the lad fell back dead. Dead!—yes, that is a glorious declaration in the Book of the Revelation, "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord." The steward, through Divine mercy, recovered, gave himself to Christ, and is now engaged in telling forth to others the story of his power to save.—The Christian Herald.

IMMENSE HAILSTONES

occasionally fall in different districts of South Africa. Our own artist, who visited the locality a short time ago; has engraved the picture on next page illustrating the abnormal magnitude of the stones which fell in a terrific storm which occurred at Queen's Town, and which did an incalculable amount of damage both at sea among the shipping, and on shore. This appalling tempest lasted nearly the whole of the two days, during which time the heavens were immured in inky blackness, terribly relieved at uncertain intervals by flashes of vividly steel-blue lightning, succeeded first of all by a premonitory acrimonious crack, which was immediately followed by a deafening crash and then a mighty diapason roar dying ultimately away in a low muttered growl, until once again silence and night returned, except for the unmitigated fierce bombardment of the awful hail.

Nearly all of the roofs of houses and stores in the town were damaged beyond the possibility of repair, with the crashing force and weight of the hailstone, some of which, as seen in our engraving, were picked up and accurately measured, some time after they fell. The sheet of iron, also shown was taken from the roof of one of the stores.

We apprehend that a more fearful tempest of hail than this, however, will take place when the seventh angel pours out his vial into the air in Rev xvi. 17—21. It says:— "And the seventh angel poured out his vial into the air; and there came a great voice out of the temple of heaven from the throne, saying, It is done. And there were voices and thunders, and lightnings; and there was a great earthquake, such as were not since men were upon the earth, so mighty an earthquake, and so great. And the great city was divided into three parts, and the cities of the nations fell; and great Babylon came in remembrance before God, to give unto her the cup of the wine of the fierceness of the

OUR AMUSEMENTS.

THE Season of Entertainments seems now to be over, and perhaps a general remark or two will be indulged from us on the Performances, we have been permitted to witness; as there are no Public places of Amusement, these Entertainments, largely gotten up by Religious Societies, for the benefit of the children, to serve the double purpose of a drill, and an amusement cannot of course vie with the entertainments, in more cultivated society, or in Cities in more civilized lands and yet to those interested in the advancement of the race, there is much in these Entertainments to interest as the performances serve to draw out the minds of those in any way connected with them, and especially so where there is considerable rivalry among the promoters, each one profitting largely, by the effort of the other. Quite a degree of enterprize was manifested during the season just over, between the different promoters, and while in fairness of opinion, we cannot say that either of the two given in the Government yard excelled, yet we believe all will agree with us that these two were the best of the season; but we must here too, enter our serious objection to the length of these and we are of the opinion that the public will bear us out in this particular. Of performers it would hardly be fair for us to speak of them in detail, or even as a whole, except to say that the presence of Mr. J. C. E. Linck gave a new interest to the Entertainments not only directly by his own excellent performances but also indirectly by imparting to others much of the same life, freedom, and naturalness that marked his own. Mr. S. Albert St. John also gave the impress of his own cultured style to those who performed with him, but it was easily perceivable that he labored under great restraint. There were others of whom as we have already intimated, we could not speak; Among them were Ladies whose parts were acted well at both the pavilion entertainments, and one principal feature of beauty was that some of them spoke very distinctly; of course there is yet need of large improvement in this particular, and we believe that it will be made in time. What we have said, we mean to apply to all the Treats and Entertainments, it has been our privilege to attend during the season and wish to conclude our remarks by saying that all has impressed us with no small degree of satisfaction, not only in the way of breaking the general monotony of our place, and affording us at times, a few hours recreation, in liberating us from the close confinement of our "sanctum;" but also in exhibiting to us for our contemplation glimpses of the "Imprisoned Talent" of which another has so aptly spoken.

We insert a letter received recently from Dr. Z. Warner the Corresponding Secretary of the Home Frontier and Foreign Missionary Society, of the United Brethren in Christ of the United States of America, under the auspices of whom this Journal is published as may be seen by refference to the directory of the same, in first column of the first page. The above explanations have been made as we shall hereafter only abreviate,—when we may have occasion, what we have now written in full, and shall in future speak of Dr Warner, as our Secretary, or Home Secretary hoping this brief introduction will be sufficient, we now revert to the present letter as not intended at all for publication but—it contains some desirable information for the American Missionaries and others interested in our Missions, and the Training School, to be opened shortly at Shaingay. The council refered to in the letter as making arrangements, that have been sanctioned at home; was the same we mentioned in our Issue of Dec. 2nd (85) The letter further exhibits the Secretary's great interest in the African Work.

Dayton, Ohio, (U. S. A.)
Dec 21st. 1885.

Revd J. A. Evans,

Dear Bro:—We have learned from Bishop Flickinger the arrangement made at the council, and the committee agree to it. I send you forms of reports, which study and answer as well as you can.

Bro. Wilberforce expects to sail for Freetown April 1st to open a Training School at Shaingay. Bro. Lesher will not return at present. Can you have an itinerant to reach the Town where the parents of Bro Wilberforce live? He is anxious about it. I am glad you have consented to stay and hope your health will be precious in the sight of God, that you may be wonderfully successful, write freely. I want to help you in any way I can.

Yours in Christ.
Z. Warner.

We learn that Capt. F. C. Halkett, Actg. Comd't, has lately made a tour to the Bargroo, visiting Manoh, Avery, Nittel, and G'Bamgbiah, and saw Chief Bah Bome and other principal personages of the Bargroo and Imperreh. All seems to be quiet in those Quarters for the present, and as we have said before, will be kept so, if a few good Police are kept on duty there, with a judicious Chief Officer to settle the little difficulties that arises among the people.

Capt. F. C. Halkett does not seem to enjoy very good health in Sherbro, but we were pleased to hear him say that it was not climatic, or at least it was more from other, than climatic effect; this we commend as a just and correct statement, and that others (who decry our climate, and call it all and everything but good) might in many cases make; for we believe with Mr. Stanley, the explorer that this climate is not worse than that of many places in the United States; and that much has been laid on the African climate, that ought to have been attributed to other causes.

WESLEYAN SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Mr. Editor,—Believing verily as I do, that you take a lively interest in the Sunday School Institution, I venture therefore to bring (through your valuable columns) to the notice of the Sherbro community the unique success that attended the Sunday School in connection with the Methodist Society here during the past month. The school under the very enviable management of J. A. Williams Esq., of the Gambia, in the Boom Kittam Rivers assisted by the School Secretary Mr Brighton Turner, had during the past Quarter ended 31st December 1885 evinced such marks of success that it was thought essentially necessary to encourage and stimulate the exertions of the members in the best possible way. A PIC-NIC was accordingly given, and that recreative and harmless amusement did not only serve to stir up the members to further energy but as an incentive to induce and instigate the initiation of those who from almost their days of early childhood, had been viewing the Sunday-school Institution with no favorable eye.

Last Sunday on special invitation I attended the Sunday-school; my sole object in attending was to satisfy my curiosity in regard to the nature of Doctrine taught and expounded, and to observe the Discipline of the school, the acting upon which I believe the school has attained its present standard of importance. My anticipations however were realised by the satisfaction I obtained from every class as I passed through them severally, but pleased and delighted as I then was, one faint thrill of revulsion ran through my veins as I observed the Rev. J. C. Thomas; "a man with head and heart elate," engaged in performing also in the Sunday school, his Master's work, truly,

"God's cause he pleads, he pleads it in heart and mind
"A fellow feeling makes one wondrous kind"

I also must congratulate the members of the school for inaugurating order in the way I observed, and that is under very favourable auspices. The discipline of the school or rather the regularity in attendance of the members is one great feature for which all concerned in the interest of the school, Teachers as well as scholars, deserve praise and commendation.

The number of scholars in attendance was 204, including adults and children.

Believe me to be,
Respectfully yours,
Tyrenus.

Dear Mr. Editor,—I am desired by the Promoters of the last Concert held within the Government Compound on the 29th ultimo to respectfully thank the Community of Sherbro for their kind co-operation, and to say that that co-operation, assisted in a great measure to make the Amusement all that was desired.

I am, Mr. Editor,
Respectfully yours,

NEWS ITEMS.

It is reported that Mr. A. O. Walker, Overseer of Roads, accidentally wounded himself in the hand with a gun as he was Bird-shooting on his way to the Boom overland.

The s. s. "Amazonas," arrived on Sunday afternoon the 7th inst. from Hamburg, via Freetown, laden with Dutiable Goods consigned to the Firm of Patterson Zochonis & Co. Lmtd. in Sherbro. There were several passengers from Freetown among whom we observed Mr. Yorke and Mrs. R. V. Johnson, the bereaved sister of the late Mrs. M. C. Turner.

She left on Tuesday morning (the 9th) for the Leeward with few passengers for Lagos.

A "BAZAAR"—Under a very Skilful Management is under consideration. We learn that the promoters will shortly invite the co-operation of the Ladies of Sherbro.

The Body found—Of a young man native of Wellington, Sierra Leone, named Brown near Kronkor in the Kittam Suspected to have been murdered, we believe, by some; others say he was drowned on the night of the 3rd inst by falling over board from the awning of a canoe.

Fire.—It is reported that Gbamgbiah was burned down on Sunday 7th inst, between 9 and 10 p. m. No lives were lost, but all the Town together with the Barricade destroyed.

Personal

Mr. T. J. Aldridge, whose time had expired as Agt. of Fisher and Randall (Limited) late Randall and Fisher of York Island, left for England on the 5th inst. We understand that he is to be succeeded by Mr. S. Schmuck.

Returned.—Mr. T. B. Reid we learn has returned recently from England, and that after awaiting Mr. S. Schmuck's arrival at York aland, he will proceed to the Kittam to take charge of Fisher and Randall's Business in that part.

Rev. R. N. West, Supt. of the Bompeh Mission is reported to have sailed recently for Freetown for America direct.

Capt. J. Curphy, Agt. of the Sulymah and Sherbro Trading Co., is reported to have died recently in Freetown.

Mr. Alex Clay, Government Contractor returned on Friday the 5th inst. from a short trip to the Bargroo. He is very busily engaged looking after Supplies.

Mr. Claudius A. Gilpin, who has recently opened Business in this place, gave us a pleasant call on the morning of the 5th instant.

Mr. J. B. Parkinson, one of our enterprising Merchants, has lately made a trip to the Bargroo, he seems much pleased with Avery Station.

Revd. G. G. M. Nicol, B.A. Pastor of St. Matthews Church has returned from Freetown. Looking well for the change; he reports good church or revival Work going on in Freetown, as a result of the labors of the Missioners.

Mr. William Lewis and his son Mr. William N. Lewis called on us the 8th inst and cheered us with a Cash Subscription, and purchased one of our splendid Hymn and Tune Books.

We learn that Rev. Thos. Truscott (U. M. F. C.) sailed from Freetown on the 3rd inst. per Bark Liberia for the United States he will be fellow passenger with Rev. R. N. West and wife.

Mr. Tambaca Agent General of Fisher and Randall Limitted is spending some time we believe at their York Island House since the departure of Mr Aldridge. Mr Schmuck has also arived from the river.

Further and Official Information from the United States not only confirms the return of Rev. D. F. Wilberforce but also fixes the time of his leaving America for Africa on or about April 1st 1886. But the same Official advices state that Rev. J. M. Lesher will not return for the present.

Correction.—We regret that an error occurred in the communication entitled "My View of Things" in our last issue wherein we made the writer to say that a concert was given under the Auspices of a Christian Lady when it should have been a Christian Body.

Mr Geo. Domingo of Bompehtooke called on us on the 12th inst and we regret to say informed us of the recent death of his Father whom we remember in the early days of our Itinerating about Bompehtooke as a friend of the Missionary.

Deputy Coronor W. Hughes and Dr. M. L. Jarrett have been out of Town on a tour, to the Kittam we believe to hold an inquest over the body found near Kronkor.

Rev. I. L. Bookwalter of Lisbon Iowa U. S. A. has sent us by the last Mail a club of eleven mostly new Subscribers for which we return him our hearty thanks. Who will go and do likewise?

Died—Temoh one of our farkie headmen and a catechumen of the Mendi Mission, who has been under the religious care of the Rev. G. N. Jewett Asst. Pastor of Good Hope Station of this place. This is another of many instance, of what we term Seekers, dying, as we believe, in the faith of Christ and passing to the reward of blest. His funeral was the largest Christian funeral we ever witnessed among the country people, and it was beyond doubt the most orderly and touching that we have seen of the kind.

A CONCERT.

Mr. Editor

On Friday the 29th ultimo in the Government Compound several amateur Ladies and Gentlemen composing a part of the elite of the community gave an Evening Concert under the patronage of Capt. F. C. Halkett, Acting Civil Commandant of the Sherbro District. The Programme was tastefully got up, and contained about 26 pieces including Songs, Duets, Solos &c.

The Pavillion well erected was splendidly decorated with palms evergreens and flags, much to the delight of the spectators. It contained the best stage ever erected on the grounds for a similar occasion and was pronounced a novel scene by those present.

At 8 o'clock precisely performance was opened and the "National Anthem" told the arrival of the Patron. On the stage was to be noticed Dr. M. L. Jarrett Musical Director of the evening who with few exceptions played the accompaniments of all the songs.

After a short prefatory speech from the Secretary the Programme of Exercises which was divided into parts 1 and 2 with an interval of twenty minutes then commenced.

The opening song "Oh smile on our Amusement" was most enthusiastically rendered by the choir, followed by Mr. Linck an attached member to the Christy Minstrels of Manchester who sang "Beautiful Nell." This Gentleman afterwards enchanted the audience with "The unfortunate man" rendered in tattered habiliments and "What an afternoon." Miss. Brown in a rich voice sang "Good news from home" and "Softly falls the Moonlight." The "Gypsy's Warning" by Mr. Buckner and Miss. Norman, was most beautiful as well as "Love Letter" by Miss. Victoria King.

Mr. Mason next sang "On the road to Brighton," followed by another entitled "Beautiful Isle of the Sea" by Mr. St. John. Time and space forbid me to make particular comments on the numerous pieces, but I would however mention Miss. F. Pratt who in a peculiar and clear tone sang the "Gypsy's Warning" "Oh give me Freedom" by Miss. Bunce, and "Happy be thy Dreams" by Miss. Jane Collier, were pleasingly rendered.

A Dialogue entitled "The Celebrated Doctor" in scene I, was creditably gone through by Messrs. Turner, Mason and others. The characters were well represented and Mr. Turner who personified the "Wonderful Doctor" deserves commendation. The vivacity and sprightliness of the actors greatly amused the majority of the audience.

This novel piece brought the first part of the programme to a close.

After the interval during which refreshments were served, part 2nd opened.

Miss. Ranso. Collier was before the Piano, she enraptured the audience with a Solo entitled "The Fisherman's Song." Mrs. Minister in a beautiful tone sang "Let me kiss him for his mother" followed by Mr. Buckner who sang "John the Mather," which was well rendered. Mr Linck nearly brought down the house with "Jolly Old Crow" and the whole company una voce rang with encores. A few pieces more on part II. came off and as it was growing late, Mr. Albert St. John sang "You cant say truly Rural" which brought this interesting scene to a close.

A vote of thanks to the audience was moved by Mr. St. John, and the National Anthem by the choir dispersed this interesting gathering at 1.15 a. m.

WHAT IS NEWS?

MESSRS. EDITORS:—Your editorial on the "Ideal Newspaper" reminded me of a talk I had the other day. A neighbor meeting me on the road said:

"Have you heard the news! Tim Toper and Jim Smith were on a spree last night. They got into a fight. Jim had a knife, and he cut Tim so badly with it that he is not expected to live. Jim was arrested and is in jail."

"Do you call that news?"

"Certainly I do. It happened not more than two hours ago."

"Well, neighbor, to my personal knowledge it happened more than forty years ago and has been happening almost every day since. Nay, drunken brawls are as old, at least, as the days of Solomon. He wrote a thousand years before Christ 'Who hath woe, who hath sorrow, who hath contention, who wounds without cause! They that tarry long at the wine.' As whisky is stronger than wine, we have more fights, and more fatal ones—that is all the difference. If you and I had been in Jerusalem three thousand years ago, we might have met in the streets and you have said to me, 'Have you heard the news! Jabez and Josiah drank too much wine last night; they had a contention, and both of them are badly wounded this morning.' It does not make any difference whether the names are Jabez and Josiah, or Tim and Jim. It is just the same old story over and over. I should think that people would get tired of talking about such things, and that the newspapers would get tired of printing them."

"But what would they print, then! It is their business to tell us what is going on in the world."

"Well, thank God, there are some things going on beside drunken brawls and social scandals and embezzlements, though the newspapers do not seem to know it, or to care about it, if they do. I saw a new thing yesterday. You know that Jonas Johns and Willard Wills have not spoken to each other for a year—since that quarrel of theirs that the newspapers were so full of. Well, they met on First Street and shook hands and agreed to be friendly again. That is news worth telling But the newspapers that had so much to say about their quarrel wilt not have a word to say about their reconciliation. That is not in their line. They are public scavengers, whose duty it is, as they think, to gather up all the filth and garbage and cart it round to regale the eyes and nostrils of their patrons. Offer them a load of sweet and wholesome fruit, and they will not touch it. If any body is doing good, or trying to, he may possibly get a paragraph into a daily paper. But let him outrage all the laws of honesty and decency, and presto, he becomes a newspaper hero. Reporters are sent to interview him. His ugly face is photographed or engraved to gratify the morbid curiosity of the public. And all the while the criminal is but a second-hand affair, a bungling imitator of some historic villain. He is not even a first-class scoundrel. Now take this case of Tim and Jim. They are a couple of very ordinary men. The only notoriety they have ever achieved is that of beastly drunkards; but tomorrow's papers will parade their names in flaming capitals. All the particulars of their fight will be published for the edification of the young. We will have daily bulletins in regard to Tim's condition and the prospects of his recovery as we had of President Garfield after he was shot. I protest that this is not the kind of news that a Christian community should be fed upon.—Sel.

MRS. SPURGEON'S BULL FINCH AND ONYX RING.

During an illness of Mrs Spurgeon, before the Rev. C. H Spurgeon left her room for a journey he was contemplating, she remarked that she hoped he would not be annoyed with her for telling what had been passing through her mind. She made him, however, promise that he would not try to procure the objects for which she had been longing. She then told him that she had been wishing for a piping bullfinch and an onyx ring. Of course Mr. Spurgeon expressed his willingness to get both, but she held him to his promise. He had to make a sick call on his way to the station as well as a call at the Metropolitan Tabernacle Shortly after reaching the sick person's house the mother of the patient asked Mr. Spurgeon if Mrs. Spurgeon would like a piping-bullfinch, that they had one, but that its music was trying to the invalid, and they would gladly part with it to one who would give it the requisite care.

He then made his call at the Tabernacle, and after reading a voluminous correspondence, came at last to a letter and a parcel underlying the other letters. The letter was from a lady unknown to him, who had received benefit from the services in the Tabernacle, and as a slight token of her appreciation of these services asked his acceptance of the inclosed onyx ring, necklet and bracelets, for which she had no further use. This intensified his surprise, and he hastened home with what had been so strangely sent, went up to his wife's sick room, and placed the objects she had longed for before her. She met him with a look of pained reproach as if he had allowed his regard for her to override his promise; but when he detailed the true circumstances of the case she was filled with tearful surprise, and asked Mr. Spurgeon what he though of it." His reply was characteristic. I think you are one of your heavenly Father's spoiled children, and He just gives you whatever you ask for."—The Christian Herald.

REPORT OF MANDO STATION FOR JANUARY 1886.

The spiritual work in connection with this Station is still in the progressive at Mando proper. There has been a larger number of attendance at church since the commencement of the year and people are assuming a more reverent mood during divine service than heretofore. A man and wife who have been in the past rather indifferent about their souls have been spoken to. They have since been attending regularly at church. Also a country fashion man, about 60 years old was moved by the spirit to give up his charms and he too is added to our regular hearers. These facts encourage me greatly.

Outstations.—On account of ill health much itinerating could not be done. But the Towns near have been duly visited. Have met with equal success in each.

Day School.—The Day School was never in a better condition. Children seem to have as their motto Forward. Since the hand of the Lord is with me I am willing to labor. I can safely say of Mando Station that there are brighter days in Embryo.

Yours in Christ.
R. C. Taylor.

HOW DOES THIS HAPPEN?

Mr. Editor—There are many people in this country (and if I am allowed I would say wretches) who are practising cannibalism secretly. If my memory serves me well I learned from a trustworthy native that people often change into alligators to catch those who are given up as payment for that portion of human flesh they have eaten. But the fact I am after is, how can a human being turn into an alligator? This to me is a mystery and a hard problem to solve. My opinion on this subject is that a good deal of enchantment is used by those who are actors in this business. I understand that those who must lay hold on the prey are strong men only employed but are not members of those who eat the human flesh.

On the evening of 20th November last, a young man, a native of the country was standing by the edge of a river bathing and at once he was laid hold of and plunged into the water, whether by an alligator or what I cannot tell, what was noticed was the moving of the water and the hands of the young man seen above the water along the course that the catcher and the object pursued. About ten minutes after, the natives went out in canoes in search whether he could be found but it was in vain. Two days following they went again, and what do you think? the corpse of the young man was found lying on the mud in a branch of the same river and traces of footprints, of children as well as adults were seen on the mud, near and around, advancing towards the bush. Those who went in search were not satisfied to only stand and gaze, but followed the foot prints, and near the bush they found a man cut strewn on the ground. What was the condition of the corpse as it was brought to be buried? Part of the head was chopped as far down as the cheek, and taken away, one of the legs with the left hip were skinned off and nothing remained but bones; the left shoulder with the belly down to the abdomen with the person, were cut off and as observed, it was done with a knife, collar or some sharp instrument. Now readers this serves to prove how the evil one is hard at work and still having many agents to do his will. A heart filled with christian sympathy, will shudder at such an evil practice. It is no more a wonder why the present Chief whom we believe to be a politician man is putting forth his at most efforts to do away with secret societies, for I have heard him say that such societies have very pernicious tendencies, This is enough to stir up christian hearts, to awaken every itinerant to preach the word in season and out of season, that the preaching of the gospel may evangelize, christianize, and civilize the country to that height of elevation that secret societies as well as evil practices may be done away with.

I am sir, yours truly
A WATCHMAN.

Dear Mr. Editor—Allow me a little space in your valuable paper to insert the following. In the month of September last, an interesting Debate was given by several gentlemen in this place, which was held in the C.M.S. School room which proved a real success. The chairman for the occasion was the Rev. G.G.M. Nicol. All who were present went home satisfied. The chairman was so pleased with the argument on both sides, that he plainly said, he wished the speakers would give another meeting of the like shortly. After the meeting some of the speakers decided that another debate would follow in the month of December. Since then we have heard nothing of it. I therefore ask whether such meeting, which tend greatly to the improvement of our young men and the benefit of this community should be thrown aside altogether?

For my part I wish that such a meeting should not be thrown aside. But the question is when will such a meeting take place?

Tanking you for your kind indulgence,

I am Mr. Editor,

Dear Sir,—I wish to repudiate the statement which appeared in your last issue that I was attached to the "Christy Minstels of Manchester" Firstly I do not live near that town (when at home). Secondly, that I have never appeared with any such troup; and lastly I beg distinctly to state that I am purely an Amateur.—Apologizing for having taken up your space.

A RED INDIAN'S HONESTY.

An old Indian once asked a white man to give him some tobacco for his pipe. The man gave him a loose handful from his pocket. The next day he came back and asked for the white man; "for," said he, "I found a quarter of a dollar [1s. 10½d. among the tobacco."

"Why don't you keep it?" asked a bystander.

"I've got a good man and a bad man here, said the Indian, pointing to his breast, "and the good man say; 'It is not mine; give it back to the owner.' The bad man say, 'Never mind, you got it, and it is your own now.' The good say, 'No, no, you must not keep it.' So I don't know what to do, and I think to go to sleep, but the good and bad men keep talking all night, and trouble me; and now I bring the money back I feel good."

Like the old Indian' we have all a good and a bad man within. The bad man is temptation, the good man is conscience and they keep talking for and against many things that we do every day. Who wins!—The Missionary World.

A SCENE IN "MACBETH."

Cooke, the tragedian, was early struck with a love for the stage, and sometimes made curious shifts to get a sight of the play. One night he slipped through the stage door before the keeper was at his post, and groping his way behind the scenes, sought for a place where he might hide himself till the curtain rose, after, which he hoped to settle himself in some obscure corner and get a glimpse of the performance. In a remote spot he found a large barrel, into which he dropped, and discovered that it contained several large cannon balls. Little did he imagine that he had taken refuge in the machine for producing stage thunder. But so it was. Just as the last bars of the overture were being played, the proper man tied a piece of carpet over the top of the barrel without noticing its living occupant, raised it in his arms, no doubt wondering at its extra weight, and carried it to the side-scenes. The play to be acted was "Macbeth," which opens with tumder and lightning. As the curtain rose, away went the thunder machinery rolling along at the back of the stage. Dreadfully frightened and pounded by the cannon balls, Cooke roared lustily, struggling all the while to release himself His efforts were successful, for, sending the barrel on the stage, he burst the which covered it and rolled out in front of the audience.

We are pleased thus far with our Semi-Monthly success our Patrons of the Monthly have nearly all renewed for the semi-monthly Issue for 1886 but owing to this very success we regret to announce that the issue of the 15th of January was entirely exhausted largly by local Subscriptions, before renewals by mail and other otherwise from a distance could reach the office so that we were not able to supply many with that issue nor yet with January 30th, which although larger was also insufficient for all the subscribers. Another irregularity that we regret was the fact that we were obliged in many cases to mail the two January numbers together but this difficulty we believe is now over and we trust that hereafter the mailing of each issue will be seperate and in proper course. And while as we have said whe are highly gratified with our success thus far yet it will require several hundred more subscribers to place the enterprize in the position of maintaining itself for there must soon be a considerable expenditure for New Type in order to enable us to get out each issue in proper time and to insure a clear impression.

have been quite prevalent for some time past among the Citizens of our Town and District. Quite a number have been ill from various causes for a considerable length of time, among whom we may mention Mrs. Lucy During, one of our older and respected Residents, a Teacher of the Mendi Mission School in this place, has been prostrated for many months, and unable to speak, being obliged to write whatever she wishes to say. Mrs. Mary Quaker, another Employee of the above named Mission, has been a sufferer for some two mohths past. Mrs. Charles S. Brown has been a sufferer (we believe) for more than a year past. She went to Sierra Leone several months ago, and at present is reported to be very low and her sister Mrs. Macaulay has been called and left here last week to attend her; Mr. Brown her husband Church Catechist at Bendoo we believe will also go to Sierra Leone next week. Many others that we cannot mention are, or have been sufferers in the recent past. Several have passed away; prominent among whom we may mention Mr. B. G. Porter Mrs. J. G. Williams, Mr. Moses S. Johnson, with others whose names we cannot mention, have died; the two former in Freetown. The important lesson seemingly to be drawn from the above is that we should be in readiness for the Pale Horse and his Rider, for we know not the hour that we may be called to pay the Debt of Nature.

We should like to have it distinctly understood that we do not hold ourselves responsible for the assertions or opinions of our correspondents as every one within the bounds of reason is allowed to express his own opinion and while, if are aware of it, we will not insert a false assertion, yet it is not always possible, for us to know the certainty of every matter; hence parties when correcting statements should be careful to distinguish between us and our correspondents; for while we may make mistakes, for which we should be blamed, yet such is the peculiarity of our nature that we had rather not bear the sins of others as our own are quite sufficient.

To the Editor of the "Early Dawn."

Sir,—It was reported few days ago that the long continued disturbances in the Big Boom is now coming to a close, from the fact of the two contending parties, (viz: the Loghoss and the Boom people) having been entering into peaceful terms together. A Peace Mission headed by the natives themselves was sent from Tichonkol to a part yet of the Boom people. Jimmy, Brimah Jah's town, and Mosaboy, Yambo Corrier's, that were all enemies together, have now entered into a Truce with the Loghoos, and they could now walk together freely, even in their enemies towns without any molestation whatever from either parties. Their Peace Mission seems to be progressing; but I am of opinion Mr. Editor, that such undertaking by the natives themselves, will never be productive of any good results whatever. It will not only hinder Merchants and Traders from carrying on free trade in the interior, but the people being subjected to no few Treaty with the Government, could at any time whatever suddenly break out another disturbance, satisfying themselves as a rule in the plundering of Merchants and Traders, who might have gone to trade.

It is however my belief, that should our Government make a move now, a proper and much more lasting peace could be effected in a very short time. But without that I am afraid, the Boom will always be in that disturbed state.

I am, Mr. Editor,
Yours truly,
A MERCHANT.

Sherbro,
Feb. 24. 86.

Dear Mr. Editor,

Be so kind as let me have a very small space in a corner of your excellent periodical,in order to ask a pertinent question, for favour which I shall be thankful.

I have very often heard the following words uttered on platforms and have seen it in print "That Africa will rise." Africa must be evangelized and if Africa must be raised it is to be done by her sons; if Africa must be evangelized it must be by her sons. And the sons thus refered to or meant or understood, are supposed to be sons of Africa from the country of Sierra Leone.—I have heard Europeans advocate this doctrin on platforms and Sierra Leoneans have adopted it, practically gloried in the idea. But how do they intend to either raise or evangelize Africa? Will it be done under the existing state of things among Sierra Leoneans, Tribal differences Clanships, Localisms &c.—Thanking you for the indulgence.

I remain, yours truly,
DELTA.

WESLEYAN SABBATH SCHOOL

AMICUS versus TERENCE.

Mr. Editor,—Men to please their fellows, generally confuse themselves in some measure, and although it is said we should make "multum in parvo," still in the case of the above, something like self elation is exhibited. If you will remember Mr. Editor, in your issue for December 30th 1885, a Correspondent wrote under the title of "Amicus" reporting on the success achieved in the last Aniversary of the Wesleyan Sabbath School, ascribing all praise for such success to the Superintendent and Assistant Superintendent Mr. D. M. P. Thorpe, and further remarking "how that youngmen from Freetown should copy the example of Mr. Thorpe in promoting the interest of Sunday School and other Christian cours". The writer of that Article confined himself to giving all praise and credit to Mr. Thorpe the Asst Supt. for the success arrived at on that occation.

In your latest issue of Feb. 15th 1886 I observed with no little amazement an Article about Sunday School, signed "Terence" giving almost briefly, but surprisingly an account of what he thought was being done in that Sabbath School, commencing from the Anniversary to the Pic Nic and up to the time he wrote expressing in confirmation—his being present there on Sunday "To satisfy his curiosety.

Mark Mr Editor, to whom credit is given in this Article, and account mostly for the misinformation in the letter of Amicus, if truly it is so, Terence writes thus "The School under the very envisible management of J. A. Williams Esquire, assisted by the secretary Mr. Brighton Turner, had during the past quarter ended 31st December, evinced such marks of success," &c, &c, making you and your readers to believe that the credit for the success of the Sabbath school is only due to Mr J. A. Williams the Superintendent and Brighton Turner the Secretary and not the Asst superintendent Mr. D P. Thorpe as appeared in the article by Amicus. This is really a confusion of speeches, and surely in this fault finding age none can easily mislead the other. To this end I conclude that Amicus wrote and handed his correspondence to another individual to be forwarded for insertion, and in like manner did Terence to make the public believe that each one according to his letter had been doing much service in God's Work. "Self praise is no recommendation," as in this case.

Mr. Editor, if I shall not be wasting your time and space, I must boldly declare to these two writers that they have betrayed to the public that confidence imposed upon them, by exhibiting in a wide scope their capability and incapability, and at the same time writing as outthinking horse rushing to a mighty battle. Need I remind these two correspondents of the difference existing in their letters, and between their personal selves. Those two letters speak for themselves; and if Mr. Editor anything appearing in your journal that created great suffocation to the public; these may be treated as such.

Since writing, I have been informed that the two of them are at logger heads occasioned from the post of Asst. Supt. being seized from the one and handed to the other, hence the great confusion of speeches. Trusting that similar occurrence may be well watched after and avoided. With the assurance of your indulgence, I subscribe myself to be, Dear Mr. Editor,

Yours in earnest,
TRUTH.

NEWS ITEMS.

On the 31st ultimo, at 11 a. m. the Rev J. C. Thomas in continuation of the opening of Mo-Mosely Wesleyan Chapel, preached to a large congregation of natives with a sprinkling of Sierra Leoneans from 2cor 6. 16. when Mr. C. B. Collier of Mokate acted the part of an interpreter. Instead of interpreting sentence after sentence as is usually done, Mr. Collier took the substance of the discourse, and being conversant with the Mendi style of speaking moved the audience, to respond when necessary during his discourse.

At 4 p. m. of the same day, Mr. Collier addressed a crowded congregation in Mendi from Ex 20. 8 to 11. Every one was apparently edified. The attention was very marked and a large measure of Divine influence was felt. may God this infant Mission.

The s.s. Fonlah, Capt Fabre, arrived from Leeward via Freetown, on Sunday the 14th inst, and anchored off Bomplake with several passengers for this place. After receiving cargo, which she did up to Tuesday the 16th, she left early next morning for Freetown, having on board the following passengers:—Mr. Matthew Wilson and wife, Misses M. and C. Norman and brother, Mr. Fred. Porter, and few others.

It is reported that the Inspector or Sub Inspector of schools will likely be here in short to hold the yearly Government Examination.

It is reported that the Missioners have returned home last week per s. s. Niger and that the Revds. James & Henry Johnson are the only two laboring now in the villages.

It is rumoured the Rev. G. G. M. Nicol incumbent of St. Luke's parish will shortly go on leave to the Gambia, and that the Rev. James Johnson in charge of the parish during Mr. Nicol's absence.

The Ven. Archdeacon Johnson it is rumoured will be here shortly to hold revival services instead of the Rev. Mr. Fox who has returned home.

The Fortification work at Freetown is reported to be gradually progressing.

The Yonnies it is reported are still unwilling to submit. They are determined to fight.

FEBRUARY RAINS.—Several showers have fallen during the month, and some, one at least on the morning of the 25th inst was of some contiuuance and considerable water fell during the time. These showers have been blessings to many on the Islands and other places about the Sherbro where fresh water is so scarce.

Peace Reported.—We learn that peace is about to be brot. about in the Boom Regions something of which will be found in another column; we trust that it may be effectual and that business will again prosper in that qurter.

AVERY STATION.—Interesting Quarterly Services were held in the Chapel by Revd. G. N. Jowett on Sunday 21st inst. Bro. S. B. Morrison the Pastor in charge, we regret to note is reported rather unwell; he hopes however shortly to take a little change, which we hope may do him much good.

MARRIED.—At the Mendi Mission, Good Hope Chapel, on Sunday morning the 14th inst, Mr. Theo. M. Cole, to Miss Fanny Moses, Rev G. N. Jowett officiated.

DIED.—Recently in Freetown, Mr. Benjamin George Porter, an old and respected resident of this place. Mr. Porter's loss will be felt greatly here in his own family, the Church, and Community.

Personal

Mr. J. E. Porter was a passenger for Freetown by the Contract Boat on Friday the 19th instant.

Mr. Claudius A. Gilpin also left this place on Friday the 12th inst for Freetown.

Mr. Matthew Wilson Catechist of St. Matthew's Church Bonthe, left here on leave for Freetown with his wife.

Revd. R. Cookson Taylor, (U.B.C.) Pastor in charge of Man lo Station, Mendi Mission, paid a short visit recently to the District Supt. of the M.M.in this place. He preached in the Good Hope Chapel on Sunday evening the 21st inst. at 7.p.m. Mr. Taylor is a fine speaker and a gentleman of very pleasant manners.

FROM ENGLAND.—Mr. Wm. Murray has returned from England per s. s. Mandingo that arrived in this port on the 24th inst.

Mr. C. S Brown Catechist at Bendoo has been suffering much of late from toothache and it is also that Mrs. Brown is quite ill in Sierra Leone we sympathize with Bro. Brown in his Affliction.

Mr. J. H. Ashcroft of the Firm of that name at Shaingay has been very ill in Freetown for some time past but is again convalescent.

Capt. F. C. Halkett, our very energetic Acting Consul, left this place at 8 a. m. this morning (28th inst.) for Manoh Bargroo, we believe to settle some country matters.

Mr. E. Edwards, of Bendoo we are sorry to note has been unwell for some time past and at times, we are informed, has suffered very much.

MY VIEW OF THINGS.

For the past few weeks great events have been crowding rapidly upon the Goveanment here. The Colonial Surgeon was absent not long ago to hold a post mortem examination on the body of a Sierra Leonean supposed to have fallen over board of a canoe and drifted to Krankor in the Kittam River.

Another incident is a case of slave-dealing, now under investigation in the Court Hall. Besides these, the many prisoners that are sent weekly to Freetown for the Supreme Court, show that our worthy Commandant has indeed much to see after and luckily for Sherbro he is the right man in the right place.

The disturbances in the interior are still great; better results may yet be hoped for; but peace must first be secured or I fear a fital end may at last ensue. All these misfortunes can be overcome if proper arrangements be made in regard to the Police Force. If the Authorities will see that Policemen are placed where needed, repeated difficulties will be avoided, outrages will cease, and rumours or wars will be unheard. My humble suggestion is—that instead of assembling together the majority of the Policemen at Bonthe, let ample provision be made by the Head of department; fix several of them in those stations where peace prevails, but for a short time, and I am confident there will likely be peace in such stations. The present head of Affairs is worthy of his post, and so far as the change of things go since he has had the reins of Government, one can say that he is an energetic, vigorous, and able officer, truly qualified to hold the post.

A little more attention is required in the oversecing of Roads and streets. A great amount of filth is disposed of in the public streets, and, in fact, the streets are so much appropriated as the most convenient places for depositing every nuisance that the natives make it a rule to repeat this nuisance every morning.

The Post Office wants a little more Regulation with reference to the Staff provided for that all importa nt department. I allude to times of unavoidable circumstances when the Postmaster is otherwise disposed. It is rather strange at not surprising to see that a Post Office is furnished with the Post Master as its chief clerk, Sorter &c, &c.

We are indeed in a world of changes and chadows. Time rolls away and leaves a mark on every thing. Events transpired and passed away: Men rise and fall, and every one tries to let the future think of him. This relates to some false impressions left in the minds of the public by two correspondents who wrote under the name of Amicus and Tyrenus in connection with the Wesleyan Sabbath School. To whom then should we look with confidence?

There is a mixture in the town of both evil and good, which consequently create joy and grief at the same time. The practice of a sort of fetish action is now under prosecution, and one dare not walk at night. One thing after another, I fear the country will be ruined.

The Wesleyan Body has an increase of late by an addition of a new place of Worship at Gambia River, Bullom, which was dedicated to GOD four weeks ago.

The event of the past weeks was the Concert given by the same Body of Christians, under the management of Mr. S. Albert St. John, an energetic member of the Association. This Body of Christians is in all probability making progress in the Redeemer's cause.

The Subject of immorality which was faintly touched upon in my last, has created some excitement among those who cherished some liking for this evil work. "Indeed the wicked fleeth though no man pursueth."

How will Sherbro become great and who will constitute her future greatness or what? These are questions of interest and should lay heavy on the minds of those to whose care the training of the young has been committed. The Inspector of Schools will explain what I mean in his next Report after Examination.

The Commercial position of Sherbro is fearfully declining, and the trade up to now can never be spoken of as brisk, fair, or dull. Should not a Meeting be convened by the Traders to discuss on this depression so as to remedy it?

Since writing I heard that a Debate will take place on the 22nd inst., when it is cleverly proposed to handle the Subject of the "Depression of Trade" but whose and by whom, I cannot affirm.

Vale Mr. Editor,
Sincerely yours,
SERAPHINO.

A NOVEL FISHERMAN.

Several years ago a farmer, who resided in the neighbourhood of Lochmaben, Dumfriesshire, kept a gander which was not only fond of wandering himself, but also delighted in piloting forth the youngeese to weary themselves in circumnavigating their native lake. Wishing to check this vagrant habit, he one day caught the gander just as he was going into the lake, and tying a large fish hook to his leg, with part of a dead frog attached, he sufferd him to proceed on his voyage of discovery. The bait soon caught the eye of a greedy pike, which swallowed the deadly hook arrested the progress of the astonished gander, and forced him to perform half-a-dozen somersets on the surface of the water. The struggle was most amusing, the bird pulling with all its might—one trying to fly and the other to swim from the invisible enemy. At length victory declared in favour of the feathered angler, who bearing for the nearest shore, landed on the smooth green grass one of the finest pikes ever caught in Castle Loch. This adventure is said to have cured the gander of his propensity for wandering on the lake for a time, at last he got so used to the hook being on his leg that the moment he felt a tug he would bear off to the shore to be relieved of his victim.—Sel.

A joke is a mystery to some people. In a certain court in this state, on a time, the proceedings were delayed by the failure of a witness named Sarah Mony to arrive. After waiting a long time for Sarah the court concluded to wait no longer, and, wishing to crack his little joke, remarked, "This court will adjourn without Sarah-Mony." Everybody laughed except one man who sat in solemn meditation for five minutes, and then burst into a hearty guffaw, exclaiming: "I see it! I see it!" When he went home he tried to tell the joke to his wife. "There was a witness named Mary Mony who did'nt come," said he, "and so the court said: we'll adjourn without Mary-Mony." "I dont see any point to that," said his wife. "I know it" said he. 'I did'nt at first; but you will in about five minutes."—Sel.

A MODEL BOY.

"Sir," said a lad coming down to one of the wharves in Boston, and addressing a well know merchant, "sir, have you an berth on your ship? I want to earn something."

"What can you do?" asked the gentleman.

"I can try my best to do whatever I am put to do," answered the boy.

"What have you done?"

"I have sawed and spilt all mother's wood for nigh on two years."

"What have you not done?" asked the gentleman, who was a queer sort of a questioner.

"Well, sir answered the b y after a moment's pause, I have not whispered in school once for a whole year."

"That's enough," said the gentleman; "you may ship aboard this vessel, and I hope to see you the master of her some day. A boy who can master a wood-pile and bridle his tongue must be made of good stuff."

"Gentlemen," said a tattered tramp, as he approached a settee in City Hall park, which was entirely occupied, "I am very tired. Will one of you be kind enogh to get up and give me a seat? No one moved; but all gazed at the impudent nomad with a stony stare. "Gentlemen," pleaded the vagrant, "you have no idea how tired I am. I left Montreal"—Suddenly the seven men on the settee with one accord jumped up and fled, without looking arround. "Yes," said the tramp, as he streched himself out at full length on the bench, "I left when I was a boy."

WHAT IS NEWS.

"Now let us imagine that last night Tim and Jim, instead of going into the saloons and getting drunk, and then illustrating the blessing of our license system by knifing each other, had gone to a prayer-meeting, that there they had confess. I their sins and sought for the mercy of God; that there they had been converted, that God's angels hovering over the scene, had hastened to heaven with the news; that all the joy bells of paradise were rung to celebrate it that they talked a round the thronesaints and seraphs—about two souls redeemed from the power of sin to shine forever and ever. Would our daily papers have called that news? Would they have published it?

A week ago Giles Goodman heard of a destitute family in the lower part of the city. He took his big market basket to the baker's, the butcher's, and the grocer's, filled it with provisions for which he paid. He told what he was going to do with them. A reporter of the "Daily Telltale" was in one of the stores that he visited and heard from him the wants of that starving family. But he took no interest in the matter. It was not news. He was prowling around in search of news. He heard soon after that a thief had slipped into another store, and while the attention of the owner was diverted had robbed the cash-drawer. That was an item. The ubiquitous reporter was on hand with note book and pencil. He wanted all the particulars. He interviewed the shop keeper, the thief, and the officer who arrested him. He hastened to the office in jubilant spirits. He had a big local now. He wrote half a column about the "Daring Robbery" by which a poor fellow who wanted some whisky money obtained a few dollars in small change—not half as much as Mr. Goodman invested in the contents of that basket. Now why is it that crime is news and charity is not?

God tells us that he is going to make all things new, and before the millennium comes we will have a new style of journalism. The locals will not go for all their items to the saloons, the cockpits and the police courts. They will try to find out what good people are doing, they will herald and trumpet a man's virtues rather than their vices, his success rather than their failures, the progress of Christian civilization rather than the barking of the curs that snap and snarl at its wheels."

Will you get an Answer to Your Signal?

CAPTAIN Hawser is down in the trim, snug cabin of the "Racer," overhauling his box of signal-flags, and will waters, the new cabin-boy, is standing by watching the captain. Those are to signal with, Cap'n Hawser?"

"Yes, that's what we talk with, and a red flag is as good as a tongue—better, even—when we are a quarter of a mile away from a ship or a life saving station on shore."

"And you get an answer?"

Get an answer boy! What do you mean? See here, I'm off a life saving station, and I see in distress, and I want a boat immediately, having lost mine. I show the ensign, this American flag, and this pennant—red striped with white. That shows 'em on shore I want to talk with 'em. They will answer it. I show them a red pennant with a white ball in the center, and above it a blue square hay with white Block in center. That means "Want boat immediately." They will answer that too; and, what is more they will send a boat. Of course they will. Why not, boy?

Will goes to his berth, and sits down by it. He bows his head. He buries his face in his hands. He is away from home. He is in distress. There are temptations about him to give up prayer, to use profane language, to forget God. If he lifts a "signal" to God, won't he see it and answer it? If men can trust one another, and "signaling" can get answers, can't a boy trust God? And there alone will we find Him. Kneeling by his berth. And God looking down out of the wide, lonely sky, sees that "signal lifted by a boy in a wide, lonely sea, won't God answer? Try him, boys, on sea and on land.

"He shall call on me, and I will answer him." That is one of the promises in God's signal book. Do you know where it is? Only try the signals.—Selected

To the Editor of "Early Dawn."

Mr. Ed.—Every now and again I see articles written by Foreigners, seemingly, who are prejudiced, either against the African people, the Missionary cause, or Religion, as a whole, it is rather difficult to say which; but their complaint is against the Reports of Missionaries and Ministers of the Gospel as being either untrue or much exaggerated because of their reporting success in winning many persons along this coast to a better life, and that there is vast religious growth and improvement among the people in this Settlements and Towns, that have had the the labors of Missionaries, whereas these fault-finders say that, such is not the case and cite the low state of Morality among the people as an evidence always drawing their pictures from the lowest men and women to be found in Society, or may it be better to say in the Community and being very careful not to make a fair comparison with the same class of men and women in the most polished cities in the world, for it would defy any man to find men or women any lower in the Moral scale in any of the West African Settlements, than can be found in London, Paris, or Naples. But it does seem to me that the most stupid ought very readily to perceive the grand difference between the grass covered clusters of circular Huts that nestled among the jungles of Sierra Leone, filled with naked warlike savages as they were before Missionary Work was commenced among them. And the present Palatial Residences, Churches, Schools, and other Buildings arranged along wide streets and handsome Avenues, it certainly must be more pleasant, if not inviting to the most refined European, than was the former condition of things, and I am quite sure that there is far more safety to both life and property. Who would now go back the savage life of a century ago in its best form, in exchange for the most imperfect civilization of any part of this coast today? or who would care to exchange the most hypocritical pretenders to christianity, that are now to be found here in the villages of Sierra Leone or elsewhere for their canibal predecessors that infested the jungles of these Western shores of Africa even fifty years ago? So, say what you may of what is not right or what it should be, or that Missionaries have made mistakes and even blunders in their efforts; yet it must be conceded that mans condition is better today on this coast through the labours of the Missionaries than it was twenty five years ago that the advancement of civilization through christian effort has so toned down the savage life of the people as to make it tolerable for those who speak reproachfully of the religion of Christ, to remain here, in peace while they note down all the bad traits in the characters others whose sins are moderate compared with their own wickedness. It certainly must be an improvement, that has transformed the sons and daughters of savage ancestors into such intelligent and refined young gentlemen and ladies as we now meet in all the Avenues of life today, along this coast. To me it seems impossible for tongue to express or pen to paint even a fair description of what Gospel influences have wrought along this Western shore of the dark continent, just think of yourself landing in Bonthe, one hundred years ago among the naked savages then, everywhere abounding and not a single well dressed native to be found, not a decent house to be seen, no sound of familiar voices, nor of singing, except of the wild dance, or war song. But land here today, and what will you meet? many well constructed dwellings, furnished in European taste and beauty, opening on beautiful streets you will find Public Schools open with skilled Instructors, native born, you will find Government officials, Commercial clerks, Merchants, Tailors, Shoemakers, Carpenters, in short a host of Negro men instead of meeting only naked savages (of whom there are many yet to be seen) you will now meet hundreds of well-dressed men and women, and among whom there is some thrift, and an enterprize for trade that I will defy the world to surpass. But above, yet behind and underlying, all this you will find several churches or chapels with large enrolments of membership and a greater percentage of the inhabitants of Bonthe attending Divine Service on Sabbath than attend like services in London or New York; as to the sincerity of the worship, I verily believe that it will compare very favorably with that of either place. Native ministers, Catechists and Teachers, of great ability are to be found everywhere along the coast, performing well in most cases their various duties. Hoping in my next to answer further objections.—I remain for the present.

Yours truly,
March 6th 1886. As OBSERVER.

Report of Mando Station For the Month of Feb. 1886.

A more lively interest has been manifested in matters of religion by the younger portion of the people since the commencement of the month than heretofore. Two important additions were made to the number of regular weekly services. S. School Children's service, Wednesday 4 30 p. m.—Night School, Monday and Friday, 7 p. m. Would do once heart good to see the poor children (domestics) who are not allowed to attend our Day School, poring over their books with satisfaction written on their faces. If we can only get the Alphabet sheets and other Books necessary and another lantern we want no more. The people of the farkia really covet the multiplied advantages of the people of mando. I have made arrangements to send those of the Mission boys whose heart the spirit has touche I, to go out to the people more frequently. The number of itinerating Towns visited is 16, with 300 seekers enrolled on our Books. A believers class has yet been organized. The Day School is still in a healthy condition. There are still gigantic obstacles to overcome. Yet since the Lord is on my side, I will still hope on.

Yours in Christ,
R. C. TAYLOR.

THE PROSPECTS OF PEACE.

In the Boom the success of the native peace Mission has been such, we believe, this for, as to make some to feel certain that peace will be fought about soon, in that region; and notwithstanding the rumours from the Interior, of the late depredations of the younies, it is still believed, or at least hoped for, by others that an end will in short, be put to all the wars and disturbances in the country about us, and there are still others who put little faith in a peace secured by native effort, who are consequently not so sanguine of immediate or permanent success. Yet it is quite evident from careful observation among all classes that there is hope for better days and that these wars will come to an end of themselves or in some way shortly. There is evidently signs of easier breatting in all quarters on the war question. Our own view of the Stations, is that as the carcases of booty or plunder are fast disappearing the war bussards will most likely soon take their flight to other parts; in the event of which peace will enstie as an inevitable result.

We have received through the kindness of Revd. G.G.M. Nicol, copies in Pamphlet Form of the Proceedings of the Sierra Leone Church and Missious, and also Report of the Pastorate Association, neatly printed at T. J. Sawyer's Excelsior House. These Reports show great progress in the Church work of the Native Pastorate Churches and their Missions in every respect and we hereby return our thanks to the Donors

The "Noonday Sun."—Our spicy little Exchange in its December issue, (now from Chicago, O.) U.S.A. After saying some very nice things about the Early Dawn, of West Africa; geatly reminds us of its itinerating nature, and that it has gone about now to Chicago U. We would also remind the Noonday Sun in turn, that Bro. Wilberforce may probably smile, should he see all the nice things said about him, in consequence of our notice of the Noonday Sun remembering that he had retired from the Editorial Management of the Early Dawn sometithe before this very plea sant exchange commenced, which has taken nine months to complete its firs round.

SHAMOKIN.

This lively Christian town is somewhere in Pa. U. S. A. I dont know just where but should I ever live to visit America again I hope to see and know some of those dear christians that have sent such a nice lot of cloths to these poor, helpless heathen children. God alone knows how thankful we are for these gift. The following are amongst the names that have contributed to this box that was received by the Liberia on her last trip out.

Mr. S. B. Morrison of Avery Station has inventted a contrivance for hulling or pulping coffee, which although very simple and cheap in construction we believe can be with very slight improvements made to haul coffee very rapidly and a great anvantage in this Machine is that it can be made large or small and if perfected will no doubt meet a long felt need—i. e. of a Machi e that is of native construction—Something that any one raising even a small crop of coffee can possess and use himself as readily as he can the ordinary rice mortar.

WESLEYAN SUNDAY SCHOOL

Amicus vs. Tyrenus critically examined.

"Truth needs no lie for its advocate, either as a suppressio veri, or in the form of a suggestio falsi."

Sir,—Mr. Truth in your issue of the 28th February has been very kind in bringing to public notice contradicting statements contained in the letters signed respectively "Amicus" and "Tyrenus" relative to the success achieved in the Wesleyan Sunday School which has been ascribed to two different persons. It is therefore necessary for the satisfaction of the public that they be examined as regard matter of fact.

"Amicus" report is a fact in reality and "Tyrenus" a fact imaginary. Amicus after calmly observing all that has been said and done in the Sunday School Anniversary, and particularly the Annual Report read before the Public Meeting, was convinced that the success spoken of was due to the Asst. Supt. Thorpe for his energy and labour bestowed in the Sabbath School during the year under review; and in this he was duly supported by Secretary Turner's report read in the Anniversary Meeting. Tyrenus' imaginary report is plausible and fancyful, but cannot stand the test of strict examination when compared with Amicus' stern reality of fact. In the first paragraph of Tyrenus' letter, we notice two confused ideas contradicting each other viz:—"The unique success that attended the Sunday School in connection with the Methodists here during the past month" and immediately after this he writes—"The school under the very enviable management of J. A. Williams Esq. of the Gambia in the Boom and Kittam Rivers assisted by the School Secretary, Mr. Brighton Turner had during the past quarter ended 31st Dec. 1885; evinced such marks of success that it was etc."

Now the Public will be too glad to learn from our self-constituted Gamaliel Mr. Tyrenus whether it is the unique success of one month he is reporting about or that of three months? whether it is through the unique succes of the past month, or of the quarter ended 31st Dec. 1885 that called forth a Pic-Nic as a memorial for such a wonderful success.

Now it is a known fact among the Teachers as well as scholars of the Wesleyan Sunday School, that Secty. Turner then Asst Secty., was absent from Bonthe during the month of November, and never returned till the 10th of Dec. when he was brought to this place very sick; and consequently could not be in the position of being energetically employed at the Sabbath school during the past month November, nor even in December as he was under Medical Treatment. And mark Mr. Thorpe the Asst. Supdt. was labouring during the period specified in Tyrenus' letter—though he worldly-wisely passed him by unnoticed.—Communicated.

Mr. Editor,—This is the first of my writing to you and the reason why I write is that I have read in a paper that Africans fruit civilize Africa. And Mr. Editor this ought to be the way but you must know very well that the blind cannot lead the blind, and how can the African's civilize Africa when they themselve need civilizing, even the best of them I myself am an African, was born of African parents, in this very Sherbro country. I have been in Freetown, and have seen how they do their Those that have been trained in the Grammar School and in the Colleges and for all that they do not behave like the civilized people that come from England and America, In their houses they live like country people Husband and wife are more like master and servant. They keep up a heathen custom of second burials. And believe in country fashion and these are the ones that ought to civilize Africa. Even here in Shengay where I am at present Spending some time These civilized Africans beat their wives the same as the Heathen And some of them go as near naked as the Heathen. And have seen the children ten and twelve years old quite naked and that too out at Mr. Gomer Mission where a notice is posted up at the door that no naked children are allowed there and they can read the notice for themselves, Mr. Editor I do think that Africans will civilize Africa very soon.

NEWS ITEMS.

Messrs R.T and C.B. Collier gave us a very pleasant call on the 2nd inst., on their way to Mokate, and confirmed the Report we had previously heard of the efforts of the Natives in the Boom to make peace.

We understand that Kittam Trouble's that created some anxiety a few weeks ago, are not after all of a serious nature and will likely soon pass away.

S. S. Footah arrived from Freetown 11. March 86. Revd J. T. Argill Mrs. Haffner and 11 deckers cleared on the 13th for Freetown—with the Agent general of the Firm of Messrs Fisher & Randall.

Just received Sawyerr's Trade Circular for Feb. 27th it grows better with each Issue and we have been much interested indeed with the contents of thet present number, are thankful to Messrs Sawyerr's for the same.

DIED, recently at the village of Wilberforce, Sierra Leone after a long and painful illness, Mrs. Mary B. Brown, wife of Mr. Chas. S. Brown well known as Church Catchist in this place for so many years, but who for some time past has been stationed at Bendoo in the same capacity. These tidings will doubtless fall heavy on the ears of many relatives and friends, all of whom have our greatest sympathies.

A New Chapel—The people of Mando Station are now building a house of worship for themselves under the direction and leadership of their enterprizing Pastor R. C. Taylor who seems fully alive to every good work. Let us hear from another Pastor and people like minded.

Koolongo Station—Is reported as reviving again under the Pastoral care of Rev Jas. A. King, a promising young man, of ability and enterprize; Mr. King was formerly Rev. J. C. Sawyer's Assistant in that Station during which time they did a great work for the Master. We shall expect to hear good news from Bro. King in short.

It is reported that the Yonnies have come down fearfully upon the Mendis about M'Cassby and Tiamah. A few days ago, a town called Fu-ma-mah, near Bonthumah was burnt down with the inhabitants therein; Numbers of men, women and children perished in the flames.

In the Kparr regions also Vonjo's war boys have been too much elated in their hostilities; Kwondor-ma was besieged, and laid in ruins. Marlimah chief of that place suffered also with those that died. We are glad for the Peace Meetings at the Boom and other places, and we hope the time is not far when entire peace shall reign among the natives.

A NEW YEAR'S TALK.

ing the methods used, and by remembrance that God uses the weak things of this world to confound the mighty.

I have dwelt long'r on my" Firstly" than I intended in this talk, and must hasten to say, Secondly, That in the past we have probably allowed ourselves to be too much annoyed by the fact that so many, who could help both by their money and personal presence, have help aloof. Have we not been sometimes like children who, when bidden do so nething, have whined out, "Let Jane or Sarah do it; I have to do everything." I grant you 'tis a strong temptation to complain when, rushing to meet your class at 9:00 A. M. on Sunady morning with the thermometer at zero, you glance in at Mrs. Brown, whoes prospects for heaven are as good as yours, and see her coolly toasting her slippered toes, and reading—not even the Bible! The same feeling comes up when you are packing off some hot morning to organize a local society, and Mrs. Smith calls from her easy-chair on the piazza, with "Havergal's Meditations" in her hand, "Off again are you? You must like it." Ah, me! Brother Peter, at such times we do not blame you at all for asking, "And what shall this man do?" for John was always having an easy time, while the rough and disagreeable work was left for you. It is in nature to look at things in this way. But we are not under nature, but under grace, and can be delivered from the temptation to complain by setting it once for all, that whatever Mrs. Brown or Mrs Smith has to do is simply none of our affairs; they are possible better Christians than we are, and our business is to take up quickly the work that lies next to us, and do it bravely, cheerfully, and the very best we can, cherishing the belief that, since it is ours to do, we can do it at least as well, if not better, than anyone else. Let us but talk much this year about duty' but more and more about the blessed Privelege, and magnify before our eyes the grand and glorious company of those in heaven above, and in the earth beneath, who are in a thousand different ways trying to build up the Redeemer's Kingdom.—

Mrs. D. L. Pike. In Evangel.

A LECTURE

"WHAT ARE THE BEST METHODS TO BE ADOPTED FOR THE IMPROVEMENTS OF A COUNTRY.

In accordance with previous intimation a lecture under the presidency of the Rev. G. G. M. Nicol A. M. in charge of St. Matthew's Church here, was given at the Church school room by Mr. Wilhelm, Wesleyan Day School Teacher of this place, on Wednesday Evening the 10th inst., to a moderately large assembly.

The Lecturer cautiously divided his subject which certainly was a wide one into two distinct heads;

1st COMMERCE, 2nd. CIVILIZATION, and proved that without either, the other can never with success advance the elevation of a country. He argued that the improvement of a country solely depends upon its commercial operation, and most particularly civilization, and that without the latter there never can be any elevation whatever. With this argument he brought out proofs based on from points of utter significance to those of primary importance, to exibit the necessity for those, upon whom the progress of a country is depended, to adopt and put to practice the very wise remarks of Bishop Dones, who in rather striking term condemned immorality and unsteadfastness generally as qualities which spawn and ponder in dirt and consequently should not be encouraged by those who desire the improvement and civilization of his Country.

This lecture which was delivered with the confidence and manner in which, expected from the lecturer forcibly pointed out the necessity for organizing a Mutual Improvement Association in connection with the District of association having for its aim the improvement and refinement of Sherbro. It showed the danger to which the Commercial prosperity of the Country is exposed by the wide difference of the Rival Chiefdoms of Sherbro and offered some observations in regard to the method by which the evil may be remedied. The lecture was instructive, practical and pointed, and reflected very great credit to the intellectual acquirements of the lecturer, who may, by dint of perseverance, and energy as well as by constant application raise himself to the highest pitch and standard of importance in life.

The subject immediately after the the lecturer had concluded his task was announced ready for discussion and William Hughes Esq. Deputy Coroner, was first called upon to address the meeting. Mr. Hughes was manerly, unobjective, and opprobrious, but though seemed quite conversant with the subject, yet he mostly threw out some observatory remarks, relative to the necessity of adopting the very honest remarks of Bishop Dones. He evinced considerable wit, in opening with the discussion, and after leaving a very wide field for his successors to explain, as it were upon, he sat down amidst much enthusiasm and cheers:

Mr. Victor Manes, of late Fouh Protestan at which place he served as one of the influence masters in the Government school of his own accord (it appeared with the object of exposing intro-alia "his view of Islam") and representating with the Lecturer he appreciated it, did perhaps, somewhat grass of people in general thinking, to shew himself in a contradiction and into the greatest confusion of ideas; and thereby exposing his total incompetence to discuss upon the subject. In a word he expressed views that can only be answered by reconsiciled absurdities.

Mr. J. E. Crown of R. H. Customs amidst the enthusiasm which his official position deserved in such a meeting, next addressed the meeting. Mr. Crown in a neat and sensible speech, carpected the argument of Mr. Hughes, that progress can never rise to the improvement of their capacity if the administrations afforded are not put to practice by the taught them.

Mr. Ellis Parkinson carpented Mr. Crown's argument, and showed the necessity of its being carried into mutual improvement Society in the country.

Mr. Tate Waiter Z. E. T. Williams, not unlike Mr. Crown rose amid loud applause as he was really entitled to the description received in discussing on the subject, he evinced no little of ancient and modern intelligence and invited our thoughts far back to Roman and Grecian Histories and satisfactorily proved by the conduct of those of ancient greatness that best commerce and civilization are not half the requirements to the elevation of a country.

Mr. Gladstone Shepherd a seeming gentleman of high complexion, and a Gentlemen by trade, now added still to the excitement and excitement, and seemed as if he was propelled to speak; his sentences were vague, his manners rude and unbecoming, and his whole phraseology depicted talented ignorance, dissipated and cruel. Surely he was though not drunk yet entirely in-sensitive the discussion, or object of meeting either your youngmen, the occasion that necessitated his addressing, the meeting, served to prove that the Charges of the reputed assembly of some were have made it not impossible for their descendants to be vicious in the extreme, without being degenerate.

"Fools rush in where angels fear tread."

Mr. Shepherd as if unconscious to the danger in which he was allowing himself to be exposed threw out many base insinuations to the disadvantage of Government Officials in Sherbro, who may be obliged to recourse to some channel for their application. He exposed himself to the disgust of the audience, hence the seeking of cutting upon parties to discuss on such like occasions arises other than allowing every subtle moral and indecent leaves to satisfy their petty notions at the cost of another people's reputation.

Mr. Pandson Thorpe followed. This time subject of the Lecturer was not "rendered opaque." He views in regards to what he considers were the best methods to improve the country, were not free of prejudice, he spoke, as if he had a private spleen against one or the other in the community, he referred to "daring" (the stories are mine) among the inhabitants as the predominant evil in Sherbro he mentioned talkertives as people upon whom no confidence may be reposed he thinks talked a lot and ended where conscience knows.

Mr. Magnus Cole expressed a wish to see men of enlightened imperial character, men whose hands are not stained with blood, by the meddling of Greegrees or Fetish so as to conserve against another, and was not of a double face come forwarded to render some assistance to the improvement of themselves and country.

The whole transaction came to an end at 9. p. m. punctually.

Among those present I observed, Capt. F. Craigo Hallett Acting Civil Commandant, and Mrs. M. Lafferty, the Misses Collier, W. Hughes Deputy Coroner, Messrs. J. D. Macauley Chief clerk of Customs, Z. E. T. Williams, J. E. Crown, Brighton Turner Custom Officers, J. B. Parkinson Esq. C. J. Cole Esq., T. E. Manley Ex. Agent Yanda boo Factory; J. A. Williams Esq. of Kambia.—

A NEW YEAR'S TALK.

The editor of the Evangel sent this message to-day: "Can not you write something for the Evangel?" Do you know that whenever that request comes I think of the remark of Mrs. F. when her advice was asked with regard to our having a paper? "Oh don't do it, she said, for the world is already cursed with poor literature." But this is only to be a little New-year's talk with the Evangel family, and the remotest attempt at literature. In the first place, we know that the men and women who have accomplished in st have had deep and abiding convictions. They believed with all their might in their cause; they believed in themselves; that they were divinely called for a special work and all obstacles thrown in their path, all discouragement and persecutions were looked upon only as so many incentives to greater efforts and really blessings, in that they developed a strength and purpose of character before undreamed of. Let us take a hint from such, and prosecute our work in this year of our Lord 1886, cherishing the most profound convictions of our high and holy calling.

Doubt always weakens; and some of you there may be still be a lingering shadow as to the exact propriety of women taking an active part in telling the good news. A bit of personal experience is relevant here. A number of years ago Rev. Mr. Barnes' notes on the new Testament were taken up in regular course for Sunday-school reading, and the instruction and delight which such a reading afforded can not be expressed. But to one brought up in a church where women were not only allowed to speak and pray in a mixed assembly of men and women, but exhorted, and urged to do it as a duty, the comments on I. Cor. 14: 11, 12, and I. Tim. 2: 11, 12, and all the other chapters and verses of a similar nature, were indeed a revelation Mr. Barnes' representing a grand and noble body of Christians, teaching one thing, and other equally pious men and churches holding exactly the opposite. "To the law and to the testimony" for yourself in such a case. A carefull reading again of the book with this thought in mind, "What part did women really take in the work of the early church," removed all doubt and confirmed the conviction that every man, woman, and child under the blue sky might do with it might what his hands find to toward building up right in the earth. Look at those men protrayed in sacred story. They were not only interested spectators from behind closed drawn veils, and content know how the new religion prepered by asking their husband at home, but were evident out seeing and hearing for themselves. They were ministers to Jesus of their substance. (O blessed thought, that we may do the same.) They were round pretty early on the morning of resurrection day, running with haste to tell the news, the joyful news, to the preachers themselves! Four girls of them in one family, all evangelists, holding prayer-meetings out by the river side, and holding Paul on many occasions, according to his own testimony. Yes, co-laborers with Paul. That settles it.

We are not of those who "leave to differ with Paul." On the contrary, we quite agree with him; and if it could be possible that like conditions existed in church now as in the church of Corinth, men drunk at the communion table, 2 or 3 on the floor speaking at once, in an unknown different tongues, women dressed in the fashion of Corinth that day, joining, too, in the roar,—then it would be eminently proper, and in good taste, and for the glory of God, that the women keep silence. If there should be a church-quarrel, which awful calmaity does sometimes overtake a church,—then let the admonitions be heeded and in the church and out of let them learn the divine art of keeping the mouth shut. Women as a rule, do more harm with their tongues than men, not that fact, from that they talk more but better—better in the sense of sharper, more stingy.

There may be other causes of weakness; half a doubt as to whether it is the purpose of the Lord to have all nations own his sway; half a doubt as to the wisdom of the methods used a big doubt as to whether the poor, weak, stumbling mortal who has about all he can do to work out his own salvation, can indeed help anybody else solve the problem. Whatever of these flaws, or any others, we may find in ourselves, let us begin now to put them away. Put the sway by a careful study of God's word along the line of our doubts by a study of his plans and purposes for the whole earth, by review of the success attend-

REPORT OF AVERY STATION M. MISSION FOR THE QUARTER ENDING 28TH FEBRUARY 1886.

Mr. President,—It had been expected, that at the commencement of the quarter a favorable time would ensue. Sure enough our expectations have been cheerfully realized. Many hearts have been awakened, the brethren have with fresh hopes been lifting up the standard of the cross; and voices like the psalmist, have been heard, to exclaim "The lines are fallen unto us in pleasant places, yea we have a goodly heritage." But it is a possitive fact that in a world like this, things are never at a stand; i.e. to say there is no stability here, for changes must occur. Hence with a heavy heart I regret to mention that two of our brethrens have openly gone back to the world, deserted the right path and the good way, preferring worldly pleasures to those things which tend to their salvation; thus showing that their conduct has not corresponded with their profession. The evil examples, and pernicious habits of the half civilized residents in the neighbourhood have tended to the ruin of souls, and the detriment of the good cause. These facts often produce not discouragements, but shame, ridicule and disgrace; the consideration of which has placed our minds in an unsettled state. Yet, I am happy to state, that our congregations have been kept up, and our hope for future strength and comfort have been cheered with the promise. "He giveth power to the faint and to them that have no might, he increaseth strength.

Our Work in the Circuit, including Manoh, Koh-tu-mahoo, and M'Calabey, has been encouraging. I have contemplated and made arrangements to organize other Seekers' Classes, in some of the neighbouring villages where the Brethren have been endeavouring to sow the seed; and I pray, that the All-Searching Eye will take the lead, and cause His Promised Presence to go with us when the fit time comes. At present we Report 332 Seekers, Com: 29, Total—361.

Day School.—There is every encouragement in this Department; the scholars are doing their best, and there is hope for the future. Total number of both sexes 42.

Sabbath School.—This small gathering continues steadily, and though we cannot report much progress at present, yet we are thankful for the little encouragement. Teachers & Officers 5,—Scholars, 28, Total —33.

Missionary Aid Collections for the Quarter ending March 31st. £... 8. 0.

Money Collected to defray Light Expense.—£0. 6. 5½.

Briefly on the Purport of being Religious.

MR. Editor,—There are many Religions with variety of creeds as well as different objects of worship. The original of these are those which teach the existence of one God, viz., the christian, the Jewish, and the Mohametan. But my drift is after the Christian religion which acknowledges Christ as the anointed One and the Saviour of mankind. Religion in a restricted sense relates particularly to our duty to God in regard to our worshipping and adoration of Him. Man being a moral agent, he is endowed with a notion of right and wrong by which he is also capable of being religious, hence he should be devoted to God as this religion is taught by Christ and his disciples insist that man should not have his own way, but the way of God. A mohametan being interrogated as to why he prays five times a day, replied to show his zeal and faith in his religion. What a close comparison is faith that walks with religion and which renders all assistance to make its devotees diligent. Faith makes the merchant diligent and vexatorous, and sometimes makes him sick. Henry the seventh of England did not believe the story told by Columbus, therefore did not trust him with shipping and hence he did not get the West Indies; for Ferdinand of Aragon believed him, and therefore furnished him with ships by which he got the West Indies to his faith in the undertaker. Faith Hope and Charity are characteristics of religion, and the tendency of each are reasons enough to make us religious. If at all there is any grandness in religion, and there is of the highest magnitude it must be evinced by its devotees who must manifest to those who are not pro but con to religion, that no happiness can be secured without it. In life, there are ups and downs so that there is no perfection but it should be our aim and earnestness to be what our Saviour in his sermon on the Mount commends us to be, "Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Heavenly Father which is in Heaven is perfect." Why should we be religious? Man was created in the image of God, but by disobedience has lost that image, and thereby he is exposed to divine displeasure. Religion can restore man to that image of God bring peace into a household, stability and liberty into a country. The brevity of time as compared with eternal life with the consideration of the vastness of Eternity, and knowing that there is a life to live either in Hades damnation, or in Hades Righteousness are enough to bring the mind into close communion with God. In the Bible we see clearly what shall become of the soul after death by the deeds done in the flesh, and here we are left to make our selections as to what reward we shall reap. It has been the experience of the good that Religion brings a cheering and consoling thought in the sad hours of affliction and also in the dying hour. When Henry Martin was near his end he said, "why should I murmur? weakness, peril, and pain are but respecting angels, whose office it is to conduct me to Glory."

It is religion that makes us do right and attend properly to our duty as children of our Heavenly Father. The Rev. Dr. Talmage in one of his recent sermons says "For when a man does his duty he challenges all earth and hell and that challenge will bring a gigantic him opposition and scoff and persecution," now having the religion of Jesus Christ, these can be surmounted and borne with courage and fortitude. While we are more or less inclined to worship God in the true sense of the word, let us not also forget that

"Soon borne on time's most rapid wing,
Shall death command you to the grave,
Before his bar your spirit bring,
And none be found to bear or save."

Wilberforce,
March 18th '86.

Rev. J. A. Evans.—My dear Sir,—I would have written by the last Boat to inform you of the death of my dear wife, but pressure of cares would not possibly allow me to do so. On my arrival in Freetown, I found her in the Colonial Hospital, whither she was taken in a very low state, and all hopes of her recovery had been dispelled. The Doctors tried their best, but the Lord's will must be accomplished. In your prayers, please remember me and our six children whom she has left behind to mourn her irreparable loss.

I remain,
Your afflicted servt,

The Early Dawn.

March 30, 1886.

WE are obliged to speak again on the Subject of Communications by the appearance of several irregularities in our last issue which we regretted very much, one of these was two papers appeared without signatures, with simply the words Communicated attached below the first, being in the place and form of a signature escaped our notice entirely, until the proofs were all corrected: the second was a paper handed in to us in good faith by a gentleman whose real name we have, but only received the promise of a signature to his next paper and were oblige to attach the significant term Communicated to it also, quite against our will; an apology would have been made in the same issue, but our space was filled up. The second irregularity noticed too late was the use of rather strong and too personal terms in the Report of a Lecture and Discussion, and while so far as we have been informed the writer of that Report has not been able to screen himself at all behind the Press, yet we prefer not to publish such personalities, and we trust that hereafter, our esteemed Contributors, Correspondents, and Itemisers will not expect us to insert such matter; as one abusive paper in one issue generally calls forth a host of like answers in the next issue which if we should dare to insert would be a disgrace both to us and the writers, and of no benefit to the Public; hence we say that from this time forward, as long as we may control these Columns, we will not accept of objectionable, and especially abusive matter. And we further suggest that when men have done some good thing and wish a trumpet sounded that they would at least get some one else to write up the Report of their great deeds.

REV. J. M. LESHER.

We clip the following Official Anouncement from the Religious Telescope of Feb. 10.

For good and sufficient reasons Revd J. M. Lesher's departure for Africa has been deferred for a time, and he is to continue in the field as a Soliciting Agent of the Board of Missions. He will give only a part of his time, however, to this Work. We hope our people will invite him to visit them often. The Divine Seal is on our Foreign Mission Work, and many souls in Africa and Germany are being saved and brought into the Church. This is a good time to give largely to Missions.

Z. WARNER,
Cor. Secty,

Mr. Editor,—I promised in your last issue to answer further objections which a certain class of writers make against the reports of Missionaries, even Capt Lewis in his otherwise excellent Pamphlet holds or maintains wrong views I think on this subject as he too thinks that had the reports of Missionaries been true that were made in his boyhood, then all the heathen would have been converted ere this time; but certainly he must forget his own declarations where he reasons the impossibility or may be I should say, the improbability of converting the world to Christ since there are so many more souls born into the heathen world than are there converted to christianity which accounts very readily for the non-completion of the work. But the chief objection I wish to answer in this paper is the one raised against the coastline of West Africa as being a good field for Missionary operations; we are told by the objectors, that Missionaries are constantly writing of these parts as ripe for the harvest of Gospel labor, whereas these wiseacres say that such is not the case, and to prove it, first refer to the standard of morality among the mussas of the people; then again to the insincerity of many who profess faith in the true religion; in answering these objections I would first say that christian Missionaries in using the expression of the field here being white unto the harvest only follow their divine master, who in his life on earth, denounced the people among whom he laboured as a wicked and adulterous generation, hypocrites who compassed sea and land to make one proselyte, who when he was made, became seven fold more the child of hell than themselves. Yet of this same generation, Christ himself said to his disciples, the field was white unto the harvest, and by this urged them forth to the grand work of saving souls. There is not, nor can the strongest objector, draw a darker or blacker picture of the moral condition of the people here than the Saviour has drawn of the state of the people in his time; nor have Missionaries ever dared in their best reports in the past or do they now presume to use stronger terms than the seventy disciples sent out by Jesus in the enlargement of the Galilean circuit who when they returned reported that even the very devils were subject unto them; Christ did not object to this report as exagerated, but simply said they ought rather to rejoice that their own, names were written in heaven, hence I suppose that their report was true and yet even little Galilee was not converted to Christ, in even the next fifty years, nor the next five hundred years, so it does not follow that if the reports of Missionaries forty years ago had been true, that the world would have been converted ere this time to Christ, nor does the gross immorality of a nation or people prove that their country is not a field white or ready unto an abundant harvest and what is true of other countries I maintain is true of the coastline of West Africa, hoping to prove this assertion by adducing facts in my next paper.

Yours truly,

IN AND ABOUT SHAINGAY.

Dear Bro Evans,—Yours of the 4th instant charging me with indifference for not writing for the Early Dawn is at hand, I will explain—. landed here on the 18th of February from Freetown had my plans made up for the next six weeks. Mambo, Rembee, Ncharmany, and Kolong was the Sunday appointments. Letters were to be written for private parties and papers and lots of other secular business was to be crowded in to the next six weeks but alas for man's planning a strong fever seized me, and to date I have not filled one of my appointments. The fever is any thing but pleasant and especially when it is accompanied with Neuralgia in the head but what do the people care they were calling all the same and telling you to hush, I took another room to avoid the calling and then they would annoy my wife and insist that they had important business, she urged me to return to Freetown, but I drank bush medicine and am much better to day. A Teacher Mr. Josiah Thompson from Freetown during my illness and after spending a few days I ordered a carpenter to repair the boat Messenger that I might send the Teacher to Bo the station, that is through a Station belonging to the W. M. A. The carpenter reported the boat all ready everything was arranged the teacher ready, but when we came to launch the boat the oakum had been driven through the seams and tar smeared over the cracks oh!!! we were in no mood to start, so the trip was postponed. Mr. Coker, was very much disappointed for he is full of zeal for the work, he is a graduate from the C. M. S. Grammar School, has been preached & held service, has been attending the meetings of the Missionaries at Freetown and since here has been reading the Preacher and his Sermon, he says it is a most wonderful book, tells you everything about preaching, how to preach to children and all. Our services at Shaingay were being pretty well attended especially the prayer and Class Meetings and Bible class meetings several members of the communicants class told me yesterday and to day that they never had such good meetings as they are having now the members attend well and the Lord meets with them the Seekers' class has quite recently dropped three names which we say I hope they have to full name. Arrangements are being made for the erection of a Church in the seekers class book Rest Campbell preached a very plain and practical sermon in Shaingay Zion Chapel last night from Prov. 14. 12. There is a way that seemeth right unto a man but the end thereof are the ways of death. We had previously arranged the programme for the night both of us were sick he was brought to the chapel in a chair and barefoot I as he has boils on his feet, surely such services can never be wholly lost, they shall prove a savour of life unto life or of death unto death both to those that hear and to some that do not hear that might hear if they would for Mr. Elliot there are some wicked people in Shaingay, it would seem that satan had placed some of his strongest generals here to resist the attacks of the gospel, but Mr. Elliot you know and I know that they must yield, it is only a matter of time the Lord of Hosts is with us.

MY VIEW OF THINGS.

Seldom have I met with as many important occurrences as at this time and which are equally interesting as important.

The all important event of the past weeks is the lecture and discussion that took place on the tenth inst., in the Church school room, when the well known and laborious Pastor the Rev. G. M. Nicol B. A. of cambridge presided; the Doctor was there, and the great Boss was there too.

The discussion was amusing the speakers were as plain as possible and the subject was well handled. Fadimie the Lecturer said will continue to do so for his wit and perseverance. He is very laborious. What a great disappointment to the Public was the report which appeared in your latest issue on the lecture. The most amusing part of the communication is that the writer was trying to prove to the world his competency and the incompetency of his superiors. "Physician heal thyself" is the saying of him who says not truth. How miraculous were his [illegible] having his honoured head by the right and left he selected [illegible] polysyllabic words caring not for their meaning.

Alluding to the evil he asserted of self, upon "every cuddle, moral and indecent." I am at a loss to know what this converse concluding the sentence adds "to satisfy their selfish aims at the [illegible] of other people's reputation." What a [illegible] of nonsensical expressions. And as if [illegible] in theories he penned down [illegible] phrases knowing they are not his. Rather that communication is I would have [illegible] nothing but for grammatical construction.

All that could be found in the bag and baggage of this Philosopher is a line of meaningless quotations quite applicable to himself, regarding what he asserts of the speakers.

I quote his own words as a reference to the meaningless and bombastic expression that formed his report pounded down merely to satisfy his semi-intelligence, rude scribbling and quarrelsome disposition though not accounted for his words in consequence of his ignorance "Reconciled absurdities to express a confusion of ideas; "depicted a laboured ignorance dissipated and spread" meant as sentence for it is worse than [illegible] men reiterating or an enlightened drunkard giving a speech. Sir, I am at a loss to know the meaning of "laboured" as fitted to the sentence; I object to that word being used in communications as was then used. Your paper is an esteemed journal, will reach far and wide and the readers will gauge of the [illegible] we possess in Africa. On the contrary I would justify your making corrections such is one or treat the letter of whatever nature it may be, whether communicated or not part as shear white paper rather than expose the incapability of the writer for where ignorance prevails and is blind its folly to be wise.

Trade was never in the crisis which it at present hopes are becoming so uncharitable with regards to the prospects of the future, so that already some large firms are reducing the staff of their establishment. Oh! for a revival of its trade. In consequence of the dullness there is evidently no sign of [illegible] amusement here during the year. All [illegible] have dissolved and the Band of Hope Temperance has died a natural death.

When will the to be Regatta take place? the frequent enquiry at Bonthe; to this I answer not till Kittans shall have broken [illegible] and Monmoh Kickie rested in peace with the Traders.

Bonthe is coming to the front gradually and successfully notwithstanding her many disadvantages she holds her emblem, and the articles in your contemporaries the "Methodist Herald" and "Church Times" all with pleasure truly confirm my assertions.

Your paper having a wide circulation it has reached to South Africa you are encouraged two weeks while it is day. The Lagos community evidence little amount of respect and honour for the late Governor Glover and doubtless the publication in one of your columns of the list of subscriptions for the erection of a Hall in his memory will incite action for a future example to the Sherbro community.

When will our indefatigable Governor pay another visit. The Voltaires are still having and he so determined.

A great competition if not an exposure between Dissenters themselves. What say you Tyrenus? defend yourself, are you guilty of Falsehood in Public papers? The "African Times" will take it up. I happened to come in contact with one of the leading members of the Methodist connexion here and the subject that engaged our attention was Sunday School.

Viewing things, from his stand point, the impression left in my mind weighs heavy. Are exaggerations in news papers of religious prospects not report-selfish as they are a tendency to future increase of the same? this is one and you are a press will help.

The "Countess of Derby" is daily expected here and may turn up ere this received publicity.

The Colonial Surgeon will be here on his inspectorial tour what will be the result of his tour, I will be able to tell in my next.

What a high-minded production is that in the columns of Sawyer's advertising medium entitled A Boy? It was read throughout with utter amazement seeing the weightiness of the article is a tendency to some unpleasantness.

Yours truly.

AMICUS versus TYRENUS.

(Critically Examined.)

Concluded from our last.

Mr. Editor,—Let us further examine Tyrenus' "rubbish though not a clever rubbish" "The School under the very enviable management of J. A. Williams Esqre etc." Now such a misstatement of ideas has a tendency to mislead the public when such vague statement is made distortedly and thus unwittingly and that from a timid Imagination. Mr. Williams' large headedness, and liberality are well known to us especially in promoting God's cause and we need not be told more about it, for it will be simply begging the question. But Tyrenus, to satisfy his vogue, and not to appear as sounding his own trumpet, puts Mr. Williams' name before in order to avoid detection We can rightly interpret That phrase thus—"The very enviable management of J. A. Williams Esq., and who was assisted in this enviable management by the School Secretary Mr. Farrar." But who is Tyrenus' imaginary foe? It is none other but the phantom which appeared to him during one of his spleenetic fits well known to none but himself under the term of "enviable management."

Let us again examine this matter chronologically. Mr. Williams was the School Superintendent during the year ending 31st. December, 1885, and his position during the period of nine months was not conspicuous or become "enviable" till the last quarter of the year when he was assisted by the enviable management of the School Secretary. What says the Anniversary Report on this subject as read from the lips of the Secretary. "The Finance remains unaltered for several months back through the zealous and indefatigable Superintendent J. A. Williams Esq." "The labours of the School Superintendent aided by his liberality referred to already deserves the highest praise and comment from all interested in the success of our Sunday School." Mr. Williams deserves not only the thanks of all interested in Methodism but of those who take a lively interest in the Sunday School Institution "Its cause he pleads, he pleads it with heart and mind. A fellow feeling enables one wondrous kind." So that chronologically speaking, no such enviable management did really exist, Saving in Tyrenus' own imagination; and by analogy Tyrenus either quotes the secretary or writes under his enviable management or he was virtually the Secretary personified.

Tyrenus' letter bears no date and I side with him for such a clever diplomacy; but unfortunately in attempting to dive he finds himself a float stone, for the date is supplied for him in Sec. committee of management's letter which appeared immediately under his own and, by a strange coincidence both ended exactly in the same words "Respectfully yours."

The last but not the least is the remarkable inference drawn by Tyrenus He says owing to the unique success a collected etc. a Pic Nic was accordingly given." Now as far back as the 22nd Dec. 1885 "Amicus" had caught a rumour that a Pic nic will be given in short; but Tyrenus is to be more definite if not an humble gives us this state new that the cause of the Pic nic was brought about through "the unique success of the past month" and the enviable management of the Superintendent and his worthy Secretary. It may be that Tyrenus is better informed than Amicus in their matters although reason and fact seem to be disposed in favor of Amicus so that Tyrenus may very well compliment himself that we do not believe him less, but Amicus more. Tyrenus, from experience may well sing this song,—

"As skilful divers to the bottom fall,
Swifter than those who cannot swim at all
So is this way of writing without thinking
Those least a strange alacrity in sinking."

I am, Sir,
Yours very sincerely,

To the Editor "Early Dawn."

Sir,—In your issue of the 15th inst., there appeared an impression said to have been a Report of a Lecture that was delivered in the Church School Room and a Discussion which followed after.

In one of the paragraphs of that Report, I read with sadden unpleasing some false statements which appeared against me either from prejudice or indisposition, I cannot say. Whatever may be the opinion of the writer of me I may speech that erasing I do not thank him for the friendly manner in which he showed you and your readers his estimation of my general capability, and were I to be permitted to add to him, I would have only cautioned him to "beware of dogs" I beg to state that the writer of that communication was not true in his report, and every statement that fledded that communication was on the contrary. Had he stated exactly my view of the subject that was discussed on that occasion, I would have been much gratified.

Thanking you for the space allowed me.

I am Sir, &c.,
VICTOR P. C. MASON.

PREPARATIONS FOR A ROYAL VISIT.

THE recent outbreak cholera reminds me of an anecdote related by Balzac, half a century ago, in a paper called La Caricature. When the Prince de Joinville, in order to improve his knowledge of naval pursuits, was going about France in a post chaise, he arrived unexpectedly at a small town. The Mayor, having received no warning, had not been able to organize the official and spontaneous enthusiasms usual on such occasions. The Prince was displeased, and the Mayor desperate. He had a friend in Paris, and he reproached him bitterly with not having told him before hand of the impending arrival of the august visitor. His friend swore he had written to him about it, and that the letter must have gone astray. The Parisian had really written, and entrusted the letter to a friend who had dined at his house to post it. The friend had confided it to some one else who had asked a third person to post it, and he had asked a fourth, and so on, till at last the letter came into the hands of a gentleman who was just starting for Constantinople. He forgot to post it, and took it with him to Stamboul. One day, as he was sending dispatches home, he found the letter, and sent it back at the same time by a vessel that was returning to France. Now, one morning the Mayor received a letter, lacerated, pierced with holes, and smelling very strongly of vinegar. He was terribly frightened but he opened and read it. It ran thus: "Paris, ..

My dear friend,—I write to inform you that the Prince de Joinville is going to pass through your town. You will receive this letter two days before his arrival. Take your precautions." It was signed by his friend. "He wishes to repair his previous fault," said the Mayor. "That is well; I must not be too hard on him. This time we shall be ready for his Royal Highness" After that consoling idea another occurred to the public functionary, which made his hair stand on end, and caused him to turn deadly pale. The perforated letter, steeped in vinegar! Doubtless there was cholera-morbus in Paris. And the sentence: "Take your precautions!" It was certain. The Town Council was convened, and the following measures moved and carried:—(1) A messenger should be sent to Paris post haste to beg his Royal Highness the Prince of Joinville to postpone his visit; (2) a sanitary cordon should be drawn round the town; (3) a lazaretto should be established outside the town; (4) all suspected persons should be shut up in it; (5) the treatment of other diseases to be suspended so as not to draw from the important care which cholera demands from the doctor of the town; (6) public prayers should be said; (7) by the authority of the police, and in order not to excite the wrath of heaven, all swearing, immorality, thunders, oaths, double-meaning words and jokes against the Government should be forbidden; (8 sweet-smelling herbs should be burned in the streets. Three National Guards volunteered to form the sanitary cordon, and surrounded the town at a distance from one another which appeared rather considerable to some, who, nevertheless did not think proper to fill up the gaps. Consternation spread through the town. Atheists avowed their belief in a deity, the Papists joined the salvation Army of the period, and and the clergy gave alms. This state of things had lasted two days when the Mayor's friend arrived. An attempt was made to put him in the lazaretto, but he frustrated it. People ran away from him. The tocsin was sounded. The citizens locked and bolted their doors; some wanted to shoot him. He came from Paris and was probably infected. He went and knocked at the Mayor's door The Mayor became livid. His wife and daughter began to yell; the servant howled, and the dog whined. He continued knocking. The Mayor opened the garret window, and after having begged him to stand to leeward, so as not to send pestilential exhalations in his direction, he explained to him what the trouble was. His friend asked for the letter; it was thrown to him from the window. The wind blew it away, and the friend scampered after it for an hour, spreading terror in all the streets through which he passed. Then he came back shaking with laughter. Everything was explained, and the sanitary cordon went home to bed. Selections.

ROOLONG.

This Station as well as all others on this side of the district has been sadly neglected of late, since Rev. W. S. Sage was obliged to leave here last August. He has had no regular resident Missionary, though it is one of our best Stations, the Mission house having been neglected and the premises neglected. At the last district meeting in New Road, A. King was appointed to the charge of that work. It has 23 appointments, the most young men to follow wife and what could be done in so large a field with only 23 children at the Station to look after, also a School and farm to manage. The work was too great for any one man.

Mr. King went to Freetown and took him a wife the daughter of Rev. S. W. Davis, a Wesleyan minister She had been trained in the Wesleyan female School and is certainly a credit to that Institution. I left Shengay about ten o'clock the 13th inst and landed at Koolong at 12 20 p. m. I thought it would be useless to attempt to have a preaching service that night, but Bro. King said he would ring the bell. He sent a boy with a hand-bell to Mopeah and Senehon Parkia about one and a half miles distance through the bush and we had a nice congregation. I had some fever and thought I would rest next morning, but about five o'clock that same bell was set a going again and there was no sleeping or resting. soon a girl came to say your tea is ready. I went out and asked where is Mr King? gone to Otterbein to conduct Sock-ra cass' was the answer, and who conducts the class here? I asked, Mrs King was the answer and so She did, quite early the people gathered Mrs King conducted the whole service, reading of Scripture lesson singing and praying and speaking as nicely as you please.

At eleven o'clock people from the different villages came in and there was a nice congregation and good attention, 3 children were baptized, 2 adults united with the Church and 12 or 14 communed. at 2 p. m. we all went by the sea beach to Otterbein Station long before we reached there we heard the large Bell the gift of the Iowa Annual Conference in 1876 calling boys girls come to School. Koolong and Otterbein hold their Sabbath School together one Sabbath at Koolong and the next at Otterbein. Mrs King is the Superintendent and teaches a Bible class of from 10 to 13 Scholars her helping in this way gives Mr King a chance to Itenerate in the villages. At 5 o'clock we were at Otterbein still, Bro King preached a plain practical discourse from Acts 17. 11. These were more noble than those Thessalonica, in that they received the word with all readiness of mind and searched the Scriptures daily whether those things were so. Mr J. N. Lefevor takes quite an interest in the work at Otterbein and is raising money to rebuild the Chapel. I was well pleased with my visit to Koolong and at six o'clock next morning I went ashore at Shengay Mission.

Report of Manoh Station, For the Quarter Ending March 31st. 1886.

Dear Bro,

In attempting to bring before your notice my Quarterly Report of the above named station, first of all I am thankful to Almighty God, that he has preserved my life, and the lives of my family, and has enabled me to perform my duties faithfully. Although this station is one of the smallest, in connection with the Shaingay Mission, yet it is one of great importance in regard to spiritual concerns. In fact, there is a great work going on here, attended by the blessing of God. On my very first arrival here, on the 26th January 1885 I was thoroughly discouraged, owing to the smallness of the congregation in Church, and the thinness of the Day school attendance. There was a total dullness in this place. But at present, there is a great revival in our midst in every direction. This makes me to exclaim, that truly, the Lord is with us, and is doing a great and noble work. I feel it a pleasure dear bro, to assure the highest eulogium that is due to Manoh's inhabitants for their best exertions in attending the house of God. Nothing could be said of them in regard to negligence; but at all times, whenever they hear the sound of the bell, they are always to be found in their proper seats, ready to hear God's word. Congregations are fair every Sabbath. It seems to me, that this station is altogether neglected. My reason is, that no quarterly meetings here since last year January, no Sacrament administered, and no personal appearance of our superiors could be seen to investigate this blessed work that is going on in this part of Christ's vineyard. We do hope, that soon a little more attention will be given to this place this year, so that, we can rejoice, that we are not entirely forsaken. Our members in the Believers' Class are doing noble work. They can pray and give experience in their own tongue, which gives me more encouragement to do my work faithfully.

Out-Stations.—These I always visit once in a fortnight on Sabbath. In these towns, there are some faithful ones to be met with who are fighting their way to the Heavenly Canaan. It is much better now to reach these towns but during the rains, some of the roads are very bad, owing to the marshes and swamp.

Day School.—Although, there have been some removals of guardians of children, which cut down the number on roll at the begining of the year, yet I have hope, and rejoice to report that at present, there are 32 children of both sexes who are attending the Day School. Great improvement is daily being made by the children. On the whole Manoh station is daily improving in all respects.

We do earnestly ask your prayers on our behalf.

Believe me to be,
Dear Bro,
Yours in Christ,
T. N. Josh.

CALUMNY AND EVIL-SPEAKING.

Dear Mr. Editor,—These have been the reigning vices in all ages especially in this place, (Bonthe) and by this means a greater guilt is contracted than men generally apprehend so are aware of; If we know what we write of another (as appeared in the Report of the Lecture which was Communicated in your issue of 15th March) to be false, it is down right untruth; if we believe what we write of others, it is slander: if what evil we report of others be real by true and we know it to be so, yet it is defamation, and contrary to that goodness and charity which Christianity requires; for to diverge the fault of others, though really guilty of them without any necessity, is certainly a sin and is included in this apostolical injunction, "To think and speak evil of no man" for to think and speak evil of others is not only a bad thing but a sign of a bad soul, and in many cases it is a great a charity to conceal the evil we know of our neighbours as it is to relieve them in distress.

In closing Mr. Editor, I must advice those who communicates in your Journal to be mild and impartial, so as to gain the confidence and respect of the Public and the numerous readers of your valuable Journal.

Yours,
JUSTITIA.

Bonthe,
Mar. 30 '86.

MR. EDITOR,

Dear Sir,—I beg the favor of allowing me to insert these lines in your valuable Journal, which have been encumbered in my mind for sometime past.

I read in your last issue a letter of one of your correspondents of the "Natural death of the Temperance Society" that had existied among us here, which had been apparently progressive.

I now ask why is it said to have died a "Natural death"! since this place has been standing in need of such an association. I really have thought that this society should have accomplished some good among the inhabitants here, and I believe this as a fact which cannot be denied, that the chief aim of that Association was to get persons to abstain from drink, and there are so many persons that should be be reached; Why then has it been allowed to languish? I hope it will no longer remain in that state of lethargy, but that it may be soon revived into a more vigorous life than ever berore.

I am dear sir,
Yours
SELON.

Prudence is a little child not quite four years old, but in many things shows understanding above her age. She had learned at the Sabbath School that God made the world and all things therein, herself included. One evening, whilst fondling on her mother's lap, she looked up into her face, and with all simplicity of a child said, "mamma, Teacher tell me in Sunday School say, nar God made this world, an all things wy live deh, en meself. But mamma who made God?" How true does this child's question prove the fact, that deep down in every human heart, there is an aching void, the world can never fill.

THE PEACE MOVEMENT.

In our last we spoke of the prospects of peace and felt that it could be easily brought about and that it would most likely ensue upon the absorption of all the plunder that the miserable banditi, seek after who for the most part carry on the nefarious work of plunder and repine, called war, in the surrounding country. From certain developments since that time it appears that the good work might be greatly facilitated and rendered more permanent, by a little Governmental influence; not an army or presents, or even the Governors personal presence, perhaps, but let it be published that the Governor is empowered to act coersively if matters are not adjusted and that shortly and then demand at once, that every war fence broken of friend and foe irrespectively, and should any chief dare to refuse obedience arest him without delay, such in our opinion would put a speedy and permanent period to all hostilities. On the other hand if the Government continues to pursue the course it seems now to pursue, it is quite possible, that Peace if brought about by Native agency, will be short-lived. And more than that, the impression seems to be growing among the people more interior that the Government cannot do anything; for not many months ago we learn that the Yonnies feared Sourie Cassabie more than Gov. Rowe, and hence it it was believed that they fell on Songo town instead of Rotofunk, since then it has been reported that some country Chiefs have said the Yonnies had killed many of the Sierra Leone people and that Governor Rowe was unable to do them anything. We know this is talk, but the words may not be so idle, as some would imagine after all. And it must be more and more evident to every one who has any knowledge, at all, of country matters, that from some cause there is a growing disgregard in the country for Governmental Authority, which in our opinion arises from the ineffectual measures used to secure obedience to law; and if such is suffered to continue who knows what it may lead to in the future or that another Madi may not yet arise from the interior and with his fanatical hordes press his way to the Western frontier much to the annoyance and disadvantage of these Settlements. In view of this fact, then, that peace, can now be secured at comparatively little cost, and trouble and the dignity of the Colonial & Imperial Governments Maintained, and Religious, Commercial, and Philanthropical Interests promoted; whould it not be policy for the Govern ment to take effective action? which should be done at once as every moments delay now may add new complication.

HARD TIMES & TRADE.

Is the Topic freely discussed among all classes on the Coast now, so far as we are able to gather information in our place and community, the Boom and Kittam War troubles are generally believed to be the chief cause of these hard times, so all have joined in deprecating the Kossoh War Boys and in praying that Sir Samuel Rowe would return to Sherbro with sufficient force and move against these Free booters and drive them interior beyond the Sherbro lines, and thus restore tranquility, which it has been fully believed by both natives and Foreigners would bring about by Native agency, will be short-lived. And more than that, the impression seems to be growing among the people more interior that the Government cannot do anything; for not many months ago we learn that the Yonnies feared Sourie Cassabie more than Gov. Rowe, and hence it it was believed that they fell on Songo town instead of Rotofunk, since then it has been reported that some country Chiefs have said the Yonnies had killed many of the Sierra Leone people and that Governor Rowe was unable to do them anything. We know this is talk, but the words may not be so idle, as some would imagine after all. And it must be more and more evident to every one who has any knowledge, at all, of country matters, that from some cause there is a growing disgregard in the country for Governmental Authority, which in our opinion arises from the ineffectual measures used to secure obedience, as many are now anticipating.

A STARTLING DISASTER.

We have been informed that the s. s. Oregon belonging to the Cunard line plying between England and the United States went down recently off Long Island with five hundred passengers and a crew of 500 Officers and men total 800 souls all are reportodlost together with another vessel the name of which we have not learned. The Oregon was a new Steamer of ten Thousand tons Burden and cost six hundred thousand pounds, we believe, she had only made a few voyages and was, we understand, one of the largest crafts afloat. What h treasure of wealth and life, has thus gone down, beneath waves of the thighty deep. But a greater disaster is impending or one of infinitely greater importance or consequence to us and that is the sinking of our own frail bark in which we have attempted the navigation of the sea of live and it may be by a sudden collision as was that of the steamer Oregon let us then pause a moment and reflect what shall the end be Joy or Woe?

Strange but true—The drys we regret to note at Avery Station Manoh Bargroo affect the evening services at st Matthews Church in this place; how ever we hope this will be remedied in short by sufficient quantity of shingles from Avery to finish the roof of the above named Edifice.

To the Editor "Early Dawn."

Sir,—I have not written for a while, I prefer being silent for some time but I am compelled at last by irregularity here and there to write something. Being a Methodist member of the Wesleyan Connexion here I was fortunately among those who were notified on Sunday the 4th instant to be present at a Meeting convened on the 6th inst., the purpose for which I was only informed when the meeting opened.

All I could observe was introduction of the object, chairman secretary and President, one introducing the other in turns. After which speeches were delivered accordingly and the business of the night terminated by a discussion.

It was in that meeting and in this country, and the very first time in my life I knew that one is at liberty to make an essay on the life of a minister, his disability and general morals on the event of his being elected and appointed to take charge of a District whose members are in opposition to the appointment. This essay was read by a Mr. Brighton Turner a young man they will surely obtain the promised known for his fatness and foul facilitiness in scribbling and advocating.

I remarked Mr. Editor with clear mess and distinctness Mr. Turner reading in his essay, a statement about the Rev. Gentleman's moral namely—I quote his own words "not being always sober and not of sound mind &c." What on earth Mr. Editor could have given rise to such fabulous remarks most detrimental to a man's position I pause for a reply.

Yours always the same

NEWS ITEMS.

From Conkonany.—It is reported that on the 24th ult a Police constable with two Sierra Leone people were dispatched with officials sent by the Commandant to chief Boangoh at Lavanah on their arrival they met Tarcoyo Bahere and Boangoh, who said to them that the Yonneys had killed many of the Sierra Leon people and Govr. Rowe was unable to do them any thing therefore they are now at liberty to kill as many Sierra Leone people and would proceed to Conkonany to demand their wives who had gone there to get freedom.

It is reported that the Mo-Kelleh people are not favorable to peace, and are still on the war path. It is rather a pity that Government cannot use sufficient means to make these fellows behave themselves.

Personal

Mr. T. Dalton's departure for England was by some means omitted in our last issue, as also a notice of Capt F. C. Halkett's absence of 10 days on tour to the country.

Mr. Eben. A. Lewis has recently experienced a heavy loss by robbery committed in his Dwelling house by two of his employed servants a Liberian by name James Albert Beckly and John Coker a Gola boy in his absence to Bonth on the night of the 23d ult, carrying away all his goods wearing apparel cooking utensils etc etc, sweeping away his house compcely excepting furniture The robbiers are reported to have gone to the interior to avoid arrest.

Capt. F. C. Halkett Acting Commandant left this place on the morning of the 13 inst. for the Black River.

Mr. J. W. Baker of Kon-company Station by Invitation of the District Supt. came down to Bonthe about the 7th inst. and from here he made a visit to Shaingay for consultation with Rev. Joseph Gomer our Gen'l Supt. relative to his work. He has returned to Kon-komany

Rev J. Gomer Gen'l. Supt. of the Mendi and Sherbro Missions we learn has recently made a visit to the Bompeh district of the same connexion of which he has the oversight during the absence of Rev R. N. West who is now in America.

School.—Mr. Chris. Brown Junior has (we believe) taken charge of the Church School of St Matthew's Church in this place. And a Mr. Norman has also taken the Bendoo of the same connexion, we wish these gentlemen abundant success.

Mr. Sam'l. Tamoh Headmaster of M. M. School of this place has been ill he is recovering again.

Mr J. A. Clemens Bookseller has removed his business to his new place Upper Otto St., and Will be glad to see his old friends and customers.

To the Editor "Early Dawn."

Dear Mr. Editor,—It was rumored here that the Rev. J. C. Thomas, Pastor in charge of the Wesleyan Methodist Connexion in this place will soon be removed to Freetown and that the Rev. S. W. Davis of the Freetown First Circuit be his substitute. In fact, Mr. Editor, I was not quite positive of this; but quite Sunday the 4th instant when the Catechist of our Connexion asked us to assemble at the Chapel on Tuesday the 6th inst at 6 30 p.m., having got something very important to say to us, of course as we were anxious to know what he had to say, we hastened without any reluctance to the Chapel at the time previously stated. After the opening of the meeting and the never-ending "England Fall", of Mr. S. A. St. John, a Mr. Obadiah J. Turner, Tide Waiter of H. M. Customs here, read to us, or rather tried to make us understand that the Rev. Mr. Thomas will be removed to Freetown and Rev. Davis will succeed him, a news which is stale; as also that the members (save a few) were pleased for the removal of the Rev. Gentlemen, and they do totally decline the coming of the Rev. Davis. Strange to learn, Sir, from Mr. St. John, that Mr. Thomas is promoted on his removal, for he (Mr. St. John) who having hap hazardly came and joined our Society here only these four months ago knows nothing, absolutely nothing of our discipline and constitution save his now and again. West of England talk.

Mr. Editor, see with what levity foys play is manifested in this sentence of theirs—"we want a man of genuine morals, for he (Rev. Davis) is an unequally qualified pulpit-man, not sober and should he come here, we will be pulled down from nature to grace."

These expressions, Mr. Editor, I have since then very prayerfully and seriously put to consideration chiefly to know what were and are the aims of Mr. Turner and his coadjutors for writing and reading to the public, hearing such scandalous and malicious quibble. Do they mean to tell me that the chairman and his colleagues of the District Meeting are not wise enough to appoint ministers to their Circuits? for so they politely though injudiciously state; or have not they the right to appoint whom they think fit? so they unwisely politely affirm. This shows at once that the Rev. gentleman is unfit in every point of view to hold the ministerial position. Yes it is no exception that a person without common sense and a double tongued man is fit for nothing, for had this young man better sense and better moral trainings and had his colleagues been better advisers they would not have thus spoken so frivolously about their minister. That is why the C. M. S. members always laugh at us.

On the whole Mr. Turner is only trying to let the mini tors know the turbitude of his mind; but God is in Heaven and sees and knows all what we speak and do about His ministers who represent Him on earth.

Thanking you for the space allowed me in your valuable columns.

Believe me.
Dear Mr. Editor,
Yours faithfully,
A Staunch Methodist.

Report of Conkonnany Station Mendi Mission for the end of March 1886.

Dear Mr. Editor,—In taking a view of the work done at the close of last month I cannot do otherwise but a scribe to the Great Head of the Church, for His continued presence and blessing on the work of Mission among the heathens in this vicinity. I have met with much encouragement in my work not with standing efforts of Satan to mar its progress. If there is sufficient means to carry on the work, here I am sure that much good can be done in this station. The general cry of every town and far flung master come and tell us the road to everlasting Salvation. It shows clearly that Satan's kingdom is broken and the kingdom of God and Christ reigning in the hearts of people. That the scales of darkness and ignorance that had once been over the eyes of the people are now being removed. On Sunday the 21st ultimo, the District Superintendent, of Bonthe paid us a visit and preached to a large gathering at 11 a. m. After the close Service he administered the Sacrament of Baptism and the Lord's supper.

33 Adults and children were baptized. This was a time of great refreshing the presence of the Almighty was felt by all who were present on the occasion. On the following Sunday we had another large gathering, I endeavoured to show those who are baptized that Christ's mark is now set on their foreheads and they are to follow his footsteps. I had to visit a town with some of our friends here and the people received us willingly, I then took the liberty to address them of the old, old Story which they listened with rapt attention.

DAY SCHOOL

The scholars in the day school have made commendable improvements during the cause of last month ten garments were sent to be distributed to those children whose guardians and parents, are unable to afford them clothing. This is indeed great encouragement, they manifested more zeal and love for school. Parents are running down from the different towns and farkies, bringing their children to school. This is the finger of God. Since our last report we have an accession of 11 more scholars. One would be pleased to hear how they are repeating stories of the Holy Scriptures.

SUNDAY SCHOOL

The Sunday School is in good working order. The natives are trying to learn the Alphabets and other simple stories of the Holy Scriptures we have no accession of a more scholars since our last report.

ABDOLAHH OR GOD SLAVE.

Mr. Editor,—In sending this article for your readers' knowledge, I intend most pertinently to impress into the minds of that class of people, the foolishness of betaking to refuge, of lies for protection and cure in this life, whilst the Almighty invites them freely to seek it from Him. The above named Mohamedan from Bowmah, a small town few yards off my station, Koolounge, visited me on the 3rd inst. He was sent for by the people to make them some charms, and Sebehs, to guard them against witch people, and to give them riches and good luck.

Whilst conversing we brought up the subject, of religion, when he commenced most elaborately to prove from his books and the Bible, the pre eminence of Mohammed to Christ. He said in reading the Christian Bible translated in Arabic, he observed that the latter prophets are greater than the former. Isaiah was greater than those before him, and so was John the Baptist and then Christ. Now says he, if Mohamed is supposed to have been born a prophet 300 years after Christ, it is evident that he is greater than Christ, and therefore all men ought to follow his teachings. He denied of God having a son (that is Christ) since He is a spirit with out flesh and blood, and the Virgin Mary was a being made and born like unto us.

However after I endeavour to explain to him the Creation Fall and Redemption of Man, and also of the nature and divine being of Christ, in order to convince him of the truth. I asked him to trace the origin of Christ and Mohammed. He said Christ was descended from Abraham and Sarah, and Mohammed from Hagar and Abraham I asked him to tell me the relation each of these women bears to Abraham, he said Sarah was his wife and Hager his slave. Now the son of the free woman, and that of the slave which ought to be the heir? I asked. He said that of the free woman. In like manner also said I is Christ the heir and superior to Mohammed. He concluded with me, but his said he could not leave Mohammed and follow Christ saying he is very old now, but his brethren would persecute him to death.

I further asked him whether it was Mohammed that commanded to be making medicines and Sebehs for people, he said no such to be found in all their books but as they have left their own lands on account of war, to work shelter in a strange land. They planted so that way to get their living, as they cannot work, nor climb palm trees as the people there is no truth in them, although the people are simple-minded as also is their wish. To confirm this he said the whole out the world. I would not find one true Mohamedan with Sebehs about him. How true is this. This is told me as a secret, but cannot help divulging it; that those who put their trust in them, might see the wretchedness, the evil tyrant they are, serving, and the awful doom that awaits them in the world to come, if they do not repent and forsake such things, and run to Christ the only Rock of ages.

Yours Truly
J. A. KING.

THE SHADOW of DEATH.

I was a boy at the time, living at my father's house in Ohio. We were just eating breakfast one morning, when our nearest neighbor, the miller's wife, came in. She was pale and excited, and to our great astonishment she at once told us that her husband would be drowned that afternoon. She said: Only last night I dreamed that my husband was drowned in the mill race, and that a man riding a white horse had come about dusk and told me the news. So impressed was I with the dream that I warned my husband not to go near the mill to day, and told him my dream, but he only laughed at my fears, and said that we no longer lived in the dark ages." We thought at first that she must be crazy, but at last she so far convinced the folks that they consented to have me stay with her during the day, and I accompanied her to her home, she muttering all the way, "I warned him, but he only laughed at me. I know he will never return home.

As evening came on her anxiety increased. The approaching darkness seemed to her the shadow of death, and her face grew paler as the sun-tinted cloud in the west gave place to the all-ruling twilight. Although I put no faith in the woman's predictions, yet her strange murmurings had an effect upon me, and it was with no nothing almost like disappointment that I saw the night close in & no messenger appear. For you must remember that I was young then, and fond of the exciting and marvelous, without stopping to enquire the cause. And so it was with a sudden shock that I again looked out of the window, more carefully this time, and saw a white horse come galloping over the hill at its utmost speed. The woman saw my emotion and flew to the window. Down the short hill over the stone bridge in the hollow and up the long slope to the house, we watched it come together, and it would have been hard to tell which was the more excited; for although no personal feelings moved me, yet I was in a state of the utmost uncertainty as to the outcome, while the woman, although agitated by the terrible grief, yet had no doubt as to what the message would be. And it was no surprise to either of us to see the at e ch other, and na bled, and thau stop at the gate and walk whispered, "That's so." slowly up the avenue leading to the house.

The lady met him at the door. As I watched her standing there in the twilight, swaying back and forth in her agony, with her hand on the door knob for support, I felt a great throb of pity at my heart, and at the same time a certain awe for the two who were playing so great a part in the drama of death. The fact that the news had been expected all day, and had been foretold in dreams, which I knew of only as belonging to the mysterious past of King Arthur and Froissart's Chronicles, placed the characters before me on an equality with the magicians of old Granada. I shrank back, feeling that the cold wind which came in through the open door had carried me back hundreds of years, and placed me in a different age. Even the calm, prosaic farmer, with his snow-white hair and flowing beard, seemed like some old seer, as he passed his hand over his forehead and tried to collect his scattered thoughts. The silence became terrible.

The pale-faced sufferer was growing impatient. "Speak" said she "I can bear it now as well as any other time."

And then the farmmer looked up "Ah yes I remember, I remember now, madam," his voice was low and measured "madam, your husband wants the calves turned into the little pasture back of the barn." Then he turned and rode away as swiftly as he came.—Sel.

A certain Italian having disarmed his enemy and got him completely into his power told him that there was no possible way for him to escape death but by renouncing and cursing Jesus Christ the Savior of the world. The miserable and timerous wretch, to preserve his life, complete renounced Christ.

with a demoniacal smile, the other exclaimed, "I will now have my full revenge—I will destroy thy soul and body at one blow!" and struck him pead on the spot.

"That's not what I meant," responded the professor. "In ancient days knowledge was confined to a few learned men, but nowadays almost every doakey knows as much as a professor." The students looked

THOUGHTS ON SUNDAY SCHOOLS.

It is beautifully ordered by the Supreme Fountain of all good, that kind and disinterested actions between man and man, shall be of consequence, followed by a sweet satisfaction in the bosom whence they emanate, and thus as it were produce their own continuance and their own reward. As the perpetual exhalations which rise from yonder vast expanse of water though being swept away by the fresh breeze, become condensed, and fall from their floating receptacles upon the thirsty earth, yet are not absorbed and lost but gathering into mountain torrents, rivulets and streams, after meandering through a tract of country, and leaving a thousand blessings of fertility and luxuriance behind them, fall at length in a broad and copious abundance, again into the parent ocean; so the pure emanations which proceed from the heart of pity descending upon their object and prodiging in it healthfulness, and freshness and delight, shall return again in streams of enjoyment upon the generous soul. It is pleasing and sometimes profitable to observe somewhat minutely the lesser branches the smaller comings in of joy, frequently and perhaps almost unconsciously, fall into the general tide and contribute their portion of delight. These observations lately occurred to one's mind when present at a meeting of considerable number of Sunday School Teachers; those worthy individuals, who on the Lord's day, devote their time and talents to the moral improvement of the poor uneducated children of their respective neighbourhoods. Now though the Salvation of young immortal souls is their chief object, and being instrumental in attaining that, their principal source of happiness, and though they listened with the most intense interest to each other's tales of usefulness, and rejoiced in each other's success, yet it was to be plainly perceived, that there were other satisfying considerations, other auxiliary circumstances productive of pleasant feelings. They seemed to be aware that success is neither the best, nor always the immediate result of well meant endeavours to do good, they displayed a cheerful acquiescence, and yet a dignified content even when they heard that prosperity had not awaited all, and in every case was to be seen great happy expression of countenance and manner, which clearly indicated the possession of a heartfelt gratification arising from the work itself. As many, very many of those who may read this are engaged in the same good work, it may not be improper to consider in what these lesser gratifications consist, by reflecting on the advantages and beneficial results which flow from their benevolent exertions.

Selected by J. W. BAKER

To the Editor of the "Early Dawn."

Mr. Editor,—In reading carefully your interesting journal of the 15th ult, I observed an Article by "A young African" which tends greatly to enlisted, and generally to encourage and depreciate the faithful labors and endeavours of Africans who are directly or indirectly aiding in the civilization and evangelization of our dear benighted Africa. True are the suppositions of our Lord "If a house or Kingdom be divided against it, self shall it stand"? A man's foes are they of his own household. The Time For us As Ethiopia looking for detractors from abroad, for there are many among us, sons of the soil, who are turning traitors. I am at a loss to see from what standpoint does this Young African view the state of things along the W. C. A. and especially in this part of Sherbro country where is the Headquarters of the gay Mission to justify such statements by him. He tells us of his having been in Freetown, perhaps for one or two weeks in all his life and of his having seen what they call Sherbro. Of "Those who have been trained in the Grammar School and Colledge and for all that they do not behave like civilized people that come from England or America." I wonder how many young men from the Grammar School and Colledge who could so badly that their behaviours should serve as a gauge for the rest of the noble sons of Africa. I have lived in Freetown for many years and have heard from the lips of more than half a dozen European Missionaries on the platform, this sentence which serves as a stimulant to every magnanimous African, "If Africa must be evangelized it must be by her sons." And some of these missionaries have been laboring faithfully on the W. C. A perhaps when our young african was in nonentity. Are the people on the W. C. A especially at Shengay as barbarous and rude today as they were thirty or forty years ago? Are all the people of England and America civilized? Is the state of morals there the best that can be desired? And do you read from any of the English or American papers any article stating that because there are some among them who are still rude in their manners, therefore they entertain any doubt of the capability of the enlightened and godly ones among them to help their other brethren who are still rude in their manners? Take an inference Are there all Europeans who compose the teaching staff at the Fourah Bay College? Who holds the reins of Government in the Grammer and High School, and so successfully too. Is it not full blooded Negroes? Were these High Schools instituted to make Africans civilized, or degraded in manner If to make them civilized, then are not the Principals and Tutors in the Grammer and High Schools, who are doing their best in their respective capacities Africans? I pause for a reply from this young African.

Interim BOLYAH.

April 7. 86

A reverend sportsman was once boasting of his infallible skill in finding a hare. "If I were a hare," said a Quaker, who was present, "I would take my seat in a place where I should be sure of not being disturbed by thee from the first of January to the last day of December." Why, where would you go?" asked the sportsman. "Into thy study!" replied the Quaker.

WHAT'S THE NEWS!

It may occur to some to ask why we have so much about temperance and prohibition in an independent paper like the Picket. The reason is, that prohibition is the question of the day, and no man can make a good newspaper without getting in a good deal of it. We never see an issue of any paper without considerable space given to it. Let an editor resolve that he will say nothing about it for a week, and next morning he finds that his reporters, whose business it is to hunt up the "news," have got in a couple of columns about the W. C. T. U., or the "Prohibs," or the liquor league, or the high license advocate.

Then he thinks the hateful thing is all gone. But next morning its gospel temperance, or Dr. Crosby, or Leonard, or Colquitt. Howbeit, he is patient and hopeful. Next day finds that while he slept during the night, a large part of his force was working on Francis Murphy, or Frances E. Willard, or the reduction of some whiskey tax, or liquor trials in Court. Then he gets mad and thinks he'll just for once tell all about how this thing is, and end the whole racket. So he writes an editorial far longer than the mortal law, and quotes Beecher, the Bible, and perhaps Ben Butler to prove it all; and he goes home saying, like Sam Black, when he was done preaching his trial sermon, "There now; if that doesn't do you, you can just all go to —!"

Next morning his paper crowded with heavily headlined dispatches showing that prohibition does not prohibit in Kansas, and that another Georgia county has gone dry!

So it goes. What can we do but drift with such a tide!—Sel.

THE RAINS APPROACHING.

For some weeks past, the heavy overcast of smoke, vapour, and real clouds, with an occasional shower that could be called heavy, has gradually increased, until now we experience heavy rains at times both day and night, and not unfrequently accompanied by those terrible Harbingers of the changing season, known among us as Tornadoes, but which are really tempests of a fearful kind; which for the past four weeks, or more, have been on a tour of destruction, unroofing houses and in some cases demolishing them and doing other damages on the land. We have not heard of its horrors on the waters; but from past experience we are sure that they have been many. The poorer classes perhaps as a whole as in most other cases suffer more than the wealthy and well to-do people, from the fact of their roofs being less substantial and hence more often wrecked or destroyed. But as there is no great loss without some small gain hence the Bamboo Market has been lively in consequence of the storms and approaching rains; as every one who shelters under such a roof has found it necessary to repair more or less (but a great deal more) the last week or two past and the worst of it is that unless they rethatch entirely, it is very difficult to tell when repairs are completed: so that Bamboo sewers and tiers are likely to have a good time of it for a while yet.

PLAGIARISM.

Is defined to be literary theft, of which we do not like to accuse any of our correspondents, but since we have so often seen articles, that in their make up or general features, so greatly resemble others that we have read in books or other news papers; we are some what afraid that, others not so well acquainted with our esteemed correspondents might possibly accuse them of using the the compositions of others, without giving the Authors credit for the same; hoping such writers may take this hint and give us original matter hereafter we await the further course of events.

We find in the Weekly Itinerant of Harrisburg Pa., U.S.A. of Feb. 6th a good article from our former co-laborer Rev. J M. Lesher, who is deeply interested for Africa, in which he speaks of many special Donations for the African Work and which we are sure have largely been the fruit of his earnest pleadings for Africa. May the Lord greatly bless him and the Donors of these special gifts.

Since writing approaching rains, we have been informed of several damages or wrecks, occurring from Tornadoes and Storms, along the sea coast between our place and Freetown especially about Kent and Bananas several boats were broken among others that of Revd. W. H. Maud Supt. of the Wesleyan Missions and Churches of Sierra Leone, was damaged or Broken at Kent.

Bishop Flickinger, D.D., Rev. J. Gomer, and others have been much disappointed by the delay of this office in the publication of the Conference Minutes of the last Conference held at Rotufunk in Decr. '85; but we wish to say that it has been occasioned by circumstances, over which, in the nature of the case, we had no control, but it may be well to say here that we have no arrangement, or facility at this office for Pamphlet Work.

[FROM A CORRESPONDENT.]

MR. EDITOR,—Responding to the announcement given on Sunday the 4th instant at the Wesleyan Chapel here by the Catechist that the Representative of the Wesleyan Society here desired to meet with the members in the Chapel on Tuesday the 6th inst., the people from curiosity assembled on the above date for the purpose of hearing what was going the be said.

Accordingly the Meeting was opened by a Mr. S. Albert St. John with singing and prayer and the reading of Holy Scriptures, after which he in a short speech introduced as chairman for the Meeting Mr. W. R. Bull.

Mr. Bull in rising said that on Monday evening at his country residence in Bull's Creek, few young men came to him and requesting him to be Chairman for a Meeting which was to be convened for the purpose of writing a letter of protest against the Rev. S. W. Davies, a Methodist Minister, who, (as rumoured) is to take charge of Sherbro Circuit in lieu of the Rev. J. C. Thomas who will remove to Freetown.

To enlighten the meeting on the disqualification of Mr. Davies, a Mr. Brighton Turner, a giddy youth of twenty three, was called upon to read a paper prepared by him to the Meeting animadverting most forcibly on the ministerial career of this christian minister and at the close of the paper, proffered the Congregation to give publicity to his essay.

Mr. Wilhelm, the accidental schoolmaster of the Church of England's persuasion who was but a few months ago employed as Teacher in the Wesleyan school here read a letter addressed to the Rev. W. H. Maude, urging in an uncharitable manner that the Rev Mr. Davies should not be sent to this place stating most unceremoniously that—should the Rev. gentleman be sent here he would turn the people from "grace to nature" instead of "nature to grace." This letter was placed before the congregation for signatures.

A Mr St. John, a stranger in this place and only four months an ordinary member of this connexion rose up and in a verbose speech spoke most unchastely of the Rev. Mr. Davies, whom he does not know at all.

From his lips I learn that he (Mr. St. John) was in England, but by some how or other he was pushed to become a member of the Congregational Society, where he was converted, and yet notwithstanding his strong conversion in England there was nothing in his speech in matter or manner which reflect creditably on his mountain labour-ed speech.

Mr. F. E. B. Backnor, a very sensible young man rose up and asked the chairman whether the meeting convened was constitutional according to the polity of Methodism?—

The old man faltered but "teeth is bitter," and in a gobbled speech acknowledged that it was not, though he filled to give reasons to justify its convention.

Following the same strain with Mr. Backnor, Mr. Punshon Thorpe rose up and asked the chairman for the meaning of certain terms made use of by Mr. Turner in his essay and the addressed letter to the Rev. W. H. Maude in which Mr. Davies was termed as not being "sober" and "not of a sound mind." This the chairman could not explain, but simply stated that the meeting was one for discussion and not opposition.

We look forward for the publication of Mr. Turner's essay on the Rev. Gentleman's qualities which he faithfully promised; and also that the Authorities of the Wesleyan Body should constitute an enquiry of the legality or illegality of the proceedings of such a Meeting.

I am, yours truly,
Bonthe, A METHODIST.

OTTERBEIN STATION.

Bompehtooke Sherbro.

Dear Mr. Editor,—Kindly permit me through your valuable journal to suggest one or two thoughts on the above Subject. The late venerable William Otterbein, recognized as the founder of The Church of the United Brethren in Christ, Established in America; A Branch of which we have in west Africa under the names, Mendi, Shengay, and Bompeh Missions, at the time the Shaingay Mission was first established under the name of the United Brethren in Christ on this coast, it was thought proper by the Home Board, that a station should also be established under the name of OTTERBEIN, as a memorial to that venerable Saint, for his long life of usefulness in the Church. Accordingly Bompelitooke was fixed on and a Station was opened there in the year 1874, but for some unknown reason this Station was removed and carried to Kookoong, a place about two miles from Bompehtooke in 1883. not under the same Otterbein, but under the name of Glossbrenner, and had it not been for the earnest pleading of Mr. J. N. Lefevre, and the late Chief Bah Matty of Bompehtooke, the Bell would have been removed also and the Chapel even would have been broken down. Mr. Editor, does this action show the love and affection of the Church towards that saint who had done so great a work? Looking at things closely, there is no other Station that shows a greater result of the Missions' labour than Otterbein Station, not even Shaingay the Head Quarter, look even in the Mission field; Mr. Frank Dixon of Mo'Fass, Mr. R. Lake of Rembee, Mr. Jasper Caulker in Freetown, Mr. Harry Caulker of the Customs, Mr. J. Lefevre and I the writer. We are clerks at Bompehtooke, J. W. Domingo is a Tailor, Thomas Matthews is a Cooper and many others. All these are from Otterbein Station and who are of use to the world, of this who received part of their education at Otterbein Station before they were sent to the Grammar School in Freetown for higher trainings are Rev. J. A. King the present Pastor of Kookoong Station, E. Lefevre of Freetown, and the late Jno. A. Lefevre. Now Mr. Editor, where can you find such good result from the other Stations, even Shaingay, then why are the others reasined and maintained, and Bompehtooke neglected, are not the above result sufficient encouragement for the Mission to reopen that Station? Ah! are there not many precious souls who ought to be saved? at present, though the working of Mr. King at Kookoong a seekers' class is organized there, but seeing on the other hand that the work is too much for him, he being alone and having thirteen villages around him to itinerate,—this is killing; when he is engaged in the other villages, Mr. Lefevre have charge of the Seekers' Class. Let christian men and women in America hear and come to the help of these poor people, and let something be done for them, not by my will but the will of God, and great shall be the result here after.—Thanking you Mr. Editor for the space occupied.

I remain, yours,
G. M. DOMINGO.

JOTTINGS.

Sorry we were mistaken in our last Jottings about the arrival of Mr. T. E. McFoy, but we are sure that he has since arrived on the 24th inst.

Mr. S. B. Morrison and family, expected on the 12th inst., did not arrive until the 16th, and proceeded to Freetown on the 19th inst.

We had a short visit to the Bargroo, from the 17th to the 20th instant all is quiet that way.

Justitia wrote his article before the arrival of the Rev. James Johnson.

It is rather dangerous to copy articles for the Public press from the fact that you cannot tell, who has read the book or paper before.

We publish in this issue the report of Kookoong station it is the first we have received from that work.

The special services at St. Mathew's Church are largely attended night and day.

NEWS ITEMS.

The long expected arrival of the s. s. Countess of Derby occurred on Sunday last by the s. s. Countess of Derby and as a result of his brief visit, we are to have a new Female's Ward at our Hospital, if this report be true, it is certainly a move in the right direction, and will be a boon to this community.

A recent letter from England informs us that Mr. T. J. Alldridge, has resumed business again at his old Address, 43 Botolph Lane, London E. C., where he was prior to coming out to Sherbro in 1883 for Messrs. Randall & Fisher, and where he will be pleased to hear from his former Patrons and the Trading Public Generally

Personal

Rev. J. Gomer Gen'l Supt. of the M. and S. Missions arrived here from Shaingay at 11 p.m. on Friday 16th inst, and on Saturday at 11 a.m., proceeded on tour of visitation to the Bargroo, and with the District Supt. of the Mendi District visited and spent the Sabbath at Danville Station and in the Farkies of the same, holding 7 Services during Sunday. They also visited Koncanay on Monday, only spending an hour there after which they returned, reaching Bonthe on the 19th at 9 a.m. and at 11 p.m. of the same day, or night Rev. J. Gomer left this place for Shaingay.

The Rev. James Johnson the Missioner accompained by the Revd. G. G. M. Nicol Pastor of St. Luke's Parish gave us a pleasant call on the 26th inst. and kindly invited us to attend the special services at St. Mathews Church.

Revd R. C. Taylor of Mando Station reports his work in a prospero is condition spiritually and that the people, the greater part, of them at least, are teachable, willing and earnest in their work; he entertains great hopes for the future of the work.

Mr. E. Edwards is again in Sherbro after a considerable absence to Freetown and Vicinity his European Clerk having died at Bendoo while he was away, we regret to note.

Revd. S. B. Morrison has returned from his trip of change to Bananas and will (D.V.) soon be again at his post in the Bargroo. Mr. Morriso is one of our dilligent and hard working laborers giving his whole time and talent to the work of the Mission.

Mr. William. Lewis Senr. has returned from Freetown looking fresh and well for his change he gave us a call on yesterday (29 inst.) on his way to his place of Business.

Monthly Report of Mando Station April 1886.

The work here is becoming more and interesting. With the daily consciousness of the vigilance of the grand adversary of the Church, I tremble at the thought of my weakness. Yet He who has promised, verified His promise to us during the month. The attendances at all the services have been steady and good and I believe some good has been done which the judgement day shall reveal. All the appts in the outstations have been duly fulfilled.

There seems to be a holy zeal burning in the hearts of these dear people for the work of Christ. Oh for more grace to be of greater usefulness to them. The poor native children are making steady progress in their books at the Day school, and some of them show fair ability to learn fast. Our Sabbath school is very encouraging, and though Sierra Leone traders are obliged to be absent to their trading factories now and again yet we manage to supply the vacancy thus made in teaching staff.

The people of Mando are a good people; "Taking the greater part for the whole" social and teachable, and I entertain great hope in the near future for them.

Yours in Christ
R. COOKSON TAYLOR.

UNITY IS STRENGTH.

MR EDITOR SIR—In civil, Social religious, in short in every relation of the human family, it is an undeniable fact that Unity is strength. He is a Successful Sovreign who is blest with a cooperative cabinet. The state of civilization advances in so far as individuals would do their respective parts in bringing about the desired end. If it is so in civil and social matters, it is more so in religious matters. That Bishop or Gen'l Supt is successful in the discharge of his ministerial functions as long as he is blest with a united and cooperative working band. The venerable Bishop Cheetham C. M. S. the energetic W. H. Maude Wesleyan. The Saintly T. Truscott U. M. F. C. can each attest that Unity is Strength. Passing from other Missions to the Norsegay Mission there we find the venerable veteran J. Gomer holding the reins of Government as Successfully as any one can with with his Asst. the faithful Dist. Supt. of the Mendi Mission. These tried servants of God can likewise attest that Unity is Strength. They have won the golden opinion of their native Assistants by their respectful, sympathetic, and Christian manners.

How nice does the item in your last issue read, "Mr J. W. Baker by invitation of the District Superintendent came down &c. and has passed to Shengay for consultation with our Gen'l Supt. and is returned to Conkonay. Shengay mission has gained an small dimension on the W. C. A. and is not behind hand in the salvation of souls, and there are many in Heaven to day who can speak eulogizingly of the Shengay Mission as instrumental in their Salvation.

Let the native assistants know and feel that their superiors have sympathy with them and are interested in every thing that interests them, relative to the work, and they will be thankful. Dont think when they are sick that they are neglecting their duty and have no heart in the work] do not presume to give advice to those who are wiser than I, but I am free, to give my individual opinion, that if Supts and Genl. Supts. Irrespective of connexions, will respect the feelings of their native assistants, speak and pray with and for them, and not regard their difficulties as of common occurrence and therefore of no impostance, in short, if they will unite with their N. A. in everything that is good, they will soon find out with others, who have found out, that, UNITY IS STRENGTH.

Thanking you for your valuable space.

J. W. BAKER'S Selection on Page 1, [Concluded.]

There is something in the nature and design, and even in the very name, of a Sunday School, that invites attention and bespeaks respect. Here on the of rest, when the wheel of business stands still, and heaven and earth proclaim a repose for man and beast, and sanction no labour, but that of charity and love, is the pious and humble teacher actively employing his powers in the imparting to the offspring of the poor, a knowledge of that book which speaks peace on earth and good will to man and that too without prospect or possibility of human reward. Here all is mildness—for here the meek and lowly christian is here are no angry threats-no coercive strifes, no terrible rods; the children of poverty are yet free agents, they are instructed by love. I think we could not enter beneath the roof, and see the teacher on his seat surfounded by a circle of health ful and ruddy countenances, each looking with smiling and respectful eagerness for the accustomed Salutation or hear the plain and simple but affectionate advice fall from his lips to his listening charge; or witness the manners which he imports to their inquiring minds the faculty of reading the word of truth; or observe the delight with which he replies to every innocent but perhaps strangely uttered query as to its meaning, without annoying his feelings. It must be a circumstance of no trifling advantage to the teacher, that his own mind is necessarily benefited by the instructions he communicates: the first principles of religion and the foundations upon which they rest, being so often upon his tongue, must be ever renewed in his memory. And his in dispensable meditation on sacred things will hallow his own mind and he will thus derive a perpetual freshness from the very soul he waters. These employments too call forth the dormant energies of the soul, awaken in the breast feelings of honest and becoming self gratulation as the thought of being a useful member of Society and of the church, not only so, they introduce to greater activity and to wider spheres of usefulness. The Sunday School affords an opportunity for all to have the luxury of doing good. Age may employ its declining powers there with advantage and emulate the zeal and perseverance of youth. But perhaps it is more peculiarly the province of the young; they are more disencumbered with the weight of temporal care and have more natural strength and vivacity to apply themselves to the work.

To the Editor of the "Early Dawn."

Dear Mr. Editor,—I have been silent for a long time watching the course of events, and many occurrences has passed, some of which are very unpleasant but which I have allowed to pass without reporting same in your Journal, however you will allow me space to report a few circumstances which I hope will interest your readers.

I have read your Editorial in your issue of March 30th, respecting personal abuses that are contained in some of the Articles sent for insertion, and I quite agree with you, for your prospectus forbids all such communications, and it appears to me that people now a days will shelter themselves under cover of your paper to pour out their invectives against their opponents, instead of going forward to meet them, (this is right down cowardice) for Newspapers were never intended for the display of such things as appeared in "Cupboard Corner," from Manoh Bargroo in Navy, and Deer, and I am happy to say that the public are much benefitted by the discontinuance of the Cupboard Corner, as its continuation would have been fraught with serious results. The public and your readers will always be glad to read from newspapers news that is of public benefit, and that will interest them, however as you have notified the writers of such trash that in future you will receive no such communications, I hope they will be satisfied, for "a word to the wise is sufficient."

The trumpet has been sounding here so long that the Missioners Revs. H. & J. Johnson would visit Sherbro, but to the present moment their presence is not yet visible here, why so? Are there no souls to be converted to God here? I answer there are thousands, the services of the Missioners could no where be more needed than at Sherbro, a land full of all manner of Vice &c., which knows no bound. I hope they will soon be here to tell the people of their transgressions.

It is rumoured that the Rev. J. C. Thomas of the Wesleyan Mission will be transferred to the New Wesley Chapel in Freetown,—if so, I wish him success. "Promotion cometh not from the East or West, &c. it is the gift of God." Thanks for space occupied.

Yours, JUSTITIA.

DIED AT SENEHOO.

Mr. Fonney Will, the Headman and one of the chief and most influential men of this section of country who had been unwell for several weeks, breathed his last about 8 o'clock, the morning of April 13th. About twelve years ago, he first consented for the Gospel to be preached in his Town. Three years ago when a seekers' class was organized in his town, he was the first to give his name, though there is at present over 30 Seekers there, we have not thought best to organize a Church Class. Mr. Fonney Will built a Barra for holding service in, torn down, as he said to build a larger one in another part of the town, this however he never got built, but fifteen months ago when he first received Mrs Thompson as school teacher he built a temporary shed and had it covered with palm branches from the time that Mrs. Thompson opened her School (the Lesher) there, and commenced morning and evening worship to which all in the village were invited;. Fonney Will has seemed a changed man, he was very proud of having a school in his town and loud in his praise of Mrs.. Thompson, whenever the Itinerant did not reach there on the Sabbath, Mrs Thompson would conduct Sabbath Service, one sabbath when Mrs Thompson and the Itinerant were both absent, he was in a straight to know what to do, but, finally succeeded in finding a man that could pray in public, he talked to the people and they had a meeting. Mrs. Thompson has adopted the plan of having morning and evening worship in the different houses in the village a week in each family, the master or mistress must conduct it. When Mr. Fonney Will was very sick, he asked that the meeting be brought to his house, although it was not the week for his house, it was taken there, and he expressed himself pleased; Mrs Thompson asked him if he was prepared to die, he said that he was quite ready; his son Frank asked him if there was anything on his mind that troubled him? he said no, the way is clear between me and God, and soon after quietly breathed his last.

Report of Kodong Station Shengay Mission for the Quarter ending March 31th 1886.

In taking a review of the work here for the past quarter, I am constrained to offer my tribute of praise to the author and giver of all success for his grace and strength bestowed on me in doing his service. Although the greatest enemy of mankind is hard at work through the efforts of the mohammedans, in deluding the people yet there are a few who have acknowledged Christ as the Head of the Church. The illustrating work is greatly encouraged in the erection of barras by the people themselves for divine service. Mrs Jane Williams an old member of Bompeltook chapel is the leader of our Seekers class at Manoh; and she is doing very well. On the 14th of march The Rev J. Gomer conducted our quarterly meeting. It was a revival in our midst and one long to be remembered. He administered the Lord supper and Baptism, and received 2 persons into full membership. The people at Bompeltook especially J. N. Lefever Esq. are doing remarkably well for the Chapel there. They have covered the Chapel with their own expenses, and other preparations are on foot for repairings. From the 10th of march we are having a series of Love services there every wednesday evening, and Mr Lefevre is furnishing us with lights. These meetings will come to a close on the 23rd instant.

SABBATH SCHOOL—Under the Superintendency of Mrs King is in a prospering condition. In order to encourage our friends at Bompeltook, we are having the Sunday School alternately at Kodong and Bompeltook. Teachers and officers, 5. Scholars 42.

DAY SCHOOL.—Though it has not attained its former position, yet is gradually advancing, and there is great hope in the willingness of the scholars for brighter prospects. Number of pupils 25 of these 15 Mission children, and the rest ex-Number of Seekers enrolled 123. Communicants 13. Total 137.

MISSIONER REV. J. JOHNSON, AT BONTHE

To the Editor of the "Early Dawn."

Dear Mr. Editor,—Allow me space in the columns of your Journal to report the following important news which I trust will be read with interest by the public and your readers.

On Thursday the 22nd ultimo, the Rev. Jas. Johnson landed at Bonthe from Freetown viâ Kent, by the Contract Boat, and on Sunday the 25th, the Evangelistic Mission Services commenced. These Services were conducted four times daily by the indefatigable Mr. Johnson.

One could not sufficiently express the influence these Meetings have had on the minds of the people, for this is the first of the kind that has ever taken place at Bonthe and it has proved a blessing to the community. Many were added to the Church by conversion, —Churchmen, Methodist, &c.

The exhortations on each occasion were powerful, and every one present left the meeting impressed with a deep sense of their responsibilities to God, for the preacher in a most vehement manner reproved all those whose consciences accused them of sins they have openly and secretly committed, the language of the preacher was broken English, understood by all classes in the congregation. From the first to the eighth day which the services lasted, the Schools in the District were closed, and the ministers of the different denommations were present at each of the services. Market women ceased from attending their daily avocations, in short, the whole town were in a state of commotion, and so eager were they to obtain a seat in the church that before the ringing of the 1st bell were to be seen, people of every tribe and nation—the Mendis, Sherbros, Timanees, Susus, &c, all eager to find a place. An adjoining portion was added to the Church for the convenience of the people.

The Seekers during these services were many, and several petitions were sent in, asking the prayers of the church for the crimes for which they were guilty. Many asked prayers on behalf of a wicked husband or wife, a stubborn child etc. etc.,

The most important subjects dealt upon be the worthy preacher were Adultery, Fornication, and Drunkenness, (the peculiar sins of the land) and in a forcible manner addressed the congregation on these important Subjects. Many hearts bled and trembled for mercy, and promised to lead a new life

Mr. Editor, I must confess that this Mission has proved a blessing to the community. Conspicuous among the confessors was an old adept in the art of gregerism &c., a mohamedan (Randall) who gave up his Koran on the last night of the Mission. I hope his confession is a true one, and that he will forever forsake the worship of the great Impostor. I believe an abler pen will deal on this subject better than myself.

Yours Mr. Editor,
JUSTITIA.

KAH SEELAN AND THE WHITES.

Kah Seelan the tutelar demon of the Bargroo, especially of the Manoh Bargroo, is said to have been opposed to Settlement of the White people at Avery in that region and more so to the erection of the Saw Mill hence it was believed that he would never allow it to start but it started and run, yet when Mr. Burton who built it unfortunately fell one day in the Mill and broke some of his ribs it was thought that Kah Seelan was still displeased at this innovation and had caused Mr Burton to fall and that he would die but on his recovery it was supposed that at Mr Burton's Devil was stronger or greater than Kah Seelan; yet it is claimed the strife did not cease, but that Kahseelan proceeded with his opposition in another way and that was by raising delusions on the lake just below and in full view of Avery Station; it is said that whenever a boat had been sent down to Bonthe and was expected to return. He would raise the appearance of the boat on the lake or river in sight of the Station and when he had succeeded in deceiving the inmates of the Mission House he would cause the delusion to disappear, Kah Seelan kept up his opposition it is said, by the natives, until the advent of the colored Missionaries.

Rev. J. Gomer,

Dear Brother,—Your Article came to us duly, I am glad to hear from you, I do not know, Who intimated that you wrote too much, I never heard it here. You do not write too much for us I am anxious to keep the African Work prominently before the Church. Be assured that you have our prayers. While I was in Va. a Brother, Rev Henry Jones of Dayton Va: gave me 16 Dollars to be sent to you direct, I now comply with his request, and enclose draft for three pounds and six shillings to your order which you are to use in you work I hope it may reach you safely I of ten think of you and your work is that dark land. I am now just home from Virginia and have not time to write you such a letter as I would love to send you, give our kindest regards to Mrs. Gomer, God bless you all in your work for the master.

INDIAN CHIEFS MAKING PEACE OVER A CHILD'S GRAVE.

An Indian chief sat at the door of his wigwam with his grandchild—a little maiden of twelve years old—by his side. The old chief's dress, and the bows, and spears, and tomahawks, hanging on the walls of the hut, spoke too plainly of the warrior's life he led:—

The child was silent and pensive, and the old man cast many a troubled glance towards her as she sat gazing on the setting sun. At length he broke the silence. Speaking in gentle tones, he said: "Why art thou so sad of late, my little child? What fills thy mind that thou shouldst sit thinking, thinking, when thou shouldst be at merry game with thy companions? how long it is since I heard thy voice at play! Tell me, my darling, what is it that makes thee look so grave?"

The child laid her hand in his, and looking into his face with a smile of affection, said: "When the white teacher was here, dear grandfather, he told us that the Great Spirit would have us love one another, and live in peace. But we do not—we fight, and kill, and destroy. Why cannot we live in peace, dear grandfather? Why should we be angry with those who are angry with us? Why cannot we love one another, and do one another good?".

The old chief said cheerfully: "Let not my little bird be troubled about her people's wars. Thy grandfather's enemies, my child, are not thine. All the tribes love thee! I last thou not nursed their wounded, and saved them, when prisoners from the vengeance of our people? If they are at war with us, they are not at war with thee; so quiet thy troubled heart and be a merry child again."

A few months later, and that Indian maiden lay at the point of death. She was stricken down with fever, and her life was fast ebbing away. Since that summer evening, when they conversed together at the door of the wigwam, she had scarcely seen the old chief, her grandfather. He had been away with his tribe, carrying war and desolation into the camp of his enemies. During that time many wretched prisoner had been rescued from cruelty and torture by the tender hearted child and many a poor suffer soothed and relieved by her kind ministrations. Some of these, escaping from their captors, had returned to their own people, and carried the fame of her gentleness and goodness far and wide among them.

As soon as the old chief heard of the child's illness, he left the war in the hands of others, and hastened home. She had been looking for him, longing for him; and when at length he came, she laid her burning head upon his bosom, and murmured, "Dear grandfather, I am happy now."

It was a lovely autumn evening when the Broken-hearted old man sat by the dying maiden, mournfully watching for the end which was so fast approaching. He thought of that other evening, and of the words she had spoken about loving one another and living together in peace, and almost wished that for her sake he had giving up the war.

THE RESULT.

We mean, of the special services at the St. Matthew's Church, has been that a great many persons have attended daily Religious Services held for the revival of Religion among us which indeed was much needed and there have been we are informed some considerable efforts on the part of not a few to reform and we have rejoiced at the good thus effected; But we regret the folly that some have manifested, yet if they, as we sincerely trust they were, have been endeavouring to become better, we can easily overlook their folly, however we do not share very largely in the faith of momentary impulses; from the fact that history and experience combined in their Testimony against the constancy of such things and although many may perhaps now condemn our remarks, yet if they are spared to see the lapse of a few months, they may be able to see with us. And should Bro. Johnson return to the scene of his labours in the course of 6 or 8 months we fear his heart would be pained at the sight of so many that had been clean, but like the sow had returned to their wallowing in the mire. And still we are far from thinking that no good has been accomplished, for we are sure that word preached so earnestly, so plainly, so forcibly and so untiringly, as it has been by Mr. Johnson, will certainly do good as we are, that some men who professed will not hold out unto the end unless it comes pretty soon.

The Rev W. H. Maude General Superintendent of Wesleyan Missions in the Sierra Leone and Gambia district arrived by the s. s. Elmina from Freetown at York Island on the 14th of last month with the Rev J. C. Thomas Wesleyan Pastor of this place, who had left his flock for six weeks attending the Annual District Meeting and other matters connected with the District in Freetown. On their reaching Bonthe the two Rev gentlemen proceeded to Mo-Moseley a Mission Station of theirs, where Mr Maude had an interview with chief W. E. Tucker of Bollom, and took the view of the chapel and the Mission house. Mr Maude was highly pleased with what he saw of that infant Mission and return to Bonthe with Mr Thomas the next day to preside over the Quarterly Meeting where several topics tending to the prosperity of the Church were lovingly discussed. He left in the Mission boat for waterloo via York on the 16th and Mr Thomas has since resumed his duties.

To the Editor of the "Early Dawn."

Though a foreigner yet I am deeply interested in the evangelization and christianization of the Sherbro country; for say I always from conversation with its reputable Chief who is exerting a wide-spread influence in extinguishing if possible all secret societies tending to demoralize the country, to to the lowest depth of degradation, that the Sherbro country will in the near future rank with others in point of civilization. Her sons and daughters must be educated, and if need be, those also who have a growing interest in the well being of its inhabitants should also receive some training to help cultivate the young minds for future usefulness. The soil is rich and can be productive of much if properly cultivated, and also there are rich minds, if properly trained will produce "Men of various shades of opinion men of varied intellecutal culture and diversity of talent." This is not a dogmatical assertion, but is made from my daily experience as half-handed Teacher on reading your valuable journal of March 15th I came to find in it an article written by one who styles himself "A Young African" that Africans cannot civilized Africa; giving a very trival reason from his non-experience as a reader and view of things and more so from a prejudiced mind not against the Sierra Leonians, who are living around and about him.

Honourable credit is due to the Sherbro Mission for what it has achieved for this Country. Still its sons and daughters are leading heart ears, for a still greater performance of that which is a pressing necessity What will be the result if the Out-stretched Hand is shortened? Those who have hopes that it will reach them will be disappointed and fall into despair hence there is a pressing obligation which requires that Out-stretched Hand hold out, until those who have hopes are reached. In connection with Sherbro Mission, the gospel was lately having its sway within the length and breadth of Chief T. N. Caulker's territory and reaching over to where Kong Gborgbor is recognized as chief by the natves. Itinerating work was done in almost every town and farkie. The effect of the preached word were glorious; men, women and children, heard the gospel and it was received, with all readiness of mind. There were also manifestations of zeal, by headmen of towns, in that Barras we erected to be used as a place to worship God. As we are in a world of changes, suddenly a change which I may call an unhappy, one, took place, and that pecuniarily, which brought about a change to the so, wonderful work, extensively carried on during the cutting down of things which brings about a halt. To be personal I am one of those in charge of Stations, experiencing the changes of things in their financial condition, though this has not at all interfered with the spiritual work, yet in regard to our present situation there is a cry for our wants to be supplied. It it is necessary I'll mention a few of our pressing needs. In the first place as an infant station we were not helped till we were able to stand alone, before the strong Arm that was bearing us up was withdrawn from us, hence it is difficult to Board goodly number of children and to have a flourishing school. Secondly, under the present circumstance the industrial part of the work is not progressing as it should be, as we have only one labourer to manage the work. Thirdly and lastly That it is our appropriation, that puts us in our present condition. This is intended to explain our situation, other stations no doubt are better off pecuniarily. Notwithstanding this the work is carried on as heretofore in every district, and is attended with heavenly blessing. We stand hoping for the time when men of means will come to the front, give contribute towards the enlargement of this good work so that our borders may be enlarged. I am possitive of this assertion that this country will certainly be won to Christ.

Bonthe Sherbro,
May 12th '86.

Dear Mr. Editor,

Since my arrival to this District I have been permitted during my brief stay of six months, now to travel as far as the Black River overland, where numerous novelties of peculiarities attracted my attentions.

Leaving this on the 18th ittimo I arrived at my destined port travelling by sea on the 21st inst., when immediately after I left on a day's journey to my place of Business. Here I was for about a fortnight during which time it was my lot to spend a Sabbath with the natives. To describe the qualities of these people the majority of whom are the Sherbros will be to occupy time and space which I have tried a great deal to avoid.

Briefly speaking they are generally a peaceful ,but very lazy people inhabiting I should say the most fertile soil in the whole Sherbro district blessings in abundance which nature in them totally alone.

I observe with great astonishment men women and little children even of three years with long pipe in their mouth a strange notion in the latter named persons which obliged me to make an earnest enquiry of the descipline taught them.

Not feeling satisfied with the manner in which I saw this state of their farms &c., I enquired further into the why such a neglect for tilling the ground so much exists, this I plainly detected in my visit round the town, as I noticed in every house and in a sung corner of each building, men lying on hammocks swinging to and fro from morn even till night ,though evidently dying from hunger.

I conducted two services for them on Sunday Easter and spoke to them from St. Matthew's gospel 27: 19. They were much delighted with the services, for I spoke to them in plain terms through an intelligent interpreter who is himself acquainted with the Scriptures.

I got them to give up working on Sundays as they sincerely expressed the several dangers to which they are usually exposed whilst engaged on this Holy day.

They are in possesion of a burning zeal for the spread of the gospel among them, and they promise to entirely give themselves up to God if there will be a missionary to lead them. I promised to leave their case before the missionaries at Bonthe, and if I succeed to let them know their decision.

Such Mr. Editor, has been the wish of these poor heathen but who will go to work for the Lord for His people are yet many to rescue. You may hear again from me.

Yours in haste
V. P. C. MASON.

NEWS ITEMS.

A fine PRESENTATION BIBLE has been given to the Mendi Mission Chapel of Good Hope Station Bonthe, Sherbro, by Mr. T. J. Alldridge of 13 Botolph Lane, London E. C., for which he has the most hearty thanks of the Pastor and people.

Personal

Revd. J. Gomer reports a good Quarterly Meeting at Mambo Station on the 24th and 25th of April the house was filled Saturday evening and Sunday, he baptized 8 adults and 3 infants quite a large number communed and they had a glorious time. Revd J. C. Sawyer is pastor at Mambo as usual is doing a great work.

Miss. Rachel Quaker of the Auni-Walsh School, Freetaw, has been spending some time in our place; She is the daughter of the late Revd. James Quaker and the sister of Mrs Josey Boyle.

Mr. E. T. Tucker, who has spent some time at the Avery Saw-mills as Chief Mechanic has recently returned to Bonth, for a time at least owing to the dullness of the Lumber Trade at present.

REVIEW OF MR. A METHODIST'S LETTER.

To the Editor of the "Early Dawn"

Sir,—Your correspondent Mr. A METHODIST will undoubtedly be most happy to learn that I heartily welcome him unto the field of journalism for his somewhat novel-like production in the report made of the meeting convened to raise objections to certain proposals made by the Annual District meeting in connection with the Wesleyan methodists here. Apart from the subject he handled I am persuaded to confess, that he has given the most true account of the meeting, its minutes and his report bespeaks a peculiar intelligence in him with marked representations of an old acquaintance with the English language. I examined his report and found it thrice a superior production to what was communicated about a Lecture given here sometime ago.

How much should each of these opposing parties be spoken of, is left to the responsibility undertaken and that the Rev. gentleman should in a long run watch for a time to take his revenge, however cooly I hesitate not to doubt.

I am glad since reviewing Mr. A Methodist's letter, that Messrs. Turner and Wilhelm, have respectively sent in letters of appology for their past aberrancies and effusons though the latter was very bold enough to think himself capable of turning white to black regardless of his insignificant position by simply writing you a letter or two. Of the former, I can only say that owing to tender and inexperienced years in age he has always been in folly.

There was scarcely necessity for the convention of such a meeting as the one Mr. "A Methodist" reported on, and it is absolutely necessary we should not blame the speakers and chairman, but the Catechist who took an undue advantage of the Pastor's absence to Freetown.

Respecting the publication of such scurrilous essay, it is apparently true the writer Mr. Turner was misunderstood for considering that he is quite as unstable as the opposed party himself, he dare not venture to give publicity to such trash. I shall be most thankful if Mr. Turner will be more charitable in his general make up of individuals for whenever he speaks or writes, they are only evil continually. The writer of the said essay deserves to be pitied for, having thrown himself in hot water but I trust this will lead him to work uprightly, although he is not accounted for the trivolousness with which he does his work.

Rest assured Mr. Editor that from henceforward nothing will occur on the contrary that you will not be informed of.

I shall watch with great care every proceeding of illegal order and as your powerful organ is before us we shall always split the difference in it.—I remain always the same

TRUTH.

MY VIEW OF THINGS.

In my last I expressed a wish that letters unfit for insertion should not find a space in your valuable and interesting Journal. Valuable because of its peculiar worth: and interesting because of its esteemed reception, world wide. According to this my humble request, the negroes will not be gauged by the production of an illeterate and half intelligent man who writes from plagiarism. I refer especially to a communication which appeared in your issue of the 15th March, said to be the report of a Lecture delivered by a Teacher.

Great are the events which mark the past weeks at Bonthe. The arrival of a new Captain to have and to hold the reins of commands at Sherbro is one, and the departure of Capt. Halkett his predecessor is another. I trust with full assurance the former will be an equal to the latter for energy, vigour and humour.

At last the Countess of Derby was here and the Colonial Surgeon too. I hear his adoptions are good—A new Female Ward he directs must be erected. I am glad for this; the fair sex will be much honoured and they will be sheltered from cold and wind when in the Assylum. I am glad too the Doctor was pleased with the management of the Hospital. Our Asst. Col. Surgeon is a painstaking man, and deserves the eulogy that may be given him.

Turning round, I must complain of the Streets and Gutters, as it has come to the worst of time now. They have been greatly neglected these past few months, and perhaps this is owing to the Overseer of Roads being ill for sometime. A man useful to Sherbro in all respects, but of whom "Harmless" wrote so uncharitably. I wish him success in the recommencement of his duties, and trust he will use double energy in the discharge of his work. I congratulate him meantime for escaping the last danger. Much depends on the newly arrived Commandant for the insurance of the healthiness of this District during the rains and I trust he will be lenient in the estimate for Roads and Streets, rather than make retrenchments.

The Mission Services are all over now and good results have accrued from them.

To speak or write with a disregard of every other persons' opinion, if the Converts are not merely deceiving themselves—two thirds or more of the town are really in the enjoyment of the peace the Mission has created. Surely the hand of the Lord is every where with His people. Holy Johnson is indeed holy and deserves the eulogy given him along the West coast of Africa. But how cannot Africa be favoured with such a man.

Following the Mission Services is the general election of Office Bearers to serve for the year in St. Matthew's Church; this has met with great success; and I believe it will be reported on in your columns. One great disgust is that the majority of electors do not at all know the purport of an election Meeting.

The times are changing and we seem to be changing with them. Trade commences to be fair but moderately and the rivers are all opening their mouths for the Merchants to enter in and work.

What a pity to miss an important Journal such as the Sierra Leone Church Times. She has grown tired of existence and at last has succumbed to a natural death.

Yours sincerely,
SERAPHINO.

Mr. F. E. B. Buckner Bailiff of Sherbro returned per s. s. Benito on the 2nd but he has since got married on the 13th inst.

Mrs. E. Williams wife of Revd. H. J. Williams and sister of Revd. D. F. Wilberforce has been spending some time in this place for a change.

Revd. J. C. Thomas Pastor of the Wesleyan connexion in this place gave us a pleasant call on the 4th inst and expressed to us, how the Revd. W. H. Maud Supt. of the connexion managed to visit the Sherbro and get away without our notice.

Many jokes were passed, and considerable confusion existed, but at length the minister announced that all was ready. The seremony was gone through with, and at its conclusion, the affair having a "profound success," a rush was made for the bride. She was kissed by a hundred men, and was carried home a distance of a mile and a half in a big arm-chair. Now comes the mystery. When the lady was set down at her own door, the widower, the bachelor, and two young men each claimed to be her true and lawful husband. None of the crowd could say who was also lucky man, the minister was at sea, and the bride herself seemed to have doubts. The widower was the man of her choice, but in the confusion he could have been hustled aside, and he affirmed that an attempt was made to choke him and get him out of the barn. The bachelor vowed that she had promised to marry him, as also did both young men, and each one was sure that he help the widow a plump hand, and was legally married to her. The four men had a fight but that didn't mend matters. The crowd ducked two of them in a creek, but that didn't decide the question. Just how it would have terminated had not the widower been a man of nerve no one can tell, as the other three had already applied to the law, when the widower stepped in and took his place as husband and settled with the other three for 2,000 dols. each. One of the young men, now over forty years old and having all the wife he wants (she weighs 230 pounds) is living in this city, and during the interview with him today, he solemnly and earnestly assured our correspondent that he was legally married to the widow Dodsworth that night to the big barn. Another of the parties lives in Clinton country, and he has time and again asserted that he is the woman's true and lawful husband, so help him God. The bachelor is dead, but were he alive and kicking he would renew his oft-repeated protestations.—Sel.

WHICH WAS THE HUSBAND!

About twenty years ago there lived in central Michigan a curious old Benedict named Dodsworth. At the age of fifty he married a girl of twenty, and when the burden of sixty years bore him down his wife was only half his age. Dodsworth was noted for his peculiarities, but the climax came when he found himself on his dying bed. He was worth about 30,000 dols., and he hadn't a blood relative living, so far as he knew. He wanted to leave his property to his wife, as the pair had lived very happily, but yet he could not leave it without displaying some of his peculiarities in the provisions of the will. Some old men display a mean spirit when making their will, and draught in a provision cutting the wife off with a shilling if she marries again. The old man wasn't of that stamp. His young wife was good-looking vivacious, fond of society, and it was folly to suppose she would mourn for her "late departed" any great length of time. Therefore, Mr. Dodsworth turned heel on the usual custom, and said in his will: "In case my wife Celia does not take unto herself another husband within thirteen months from date of my burial, all bequests otherwise made in this will are to revert to the state of Michigan, to be used for building and furnishing a home for old women." Whether Celia was pleased or displersed at this provision deponent saith not, but the old man had not been under the sod more than six months when the widow was said to be looking out for another man. If it was singular for the dying Dodsworth to urge his wife to marry again it was still more singular that he should desire the ceremony to be performed under the following circumstances, viz.:—"And it is made incumbent on said Celia Dodsworth that in taking a new husband the marriage ceremony shall be performed in the big barn on my farm, on the H——road. It shall take place at ten o'clock in the evening, on the main floor, without lights of any description, with all doors shut, and a free invatation shall be extended to all. The clergy-man shall stand in the stables, and the bride and groom on the main floor, and the principal parties to the ceremony shall be dressed in black throughout. The widow announced her intention to faithfully obey in spirit and letter; the will was probated, and the twelfth month had scarcely passed before she issued an invatation for the public to attend a wedding at the big barn. Just who the groom was to be no one could positively assert, as the widow had been keeping company with a widower, a bachelor and two young men, and as far as any outsider could tell, she loved one as well as the other. Being good-looking and talented, and having fortune behind her, it was not strange that she should have a number of suitors. She seemed to enter into the spirit of the affair with great zest, as also did the minister; and to further mystify the people in attendance, the bride entered the barn alone at one door, the groom alone at another, and no one knew that the minister had arrived until his voice was heard in the stables. There were at least 200 people present, and each one understood that even the stiking of a match would break the will.

A HAT STORY.

About nineteen years ago, a fine-looking old gentleman, from Western Virginia, entered a store in Nashville, Tennessee. The store was owned by a bluff, honest old trader, who knew a great deal more about the quality of the liquor sold at the back end of the counter than he did about the fineness of the fabrics at the other; nevertheless, between the two extremities of that shelf, he contrived to make both ends comfortably meet the necessities of the case. The old Virginian cast his eyes around the shelves, and finally remarked,

"Well, neighbour, you, I see hev got hats."

"A slight sprinkle," was the answer; and then followed the query, "Whar are you from?"

"Old Virginia," was the response.

"Right smart old State," replied the Tennessean, "but getting rather too old to keep her har on."

"What do you mean?" inquired the Virginian.

"Well, just what I say, it can't keep her har on; for instance, now, I should think you hev been a right lusthy child of the Old Dominion, but she is sheil yon at last, and like Samson of old, that's jest the way she is losin' all the best har off her venerable head."

The old virginian looked around the store, rather bothered with the liberty this Tennessean was taking with his mother State, and finally remarked—

"I came here to talk about hats, stranger, and not har."

"Well, well, uncle, don't get wrathy, now; I was only venturing a political opinion about population in general, and on that head we won't quirrel; but before we look at the hats, as they are intimately connected with heads, 'spose we take mite of bald-face."

The proposition was agreed to—the liquor was embibed, and next followed the hats. The merchant tossed down four or five wool hats of various sizes, and invited the old gentleman to select one which would fit him. He looked at them, examined the sizes, said they would do, and requested the storekeeper to hand him down a few more.

"That's all the sizes I've got," said he, "but I can's a few more, if you think you'd like 'em better," and so saying, he tossed down three more.

"Them's all right," said the old Virginian, turning them a round; and the stout old storekeeper, blowing with exertion, descended from his perch, where he was straddling from shelf to counter. As soon as he reached the floor, the old Virginian remarked that he had not got enough yet.

"Oh you want 'em for your niggers," says the storekeeper; "well, why did'nt you say so when I was up" and he again proceeded to perch himself up, like a mercantile Colossus. When he had blowed himself into his former position, the old man quietly remarked—'Why, strangers, I warn't talking anything about niggers." The fact is, the old man was rather enjoying the extra trouble he had put the Tennessean to.

"Well, what do you want with so many hats?" inquired the hatter.

"I want 'em for my sons," said the old man.

The storekeeper began to count those on the counter—"Eight," said he; "a pretty big spread of boys already, of I'll swear; but here goes, and he added one, and then another, and yet a fourth, and he picked off a fifth, and finally, seeing that the old man stood immovable, earnestly counting the hats, he tossed down three more, and was about to descend himself, when the old man told him to hold on, and throw down a few more.

"Oh, come, uncle," said he, "you are joking;" but to please him he threw down twenty.

"That's jest one too many," said the old man, with much gravity.

"What! —you don't mean say, you have nineteen sons?" to "Yes, I do mean to say so," was the old man's answer.

"And whar, in the name of the State of Tennessee, are they?"

"Well, they are in Tennessee," said the old man, "right yeer, in this city—up at the hotel."

"Stranger," said the Storekeeper, his incredulity making him sputter and stuttor as he said it, "if you ken show me your nineteen boys, that's the hats."

"Hold on, then," said the old man, and off he started. In about ten minutes, down the street he came, heading a line of nineteen boys, marching single file, each bearing a good gun, and followed by their venerable mother. They entered the merchant's store, and ranged along the counter; the storekeeper run his eyes along the line with astonishment. "And you say," he inquired, "that these boys are all yours!"

"Yes, I, do," was the reply.

"Well, that's abundant proof, anyhow," said the store-keeper. Old friend," he added "I ain't got a word to say.; jest take my hats."—Sel.

To the Editor of the Early Dawn.

Dear Sir,

Repeated complaints bitter against your newspaper press having been pregnant all about the City of late emanating from the lips of those whom I am induced to call semi-gentlemen bearing on the disclosure of names of the writers of correspondences and articles I am to this end, obliged to make few suggestions as, would tend to banish away from the thoughts of these evil thinkers what they most likely think is your practice continually. If men who are professed gentlemen would think others are alike, let these men only remedy the evil your press is doing them by simply discontinue writing to your journal till a final resolution is arrived at to lead them to believe that you are worthy of the trust and confidence the public has bestowed on you as an Editor of a public "News paper." With the assurance that your paper will continue to exist I wish you abundant success in all your undertakings, and with anticipation of your favour in advance I close.

The Early Dawn.

Our Editor being absent at the time of sending out our last issue, and seriously indisposed during the making up of the present number; many little matters and some few mistakes, but none of a very serious nature, we are glad to believe, have crept into both issues, one drawback to the present number which we very much deplore is our long Hal Story on the first page set up in Pica such selections we generally use to fill up the fourth or advertisement page Another little annoyance is that of a few expressions in Seraphino's letter, which, while well meant, yet, we think, savor too much of the old thing but trusting our numerous friends and Subscribers will bear with us for these and our manifold other faults of the past, we promise them to amend and try to do better in the future.

HARD TIMES.—Is the usual Cry, it seems, the world over; but from recent reports, we should think that England and Ireland suffer most and that West Africa with its dull trade, ravaging petty wars, exorbitant duties on imports and exports, and we might say almost a thousand other disadvantages, suffers really less for while it is true that many have little or nothing to wear or to eat, it is a fact that they need but little, and more than that in many cases very little effort would give abundance which is not the case in many other countries.

THE EXHIBITION.—We are informed by recent European advices that the Indian and Colonial Exhibition opened on the 4th inst., without anything from Sierra Leone—We have now information that the Sierra Leone Goods have reached the Exhibition, and we have arranged for special correspondence, for our Journal, the first of which will be found in this issue and as it is from a gifted pen we believe our readers will be much benefitted by its perusal.

[From our ENGLISH CORRESPONDENT.]

OPENING OF THE INDIAN AND COLONIAL EXHIBITION IN LONDON BY HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN.

MAY 4th 1886 will be a day long remembered not only by English people but by the many natives of the different Indian and Colonial Countries who were present at the opening of this magnificent Exhibition by the Queen of England.

We had the privilege of being present and feel that we shall never forget the scene when the Queen, walking between her two sons, the prince of Wales and the Duke of Connaught, and followed by a large throng of Princes and Princesses, walked slowly through the building, bowing right and left in the most gracious manner possible.

The Prince of Wales and his brother the Duke of Connaught wore the scarlet and gold uniform of the Colonels of the guards. The Queen was dressed in black silk and black lace, for since the death of her husband she has never worn colors. She looked very small between her two sons, but her gracious and beautiful manner, and the heart-felt kindness with which she greeted her subjects, bowing quite low to them and now and then stopping to look about her as it deeply impressed and interested in all she saw, will never be forgotten by those who saw it We wished that all her Majesty's subjects might see her as we saw her, that they all might feel the same warmth of affection and respect for her.

We were glad to observe near us some native ladies and gentlemen from the West Coast of Africa among the thousands of loyal subjects who cheered Her Majesty so heartily. There were also many representatives of the different Indians mces, who although colored people, are not like Africans. Some of these in their snow white turbans and robes, formed very striking groups and reminded us of the vast size of our Empire and of the great number of tribes and peoples of which that Empire is composed.

When the royal procession had passed we went out once to the Court set apart for West Africa; but we were sorry to find that all the cases that ought to have contained the exibits from Sierra Leone was empty as the goods to be exhibited had not arrived.

SHERBRO however was well represented by an entire case of curiosities that had been collected by Mr. T. J. Alldridge, while on the Coast and had been sent to the Exibition by him. This case of exibits looked very well indeed. The back of which being hung with country cloths, and chiefs robes, while the Grotesque head of a "Bondo Devil" occupied the centre and was a noticable object.

We hear the Sierra Leone goods have now arrived, and we hope at some future time, that we may be able to give a fuller account of the wonderful things to be seen in the Indian and Colonial Exibition.

A FASHIONABLE WEDDING

On Thursday last the thirteenth inst., Bonthe witnessed a pleasurable scene, on the occasion of marriage of Francis Ezzido Boyle Backnor, son of the late, Charles Backnor Backnor Esq. deceased Harbour Master & Quarantine Officer, at the Gambia Settlement, to Maria Rosamond; eldest daughter of J. B. Parkinson Esq. one of our leading merchants here.

At the early dawn of the wedding day the Sun shone with resplendent brightness and beamed on the countenances of those who had made preparations to welcome the festival day, but on a sudden a gloomy aspect pervaded the sky and dreadful torrents were poured forth from the overshadowing clouds, quite enough to blight the prospects of both bride and bridegroom. This sudden change of weather produced a morbid excitement amongst the fair of and hard by preparing spectators, and great fears were entertained, regarding the remaining portion of the day. At the near approach of the procession there was again another change for the better, which continued fair all round, during the remaining part of the day: Morbid groans were succeeded by joyful acclamations. At 11 A. M. the ceremonial hour, crowd of spectators were seen wending their ways to the Church, followed by the bride led by her father and accompanied by a host of attendants, Ladies in quantum; some minutes afterwards.

The Bridesmaid was dressed in white silk satin trimmed with bottons and minor wreaths of very costly texture, face covered with gauze, veil accompanied with richly English manufactured wreaths round her head

The service was performed by the Rev. G. G. M. Nicol B. A., partly without the Communion Rails and partly within. The appropriate hymn beginning with these words was sung on the occasion accompanied by the harmonist Dr M. L. Jarrett Asst. Colonist Surgeon.

"The voice that breathed o'er Eden"

After the transfer and the signing of the Registers, the crowded multitude quietly ebbed from the Church and walked the newly married couple with their attendants with shouts of Sierra Leonan bedlams to the bride's father where a sumptuous breakfast had been prepared together with wines of considerable cost.

COMMUNICATED.

SHERBRO, 29, May, 1886.

To the Editor of the Early Dawn.

Dear Sir,

We learn that there was a meeting of merchants and mercantile Agts the other day here convened for the purpose of discussing the fall of African produce, especially Palm Oil and Palm Kernels, in the European markets, and to consider measures with respect to the manner in which business might be done in future to make it pay.

Several suggestions were advanced by those present, two of which, however, deserve notice.

One gentleman is reported to have said that Palm Kernels should be reduced from 4s the colonial bushel, to 3s, and Palm Oil now at 2d the imperial gallon, to Heaven knows what.

Another gentleman who appears to have looked into the matter most carefully said with whose suggestion I fully concur, thought that goods might be increased in price, and the present rates of produce not interfered with. The meeting notwithstanding this most business-like suggestion is said to have come to no decision.

Rum, Gin Tobacco, are the staple articles of trade here. Middlemen, I mean, the contractors, are, as a rule, supplied with these articles at same prices as the natives, without the least concern whatever—about the heavy expenses the liquor have to undergo, and of which the merchants are fully cognizant.

Live and lets live is the maxim in all civilized communities; it is, in fact, the only system by which trade may be carried on prosperously for any length of time

The merchants have it in their hearts to make the business pay. Every encouragement should be given to the middlemen. The natives do not and cannot object to receive Tobacco at two shillings per lb. Gin at 10 shillings the case, and Rum at five shillings the gallon or more.

My opinion is that in more ways than one as increase such as those suggested herein, would be beneficial to the country.

Sobriety, the curse of West Africa, have done more havoc in the Sherbro, than the last wars in the Kittam and Boom countries

If legislation declining to interfere with their importation, surely merchants may sell to the natives at such prices as to check in a great measure this wholesale destruction of life also the degeneracy in mind and body which may be observed on every side.

The Government have over and over again been invited to look into the new phase of things brought about by the mortality of a great portion of the Kittam to one of our merchants here.

It is true that treaties entered into with native chiefs are like piecrust made to be broken; but so long as the stipends continue to be paid to the chiefs at the Kittim,—to Fahwondoo, who receives a good slice of Government grant to protect all traders alike and to permit free and unrestricted trading intercourse within his dominions so long I say as this state of things exists, the merchants here ought to memorialize Sir Samuel Rowe, in order that steps may be taken destroy the paramount influence in the Kittam of a single merchant or of merchants in general.

What are the pledges given by Mormor, Lebkeh to maintain peace and order in the future, at the Kittim.

If he has given none, the Government would do well to direct their attention to that matter.

The resources of Sherbro are unlimited; but so long as the Government would look on while merchants arrogate to themselves powers such as those possessed by the British India company in the days of Clive and Hastings to the neutralization of Government policy, you may raise the duty on Spirits to four shillings a gallon, and the pound of Tobacco to one shilling the revenue would still continue to fall.

Sherbro is fully termed the milch cow; give her proper attention and she could undertake to supply you with as much milk as you may require.

I have read some where that the revenue of Sherbro is not so much as is always represented.

The truth is, if a careful analysis to made it will be found that, the greater portion of what is credited to the revenue of the peninsula of Sierra Leone, belongs to Sherbro; after deducting the actual consumption of spirits and tobacco with in the peninsula, all that large balance must go to the credit of Sherbro.

Before closing my remarks I should not omit to mention that Sir Samuel, our indefatigable Governor-in-chief, has really much more on hand than a single human being could be expected to perform, he being regard to the manner in which his hands are tied. Leave him free to act according to his discretion, and I guarantee he could accomplish anything with respect to native affairs, unless the impossible mean while.

I remain, Yours
A LOOKER ON.

JOTTINGS.

Our issue of the 15th was sent out during the Editor's absence to Freetown.

Several papers have been handed to us for insertion which we are compelled to leave out of this issue and others will not appear at all.

Criticisms will generally be refused hearafter if not of more than usual importance.

Bad Writers have most to complain of in the line of Typographical Errors.

Rev. S. B. Morrison preached at Mendi Mission Chapel on the 23rd inst and Rev. R. C. Taylor on the 31st inst. at 7. p. m.

The Article on Steam Communication with this place and Freetown came too late for this issue, but will appear in our next.

NEWS ITEMS.

The s.s. Susa arrived here on the 25th instant having as passengers Mrs Porter of Bonthe and several deckers she left for Freetown on the 27th instant.

The Brig Vats Norwigian arrived on the evening of the 26th instance from Freetown to take in produce, and consigned to Messrs Fisher and Randall Limited of York Island.

FROM BARGROO.

It is reported that two women from Mongray Gbin dee, (Massa and Jahtoe) have been sent down to British Sherbro by Gorpk J. W. Nicol in charge of Manoh Station Bargroo, about the 17th inst to obtain Freedom. This gave displeasure to both the head woman Cojah Kambeh, and Vanjah-wah a warrior of Mongray Gbin dee afore said, a supposed husband of the women.

Revenge has since, from misrepresentation of things given a fair peep; and it is to be teared the mendis will soon be down in hot chase on the people and our tiny staff here. Since last Wednesday report has reached us about Vanjah-wah's heartless designs and yesterday about 3, 45 p. m. the announcement of war was made. People from the farkies have been making their escape to other places and there was no little consternation about the Mission Station; torches were seen all around, men swim ning across the river, and others of the Mission employees have removed their families to the Mission House.

It is reported by people who are residents of the Bargroo but have gone to the interior on trading tours that the enemies expect to start on Saturday night.

We hope Mr Editor that the Authorities will make no delay to check the now pending threat by increasing the constabulary staff in this place even for a short. B.

Since our last Issue we have received a copy of "Bible Work" London England. Edited by a gifted Authoress Miss Alldridge and the present (April) number is well filled with interesting matter. Should be read to be appreciated.

Special sermons, on the occasion, of the Wesleyan Missionary Anniversary were preached at their chapel in this place yesterday (30th inst) by the Rev Victor A. Harding deputation from Freetown.

Personal

Capt: Peel special service officer who had been up in the interior countries in the Sulymah Districts returned on the night of the 25th inst. where he had gone on a peace Mission for about four months. We are glad to know that he has succeeded in bringing about the peace so long desired.

MR. MASON'S LETTER REVIEW'D

To the Editor of the "Early Dawn."

Sir,—Your paper of May 15th was handed to me on the 16th, and I was glad to read from its columns a letter from the pen of Mr. Victor P. C. Mason who wrote about the people (natives) in the Black River, but as one who has lived in that country for a considerable period and better able to judge of the manners and customs of the natives than Mr. Mason, whose knowledge of the people is quite limited; I therefore beg you will allow me space for the following lines.

He speaks of the people in the Black River as being indolent or lazy. Does he mean the people inhabiting the whole Island? or does he confine his statements only to the people who inhabit Mr. J.B. Brown's Factory Pisaper (few hours from Bonthe) where he is employed as a clerk; From my personal knowledge of the greater portion of the Black River, commencing from Victoria to Daymah, and from Bamboo on the other side of the river to Tissannah, I have never known the people to be such lazzy people as depicted in Mr. Mason's letter. On the contrary I know that they are very industrious and are a quiet people, but not having the advantage of having the Gospel preached to them, they are obliged to remain in the same state as our parents on the Guinea coast. I give Mr. Mason credit for having preached to those who were privileged to hear him on Easter Day, and that through his preaching they have abandoned Sunday labour—but I must point him to Carmie, Bowmah, and other places in the Black River Daymah where services are held every Sabbath by Sierra Leone traders, and labour on that day has been abandoned for the past 5 years by the natives. He also speaks of the soil as being the most fertile in the whole Sherbro District. This I beg to deny for the soil of the Black River is not as prolific as that in the Bargroo from whence we receive our supply of Rice, Cassada &c. for even now that the rains pour down in torrents, much of the Rice and Cassada planted in the Black River has been washed away in consequence of the ground being too loose, composed of sand and mud. How then could Mr Mason say that the Black River has the most fertile soil in the whole of Sherbro. If Mr Mason will continue to preach to the people at his factory, (as he has done on Easter Day) there will be no need of any Missionary being sent to them, for we are all considered as Missionaries.

Yours Mr. Editor

DEPARTURE OF THE MISSIONER.

Whenever our minds are overwhelmed by some ingridients which in the history of our lives appears strange and startling to us, it is only to be accounted for in this way. History repeating itself in every dispensation of the world's history, God has not left Himself without a witness testifying to the giddy and gay, that there is a supreme Being whom we ought to love, serve and obey, and so conduct our lives as he cometh His Creatures. It was during the administration of Walpole that God raised up Wesley & Whitfield to contend with the sins of the times and to rescue England from spiritual degeneracy and ruin. England was electrified by their preaching which was earnest, forcible, and accompanied by the power of the Holy Ghost.

The Mission Services at Sherbro should be regarded as an important epoch in the annals of this country, when God by a special providence put into the hearts of His Servants to organize such a Mission. The men chosen are well selected; men fitted for the occasion, and he has been pleased to honor them by His presence. No human eye could have seen the danger which hangs over this country. Several frivolous reasons have been assigned as the cause for the present depression of Trade little did we think that in simply God's indignation against the sins of the times. Men have lived highhandedly in sin, and the liberty of their position has carried them to the extreme, and being infatuated they, like the generals of Alexander the Great wished to divide the world amongst themselves.

But it is satisfactory to think that the Sherbro of today is not what she was when we commenced this year, men and women are alive about the salvation of their own souls as well as others, and by their lives and conversation are endeavouring to demonstrate to the world that they have been with Jesus. And although there may be a Sabalaist and Tobiah here and there endeavouring to hinder the work but they must after all let it stand.

It is by no not easily to be for gotten at Sherbro when the hour comes for the Missioner to leave us the women in large numbers assembled at the Parsonage shouting there the whole time till the newly members of parochial committee with some few brethern of the other connexion arrived to pay a tribute of respect to Mr Johnson for the good God has wrought among us through his preaching an Extempore address was delivered by the Revd G. G. M. Nicol on behalf of the church and the people generally which in matter and style was pathetic complete and satisfactory S. B. A. Macfoy Esqr. kindly offered his beautiful Gig boat at the disposal of the Missioner with crew complete which conveyed him to Freetown accompanied with the blessings of the people.

FROM MANDO STATION.

In my last I stated in substance that the outcome of this field (Mando Station) is hopeful. This was proved not many days ago by the testimony of one of our occasional church goers. A mohamedan called on this man who had in possession a sebbeh made by another mohamedan. This he condemned as improperly made and defective in virtue, offering to make him another. The man gave him no definite reply then. He was obliged to call again urging the necessity of the man's throwing away the old improperly made sebbeh and buying another from him more properly made and full of lifepreserving qualities. But instead of giving a definite reply the man said Marcay, I've been trying to compare your religion with the christian religion and I have come to the conclusion that a religion which tolerates the making of sebbehs and charms to kill and make people crazy cannot be a good one. There was a time, mercay when we were paying two and sometimes 10 of heads of money (£9 in value) for one a sheb but I tell you, you will find it hard at Bandoh here now for any Sherbro man to give one bar of cloth (three shillings in value) for a sebbeh. The mohamedan was wonderstricken. He was not prepared for such a grand testimony to the christian religion by any native and especially by that man and without even an attempt at defending his religion and credit as charmmaster which were equally at stake, he turned and went home, no doubt to ponder over the fact that the religion of Christ is standing gradually on the people and already gaining noble testimonies even from the natives.

It being planting time now, there was a drawback in the attendance from the first to the third week in the month people going away early and returning late, nevertheless the interest is the same as the large attendance at prayer meeting last Thursday evening showed many new faces were present with old ones each detailing his sympathy with me while I tried to show them and the traders present how great a barrier the work the infernal fun-trade has been, and their (the natives) many thanks at the close, to me was a token of appreciation. Every department of this charge is hopeful. The itinerating has been done with good results, except Kabale side which needs a small canoe or boat to cross over the other side of the river. A small boat will be a treasure to this station and a great facilitant to the work. I can see daily and gradual change for the better among these hour people. Whilst to an indifferent and uninterested observer all appears the same. Trust all who are interested in this field will pray God to continue his blessings on the work.

Rev. J Gomer,

Dear brother in Christ—It gives me much pleasure in informing you of the way and manner the Lord has been with us here. Though we have been much hemmed by serious conflicts occasioned by incessant broils, yet there has been much to encourage us. The day school which during the past year lagged behind has increased to 31. 12 adults have since been enrolled into the class of membership besides those six formerly enlisted.

You will be happy also to learn of Mr. Coker's arrival to Bompeh Station. The mission house which was undertaken by him is almost completed. We pray God to help him on in this very good work of faith and love. We need your prayers in this part of the Lord's vineyard. With christian love—I am, your brother in Christ,

INDIAN CHIEFS MAKING PEACE OVER A CHILD'S GRAVE.

(Concluded from our last).

She seemed to read his thoughts; for presently she said, in feeble accents,—"beargrandfather—will you think of the white-teacher's words? the words you know about love and peace." "Yes, darling, I will, I will," replied the old man.

A look of gratitude beamed from the maiden's eyes, but she could say no more, the effort she had made had exhausted her little strength. The old chief sat watching, while the sun went down and night came on, and when the moon with its soft, pale light, shone in upon her, she heaved a sigh and her spirit passed away. The news of her death soon passed through the tribe, and reached even to the camp of their enemies. Two days afterwards messengers came to the old chief from the tribe with which he was at war, and said, "Our chief sends thee this message he says that though he is at war with thee he was never at war with thy child. She was gentle and good, and loved by all, and her loss is mourned in our tribe no less than in thine own. Therefore, our chief sends thee this request; that there may be a truce for three days, and that thou wilt grant him permission to come to her burial, and drop a tear upon her grave."

"Bid him come and welcome," said the old man, deeply moved at this kindness on the part of his enemy. So the messenger departed, and the war was suspended; and when the day of the funeral came, the two chiefs who, but a few days before would have gloried in taking each other's lives, met at that little grave, and were made friends for the time by their common grief. The body was lowered into the grave, the earth was covered in, and then the old chief, giving his hand to his enemy, said:—

"Brother, thy kindness moves me deeply. When she lived, whose early end we mourn to-day, she hated war and would have had me live in peace with the tribes around. The Good Spirit, she used to say, would have his children to love one another, and live together in peace. Brother, her words were good; let us make peace over her grave."

"With all my heart," replied the other, "For her sake who loved friend and foe, and was loved by both alike—for her sake, let there be peace between us." So their weapons were buried, which is a sign of peace—buried, too, in the child's grave, making the sign still more significant and from that day, instead of fierce war and bitter hate, friendliness and goodwill reigned between the tribes.

"Blessed are the peacemakers for they shall be called the children of God." Let us learn from the Indian maiden and the chiefs, and when we are tempted to engage in strife and give way to ill-will let us remember that our Father in heaven would have His children love one another and live together in peace.

CHURCHES AND CHAPELS.

"The etymology and derivation of the word 'church' is curious and interesting. All over the British Isles, and in other parts of Europe, are found especially on elevated table-lands and high hills, enormous boulders and blocks of stone (compare the 'Olumo' at Abeokuta). These stones, from a very early period, acquired a kind of sacredness, and were regarded as abodes of deity, and proper places for Divine worship. In some places they were wrought into shape, as at Stonehenge and elsewhere, or carved into sacrificial altars, or graven with figures. But their sites were resorted to for religious purposes, and were sacred to God. In the old Keltic dialects, especially the Welsh and Gaelic, the rendering for a stone is kreeg, and for 'the stones,' emphatically, kreeag. At this day, if travelling in the highlands of Scotland you met a Gael, and he enquired if on Sunday you had been to church, he would say, 'Have you been to kreeag' or to 'the stones.' For the places of these stones, hallowed by the Druids were adopted by our idolatrous Saxon ancestors for their superstitions; and when Christianity was introduced into this country [England], the early missionaries and their converts took possession of the same places, and went as their fathers did, to worship at the kirraig. And these stones were by the idolatrous Saxons made into altars, and by Christian successors built into church es. (Anglo Saxon, cire, cyric;, Dutch, kerk; German, kirche.) The word was gradually altered by the Scotch into kirk, and by the English (through Norman-French softening) into church. The literal meaning of the word 'church,' therefore, is the stones, and its real significance, the place of Divine worship. The word 'chapel' is derived by lexicographers from a custom of the kings of France, who, when they went to war, carried St. Martin's hat (chapeau) as a precious relic. A tent was prepared for this, and a priest appointed to officiate there; and thither, as a private oratory or temporary place of worship, the devout in the army resorted for religious purposes. Hence the tent was called a chapelle, the priest a chaplain, and the name became adopted for all temporary and subordinate places of worship. The literal meaning of 'chapel,' therefore, is the place of St. Martin's hat, and the real significance, a temporary and subsidiary place of worship. sel.

THE BIBLE.

What a blessed book is the Bible! If I want to know about creation, no other book can tell me with certainty, but the bible. If I am inquiring after existence the bible gives me the best and only, satisfactory that in God" I live move and have my being." If I think on extinction, the Bible tells me to fear not them who can kill the body, which have no more that they can do; but to fear him who can destroy both soul and body in hell. And O! What a dark cloud would hang over the horizon of the future, if the bible did not bring the light of eternity's dawn. What a bible I have got. It is the book of my Church, of my family, of my Father and Mother. Aye! more it is the Book of my God." It has God for its Author, Salvation for its end, and truth, without any mixture of error, for its matter," Says John Lock.

The testimony of Sir Walter Scott, has often been referred to and it is full of meaning. When confined to his sick room and near the time of his departure, he desired a friend to read to him, "What Book Sir Walter?" "Need you ask?" said the aged man; "there is but one." Then the Bible was taken and the fourteenth Chapter of John read to him, greatly to his comfort.

Sir William Jones, the eminent scholar learned in oriental literature, says, "I have regularly and attentively read those Holy Scriptures, and am of opinion that the volume, independently of its divine origin, contains more true sublimity, more exquisite beauty, more pure morality, more important history, and finer strains of poetry and eloquence, than can be collected from all other books, in whatever age or language they may have been written."—Noon Day Sun.

HOW DOES THIS HAPPEN?

Mr. Editor—In my article to you bearing this title, I tried to proved how does this happen as touching cannibalism that is secretly practised, but my informer could not divulge the whole secret of the matter, fearing lest it will be exposed. It remains again to be proven how does this happen. Living almost in the centre of the Sherbro country, and within the Bounds of chief T. N. Caulker's territory, I am always favoured with secret evenes as they happen. For further explaination I mean such as is happening and is next enquired by natives from fear that if such reaches the ear of the chief, investigations will be made and perpetrators in such an action will fall under severe punishment. In the first place there are those in this part of the country who are making laws for themselves and put them to force; not only so, but headmen of towns sometimes commit the most outrageous act, and which as I presume, if the chief is cognizant of such ones will be dealt with according to the law of the country. For proof of this, Burch Kindoe, (a native) had a worse time of it for committing a daring aggression on British territory. Here and again, as I have been watching I see and what I see must be told. Information reached me yesterday that a young woman of the farkie of Mo-Beth, three miles from where I am, was attacked mortally wounded by a leopard on the 15th instant. by further and close enquiry I came to know that the young woman was to be caught and made a feast of, had not she done a good deal of running. The wounds were not received from a real leopard, but by one who is always the actor in the business dressed in the skin of leopard, with other instruments made in the form of paws and claws to catch those who are given up by a member,—a relative of that secret society. This having happened is kept secret by majority of the leading men in the same farkie. To get the truth of the matter without using force is only by enquiry from those who have no influence whatever as headmen.

Now Mr. Editor let me ask whether it would not be prudence for the Chief to select trust-worthy subchiefs to watch when things do take place and report the same to him? I know how disgusting such a matter is when it comes to the hearing of the Chief; and we hope that investigations into this that has just happened should be made, and it is probable that perpetrators in this most atrocious action will be found out and due punishment will be meeted out to them. There any secret forces in action, but what is not known now, will be known hereafter.

I remain Mr. Editor
Sincerely yours,
A WATCHMAN.

May 25th 1886.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE EARLY DAWN.

Sir

Observing the interest that you take in recording the political affairs of the enlightened portion of the Sherbro country, I forward you this letter as I do not think that we should be always left in the dark.

The Government of our country unlike the Government of the civilized Section of Sherbro, is not regulated by directories but is inverted on the shoulder of a single director or Chief before whom every case is brought for decision, even to house hold, and private concerns (you cannot Mr Editor) imagine how difficult it is to be a ruler of this district; especially of the Caulkers family, I shall be too near the truth if I go to mention that I have not witnessed two Royal families in the world where so much selfishness reigns. And when the interest in the Government of a common country is so divided, or entirely lost.

Sir, we should be glad to guess to see their favorite is placed on the throne. And if they do not succeed in either, they will make themselves neutral in the interest of the Government of their own country; and watching or waiting for its downfall. It will be more astonishing if I were to tell you that last week during the absence of our present Chief T. Neale Caulker to the rivers. The Methodists had to come and repair our own Barray or Court house for us as they intended having week night services there. And there old Chapel in the town, it is quite to rain so that there is to stone upon another that is not pulled down" the country is no doubt waiting on the chief to rebuild it and so it is for the Chief independent of them is now collecting materials to build a small neat chapel in the next season. From this Mr Editor, you can judge how far we have progressed in religion. Though I am myself a member of the Church here and attend Services regularly, yet, I have no faith in the religion of force eye services, and is a sudden rush of the Spirit or enthusiastical religion, I want to feel the land of Beulah in my soul and of the peace which is within me I will express myself only before a community which is worthy of the name of communion of saints. In conclusion I earnestly crave your prayers for us and our Chief.

Truly yours,
T. A. M. KAINEY.

June 15, 1886.

WE are pleased to learn that our energetic Acting Civil Comdt. Capt A. North Daniel who lately visited the Manoh Bargroo to look after some country matters of a serious nature has been able to secure an amicable (if we are correctly informed) and satisfactory adjustment of the whole matter and hence a cessation of the war threats we gave notice of in our last issue from our Bargroo reporter, and as will be seen from the above, the Authorities have not delayed in this matter and further have done even more than our reporter asked, in that the constabulary were not only increased for the time; but the Comdt. Capt. Daniel visited the spot in person, to see that all was correctly done, such promptness in handling or dealing with country matters, may sometimes entail an unpleasant[illegible] of a few hours or days, but will always greatly facilitate a proper adjustment of difficulties, and largely enhance the interest of the Colony, and forego in many cases the untold miseries that are often the result of country wars. Too much can not be said in praise of the officer who like Capt. Daniel nips such matters in the very begining and thus saves ultimate and often ruinuous results.

MANOH STATION.

Saturday night May the 29th was quarterly Conference at Manoh. The little Barra was well filled, and the leaders as well as the preacher in charge gave in very good reports, Mr Joah and his wife are great favorites with the people here, they have the confidence and respect of the people.

When the presiding elders character was before the people, one brother arose and stated that no oil for night Meetings had been furnished them this year this little matter was cleared up and the elders' character passed.

All day Sabbath the meetings were well attended. Seventeen children were baptized in the morning It is certainly encouraging to attend meetings in such a place. The head men for the town are both Class leaders and are very faithful to their duties. I met an old old acquaintance here, many years ago I had the pleasure of being a guest at her house she was very kind to me, shortly after that her town was plundered and she with many others were taken prisoners, King Bo one of the chief warriors who had her in charge told her that as would carry her to his own country and she must[illegible] such a[illegible] for his wife. In Reading, I think that punctuation also[illegible] proud, she had done turn[illegible] woman but as a child teach her something, she was then praying and[illegible] her God, who did not fail her, she was rescued. King Bo was captured and hung at Bendoo. She still feels to trust God and is waiting for Heaven.

I enjoyed my trip to Manoh very much Mr and Mrs Joah made me very comfortable in their own home it reminded me in many respects of the comfortable homes I used to get in America when traveling meet the courtesy the quiet home-like order and the neatly dressed children also the cheerful happy faces, may God continue with them in their good work.

J. GOMER.

THE ANNIVERSARY

of the Wesleyan Missions in this place was celebrated on the 30th and 31st ultimo. Two Sermons were preached on the 30th by the Rev. V. A. Harding, Deputation from Freetown At 11 a.m., after the former part of the service had had been gone over, the preacher announced his text from Col. 1. 3. riveted the attention of his thickly packed audience for forty-five minutes and at 7 p. m. he delivered a excellent discourse from the words " He shall add thereto." Both sermons were characterized with fervency, impressiveness, and originality of thought and were quite equal to the occasion.

On Monday 31st, the Public Meeting under the able presidency of J. N. Campbell Esq., was held. The Report succinctly spoke of progress in every Circuit in the Sierra Leone District, and in a telling manner of the completion of Wesley Church Prahuway Street, Freetown and the encouraging circumstances under which the Mission at Mo-Moseley was started. The Chapel was densely crowded and for want of room, many persons were obliged to remain outside and listen. Speeches were delivered by Messrs J. A. Williams, F. E. Blackmor, J. Macaulay, S. W. Adams, and Revs. O. Moore, and V. A. Harding. A good feeling pervaded the Meeting; interest in the Mission cause was awakened; but Commercial depression told seriously on the collections and the amount of Subscriptions was so low that the Secretary did not think it worth his while to compare this with last year, but took it for granted that it was understood by the Meeting. After the usual votes of thanks to the Deputation by Messrs Thorpe and Turner, and by Rev. J. C. Thomas and Mr. J. Macaulay to the Chairman, to which they respectively responded, the Doxology and Benediction brought that interesting Meeting to a close at 9. 30. p.m.

To the Editor "Early Dawn."

Sir,—I was very fortunate in being privileged to witness the Public Examination of the Pupils of the Wesleyan Female Institution on Tuesday the 8th inst, during my short visit to Freetown. The examination commenced at 10. 30. a. m., and closed at 3. 30. p. m.

Mr. Editor, you cannot fancy with what promptness the young ladies of this ever-to-be-remembered Seminary answered the questions proposed to them, as also the alacrity and delight they received them though very few gave wrong answers.

In Roman and Grecian Histories, they were well up to the mark, that when the pipe was blown, showing that time had expired, we all cheered and clapped as if it were one man.

In Algebra their knowledge was also very praiseworthy for they calculated[illegible] correctly[illegible] given them. In Reading, I[illegible] that punctuation also[illegible] so often affected by this ever recurring break in the regular Steam Communication with Freetown? Let the men of enterprise now step forward and bend their energy in this hopeful direction. For, the prosperity of Sherbro largely depends upon an established medium of transit to and from Freetown where it is often necessary that the business of individuals of vital importance be conducted. Whatever may be said or done which does not ensure or tend to ensure this desirable object is lame as regards an all-important item, which constitutes to title prosperity of an Island Settlement of any commercial importance as Sherbro is. It may be urged in excuse of the lethargy of our suffering population that means are not handy for the accomplishment of the object advocated in this article. Very true perhaps in the case of individuals. Still we are wilfully behind the times We cannot be wholly exonerated from blame for all we now suffer, for we have not as yet endeavoured to avail ourselves of the untold possibilities which co-operation (were it practised) generates. If every thing else has failed to create the spirit of mutual confidence among us let common suffering operate this direction and resolve us to dare and do. Let our rising people endeavour to rise higher even upon borrowed Capital and emulate the position of others whose disabilities have been similar to ours, but who by dint of perseverance, enterprise and honesty have raised themselves to a high standard, (for the elements of greatness are in us as admitted by all, if only we would outshine them) and thus render it impossible for any one mercantile or business house to affect a whole community and make many persons domine the month by[illegible] experienced in the case of the S. S. "Sara."

JOTTINGS

Mr W H Davison recently down from Kittim gave us a pleasant call about the first inst

Sergt. Taylor left this place after we had gone to press, on the 31st ult for Manoh Bargroo with a reinforcement of Police, for that Station, in consequence of the late rumours of disturbance.

Mr. Creighton of victoria road was much surprised as indeed many others have been at the low price of Bibles and Testaments at the Mission Store. One shilling for a Reference Bible and only a penny for the New Testament.

We regret very much that not only many good articles but several items of news have been crowded out of this issue.

It is only a waste of time, for persons to write us to publish their articles without alteration, for if they are all right we will do so, if not then we will not do so.

HER MAJESTY'S COLONIES.—By the kindness of Mr T. J. Alldridge of London E. C. we have had this highly interesting volume laid on our table as a present to our Mission for which we are grateful to the Donor; hereafter we hope to give a better notice of the Book itself but for the present only add that it is a Valuable Work of general information. London William Clowes and Sons No. 13 Charing Cross S. W.

NEWS ITEMS.

We regret to note the death of Mr. W. H. Randall of the late firm of Randall and Fisher Sierra Leone which occurred in Manchester about the middle of last month.

S. S. Biafra arrived in this port from Europe via Freetown she had on several passengers for Sherbro we believe.

It is with much pleasure that we note the fact that Mr Ashcroft of the firm of J. H. Ashcroft and Co., Shaingay and Freetown Intends to run the Steam yacht John Brown weekly between Sierra Leone and Sherbro.

June 4th at 5 30. a m, in Freetown, Kissy Street was the announcement made of the death of the High Sheriff John Melleux Esqr., of the Settlement of Sierra Leone, by official notification.

H. M. C. S, Countess of Derby arrived here on the 2nd inst from Freetown having W. J. P. Elliott Esqr on board after staying in harbour for about two hours left with Capt. Reed W. J. P. Elliott and Dispenser O. M. P. Thorpe for Freetown. Dispenser Thorpe returned on thursday the 10th inst.

The Commandant left this place for Bargroo on Saturday the 5th instant, and returned on Friday 11th.

SHAINGAY NEWS.

We are very hard pressed for news here; Scarcely anything to talk about. On the 23rd ult., Jarro, one of the Chief's Staff Officers died at Boudocoh his country seat. He was a Mendi man and a great man amongst the people here, was a slave of the old chief, but owned slaves for himself, and was well to do. On the 31st Satteah Kate died at Pattie, she had been sick over a year, and suffered very much.

A few weeks ago, a canoe landed here with some slaves in her from the Galinas country, one of them hearing that they were to be sold for rice, and were to be sent away up in the river, had the sense to complain to the Police Corporal stationed here, he was rescued by the Corporal and sent to Freetown. The Governor has sent police out here now, to bring the other slaves and all the parties concerned in the matter, together with the canoe that had brought them here. The Chief is collecting them together, to be sent to Freetown. The slaves will get their liberty. Who would not say God bless our Sovereign Lady Queen Victoria and all the Royal Family.

Mrs Niccah Tucker wife of the late Thomas Tucker of the American U. B. Mission is very sick, she is staying with her son Mr. John Barrow at a small inland village.

Little Joe, as he is usually called, the nephew of the Rev. Gomer of the U.B.C., Shaingay has been very low with his first fever. For several days there was little hopes of his recovery but his Aunt was very faithful in her attendance on him, he is now recovering slowly.

Mr. J. A. Richards of the Gambia, late a Catechist in the Wesleyan Church Freetown, 1st Circuit, has taken charge of the Mission School here.

TOUSANT.

Personal

Mrs E. Savage Queen of Manoh Bargroo was down about the first of the month on business to the Commandant in reference to some war reports as given in our last issue.

The Rev. O. Moore, of the C. M. S. Grammar School, Freetown, who had been spending some time here for a rest and change, gave us a very pleasant call on the 4th inst. and bade us farewell on the 5th inst and left per s. s. John Brown for Freetown.

The Rev. Victor A. Harding deputation, from Freetown Wesleyan Authorities to their Aniversary in this place called on us together with Revd J. C. Thomas on the 5th inst

The Revd D. F. Wilberforce is reported in American papers as delivering some rather Novel, and very interesting Lectures on Africa in the United States we wish him abundant success.

The Revd. G. G. M. Nicol gave us a pleasant call today (15th inst.) he has been kept quite busy, since the Special Services, (at Saint Matthew's Church here and elsewhere by the Revd. James Johnson;) Marrying various parties in his Parish; he now expects on the 20th and 27th inst. to hold the Annual Anniversary of the Church and Missions to which all are invited.

WORRY.

Worry wears us out faster than the hardest work, the physiologists say, and common experience proves their dictum true. But how to avoid worry when everything seems to be going wrong, that is the rub. Different men, I find, worry about different things. One is always anxious about his business, apprehending a failure to meet his obligations. In other matters he is seldom disturbed. If his children are sick, he takes it for granted that they will soon recover. His neighbour, on the other hand, is constantly anxious about the health of his family, but his never troubled about business affairs. As a rule, the saver a man feels of his own powers and the more accurately he knows their limitations, the less likely he is to take anxious thought about his business interests, and the more likely he is to feel apprehension in regard to matters but slightly with in his own control. To learn to do the best we can and to accept in a spirit of cheerful courage what we can not change is one of the greatest, as it is about the hardest, of self-conquests. If to a physhosophic temper one can add a screne religious faith, great indeed is his gain. Sel.

HOW TO COME TO THE LORD'S TABLE.

Come with humility. A proud heart cannot be tolerated at the Table of the Lord. It is told that the Duke of Wellington at one time in his Parish Church, when he came forward upon one aisle to take his place in the observance of the sacrament, a very poor old man went forward in the opposite aisle, and coming to the communion-table, knelt close by the side of the Duke. Some one came and spoke to the ill-clad old man to remove a little way, or to wait till the Duke of Wellington had communed. But the alart eye and ear of the great Military commander understood the meaning of what was transpiring beside him, and he clasped the rough hand of the old man and said reverently and softly," Do not move; we are all equal here." So Brother and sister, remember that at the table of Jesus we are all equal. Blessed thought! We are at the feet and in the fellowship of Jesus.

A DRUNKEN RUNNER.

Sir Walter Scott says, in one of his droll little missives to his printer Ballantyne, "When the press does hollow me, I get on slowly and ill, and put myself in mind of Jamie Ballour, who could run when he could not stand still." He here alludes to a matter of fact which the following anecdote will illustrate:

Jamie, in going home late from a debauch, happened to tumble into the pit formed for the foundation of a house in James's-square. A gentleman passing heard his complaint, and going up to the spot, was intreated by our hero to help him out.

"What would be the use of helping you out," said the by-passer, "when you could not stand though you were out?"

"Very true, perhaps; yet if you help me up, I'll run you to the Tron Kirk for a bottle of claret."

Pleased with his humour, the gentleman placed him upon his feet, when instantly he set off for the Tron Church at a pace distancing all ordinary competition; and accordingly he won the race, though, at the conclusion, he had to sit down on the steps of the Church, being quite unable to stand. After taking a minute or two to recover his breath—"Well, another race to Fortune's for another bottle of claret!"

Off he went to the tavern in question, in the Stamp-Office Close; and this bet he gained also. The claret, probably with continuations, was discussed in Fortune's; and the end of the story is, that Ballour sent his new friend home in a chair, utterly done up, at an early hour in the morning. Sel.

TAKING GEORGE III. OUT OF PRISON.

Gompy attended as an assistant drawing master, at the palace of his royal highness Frederick, Prince of Wales. When he was one day there, His Majesty George III., being then a very little boy, for some trifling fault was compelled to stand behind a chair, as a prisoner. Gompy was ordered to go on with his drawing.

"How can I," replied the artist, "make a drawing worthy the attention of your royal highness, when I see the young prince standing under your displeasure."

"You may return to your seat, sir," said the good nature Prince of Wales, "but remember that Gompy has released you."

As Gompy grew old, he became poor; at the accession of George III. he was eighty-four. Soon after that period, making pensive mood and piteous plight on the Kensington road, the royal carriage passed, and he pulled off his hat. The face of the old man caught the king's eye, he ordered the coach to stop, called the friendless artist to the door, and asked him how he went on.

"Little enough, in truth," replied the old man, "little enough; but, as I was so happy as to take your majesty out of prison, I hope you will not suffer to go into one."

"Indeed I will not, my dear Gompy," replied the good natured monarch, casting on the poor old man a look brightened with the tear of sympathy, "indeed I will not." And he immediately ordered him a handsome allowance weekly, which the forsaken artist enjoyed to the last day of his life.—Sel.

To the Editor of the "Early Dawn."

Dear Mr Editor,

Without any reluctance I venture as a duty relied on me give you an adequate information of the elaborate and well got up Sermon preached to a gathering of the Wesleyan connection on Sunday morning last the 13th instant by the pastor in charge the Rev J. C. Thomas. His text was taken from the 1st Chapter of the Acts of the Apostle 2nd at the 1st and 2nd verses.

I must frankly assure you Mr. Editor that the style and tenor in which this Rev. gentleman delivered his Sermon is one worthy of notice, I have often times heard the Rev Gentleman preached and I could not bring to my recollection of my Sermons of such a preeminent style or tenor had ever been preached to my hearing.

I must further more state that although it is his duty to preach to his members and flock Sermons that will always rouse each member to respectively consider their position in this world, yet I must say that praise due to him, and in conclusion I must simply congratulate him for the energetic and efficient manner he delivered his Sermon, and I hope through the assistance of God he may always have the "Cloven tongues of fire upon his head" to enable him always to consider the very duty that is incumbent on him and that he may ever live long as "Ossis" in the desert supplying us with his valuable food. Thanking you very very much Mr. Editor for space favoured me in your valuable column.

I Remain, Dear Mr Editor,
Yours Faithfully,
A VISITOR.

Bonthe, Heddle Street
June 15th, 1886.

DEAR MR. EDIOTR.

Freetown being the centre of Right and of civilization, it behoves us to by up and doing that we may still keep our place in the forefront of all good works and liberal deeds and to let our light shine before men and give something for emulation to our neighbours in the surrounding countries, we have resolved to utilize the great power that God has given us in the perennial stream that flows from the mountains near Kissey and now running to waste to turn a number of turbines, that shall give power to a number of dynamo machines, to generate electricity sufficient to light up our city and Churches.

The gentlemen having the work on hand will push it on with their usual vigour, but the first necessity is a receiving tank or reservoir, to give a regular supply of water to give steadiness to the machines.

This tank will be on the mountain side 600, to 800 feet above the machines and an iron pipe carry the water that gives the power. We dont like to mention the names of these enlightened gentlemen, for their modesty is great; and it is a well known fact that they let not their "left hand know what their right hand doeth." In so many good works, to wit. Wilberforce Memorial Hall, and in coal in the usual way &c, &c, &c, &c, This &c, &c, we leave you to fill up from memory.

It is also proposed to make a reservoir above Heddles' farm to conse.ve the water now running to waste, for now it is running away all night in sufficient quantity to give a steady supply to a number of stand pipes, that are seldom supplied with water in the dry season, and people have to come long distances and children may be seen up to midnight waiting round the few stand pipes for water. This ought not to be and those in favour of the work being commenced at once will form a Committee and send out collectors to get the necessary funds and if not able to get all, ask the Government to help in this useful and much needed work. We would suggest that this good work be mentioned to Freetown and Sierra Leone men wherever they are that they may contribute to the supply of water, pure water to their beloved city, even if they dont want to help in the electric lighting of it, which is most necessary. We shall be more than surprised if some kind friend dont try to sit upon us for our few remarks, but let them sit, if they can hold anything better than the usual batch of long gassy words.

Waiting patiently for the clocking hen to sit upon us.

We remain, Yours truly
INCOGNITO.

THE BOARD AND APPROPRIATION.

THE MISSION BOARD of the U. B. C. in America met at Roanoak Indiana, U. S. A., on Saturday May 14th 1886, and from the Reports seems to have been well attended and interesting in its proceedings. Our Bp. Flickinger was, we were glad to learn present, to represent the Foreign Field which he seems to have done to his utmost, and it further appears that Br. Z. Warner was well informed concerning the needs of the African Work. The Appropriation asked for by the African counsel at Shaingay last November, was granted. $1000 (£209) was added, when it was decided that Rev. D. F. Wilberforce should return; to open if possible a Training School in some of the present Mission Buildings at Shaingay or Bonthe. We may only say here that plausible as the idea of thus opening a Training School may seem on the other side of the Atlantic, it does not strike us very favorably here at present, yet " we walk by faith and not by sight," we shall hope for better. We are to see from the poor dark Africa many friends and gratitude of the work here ances was we had antiipile Eleven (£2200) is t of what n expended is quite as have expecciated to it uncircumstances as the above sufficient to ugh with in the manner under circumstances attempting any the work; or making the most necessary repairs of buildings now in a bad condition, in so many places, we do most sincerely hope that this appropriation will be so supplemented during the year that our buildings, dwellings, Chapels, and School houses, may be made tenable at least, so that the religious and Educational Work may not be hindered.

BOARD OF MISSIONS.

The thirty-third session of our missionary board convened at Roanoke, Ind., May 14th—opening sermon by J. Hoby, of Chambersburg, Pa. Bishop Glossbrenner opened the business session Saturday at 8:00 A. M. J. L. Luttrell was elected Secretary. Members present, J. S. Glossbrenner, president; S. Weaver, J. Dickson, N. Castle, R. B. Kephart, M. Wright, D. K. Flickinger, vice-presidents; Z. Warner, secretary; Wm. McKee, treasurer; J. Dodds, J. Hoby, J. Hill, J. L. Luttrell, directors.

The session has been interesting and well attended by the people. Business has been progressing slowly, and the greatest care has been observed in the examination of the accounts in the field. Eleven thousand dollars is the appropriation of the African work and two thousand to Germany. Most of the appropriations have not yet been made. It was agreed to reduce the appropriations about twenty-five per cent in view of the debt of society. Sabbath was a grand day. Dr. Warner preached the annual sermon at 10:30 A. M., from Acts xviii 2, 4. It was a clear and powerful sermon on the divine authority of Christian missions. A collection of sixty dollars was taken. Rev. D. F. Wilberforce spoke to an immense audience at 3:00 P. M. on our work in Africa and the needs of the heathen in Africa. A collection was taken to pay his expenses back to Africa. His address, of surpassing excellence, put the pedjet to a rest, by saying that he was coming progressed. Mr. John Hoyle, of Dayton, said he would give as much as the collection amounted to. This speech stirred things. Collection, 155 dollars. Mr. Dodds, 150 dollars; total, 300 dollars, and a happy congregation. In the evening Mr. Dodds led a general missionary meeting, at which a number of speeches were made—addresses. Among the speakers were Bishop Glossbrenner, Kephart, and Weaver. It was a grand day. Bishop Castle preached at Huntington in the evening and Dr. Funkhouser filled the pulpit at our church morning and evening at Ft. Wayne. We shall give a full report of the board meeting next week. J. S. G.—In Religious Telescope.

FOR THE "EARLY DAWN."

The annual sermon on behalf of the Native Pastorate and Church Missions, were preached at St. Matthew's Church on Sunday morning and evening the 20th instant, by the Rev. G. G. M. Nicol B. A, pastor in charge. He selected for his text as follows:—In the morning from Ephesians chap. 4: 11& 12 vs. in the evening from 2 Samuel 6 chap. 19 & 20 vs. The sermons were plain, practical and effective.

On Monday evening the 21st at 7 p. m. the public meeting was held. The chair was taken by S. B. A Macfoy Esq. Merchant of Jarraia and Yelbo in factories. The meeting was opened by singing the Hymn No from Hymn and Companion and prayer offered by the pastor. The 116th Psalm was the lesson read. On the platform were Messrs. C. B. Caffey, W. Hughes, H. B. Williams, J. D. Mcauley, J. N. Crown, T. E. Macfoy E. W. Parkinson, and C. S. Brown (Schoolmaster.) The 111 No. from Hymns of Faith was sung after which the pastor introduced the chairman who was received with loud cheers and applause.

The Chairman in his opening address expressed great pleasure in being invited to preside over such a meeting. He said that religion has a tendency to subdue the evil power of sin, and that he would refuse any invitation to attend any worldly amusement, but the present gathering being a religious one he could not refuse the invitation to preside on the occasion. He invited the attention of the meeting to the benefits to be realized, by having the gospel, and that he is not a man of high speeches, for high speeches must be met with liberal gifts; thereby we receive double benefits from God. After the Chairman had closed his speech, he called upon the Pastor to read the report. The report was long but interesting. The financial statement was very encouraging; notwithstand the general very of Head Times and Depression of trade). The receipts on the whole for different objects amounted to £273. 5s 10½d the largest sum ever collected at Sherbro.

The report speaks also of the formation of a Dorcas Society by some of the female members of the church, to which they subscribe One Shilling monthly for the purpose of providing clothing for the natives who attend the Church. After the reading of subscribers' list, Mr. Caffey was called upon to address the meeting. He said that he was glad to find from the financial report read, that the amount collected during the year was so high, and that notwithstanding the present depressed state of trade, the Church is still ably supported and that while every other organization failed the Christian, Ministry it must and will abide. He urged upon the people to appreciate the labours of these institutions which we boast of as our own. After some very appropriate remarks he took his seat amidst loud cheers and applause. Mr Hughes said that he had been in this country for over 18 years, and that he had been connected with seven different organizations from 1874 to the present moment all which have failed, but the Christian religion or a ministry still holds and will ever hold.

Messrs Williams, M'Fay, and Crown gave suitable and appropriate addresses, after which the 505 No of Hymnal was sung.

Next followed Mr. J. D. Macauley of the Customs who gave some very amusing anecdotes as regards his youthful days which caused a good deal of laughter after which he urged upon the assembly to be more liberal in their contributions to support the institutions which are our bonafide properties.

Mr. Geo Thompson was next called he said that he was sorry to be called at such a juncture, as he had told the pastor that he would say nothing to the meeting, however he said that the causes of failures in every undertaking are Africans, is want of respect to our superiors and want of Unity, which is an inherent principle in us, he made some flying remarks on the Endowment fund, which was afterwards explained by the pastor.

Mr. E. W. Parkinson next made a very suitable speech after which the pastor moved a vote of thanks to the chairman to which the chairman replied.

No 285 of Hymns of Faith was sung when a collection was made this interesting meeting came to close at 9. 45.

The crossing at the ferry or cut over is in a very bad condition at ebb tide, people who cross to and from Mocolo have suffered greatly when the water is cried, as one is obliged to go over knee deep in the mud. I would suggest that a small Bridge be made to reach the low water mark, thereby relieving passengers the risk of losing their and thabs I trust the overseer of Roads will give this place his immediate attention.

To the Editor of the "Early Dawn."

Dear Mr. Editor,—I wrote a letter to your paper some weeks ago that you put in your paper of March 15, and some people do not like it, because I said that I dont think Africans will civilize Africa very soon, and I was of them a "Holyah" said I have been in mockery, and I dont even know where that is. And then he said, my letter would mislead people. Now Mr. Editor, how can the truth mislead people? It was my hope to be employed in the Mission when I should have got more learning only that the Mission got out of money and could not keep all the boys—they do not require any more teachers—I should be very glad if I could go to Illorate like others, and get more learning and then teach, I would like to help civilize Africa. But I dont believe that Africa will be civilized by us Africans. We are too fond of rum, gin, slaves and country fashions. And the white missionaries say that we will never be civilized until we leave off these, and when will Africans do that A few men speak of independence when they are all the time eating foreign money, and still looking forward to get it, and carry on the great work which is otherwise to be purely native. Surely if the foreigner can like the great interest of supporting the money, it shows his love and interest in us, and please let Holyah tell me where is the African that does as much for us as the foreigner. I speak without respect of the writers in your paper but beg to say it is not good to boast of what we can do, but do it and then have something to boast of which so far we Africans cannot boast of any but "Palm Oil" plumes. The first thing that a Holyah must do is to discard foreign money and show that love to his countrymen is his greatest desire, and that he works for them out of love pure and simple. Then will we be independent, and not till then. I wish we could do without the white man's help, but we cannot. I am more and more convinced that Africans want Dr—manage mission work in Africa, because we cannot trust each other, and I know a good many other reasons why. I do not write to answer Holyah and the man who says he is school teacher, because I want peace, and I for one want missionaries from England and America that will live good lives and let their light shine.

BARGROO ITEMS.

Since our last report about the expected Outbreak, Police Serjt. Taylor with 4 Privates arrived here on Tuesday 1st inst at 2. p. m. with official letters to both the head woman Conah Cambeh and the said Vanjah-wah. She having gone to Bonthe the night previous no one could furnish escorts to the interior until her arrival on Friday night. Constables were accordingly sent to the interior on Saturday morning; they returned on Sunday 3. 25. p. m. and reported that the man could not be found.

The Acting Civil Commandant of Sherbro escorted by 5 Police Constables and the Interpreter Mr. John Rogers arrived here on Saturday night 9. 30 p. m. to examine into particulars Early on Tuesday morning G Banash Will, one of the principle men in the country, was sent together with Jemmie a Government Boatman, who, with some difficulty brought Vanjah-wah before the Commandant on Wednesday afternoon. Matters have been amicably determined. He having stated his grievance to the Commandant. Viz:—That when his two wives came down to obtain freedom, he consulted with whom he had ventured out to fish returning alone to the town to report the occurrence. The Jury returned a verdict of wilful murder.

WEDNESDAY 23RD JUNE.—At the Colonial Hospital, on the part remains, viz., by a leg of one Makoolah a farmer of Tormah in the Bullom District, and one of the slaves of Boah Hye, the Chief of that town, who is said to be deeply implicated in the cause of death of the deceased. A verdict of wilful murder against certain persons already in custody was returned by the Jury.

CANNIBALISM has not yet been stamped out of the country, and is said to have prompted the murderers in the above two cases wherein verdict of murder is returned.

CORONER'S INQUESTS.

FRIDAY 18TH JUNE 1886.—At Victoria, on the partial remains of one Tom Bessman, a Kroo man who had been employed at Mocolo Factory, and who got drowned on the 15th inst. in about six feet water just opposite the Factory while diving for a lost anchor in the river. The Jury returned a verdict of "accidental death by drowning.

SATURDAY 19TH JUNE.—At the Colonial Hospital on the part remains of one Sok a fisherman of Yalah in the Bullom District where Chief William Tucker exercises a limited jurisdiction. The deceased is said to have come by his death in a most extraordinary manner, having been snatched out of his canoe by a dark object on the night of the 15th inst. and taken into the deep, his companion with whom he had ventured out to fish returning alone to the town to report the occurrence. The Jury returned a verdict of wilful murder.

WEDNESDAY 23RD JUNE.—At the Colonial Hospital, on the part remains, viz., by a leg of one Makoolah a farmer of Tormah in the Bullom District, and one of the slaves of Boah Hye, the Chief of that town, who is said to be deeply implicated in the cause of death of the deceased. NEGLIGENCE OF THE TRUE GOD.

Dear Editor—

It seems that the Inhabitants of Shaingay are neglecting the above named God for no purpose, Missionaries came from their own to this place to preach the Gospel. At first when they came the people of this place had undergone the trouble of building a mud Chapel, and every thing was gotten on very nicely. After some years a stone Chapel was built on the Mission grounds, which after few years was allowed to fall by the people. And the (late) Chief G. S. Cadlier ordered his men to rebuild it, at this time the Chief was very sick and the Chapel was not rebuilt even when dying he begged of his brother the present Chief, "do not neglect your duty to God and to build up the Chapel." The Chapel has never been rebuilt altho it has been nearly four years. Why dont he call his men to do so his brother did. Was it because he has the power if he wished to do so. Had it not been for the death of his brother Shaingay would have been one of the most delightful Towns. The Chapel ought to be rebuilt.

WHAT IS A SECOND DAY?

In one of the Eastern counties resides a rector, in the receipt of a considerable emolument for the care of an inconsiderable number of souls. A widower, without encumbrance at home, with the parish greatly occupied in agricultural pursuits, time passes heavily, and amusement is greatly sought. A wandering May fly suggests that time and fish may be killed together; and thereupon a letter is penned to the Right Hon. R., for permission to try a cast on his reputed great stream. The courtesy and business habits of My Lord return, by next post, a card for "two days' angling; and the Reverend Piscator sets out. He presents his card to the guardian of the waters, who follows the occupation of a miller, and is of the average class of yeoman; and our rector tells his twentythree pounds of excellent trout in this his first day. No doubt, the excellence of the taste and sport excited our friend so, that, after an interval of some few days, he resolves to use his second day's permit. But alas! some trifling parochial duty prevents him arriving at the waters before four p. m. Success this time is meagre, and a fitful shower suggests the propriety of seeking the hospitality of a neighbouring hotel for the night; and there, while enjoying the usual repast of eggs and bacon, the thought arises that, by getting up early our friend might thus remunerate himself for his bad luck on this his second day. The morning opens with alternate heavy clouds and bright azure. A stirring breeze plays over the water, and the fish rise "sweetly." One, two, are soon landed. But now appears the sturdy miller, walking fast; and, with his Essex dialect, abruptly asks,

"Idled yew yer age again?"

"Certainly," replies our friend.

"But yeure ticket is for tew days only.

"Weell so it is."

And yew were here last week and yestre'on!"

"Truly. But do you read your Bible?"

"Yes."

Then I am afraid with little purpose, for you would have learnt in its earliest page, That the evening and the morning were the second day!"

What could the guardian say? He moved off.

Reverend Piscator caught his fish; and found them none the less excellent from the scriptural interpretation put upon "the permit to fish." Sel.

She having received the presents told him that the Police would do nothing without her consent. The women were taken down to Bonthe without her interference however; and she would not then return the present. Taking umbrage at the offence he was determined to bring war against her.

The Commandant then ordered the articles to be returned; and that being attended to, he in a very nice but firm way cautioned him as also others present, to be very careful how they create disturbance within British territory.

During the Commandant's stay with us, his hands were full of work; Complaints from almost every quarter were brought to him, and matters were seen into. Not a day past without his being engaged.

The Natives were highly satisfied, and many that had fled for refuge, have since returned home and are enjoying quietness. On Thursday morning at 8. a. m. the Commandant and Escort left for Bonthe, via Nittle.

We hope the health of this Gentleman will ever continue good, so that he may be able to discearge the onerous duty involved oh him.

BEACONSFIELD AS AN ADVENTURER.

Lord Beaconsfield was an adventurer in Politics in very early the same sense as Mr Gladstone is an adventurer, and as Canning was. He was not nearly so much of an adventurer as Burke, and he was not very much more of one than Mr. Pitt. That is to say Mr. Disraeli was not cradled and rocked and dandled into legislatorhood. He had no political sponsors in English politics, and he did not belong to any of the great houses which have governed Great Britain, on the whole for Great Britian's good during the last few hundred years. On the other hand, he was so little of an adventurer, that he entirely lacked, and never attempted to gain, the adventious aids to political success which all the four distinguished persons above mentioned possessed. He did not come into public life as a nominee of a great man like Mr. Gladstone and Canning, or as a useful "devil" like Burke, or as a free-lance, subsidized by a party hatred to a great minister, like Pitt. There is no Duke of Newcastle, there is no Marquess of Rockingham, there is no Duchess of Marlborough in Lord Beaconsfield's career. He fought the fight barely with sufficient independence of property and with a great deal more than sufficient independence of character. It is a subject of some amusement to the critic of his detractors that these detractors, at the very moment that they decry Mr. Disraeli as an adventurer, quote with pride and joy the heart-burnings of great Tory magnates over his friendship with their sons and flings off Tory members of Parliament at the gradual progress of this astonishing outlander. What I wish to point out is that in English we dont call that kind, the success of an adventurer, we call it the success of a genius.

Let us, to conclude, sum up the simple facts of what this adventurer did. He [illegible] without patronage, without popular agitation, without the popular support of money which two of his famous contemporaries Cobden and O'Connel, did not disdain, he raised himself from a very ordinary though not mean station to Prime ministership of England and to something which has been mistaken by men not altogether fools for the arbitership of Europe. I do not mention his caridom, because that has been attained by quite otherguise sorts of persons, and because it has been suspected that at least one part of Mr. Disraeli's reason for accepting it was good-humoured delight in feeling that the fact of his acceptance made a similar acceptance by other people, who would really have liked it much more, a political impossibility. As to what he did for England we get once again into contested matter.

Let it only said what the men before referred to, some of whom have not been deemed fools, thought he did for England. They thought—and it would appear, have not ceased to think after seven twelvemonths and a day—that he raised the country once more to its proper position among European nations, after a generation of libelled time that he put it in a state to maintain, if it chose, that position; that he raised as a kind of pacific Wellington, as a bloodless marlborough, as a restorer of English honor after a long eclipse. Very likely they were wrong. On that point it would be improper to offer the least opinion here. But who else that can be mentioned has ever spread such an opinion of himself and his actions not among the thirty millions, "mostly fools," but among the thousands or hundreds, some, at least, of whom are most certainly not foolish?

I was walking not long ago with a friend of mine, from whose society I find it difficult to cut myself off, despite the extraordinary and most provoking difficulty of finding out exactly what he means. The subject of Judenhetze had somehow or other turned up, and I remarked, perhaps rashly, "After all, they have given us the greatest poet of the century." "Yes," he said, "and they have given us the greatest states-man too, Anybody with ordinary talent can direct a development. It is not everybody that can arrest a decay." I dare say we were both talking nonsense; yet there are moments when I doubt it. Sel.

THE STORY OF THE SHOES.

Everybody in the world was barefooted. There were no new shoes in the stores, no old ones in the attics. There were none at all in the whole wide world, and probably no stores or attics either. In those good old times, when all feet were bare, a man could step on his neighbor's toe without bringing on spasms or agony, for bunions were unknown. "Stubbed toes" were common, but on land or sea not a single corn existed.

Finally, somebody—whether man or woman nobody knows—made a pair of shoes. Not of calf-skin, with high heels, foxed toes and polished uppers, but flat rough, "foot-mats" of woven reeds. These, when tied on with leather thongs, kept the feet from the burning sands.

More and more people wore those queer "foot mats," till there were hundreds, and thousands, and hundreds of thousands of pairs in use. For everyday use they were light and [illegible] with fancy throngs, and those of the soldiers were iron bound, with strong nails in the heels, and often whole soles of copper. In the days when all the shoes were new and before people had begun to pinch their feet, they were used for queer purposes. If a man purchased a piece of land he threw a pair over it as a sign of ownership; if he engaged to borrow he removed his shoes as a sign of respect.

There is an old story of a shoemaker of Rome, long years ago, who thought he must become a preacher, taking his shoes he started out to tell the heathen of France and Britain all about the Christ. They were very poor, so they paid their way by making shoes. Very nice ones they made, and found plenty of custom. For a long time they followed these two trades, till at last, in savage Britain, they were martyred. And, to this day the twenty-fifth of October, the day upon which Chrispin was killed is called St. Crispin's day, and every shoemaker in the world is called a son of St. Crispin.

For hundreds and thousands of years people had been wearing shoes of all kinds, of leather, wood, and reeds, brass-bound, iron-bound, gold-bound, with wide, blunt toes, with narrow, pointed toes a foot long; but the right shoe and the left shoe of each foot were exactly the same in shape. About the year 1800 a man invented "right direction." Eighteen years after a man named Joseph Walker invented the shoe peg. Before this, all the shoes had been sewed by hand, a long, slow process, but now they were pegged. So Popular did shoe pegs become that forty great manufactories were devoted to making them, in Massachusetts alone, and so many were made that some speculators bought up many bushels and tried to sell them for oats.

Inventors now began to construct all kinds of curious machines for making shoes. Great buildings were erected, machines put in, and thousands of pairs turned out every day, millions every year. If one had sharp eyes, ears, and could listen, and hear the clatter of the millions of wooden shoes in China, Japan, France and Holland, the softer thud of the leather shoes in our country, in England and other parts of Europe, the click of the sandals in the sleepy lands of the East, the swish of the snow shoes over the Canadian snow crust, or, the ring of the fourteen foot shoe of the Jemdland winter hunter, what would these sounds tell? Would the foot-falls carry to the listener, "These busy feet are all bound on errands of mercy? Over the hill, through the valley, in steep and dangerous places, those shoes do not slip or falter, or tarry to do wrong. They belong to earth's warriors, who are shod with the preparation of the Gospel of peace." Would this be the answer for these silf Abs es ! In the broad way are many, many feet hurrying on to death. Clogged and heavy, weary with sin, they stumble on, blind, reckless, lost.

Little shoes, strong, willing, eager to do right, beware the first step out of the narrow way. There are mountains to climb, deserts to cross rivers to ford; but little shoes, little feet if you listen to the gentle voice that said "Follow me," you may one day tread the streets of gold in the heavenly city.—The Little Christian.

NOT THE DUKE OF MALBOROUGH.

The celebrated Earl of Peterborough crossing the King's Mews one evening in a chair, soon after the arrival of the Duke of Malborough from one of the victorious campaigns, was mistaken by the populace for his Grace, and was soon surrounded from curiosity to see the man who had given the French so many drubbings. His Lordship finding that the multitude had followed his chair upon a wrong scent, ordered the men who carried the vehicle to stop; and putting down the front glass, he thus addressed the mistaken crowd: —"I can assure you, gentlemen that I am not the Duke of Marlborough; and to convince you of it more fully, I have consulted his lordship, throwing a handful of money amongst them), here is something for you to drink." The well known avarice of his Grace gave us a strong point to his Lordship's speech, and proved at once his incredulity with the hero of Blenheim. —Sel.

HE—my dear, do you see that fellow running to catch that street car? he is all out of breath, eager and excited; and yet when he catches the car, he will sit down perfectly contented and not have a word to say.—RAMBLER.

A little boy of six summers was sent one morning to call his grandfather to breakfast. The old gentleman snored very hard, and as the little boy pushed open the door, he was frightened at the noise. He rushed back to his mother, exclaiming: 'Ma, grandpapa has been barking at me."

A little three year-old, whose father did not use a razor, was recently, while on a visit to an uncle, greatly interested in seeing him shave. After watching him intently for a few minutes she said "Uncle, what do you do that for? You dont wash his face with a little broom and wipe it with a knife."

"Are you afraid of the dark?" asked a mother of her little daughter. "I was once, mamma, when I went into the dark closet to take a tart." "What were you afraid of?" "I was afraid I wouldn't find the tart."

THE PROSPECT.

We mean of Business and Labor, is at length, we believe, after so long a time brightening a little in these parts. Trade is certainly although slowly reviving as time advances and but for what are considered (but which really are not) low prices for Palm Kernels, and the rather absurd figure for what is called Palm Oil, but in a great many cases is far from what it ought to be; we believe there would be now no real reason for any complaint, of course the relics of the old Supply or Credit system, have their weight in almost every transaction as most men of Business wish to avoid giving out their Goods, and still they wish a share in the revival of Trade which they seem not quite certain of, for the present, unless they do give some one a Supply; as the effect of the long depression has been to reduce the [illegible] and nearly all Petty Traders to such circumstances as makes it seem absolutely necessary for them to ask for a Supply in order to begin Business again, and this fact being very evident to the Merchant, there is but perhaps one way to turn his old customer or client away with the slightest hope of afterward receiving his patronage and that is to have him go again to his place and bring what he can for ready pay on delivery; but such a Trade is fraught with many serious disadvantages. First of all it must be small, then it is of necessity very slow, then again much more uncertain, and lastly it gives the Merchant little hope of the Applicants return, and if he does, it may be after a long time with a mere handful of Produce as without a Stock of Goods, the Trader cannot hold out an Inducement to the people to gather the Produce. Large Establishments may deal with Petty Traders and small Customers but they cannot afford to do a small business, if the stuff comes in small lots it must come rapidly to hand so as to make a large aggregate if not then the expenses will overrun the profits. These and many other problems are now crowding upon the minds of Merchants and Traders and must be solved before a full revival of Business can be brought about whatever may be the foreign Markets or the resources and condition of the Country Districts.

Labor, the great problem of other parts of the world, does not give us a great deal of trouble as the subjects or candidates for the ordinary (or even Mechanical as far as it goes) Work in these parts are not very ambitious and have but few of the necessities of other lands to urge them to clamor for employment or make any public demonstrations of their sufferings; our greatest annoyance being the occasional extremely polite epistle of a clerk or pedagogue or it may be other professional for a position or situation and the constant cry of "give me a job" from the various tradesmen and laborers, but as trade opens gradually all classes begin to find employment, and as their wants in many cases can be deferred and their necessities are very few and only really pressing as far as the stomach is concerned which, is easily be supplied upon receiving a few days labour, and it is truly pleasant to see the time gradually returning when employment can be obtained by we believe all classes.

Clouds Again, but not of war this time—yet of contention in the Political Sky of the Manoh Bargroo, we have received much information concerning dissatisfaction in those parts and some one (C—) in another column of this issue has attempted to give an explanation of the case as refers to the Chieftaincy of the Eastern Bargroo, and that writer maintains that the present incumbent is not the legitimate successor to the owner of the country and hence the constant troubles in those parts but we are not so sure that he is right in reference to this matter, but we are sure that there was no small amt of trouble and complaint prior to the accession of the present Queen; however if rumour be correct there will be in a short time an investigation of these matters when no doubt there will be a settlement of the whole by the proper Authorities.

The Result—of A Young African's last Article in our issue of the 30th was to bring out other articles on the subject, under discussion, which although well written and containing strong points of argument especially was this true of Rolyat's paper, while that of A Teacher of the U. B. C. was not lacking for its points, yet altogether in our judgement both would be very prejudicial to our general interests and as we had not intended the publication of A Young Africans last effusion we think it best not to publish these answers as we believe they could be of little good to the general public and might greatly harm our Mission work at this crisis. Hoping our friends, the writers of the last papers, may acquiesce in our impartial judgment in this matter, we shall expect to hear no more of it.

It seems rather strange that enlightened gentlemen should seek to make known through the Press private matters or that which concerns only a single Society of a Religious connection. For instance some months ago, a certain person became anxious to communicate with the Rev. ——— who was then in Freetown, and instead of mailing a letter to that gentleman sent us several pages of Foolscap of information of how bad things were going on among the people of the Rev. gentleman's flock. Of course we did not publish it, as we had been surfeited on such rubbish already. A few days ago another "An Observer" only a short distance from here, sent to enquire through the Press as to whether the fee for baptizing illegitimate children had been advanced since the visit of the Missioner? Now if this gentleman had addressed his enquiry to the next door, we presume his question could have been answered in a much shorter time.

We regret, very much, to note the Death of Mrs. Sarah Sandy, the wife Mr. B. S. Sandy of Minah, and daughter of the Rev. G. N. Jowcett, Asst. Pastor of Good Hope Station, in this place. Mrs. Sandy's illness was of short duration. She it seems had started down from Minah, and died at GBap about the 13th inst; her remains were brought here the same evening, and intered yesterday morning after services at St. Matthew's Church, in the Mendi Mission Cemetry in the presence of a large gathering; we sympathize with the family and friends of the deceased.

OUR WOMEN.

Dear Bro. Evans,—By the last mail I have Religious Telescopes of May 19 & 26, & June 2nd. These papers contain the Reports of the Annual Meetings of both the men and women's Missionary Boards. I have read them through carefully, but alas nothing special is done for the women of Africa. I have tried as you well know in my weak way to get the attention of able and influential people on this subject but no one gives an ear to my appeals, true there was a plea in behalf of Females tacked on a resolution I was voted through at the last Annual Meeting, but there it died. Now dear Bro., you know and I know every intelligent person knows, that this African nation, nor any other nation cannot become wise, great and good so longer its women, the mothers of the people are kept in the degraded and disgraceful position that the African women are kept in. Mr. Wilberforce, yourself and myself all know something of the condition of the women in this country, and ought not we to lift up our voices in their behalf? I was pleased to see that Mr. Wilberforce spoke to the point on the subject at the Board Meeting. I hope that, that speech may stir the hearts of some one to act in the matter. The branch of Mission work should receive special attention, as a rule this part of the work has been treated casually or as being of minor importance, a greater mistake was ever made, for of all the branches is of the utmost importance, educate all the men of Africa and leave the women in the present condition and your labor will be lost. We must not, we dare not treat this subject lightly. It is a duty to perform, and if we do with closed mouths until we are on a dying bed, and our life panorama is by us being run and we become conscious of the fact that we have been negligent of the training of the mothers of the race, ask in all candor, my dear sir, what will be our feelings at that time of conscience, what greater sin of omission could we be guilty of,? I have more to say on this subject but for the present I have done.

SUB-CHIEF BEAH-BARNO.

Mr. Editor.—It may no doubt be of interest to you and your readers to know that we have lost a member (a Seeker) during the last quarter who changed time for eternity. During the illness of this brother, he was visited by our Superintendent the Rev. J. Gomer who prayed and conversed with him on the subject of salvation. Though he was not a member of the Church class, still he was one of most earnest and diligent seekers. Before his prostrating illness he was always found in his seat in the class-meetings, prayer meetings, and Divine services on Sabbaths. I paid him freequent visits the week previous to his death and he always expressed a readiness for death, saying to me that he was sure he would not live. We regret to lose one of our earnest Seekers, but at the same time, we trust that our loss is his gain. He died an old man of about eighty five years of age, leaving a wife, three Sons, three Daughters, with thirteen Grand-children to mourn their irreparable loss.

The Editor "Early Dawn."

Dear Mr. Editor,—Perusing the "Bargroo Items" in your valuable paper of June 26th, it calls for explanation why the many complaints and dissatisfaction manifested, were brought to the notice of the Commandant during his visit to that District, against Mr. Savage alias Conah Cambeh the Chief.

Several grave charges were laid against her by the natives; and it is reported that matters have been explained to the Authorities that she has no right to be the Chief of that country, and that notes &c. have been taken for the information of the Government in Chief. The Commandant remained in that District for four days; and during that interval complaints from every quarter were brought against her. Mrs. Savage it must be remarked, is the step daughter of Carbokah, a Mendi man of the Bompeh country (a stranger who by his influence and wit, became the intimate friend and spokesman of Sopawee the Chief of that country, and who afterwards acted as Regent, after the death of the Chief. Shortly however before Sopawee's death, he was advised by his spokesman to appoint his son Sey-lo-lo, then a young man, to act as Chief after him; and he accordingly handed to his son, his Sceptre or bokar, and broom, as also the superstitious rites of ceremony for the country, (which Mrs. savage and all the natives acknowledge unto this day) in the presence of the principal big men in the country. Carbokah reigned for some time and he died. He was succeeded by Bah Suah, (a Sherbro man) and Bah Men, (a Timneh man) respectively. After the death of the last, and for some time, no one was appointed; and Sey-lo-lo would not act, because he was a young man. Mr. D. W. Burton of the Mendi Mission, who showed very great interest and sympathy for the people, and who resided in the District at the time, assembled them together to know who was the Chief when Sey-lo-lo in the presence of all present deputed his elder sister or cousin M'Rogbah Fuay; and with the assistance of Mr. D. W. Burton, Sir Arthur E. Kennedy then Governor-in-Chief of the Settlements, recognised her as Chief of that District. Not very long, and for many years after, she became sick and incapable; and therefore asked Sey-lo-lo with her spokesman Peah Karl to assist in governing the country. These two men continued so for more than ten years until in 1881, two years ago, when Conah Kambeh was said to have been abruptly and most mysteriously elected Chief of that District by Mr. Laborde, who was then the Civil Commandant of Sherbro and at a time M'Rogbah Fuay was then still living. You will observe that M'Rogbah Fuay died in June last year, vide Bargroo Items "Early Dawn" July 1886. Since this extraordinary election in 81, dissatisfaction prevails in that District up to the present time.

The question morally arises, how was it possible that two chiefs could have existed in a country at one and the same time, without causing confusion, dissatisfaction and quarrel? The blame rests somewhere?

Conah Kargbeh was born at Bandajimah in chief Beah Bome's territory even before carbokah took her mother to wife she knew Manoh Bangroo for the first time in her life, only four years ago when she left Freetown. M'Rogbah Fuay and Sey-lo-lo were blood relations to chief Sopawee the original owner of the country; they were born and bred there &c. then how can Mrs. Savage claim to be entitled to the rights of that country?

Now Mr. Editor I leave this matter for both you and readers as well as the Authorities to determine, Who is chief of the Eastern Bargroo.

Without entering minutely on the general conduct of the present chief, which appeals rather for sympathy than otherwise from the natives, I trust the Authorities will shortly investigate matters, and give the satisfaction so greatly needed!

Thanking you for the space already occupied.

Yours respectfully
C——.

Sherbro July 6th, 1886.

MONKEYS AND SNAKES.

I stood in the bow of a boat at Manboe and saw the nimble thieves, as they leaped out of the Mission farm and ran up the tall Mango trees; after having broken down and devoured corn to their satisfaction, they seated themselves and actually looked me in the face, so I thought I had no gun; Mr Harris the farmer had a good one, but no powder. He was vexed, and I myself was not in the best of humor. And I asked myself the question what are monkeys good for? the people say they are good to eat, and their skins make very good quo-to koos (haversacks) and then they are nice to amuse children in a menagery. Yes they are good also to try ones patience, for the amount of Corn and Casadda that they have destroyed for us at the different stations is wonderful. I should quite satisfied to do without them.

SNAKES too are a great source of annoyance to us they were never as numerous as this year. We have up to date that three Black snakes, one Boa-constrictor, one regular East India Cobra as described in Webster. The only I have ever seen here besides these, quite a number have been killed outside while I am writing they brought a 5 feet black snake that was killed in the parlor of the Boys Home. Mrs. Gomer set a goose lately the goose and eggs were all taking one night it is laid on Boa constrictor, simply because we killed a couple that had swallowed setting hens and their eggs. I hardly think that Mr. Boa swallowed the goose and a dozzen eggs and went off the same night.

A Horse Whip crawling about in the roof of the Mo-Phus Mission house, fell on the Teacher's head, he borrowed a gun and shot a black snake that lay along the rafters catching rats. I believe snakes too are good to dry ones patience. It is really wonderful how they manage to get in the fowl coops. And they will kill 2 to 3 fowls in a night, besides swallowing the eggs from under the setting hens. How shall we get rid of these snakes. Our neighbor suffer the same as we do.

FROM DEATH UNTO LIFE.

Underlying the whole order of nature, we see this important principle of Death unto Life. It is this very principle to which our Saviour calls our attention in the most solemn and striking manner. "Amen amen, I say unto you, except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die it abideth alone; but if it die, it bringeth forth much fruit." Here the inspired figure is that of a seed of corn cast into the ground, which, when warmth and moisture reach it, decays and dies. Yet out of its death the mighty power of God calls new life: "First the blade, then the ear, then the full corn in the ear, yielding fruit in due season, some thirty, some sixty, some a hundred-fold." There is a remarkable fact connected with the germination of wheat, which leads great force to our Lord's illustration, and which, we believe, has nevertheless escaped the notice of commentators. A grain or corn of wheat when properly buried in the ground, like all other seeds sends forth roots which grow downwards, and a stalk which ascends. But when the stalk emerges from the earth, its first knot or joint is made, from which a leaf springs; and here a very peculiar feature may be noticed. As soon as the wheather will allow, second set of lateral roots is thrown out from this knot, which act as the real feeders of the plant; while the stalk and roots that are beneath speedily perish. This must occur in the case of all healthy wheat that is to bear "much fruit." The growth of these lateral roots, and the decay of all below them, is only found wanting where the grain has been too superficially sown, that is, has been allowed to fall on but not into the ground, and under these circumstances it can never flourish. It is therefore, literally true, in a remarkable manner in which it is not true of other seeds that a "corn of wheat," in order to its proper and abundant increase, must actually die. If it were left to remain in the barn it would abide safe, but alone; but if it be cast to the earth, if it be buried and die, "it bringeth forth much fruit." "Just so," it is as though our Saviour would say, "except I suffer you cannot be happy, except I die you cannot live.—Sel

A gentleman, groaning under the pangs of the gout, was asked by his sympathizing friend, "Have you ever tried the Eau Melicinale?" "I have tried every kind of—Oh!" he exclaimed; with the true accent of pain. "but, Oh! dear me, they dont relieve me."

I was standing in the garden one day as some heavy storm clouds was passing over, when a little nice, aged five, suddenly exclaimed, "Oh! look at the sky walking along!"

TRYING TO FLY.

A few days ago as I stood in the piazza of our Mission House, I observed three chickens standing near a railing; two of them immediately flew on the topmost rail and perched themselves there, the other tried to follow their example but could not, it tried several times but failed; I then went near to see the reason why it could not fly, then I discovered that the feathers from both of its wings were plucked, which prevented it from flying.

Ah thought I, is it not so with plenty many of us—i e We try to get into good position but we fail, for our wings are plucked, we are robbed of our feathers by the demon "Strong drink" we try to enter into good company but we fail, for our feathers are gone robbed by the demon strong drink. We sometimes attempt to ascend in our prayers, but alas we lack the power our spiritual wings are plucked and after several fruitless attempts we have just to remain where we are.

"In vain we strive to rise,
Hosanna languish on our tongues
And our devotion dies."

REMARKABLE COINCIDENCES

He who watches the artful movement of the Great Enemy of mankind, will see that he makes use of the above as implements in leading astray the simple to believe in lies.

A notable charm-maker once bought some goods on Credit of a Christian man, promised adequate returns in produce of a given time. But when the time came though he was in easy position to pay, he made some excuse. But when he found his Creditor would listen to no excuses he was obliged to come to terms and send over the promised adequate stores. Next day the Christian shipped the produce received, to an other House for exchanges. The sea was calm, but through the imprudence of the boatmen, the canoe capsized and the produce was lost. This Christian spoke to another Charm-maker about it, and pleased with him to leave off Charm-making. Moved by the Holy Spirit, he gave up all his Charms, not before divining that the Christian will suffer from abdominal pains, except he offer sacrifice. The Christian said "Never mind for that you should only rejoice that you are about to take a right step. Next morning the Christian was suddenly seized with pains in his abdomen which continued till noon.

The same Christian came in contact with a hunter who had many Charms in his hunting bag, which he believed could help to find the game he wished to kill, and to prevent him from shooting at his family beast "for most hunters believe that their families sometimes transform themselves into beast and that their Charms can help them in distinguishing freely from wild beasts. He questioned him fully of a bone which he had, that he said had the result power of curing headache. The Christian said it be needless to give him the bag of Charms the bone is in the bargain, he would keep them and take the trouble to walk over to his house every morning to say Good morning, this the hunter refused. Next morning about 8 o'clock the Christian was seized with a violent headache this made him smile when the bought of these three remarkable coincedences, and said to another Christian standing by, that it is, that by similar remarkable coincidences the Great enemy of mankind has led and is still leading astray many of the simple to believe in lies.

Sir,—On Saturday morning the 24th ultimo, the booming of guns with great rejoicings which lasted till night, announced the return of the Chiefs and Headmen from Bonthe, (where they had been invited by the Authorities to investigate matters affecting the interest of the country), and the defeat of Conah Kamara, the late Ruler of this District.

Several meetings have been convened by them to discourse on the better management in future of the country under Sey Lolo and Dash Karlu, lately re-appointed by the Authorities, pending the decision of the Administrator-in-Chief. In one of these meetings the difference that had existed of late between the Timnehs and themselves, caused by the late Ruler was amicably settled; and they are now moving together.

Much praise is due to the Acting Civil Commandant A. North Daniel, who has by his efforts left an example for the other Heads, to enter thoroughly in future into the merits of Native Affairs, before arriving at a hasty conclusion, which may cause, and has caused much trouble and expense already to Sherbro and the Government.

A TALK ABOUT PATIENCE.

Dear Mr. Editor,—I have been thinking a great deal to write about patience, an of the large share it has in promoting happiness. Whichever we may look we can not help seeing how terribly many lives are spoiled and homes upset and rendered miserable for want of it; also how labour is lightened, rough places are smoothed, and difficulties overcome and swept away out of sight where patience abides. When one come to think of it, the duty and importance of being patient formed one of the earliest lessons taught to man by his Creator. Not quite the first obedience was at the top of the list, and, like children, who have only the alphabet to start with, it was the single lesson given to the first human pair to learn and practice. They failed in that and paid the penalty. And then they were driven out of paradise, and had to begin to learn more and harder lessons; for when God in his compassionate love promised that the seed of the woman which was to bruise the serpent's head, they had to exercise faith, hope and patience. Faith to rest upon; hope to cheer them in their wanderings when the gates of paradise closed behind them; and patience to wait for the fulfilment of God's promise.

See how long this last had to be exercise. Four thousand years rolled round one after the other. Again and again, Patriachs, Lawgivers and Prophets, Inspired by God, renewed the assurance that Christ should come; and in the fulness of time He appeared, and lived and died to save sinners from eternal death. But it was not only in spiritual things that Adam had to begin to learn the lesson of patience. In the garden of Eden he ate of that which had cost him no labour. He sprang into life amid a scene of fruitfulness which promised to be perpetual. He had only to put forth his hand and choose from every tree which is pleasant to the sight and good for food. The Lord God had himself planted the garden and made the trees to grow out of the ground as well as every herb which is upon the face of the earth. When the decree went forth, "In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread;" Adam and his seed after him, were driven to learn the lesson of patience. is it not so to-day? Does not revelation and nature alike teach it? And the better the object desired the longer it must be waited for.

The boy, eager to learn would fain go by strides in acquiring knowledge, but he must wait and plod patiently on, begining with the alphabet, and joining syllable to syllable before he can master a page of a book. Many a mother holds her helpless babe to her breast and wishes, first that it was strong enough to run alone; then, that the boy might soon be a help the father, or the girl a comfort to her herself, by the fireside at home. But she must have patience too; strength comes only by degrees, and growth is the work of time, kings and all the wise men of the world with all their wealth and power could not forward the harvest by a day, or turn the child one whit the sooner into the full-grown man. It seems to me that I cannot glance around at a single thing of God's creating or man's making out the material divinity given, without learning a lesson of patience.

If I were to go on about everything within sight and reach, which even at this moment tells of the need for patience and the value of its work, I should perhaps tire that of the readers before I came to an end.

BONTHE, SHERBRO.

AUGUST 16, 1886.

WE have really so much of interest contributed in different ways that there seems little for us to call attention to in this issue; however it may be worthy of notice that the attention of all the churches in the place are becoming rather more interested in the heathen element that environs our city in the many Farkies about the place and the nearer surrounding country; it is however a little untortunate that this new impetus did not commence sooner as now very many, perhaps most, of the refugees have returned to their country homes and that too without feeling or being impressed with this later general interest of our christianity, beyond the efforts of the Mendi Mission; which has for the past many years kept up a work among the Farkies and for the last two years it has been conducted by men of ability in the native tongue. But we are pleased to hear of laudable efforts put forth by the St. Matthews Episcoal Church through the Dorcas Society in supplying clothing to those who have none and thus inducing them by charitable means to attend the house of God we understand further too that there are visiting women who are to go to the farkies, and do all they can in bringing in this element to Divine service.

Of course we believe the enterprize of the Wesleyan Connection of this place through the untiring efforts of Mr J. A. Williams at Mo Moseley has been several times mentioned in our Columns as a thriving work among the pagan element. A like Enterprize at Mokate connected with the Parish of St. Luke & under the estimable Patronage of Mr. C. B. Collier we understand has been successful in disseminating the Gospel light.

We have been pleased also to learn from Mr. C. S. Brown Catechist of St. Luke's at Bendoo that a goodly number of the country people attend Divine Services and that he Itinerates among them even beyond the limits of Bendoo. All these enterprizes for the good of our neighbours. We note with pleasure but feel seriously that more should be done.

STEAM!!! STEAM!! STEAMER!

From recent reliable sources we have been informed that the absence of the S. S. John Brown from our port has been necessitated by her being laid up in Freetown for the Complete and thorough repairs of her Machinery Boilers &c, which is now being done at Fisher and Randall's Machine Shops in Sierra Leone, and when completed it is believed that the vessel will be all that could be desired in a craft of her size, and as we now understand she will continue to ply between this Port and Freetown touching at Shaingay.

LONDON LETTER.

We have received the following letter from a friend in England, which although not writen for publication, contains so much of interest that we give it to our Readers with the writter's initials.

London, England,
July 8th, 1886

Dear Sir,

Many thanks for your kind letter We shall always be glad to hear how you and your people are getting on. In England a great deal of interest is taken in Africa and the African races; We should like to know they were progressing a little more rapidly towards civilization, and were more anxious to open up the resources of so rich a country. I believe my Brother is writing to you about your Exhibits. He says he is much pleased with the cotton grown by your Mission.

I am glad too to notice in your Report that you dwell on the importance of the Industrial part of your Work. It must be difficult to make people work steadily who are not used to do so; but you are certainly doing the best for them when you make them feel the duty as well as the necessity of turning their faculties, and their Land to good account.

Mr & Mrs. Alldridge and myself have been about with the Indian and Colonial Visitors a good deal lately. We have several times had the pleasure of meeting a colored Lady and Gentleman, Mr. and Mrs. Payne of Lagos among the other visitors. They were at the Lord Mayor's Ball, they went to Windsor where they were received by Her Majesty the Queen, they also were at many other places of interest. One of our most pleasant visits together was to the beautiful Mansion of Sir Thomas and Lady Brassy, of whom no doubt you have heard, as Lady Brassy's Book called "The Voyage of the Sunbeam" is so well known. They went round the World in their Yacht, the 'Sunbeam.'—We had a special Train from London, Carriages to meet us at the Country Station, and a magnificent Luncheon at the end of our Journiey The house is very large and handsome. It stands in a lovely Park or a hillside and overlooks many miles of the most beautiful English landscape—All hills, and Dales and Woods—The great Battle of Hastings was fought eight hundred years ago, on the ground we could see from Sir Thomas Brassy's Mansion.

Last week the Queen reviewed the Troops at Aldershot on which occasion, the Colonial Visitors were the only people who had a space reserved for them. The Queen drove close by them and of course they cheered with all their might. They have certainly been very well treated, and have seen more sights than many people who always live in England.

I remain, Dear Sir,
Yours very truly,
L.——A.——

LONDON, 9. July 1886.

The Editor "Early Dawn."

Dear Sir,—As many of your readers may be interested in the West African Exhibits at the Colonial and Indian Exhibition now open in London—I purpose with your permission, to send you a short review upon each of the Sections represented, viz:—

SIERRA LEONE & SHERBRO,
THE GAMBIA,
THE GOLD COAST COLONY, AND
LAGOS.

Commencing from your own locality the Sherbro—it is highly gratifying to see such a capital display of the Native Woods, shewn to advantage by the Revd. J. A. Evans and Mr. J. B. Wright—The former sends good specimens of Sugar-Dum, Kesserre wood, Mammy apple, Brimstone Tyeflow), Almond, Oak, Brimstone(Blue), Coronko, Bombeh, Beck, Saney, Kelamah and Whismore. Catalogue No. 357, class V.

Mr. Wright shews up well with 18 distinct examples of wood, No. 359, Class V in Catalogue, and comprising Foondatah, Whismore, Cocoor, Brimstone (Blue), Kebani, Coronko, Koondee, Brimstone (mountain), Beke, Mammy-apple, Cedar, Black Oak, Coonta, Whismore, Beck, Blue Bessie, Almond, and Sugar-plum.

The Revd. J. Gomer is to be congratulated upon the excellent exhibits which he makes of Ginger, Corn, Coffee, and Arrowroot (shewn together in a long box, having four divisions) grown upon the Mission Farms at Shaingay—also for the very fine sample of Cotton-wool Cat: No. 310, Class III, Sec. VII, and again for an unusually large and fine description of dried Ginger, shewn separately, Cat. No. 84 Class II. Sec. III, also from Shaingay, which deserves the highest commendation. The Shaingay Mission has certainly contributed largely to the success of the Sherbro Exhibits, but it would appear a curious anomaly that the only Mission represented from Her Majesty's Colony of Sherbro, should be an American one—Long may it flourish "root and branch."

Mr. C. B. Collier shews a sample of Wax, also a very curious Dagger (497, Class VI. Sec. II., having double blades and with an iron and silver handle.

Mr. H. T. Coker of Bompeh, shews some dried Ginger (83 Class II. Sec II) also some excellent Cotton-Wool (211, Class III, Sec VII.) and a nice sample of Raw Coffee, though the berry seems somewhat small.

The fine and numerous Exhibits of Mr. T. J. Alldridge, comprising Chiefs' Gowns and Country Clothes of exquisite finish and most elaborate work. Silver Rings, Horn-bangles, leather and Grass work, Hammocks &c, &c., and the famous Bundoo Devil's mask, which has been so freely commented upon by the London Press, continue to excite genuine interest in the many thousands of visitors who daily throng to this attractive and Natogual undertaking.

The varied Colours of the innumerable Flags which hang from above give to the West African Court generally a very light and bright appearance while enormous tubs containing fine specimens of growing Bananas with the massive though graceful foliage, and Palm Trees spreading out their delicate tremulous leaflets invite you to enter into this most Tropical of Tropical Countries. Upon doing so it is by no means difficult to understand why Explorers in West Africa should have christened it the "Dark Continent" for wherever you turn is darkness only too plainly visible in the "Fetishes which meet you at every step. West Africa I regret, to say seems to be centuries behind any other of the English Colonies here represented, and it is only at such an Exhibition as the present when all Her Majesty's Colonies are brought together Side by side that the progress and light of the one and the retrogression and darkness of the other become but too painfully apparent. My next review will be upon the Sierra Leone Exhibits.

I remain Mr. Editor,
Your truly,
AFRICANUS.

FIRE AT MANOH SALIJAH,

On the night of the 5th inst at 7 30. p. m., there was an alarm of fire in the out houses of the Sulymah and Sherbro Trading Company Limited just a few yards from the Factory. The fire broke out from the house newly occupied, and that for only three days by the native clerk C. H. During and the washerwoman Ellen Williams of which the latter is the greatest sufferer. It also caught the cooper's house. But its progress was prevented from spreading by the timely aid of the Custom Officer in charge, constable Liverpool, John G Macauley and Thomas Johnson, carpenters, with the help of some native labourers, and the direction the wind was blowing there assisted in preventing any serious conflagration.

This is the second time that fire of a serious nature has occurred in this Station, and taking into consideration that the houses are all built of flammable material it would not be too much to say that due attention should be paid so prevent a similar occurrence as there are important buildings out side the fence of the factory yard the interest of which should be looked after.

NEWS ITEMS.

We understand that Capt. A. North Daniel Acting Comdt leaves for the Kittim today. It seems rather a pity that there is not a man deputed of Her Majesty's Govt., for that Distrlct, especially since there is so much to be done here by the Comdt of Sherbro.

We give in this Issue an account of the Sherbro Exhibits in the Indian & Colonial Exhibition as this is the begining of a series of papers on the various sections of West Africa we call the particular attention of our readers to them.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENT—We are much indebted to Mr T. J. Sawyer Book seller & Stationer, Freetown, and the Rev. J. Gomer our publishing Agent Shaingay for their prompt Dispatch, and fowarding of the Printing paper for the present Issue, otherwise we must have been much later in getting out.

The fairer weather of the last week enabled the Contract Boat to arrive on Thursday which is much earlier than for some weeks past accordingly the mails were closed at 6 p. m. on Friday instead of Sunday morning.

Personal

Mr. J. B. Wright and Mr. G.B. Coulson of Bendoo gave us a call on the 2nd inst Mr C. renewed his Subscription to our Journal.

Miss Florence Thompson left per Mission boat Olive Branch on the 11th inst for Shaingay, returning we believe to her work in the Lesher School.

Mr T. B. Reid and wife of Kronkor were down on a short visit to York-Island and Bonthe they gave us a pleasant call today we were glad to see them both looking so well and taking life so plesantly under the many privations which must needs be endured on this Coast.

Rev. G. N. Jowett has been recently appointed Pastor of Mendi Mission Chapel, Good Hope Station in this place, and has already entered upon his duties and from every appearance at present, we believe he will succeed well. With this appointment a new enterprize begins looking toward self support, and as the Idea seems to take well with the leading members of the congregation, we believe it will be a success.

SHAINGAY ITEMS.

The Chief T. N. Caulker is spending a few weeks in the Country among his Subjects At present he is at Mambo.

There is a great scarcity of food in the country, the old rice and casada is finished, and the new crop is not yet ready for use. Many of the more industrious people would have had a plenty, but for the vagabonds and lazy loafers that interested these parts, who spunge and steal what the honest and industrious people work for. By the way Mr. Editor, do you not think it would have a wholesome effect if the Chief would call together all those who are living off the public and have no visible means of support and make them work a Government farm what say you? [Good idea.—Ed.]

Tel-Ken, the poor woman that had been for the last 10 years a cripple died on the 8th inst.

Mrs Nicholas Gomer No. 2, eloped a couple of weeks ago, with one Peter Morgan of Kent Sierra Leone.—Nicholas feels bad.

Revd. J. M. Lesher late of Shaingay Mission and founder of the Lesher School has recently sent it a donation just how much I have not learned.

Our Missionary Rev. Mr. Gomer, had a struggle to get home from Freetown 5 days.

I have just learned that Scipio Caulker one of the oldest Mission boys in the Shaingay Mission is about leaving the Mission to become a Merchant's clerk in Freetown. Scipio has many warm friends throughout this part of the county where he had traveled as as an interpreter with the Itinerants and often conducting services himself, he is a son of Chief Richard Canrabah Caulker of the Bompeh.

HUSBANDS AND WIVES.

Give me the avowed, the erect, the manly foe, Bold I can meet perhaps may turn his blow. But of all plagues —Good Heaven, thy wrath can send— Lord save, Oh save me from the false friends.!

When the wife of Hector in Homer's Iliad discourses with her husband about the battle in which he was going to engage, the hero desiring her to leave the matter to his care bids her to go to her maids and mind her spinning. This rather unsavory wise action of the Poet, simply, I believe intimates that men and women ought to engage, themselves in their proper spheres and on such matters only as are suitable to their respective sex.

We are nevertheless acquainted with the truth that in this comparatively small community of ours, women there are who personally make an empire into matters that not only do not concern them but which also serve to put them on pins and needles with their husbands, bringing the latter thereby finally, into utter calumny and shame. It is essentially necessary in a place like Sherbro where disunion, and hostering rule with an indisputable sway and no love or mutual understanding exists between one and the other, for women, especially those who are under the direct maintenance and support of A Husband to behave themselves with singular caution and care as by this means only they might preclude themselves from all turpicost actions and conversations and from being looked upon by the gazing public with a supercilious contempt or held out as objects of derision and perfidy. The woman (no matter her position or that of her husband in the community) who makes it her special duty to trade and barter in slander is an object of disgrace to herself and her husband as well. The position which she fills as a married woman becomes unenviable and perhaps a misnomer—She is scarcely the idol of her spouse, as she should always be at peace, a true and genuine picture of happiness, contentment, and pleasure. There are few homes however that such happiness and pleasure does exist but in most contrary case the husband as a consequence fancies the wife as an emblem of disgust or the wife fancies the husband as the most crude of his sex. We know nothing which more shews an inherent imperfection of simplicity of thought in a woman than the exhibition of a sort of disregard for a wife in a husband. It is true that human nature is the same in all reasonable creatures but yet how often we think less of a woman's vagueness and attribute it to "woman's weakness" Another evil which exposes a woman to greater danger, is that gaiety and airness of temper which are natural to most of the sex It should be the concern of every wise and virtuous woman to keep this sprightliness from degenerating into levity. For a married woman to lie on and slander the reputation of individual persons, especially the virtuous and innocent among them, in any community; or speak about loudly or let every one hear her speak of things which do not concern her, or which should only be mentioned in private or in a whisper is most odious.

Now a-days that the world is overrun with vice and vicious women there are who make it their duty to go from house to house with indecent and truthless tales, tales that have a tendency to ruin the reputation of the innocent and honest. It is of paramount importance that women, especially those who are provided with a husband to love and caress, should not indulge in the formation of strange Friendship. The female class as a rule, are not discreet and they go about in the choice of friends without judgment, without descrimination, the evil that always arises, is that they select friends among the ill-conditioned and lawless, among parasites, turncoats and viragoes whose whole aim would be to make the Homes of their very friends uncomfortable and wretched by foul means and slander even within doors. How many wives have not suffered sad and sharp heartsand in the estimation of their husbands through these lawless and ill-conditioned friendships! We pause for a reply. —meanwhile we recommend that husbands especially in a community like this that the strimpets can scarcely be distinguished from the modest women, insist on wives keeping at home and make friends of husbands and children rather than visiting the Houses of their companions and spend their time in prattling and travesty.

Yours,
THE GRACCHI.

A VISIT TO BONTHE.

Bonthe as a place has become popular. The inhabitants are looking more polite than they have hitherto been; religion so far as I have seen is gaining grounds in some.—Management good; and everything shows progress.—But it is to be regretted that among the community there are still lurking in some corners those who encourage heathenism, i. e. Greegreeism in high quarters, and serpent worshipping etc., etc.

My attention was arrested more than once daring a short visit to that place by a diabolical kind of shriek which followed after a Bat-like noise near the place I took my lodging and which from information I found was the noise or cry of the N'Deral which in the Mendi language means Boa-Con-strictor.

Now Mr. Editor, can it be possible that in the midst of civilization, and the blazing sound of the gospel, that so much of vice is encouraged in that locality?

I need hardly inform that with reference to this, many voices have been raised against your Editorial of May 15, as being very incorrect, although unforseen events come vividly into the minds of those whose views are more sensitive; and I believe our readers can now see with me that many at the time mistakingly "dreamt of heaven and made their empty boasts."

It has not yet arrived to the time specified in that issue since the many that were supposed to have been cleansed by the Mission of the Revd. James Johnson, some are now like the sow returned wallowing in the mire, forgetting that

"Not all the blood of beasts,
On Jewish altars slain,
Could give the guilty conscience peace,
Or wash away the stain."

The influence of the gospel will, and must go; but not when professors of religion are shading themselves under diabolical practices to impede its progress; until these recent societies die away, Baalim, Fangaism, Cofoeism, and all the other diabolical Isms etc, be rooted out and men depending solely upon the True and Living God who giveth good gifts to them that ask. "For the gold and silver are His, and the cattles upon a th. mand hills.

I hope for Sherbro's future blessings; and that ere long the popularity of Bonthe will be seen in the christian examples of its inhabitants, by the sacrificing of their hearts, Not Sheep—and by clinging to a holier life is my sincere wish.

AN OBSERVER.

Sherbro,
14 Aug., 1886.

Dear Mr. Editor,

I understand that Beah Boome is a Treaty Chief. If this be true, How is it possible then that no stir has been made to effect justice to poor complainants, when ever summons is issued against any of the Natives and Judgement is obtained against them; when they seek refuge in the said Beah Bome's Territory so as to evade the hands of the Law?

I shall feel extreamely obliged if some light be thrown on this matter, for the benefit of all concerned. Thanking you for the space already occupied.

Yours Truly,

SHERBRO'S DIFFICULTIES

WHAT ARE THEY!

I really fond the spirit in which the article headed "Steam Communication" was written. Believe me, it is no less than a spirit of true genuine and unspotted patriotism.

The writer impressed as he also appears to me to be with the universal belief that a steam communication between Sierra Leone and Sherbro, should and ought to be effected in lieu of the very unsafe and trying Mail boat conveyance—a conveyance wholly incompetent as respects shelter, comfort and convenience. The difficulties and disorders that now and again come accross the advancement, civilization and refinement of this small portion of the Sierra Leone Settlement are lamentable, and yet more "lamentable" shall these disorders appear not only so long as they shall remain unabated but "so long" as the rumour of war, plunder, and blood-shed among the Rival chieftains shall continue to effect the operation of trade in the countris on the Boom and Kittam Rivers. Unless I may be self opinionated I shuost feel constrained to think that Sherbro, being oftentimes misrepresented at home (in Sierra Leone)and abroad by petty vendors and pedlars who from leading a lewd life, a life of ruin, a life utterly destitute of every thing owning the name of modesty, have brought on themselves and families considerable losses in their business and therefore not been able to remain in Sherbro sufficiently long to furnish friends (at home and abroad) with any reliable information hence the place has been apparently much uncared for, not only by the Government but by various religious Denominations. This is my humble opinion, the playing critic may be otherwise convinced but I am as the French would have it shall ever maintain this opinion till convinced of another.

The system now in vegue of conveying mails to and from Sherbro in an open boat especially during this time of the season, when even conveyance from and to Freetown in navigable crafts and vessels may be considered not sufficiently reliable and safe, as they must of necessity be subjected to heavy August and September tornadoes and the tossing & foamings of the billows as well, is nighly detrimental to life, and property As it is certain that individuals who reside in Sherbro and adjacent river countries are all from Sierra Leone so equally it should be expected that these individuals may naturally entertain a desire to visit Sherbro or Sierra Leone especially, when the news of misfortune or death of a dear relative happens to reach them. In the event of the existence of any such desires, can the mail boat with her two or three days journey prove a competent conveyance? Perhaps owing to the want of a proper conveyance individuals have had to endure considerable losses in their transactions in not attending to immediate calls at Freetown some through cowardice as to running the risk of a wretched conveyance, may may have lost their chances of being employed at a handsome salary. Picture the mail boat passengers from Freetown, with the well earned expgience of a heavy tornadoes. Picture them in the boat with bodies impacted to each other to effect a sort of shelter from the cold. Picture them as they climb the steps of the Government wharf, they look staggish, seepish, and phlegmatic. Picture them under the circumstances and say if you can that a steam communication between Sherbro and Sierra Leone is unnecessary. The mails which the boat convey are also not less open to destruction by the frequent beatings of the boat to and fro, and the unlaviting dishes of the waves as they introduce themselves into the Boat. Suppose that the mails some of them contain properties of great value Bank notes, Bills of exchange and other important papers, are they not as well open to immediate losses and destructions?

Can the Government remedy the losses in case of a misfortune which one or the other individual may claim?

The idea of effecting the permanent establishment of a steam communication between Sierra Leone and Sherbro, if brought about is certain to meet with unique joy and acclamation The idea would be a grand one It is obvious that there is great inconvenience experienced and risk undergone in the conveyance of mails and passengers between these two places in an open boat

The testimonies far and wide given by the public, to the danger the heartfelt sorrow so extensively occasioned by the wretched mail boat conveyance and the excess of trouble in mind in permeating these dangers, are competent and reliable proof.

We therefore ask it as a favor, we next candide on the Colonial Government who we hope will see the necessity of effecting a steam Communication, between Sherbro and Sierra Leone. In your next I shall furnish with another of Sherbro's difficulties.

SAMMY.

The Editor "Early Dawn."

The clouds of contention which had hovered over the Political Sky of the Eastern Bargroo District, have fortunately been dispersed through an investigation made by the Authorities on Monday and Tuesday the 19th & 20th inst. when a letter was produced by the Commandant bearing date the 24th May, 1884, and having the signature of five of the principal Chiefs, (one of whom has since died, after the date of letter) purporting to have been written to the late Mr. Larbordie Commandant of Sherbro, and approving amongst other things, of his decision in appointing Conah Kambeh as native Head-woman or Ruler of that District. This letter, having been read and explained, the Chiefs shewed that the letter was written without their knowledge or consent; and it was therefore decided by the Authorities to be a fictitious letter.

Besides other charges of moneys being fraudulently received, and unlawful arrest and detention of native children by this renowned personage, it was reported in the meeting, that to still carry out her vicious design, she gave to Rogers the Government Interpreter a sheep as bribe, either that he may use his influence (if he has any) to speak in her favour to the Commandant, or that he might might misinterpret the statements made in that meeting. The animal however turned out to be Chief Peah Karl's which she had brought down without his notice, and it was therefore ordered by the Authorities to be returned.

The Commandant who is a man to do his duty seeing the state of affairs, directed that Sey Lolo and Peah Karl should take the reigns of government, pending the decision of the Administrator-in-Chief.

The Chiefs next handed to the Commandant a petition, praying for her speedy withdrawal from the Rulership of that country upon several grounds, and asking that their requests should be made known to His Excellency the Administrator-in-Chief.

On Wednesday the 22nd inst. the Chiefs, were asked to assemble when the Commandant produced another letter bearing pate 17th July 1884 and having the signatures of the before mentioned 5 Chiefs. This letter was written with a view of obtaining from the Government, a hat, a horse tail, and silver medal, as emblemic of recognition by the government of Conah Kambeh as Ruler &c, It was read and explained to them, as in the former case they denied having anything to do with this letter also.

I came in contact with the writer of this last letter a few days after the meeting, and in course of conversation, he told me that he wrote it at Conah Kambeh's request, that some of the Chiefs were present, the letter was not read to them and what is worse that they refused to sign their names. He was ordered to write down the names; Conah Kambeh dictating them to him, he did so, and left the letter with her.

May I ask then if this is not a criminal offence!

The Early Dawn.

BONTHE, SHERBRO.

AUGUST 31, 1886.

INTEMPERANCE seems to be forcing its way to the front as a question that must be dealt with by the Public Press in this dark land as well as in the more enlightened countries; strange to say that whatever has been the prevailing sentiment of many Christians at Home especially in England from whence most of the European Missionaries, have come; the missionaries have generally been on the right side of this question, and have labored zealously, earnestly and constantly for sobriety among the people coming under their influence, but have all along had the practical evil example of the Mercantile public against them, which added to that of sailors and soldiers visiting the Coast, together with the naturally depraved taste of men in a barbarous state; has been a tide that that was very hard for them stem hence the sale and use of spirits as a beverage has grown up with whatever we have of civilization as a popular thing and has in fact alied itself with commercial trade and interwoven its complex threads so into the very fabric of our society, that to speak aginst it is esteemed almost a violation of the sacred rights of men. Never was a delusion more false than this! Never was there a more poisonous Viper encoiled in a mantle! Never a more deadly Parasite grew from the Branch of any tree than this horrible curse of strong drink which now threatens the religious life of even the largest bodies in our land. What shall be done? the voices of many clergymen are silenced by the popular estimation of this serpent. Others cannot speak strongly against it, because of the Parlour gabbet. Editors for the sake of not spoiling a journalistic venture are admonished to be careful. Who then shall speak? or will we keep silent until the Hydra-headed monster, destroys our characters! prostitutes our wives, brutalizes our children, ruins the social Fabric and plunges all at length into a drunkard's grave!

THE COMMANDANT & MRS. MOSELEY EXPECTED.

We are indeed glad to learn through our London Correspondent that Mr. C. H. Harley Moseley Comd't of Sherbro, so popular among our people and yet so great an officer as well as devoted servant of Her Majesty and the general Public; has taken to himself a help meet in life, and we do most heartily congratulate him upon his success, and hope ere long again, to greet him with his lady in our midst. And we are credibly informed that they will leave England in short for this Coast.

SHERBRO, MENDI, AND BOMPEH MISSIONS.

SHAINGAY—Seems, from all Reports, on the whole to be prospering Religiously, and while those who are engaged in the Work sometimes meet with difficulties and trials which no doubt are severe we believe all will concur with us in the belief that God is working among the people indeed.

MANBOE—Enjoys the labors sacrifices and influence of that noble, servant of God the Rev. J. C. Sawyerr, assisted by Bro. J. B. Goodman, hence earnest and faithful work is being done for the Glory of God and the good of men.

KOOLONGH with OTTERBEIN—has the energetic labors of Rev. J. A. King and his estimable wife, and they seem to be on the continual war path with the enemy of God and men.—Since the above we learn that Mr. King has resigned.

MANOH.—Speaks forth the praise of Bro. T. N. Joah and wife as faithful workers in the Master's Vineyard. Somehow a hallowed influence comes from that way; may the Lord continue the same.

REMBEE—Comes next in order of age, but sorry that we have had but faint glimmerings of its work during the year, however we hope to hear good Tidings ere long from Bro. Luke.

MOPHUS—has had trials, but with all, it yet continues to prosper, we have heard of its workings several times but suggest that tidings be sent oftener.

MOCOBO—is as it were a part of Mophus and since the transfer of Bro. French to Avery, it has shared the same supervision with Mophus, we believe.

N'CHARMANNEY.—The Pastor has been much afflicted and has felt heavily the retrenchment Orders from the Home Committee; yet through clouds of darkness, storm and sun, he has constantly and faithfully held on his way, and the work has continued to increase.

TONGKALOH.—The Brother in charge has recently been talking or writing Patience and we suspect that it requires some patience to wait for the fruits of that charge. It certainly has had a rather peculiar history from the first of Trials and Tribulations as the old people used to say.

MOCAIBA MISSION—We have not heard from since the Annual Meeting, so cannot tell how it was supplied or what has been the success, perhaps some one will speak when they read this, and let us hear from Mocaiba.

TASSOH MISSION with Lesher School—have been successful under the labors of Rev. J. W. Pratt and Mrs. J. Thompson and her daughter, all of which we understand have done Noble Deeds for the Master. The School so ably conducted, is dependent upon voluntary contributions for its support, so we would again ask the generous public to send in large or small sums to Rev J. Gomer, Shaingay, for the Lesher School.

GBORKALLOH.—No tidings; but we are sure that Revd. J. Gomer has done his best for it, as it could not be supplied at the Conference, and after he has seen this, we shall hear from him.

TRESANNAH.—One of its appointments, we are sorry to hear after losing their Pastor, by removal or otherwise, had the misfortune of being plundered for witch palaver in the Yonkin Creek Aligator affair reported to us by Mr. Gomer.

KANGAMAH.—This would make a good work for some Baptist Connection, as there is much water there, and it requires a good deal of grace to travel the work at any time but more especially during the rains, however our last tidings were good from that charge.

MENDI DISTRICT.

Good Hope.—has begun a new pastorate under the charge of the Revd G. N. Jowett but so far the rains have been rather heavy to test the new arrangement however, the glorious class meetings at the Chapel of late tell of good being done in some way, but like Shaingay it has suffered drawbacks, yet upon the whole it has succeeded.

Avery,—has had continued success in almost every interest, but it is to be expected that more Itinerating will be done as soon as they can get a Boat ready for that purpose—the same being now under repair—Miss Morrison reports her School good and rather on the increase. The Pastor has recently visited Sinkim and held an interesting Service, and the people are enquiring the way of life and salvation. —Wanted him to come over and help them.

Konoonbany,—has been favored with much increase in numbers as well as interest in every way. Bro. B. seems determined to redeem the time, even though the days be evil.

Mando,—here Rev. R. C. Taylor has not slackened his hand, but has at his own expense hired an assistant, we believe, in order to better canvass his field of Itinerancy; he like Rev. H. J. Williams, has a peculiar hatred for Secret Societies, so he has been going for the Go-Yiellah

Danville—At last, reports was in a fair way to succeed only being sadly in need of funds on account of the storms destroying the roof the Mission House in the early part of the rains, also other repairs were much needed in consequence of the place having been neglected before Mr. M'Cauley was placed in charge of it.

BOMPEH DISTRICT.

Rotafunk.—There has been progress in every way according to our information from that far off country, since there has been respite from the war disturbances, Revd Chas. T. Grey assisted by Bro. Parkes we believe are in charge and Rev. J. Gomer has the oversight of the District in the absence of Revd Richard N West, Supt.

Palli—Succeeds well under the faithful pastorate of the Rev J. B. W. Johnson

Marmoo has the services of an energitic itinerant in the person of Bro. Frank M. Stewart, he was getting on well at our last hearing but we wish he could with others of that District be induced to write us frequintly

Bompeh—The Brother in charge of the school at the town of Bompeh has written us of his work and we give one of his letters in the present Issue he seems alive to the work and will no doubt succeed and shall be glad in the future as in the past to hear from him, every time.

WE solicit Reports from each of the Stations often if possible.

NEWS ITEMS.

We were pleased, to hear of safe return of Mr. S. Schmuck, Agt. Fisher & Randall Limited, York Island Factory, from the Northern Rivers about the 20th inst.

The Christian World of July 29th informs us of the appointment of Lord Salisbury by her Majesty as Prime Minister and first Lord of the Treasury &c. This appointment in our estimation, while not laying any claims to statesmanship, "or caring to dabble in political matters, seems the best for the good especially the honour of the English Government, what ever may be the opinion of many in regard to Mr. Gladstone and his policy.

MARRIED—On the 13th July 1886 at St. Mary Abbot's Church Kensington, London, by the Rev. Slater M. A., C. H. Harley Moseley Esq., Civil Commandant British Sherbro, W. C. Africa to Mary, second daughter of Joseph Wood Esq. of Portland House, Harrogate, Yorkshire.

It is reported to us that Rev. J. A. King of Koolong Station has resigned his connection.

Personal

Rev. R. C. Taylor of Mando Station spent the Sabbath Aug. 29th in this place and preached at 11. a. m in the Mendi Chapel his discourse was very good, but unfortunately the heavy rain prevented the attendance.

Corp'l J. W. Nicol gave us a couple of pleasant calls during last week, and left this place on Saturday 28th inst, returning to his post at Manoh Gbargroo, and we are glad to note here that the Corporal renders valuable assistance to our Mission work in that quarter.

Mrs F. A. Morrison—Matron of the Avery Industrial School is spending a few days in this place.

Mr F. A. Hero,—has been employed as headmaster and we believe will take charge of the Mendi Mission School about the first of September. We believe Mr. Hero's reasons for seeking this employment is that he prefers the Gospel Work.

SHENGAY ITEMS.

Regent Chief T. N. Caulker is again at Shengay, attending to the affairs of his district.

Jassah wife of the late George Dillet was brought to Shengay on the evening of the 17th inst., a corpse from Mentjbye, she will be buried today at Tassoh.

Mr. Alpheus Richards has taken charge of the Trading Factory at the Mission during the absence of Mr. Ashcroft in England.

NEW RICE is making its appearance here and soon the hungrey season will be over.

Koolong Station had its Quarterly on the 14 & 15th inst. Mr. James King and wife are doing faithful work that will bring its reward in due time. four adults men were Babtized and received into the Church.

COLONIAL AND INDIAN EXHIBITON.

SIERRA LEONE.

LONDON, JULY 16 '86.

The Prinbipal Exhibits in the Sierra Leone section, are made by the Colonial Government, and comprise specimens of a large variety of Produce including Palm Kernels, Red Pepper, Rubber, Gum, Bennie Seed, Ginger, Arrowood, Guinea Corn, Physic Nuts, and different sorts of Rough and Clean Rice, making a very excellent show; but the freedom from shell and other extraneous matters in the sample of Palm Kernels and the ripeness of the Red Peppers are rather calculated to mislead, we think that a better idea would have been obtained by the Public, had these samples been shown in their original state, as when bought, before the picking and cleaning operations had been resorted to, or had the samples the original and the cleaned been exhibited side by side. A number of roughly hewn logs of wood are shown, but we cannot help thinking that they would have looked to much greater advantage, had portions of them been polished as is done with all the Timber from the other Colonies; There is nothing so particularly entrancing in the appearance of a solid square, composed of stumpy greenish logs of wood, which probably would be passed by most persons without notice, but by giving a polish to a sectional part of each log, attention is attracted and the specimens become objects of interest at once. A small display of Gold and Silver Jewellery, is made together with several Ivory and Gold Ornaments of curious designs, but the collection of Gold shown by the Gold Coast Colony is so overwhelmingly magnificent that the exhibit from Sierra Leone sinks into complete insignificance by its side. His Excellency Sir Samuel Rowe K. C. M. G., contributes a couple of Elaborately Embroidered Chiefs Gowns Cat. No. 276 Class III. Sec. V.

Next in importance to the Exhibits of the Colonial Government are those of Mr. A.B.C. Sibthorpe who certainly deserves the highest praise for his exertions in endeavouring by his very numerous and interesting exhibits, to make this section of Exhibition a success, and we congratulate him upon the very able manner in which he has forged the valuable collection of specimens shewn by him, consisting of Fibres Minerals, Spices, Different kinds of Seeds, Fishing Pots, Nets, a most interesting Country Loom for Mat making, and a host of other things of equal interest but too numerous to give in detail.

Mr. M. S. Boyle sends samples of Raw Ginger, Yams, Coffee Long Spice and Starch made from Cassada.

Dr. Davies makes some valuable contributions in Ores.

O. A. Johnson is the only exhibitor of Chocolate, both in Cake and Powder. No. 182, Class III, Sec. I.

Mrs. Mends shews samples of Guava Jelly and Preserved Tamarinds, but we regret that owing to the smallness of the bottles, the contents are not seen to advantage.

Entomology is represented by four cases of Butterflies sent by Mrs. Bowers.

We are much pleased with the Furniture sent by Sierra Leone, the Octagonal Tables are extremely pretty and well made, while the carved wooden wind sw cornices with Blue and White Country Cloth Curtains, are charming and have been greatly admired.

AFRICANUS.

MANBO.

Had a very interesting quarterly meet. meeting there Saturday night and Sabbath morning the little Chapel was well filled and altho the rains were heavy there were people from other villages I was pleased to notice among them Mr. Robert Beckly of Manyah a native of Kent, the Sierra Leone Traders in this part of the country are quite a help to the missionary by both example and precept. It is true they sell rum which thing they ought not to do and we hope some day they will see it as we see it. Mrs. J.V. King is always in attendance when it is possible thus setting a noble example to the country women, visiting through the villages in the afternoon I came upon a case of misery intensified if such a thing is possible, a slave man two wives and four children in a mud hut, perhaps 10 ft. in diameter but no out of the top roof and the plant will soon wither, if we are to do a permanent work that we expect to stand, we must lay a solid foundation if we would raise a good crop we must have good soil, if we want the best price for our kernels they must not be shelly, the woman was the first to sin, it is true she is a step-sister from the Mission farm a few weeks ago and was caught by the Mission boys, all the children were quite naked, 2 dirty coarse mats were their only bed, spread on the dirt floor, and one 2 gallon iron pot was the furniture, there was not even the usual empty gin case to sit on. Mr. Sawyer Mr. Goodman and myself were all obliged to stand while talking to them.

We told them of a kind and loving Heavenly father and explained how sin had brought all of this suffering into the world, they listened attentively, they expressed a desire to attend meeting but no bible to wear.

How long, oh how long shall this state of things continue?

SHERBRO and the SHERBROS.

—Is the Title of a New Book by the Rev. Daniel Flickinger Wilberforce of which Bishop Flickinger D. D. speaks through the RELIGIOUS TELESCOPE in a praise worthy manner. We have not yet seen the Book but expect it will appear shortly within our reach when we hope to say our say.

OUR WOMEN AGAIN.

As hinted in my article of July 15th I have a few more thoughts to present on the same subject i. e. the Educating of our women. We claim to be Missionaries and as such our business is to civilize the heathen. We must make'war on sin and the numerous heathen customs of the country which are the enemies strong forts must be destroyed, bad both, measure can be adopted for distroying the degrading and disgraceful customs of the heathen than by Educating and civilizing the mothers of the rising generations, while I write I have in my mind three different men that were trained in Missions these three men have a plurality of heathen wives and these, have a plurality of Gods most and I beleive I may safely say all of them tie wrapper and paint their faces, there may be some exception to their painting, many of these wives have children, two of these fathers I know would like to have their children educated, and more than once or twice they have asked me to take their children in the mission but I have never seen my way clear to take them, the third father seems quite indifferent about his children. Those children are growing up in Ignorance Vice and Superstition they see very little of their father, there is no family alter, the mother has never been taught to pray except to her Greegree, her Kelle, Sebo, or Butee Sarabia.

On the other hand I might tell you of women who have been trained in Missions that have ungodly husbands and those of these women are making noble sacrifices to have their children receive a christian Education.

A few months ago a mother came to me and plead with tears that I would take her child and raise him up a Christian. The father was no use to her as he had gone off and was not a good man, she succeeded however in getting the boy in school in Freetown there is this advantage in having the mothers Educated they will teach the children themselves if they cannot get them in a school, this the fathers of such do. It is right and proper that the boys should be Educated and properly trained for not all of them go astray very many become a power for good in the Church, but what I insist on is that special attention should be paid to the Education and training of the girls in our districts. In this we are far behind all other denominations, here in Sierra Leone, the Wesleyans and the C. M. Society have their training Schools for young ladies and these Societies are a power for good in the country reasonches us that if we would destroy the tree, we must strike at the root as long as the mothers of the land remain and give life to these superstitious practices so long our labors will be to a degree useless but cut off the top root and the plant will soon wither, if we are to do a permanent work that we expect to stand, we must lay a solid foundation if we would raise a good crop we must have good soil, if we want the best price for our kernels they must not be shelly, the woman was the first to sin, it is true she is a step-sister from the Mission farm a few weeks ago and was caught by the Mission boys, all the children were quite naked, 2 dirty coarse mats were their only bed, spread on the dirt floor, and one 2 gallon iron pot was the furniture, there was not even the usual empty gin case to sit on. Mr. Sawyer Mr. Goodman and myself were all obliged to stand while talking to them.

The Rev. J. A. Evans,

Dear Sir,—I beg herewith to enclose you a P.O. O. for twelve shillings (12s.) my subscription to the "Early Dawn" for two years. I paid Three Shillings at the commencement of the Paper; since then I have not paid anything. My papers have been regular in coming in, and I am always glad to hear of affairs where twice I spent some years. I am on a short visit to my family at Fourah Bay, and shall be leaving today for Hastings. I hope some day to to have the pleasure of becoming personally acquainted with you.

With due regards to you,

I remain, Dear Sir,

BOMPEH STATION.

In taking review of the work here, for the past five months I am constrained to offer praise to almighty God for the way and manner the Lord almighty has been in our midst. It seems as if the healing power of the almighty is penetrating into the hearts of the people. I observed before, that some of them takes for their delights to go to their farm on Sundays and some to go and spend their time in palm wine bush; but now they had rather spend their time in the house of God attending Sunday morning Seekers class at 9 o'clock and 4, 30 services. The itinerating work is very encouging this encourages us that Christ who is the head of the Church has taken the work to himself.

On the 20th of June in the afternoon a man by the name of (Swa Samuah) came to me at the Mission House, and ask me how shall he manage to be in the company of those Holy Angels of which I was trying to show them. So I tried to show him as far as the Bible shows and he was quite satisfied from all this I believe that the Lord is doing miracles among us. In Bompeh Mrs Cocker who is always zealous for the work gives us great help. On the 8th inst I saw the Mission boat with Rev J. Gonger he landed at Bompeh town and then proceeded to Rotofunk on the very same day. Saturday the 10th I went to Rotofunk and on the 11th at Rotofunk Church the Sacrament of baptism and the Lords supper was administered two adults were baptised and 14 persons partook of the Lord's Supper the whole of the Service was very well attended, the Sermon was an excellent one; the attention of the congregation was very encouraging; the members of the Seekers class gave an excellent experience, they spoke about the love of God which makes me feel that the work of God shall prosper in our midst.

HUMAN ALIGATORS.

As Mrs. Johnson and a young man with a small boy were returning from Koolounge to Shaingay on the evening of the 14th inst by the beach road, the young man (Bangang) took his load across the stream at Yenkain point, the boy also crossed; Bangang then returned for Mrs. Johnson's load to carry it across for her, and as he stepped into the water to return he was suddenly caught by the leg and drawn under the water; he cried out three times and was gone. Mrs Johnson, sister of Rev. J. C. Sawyer of Mambo Mission Station according to her own report, witnessing the whole scene called aloud, cryed and prayed and then shouted and praised the Lord —The boy called to her from the opposite side of the creek to come-go, she replied that this was n t a time to go, they must sit down and see what the Lord will do for them, as the tide was ebbing, she waited until it was quite out and then crossed and reported the matter to the Chief at Shaingay, he sent men to investigate, it was quite clear that the man was taken by a human Aligator, as the track of the canoe could be seen on the mud, and as the men were crossing the creek they felt something under their feet, which aroused their suspicion, on taking it up, found it to be the body of Bangang, the neck and head had been cut off with a sharp sharp instrument, one arm also and the flesh from one leg, the blood was flowing from the wounds as if quite recently done.

This morning John Kephart, a former bostman of ours and brother of Bangang came to me to beg for work or clothes, said the chief's men plundered the town of Treasungah, the nearest town to the scene of the disaster, when the inhabitants knew that the chief's men were coming, they took all their possessions to the bush and hid them so that when they came and found the village was empty, they searched the whole out district of the accessible country,—his loss was two jumpers and one pair of trousers. This is an established law of the country of long standing, that when a human Aligator or Leopard catches a person the nearest villages must be plundered, however the chief had given strict orders that there must be no more plundering, But these are a hard people to manage, I cannot believe that the Tresannah people had any hand in this affair: it must have been strangers that had committed this act.

J. GOMER.

Mamboo, Aug. 17th 86.

Dear Brother,

I have long promised myself to write you a report of this Station, but have hitherto failed through carelessness in the attempt. Our work has not come to its best standing. I have had many drawbacks, heart rending hindrances, and dark clouds to pass through; yet I have much to be thankful for; as I am sowing the seed, and looking up to God for the blessed results. In Him is my strength. A few of our hearers are coming out to stand on the Lord's side. One especially I should like to mention, who is earnestly enquiring the way to Zion, with his face and heart thitherward. He is a Mendi man named Bangang Jannoh; but two evils are besetting him; first, he is a slave, his master will not allow him to attend our meetings (of course his master is not attending our meetings) yet he steals away and finds his way either to the Church or our home to hear of Christ, and learn the way to heaven: this Mr. Editor ought to be a shame; and one or two in this place who are free, and yet care not anything about the means of grace. Second. This man is very poor, and to use the words of one who knows something about slavery, "A slave owns nothing but his skin" (and not even that in some cases) he has a wife and three miserable, dirty-looking, nude children, and as if to complete his misery, is laboring under a sort wasting sickness. I have sometimes visited him, and must say I scarcely have seen such poverty: he has one old tattered country cloth, and one ravcled out mat; the country cloth, which when he goes out he wraps around him, then his wife is left at home entirely bare; I leave you to guess and pity the state of his children.

The Sierra Leone traders, near and a few miles from us, are doing there utmost, in cultivating the life and power of our Christian religion in their intercourse with the natives with whom they are trading. Two brothers one at Mayoro, and the other at McCombo, are holding divine services regularly in those places every Lord's Day: they are also inviting them to join in their family prayers, morning and evening; expecting in time to come, those natives will imitate the same in their homes. Another instance, J. V. King Esq. our neighbour and friend, is assisting us in our work in this Station: he gives no pity toward the Missionary Aid Society, and our Light Fund and furnishes us also with scarlet cloth for the Reading desk and Communion Table. He is desirous of the people's good, and attend meetings and keeping them orderly in the house of God.

In complying with the suggestions of our Superintendent, our church members have unitedly put forth their feeble efforts and contributed towards the Aid Society £1. 13. 6. and Light Fund £1. 1. 14. Adding to this they have also partially repaired the roof of our Chapel.

We have on our Class Rolls Mamboe Seeker's Class 72, Communicants 25, Day Scholars 35, Sunday Scholars 44, Seekers in Itinerating Places 148 —I beg pardon for weaning out your patience.

I am Dear Brother,
Yours in Christ,
J. C. SAWYERR.

HOW DOES THIS HAPPEN!

Mr. Editor—I was surprised today on being informed by an Itinerant that Yah Mamma alias Yainkain, frankly opposed the preaching of the glad tidings of salvation in her town, Sarmah. She became Headwoman of it, because it was built by her ancestors. This woman has a very peculiar appearance which tells something of her detestation of hearing the gospel preached. Her appearance is that of a man in a robust body; and I was told by a near relative of hers that she had swallowed a good deal of Country medicine and greegrees which swells up her bowels. Yah-Mamma is the name by which she is univer ally known by all this way; and has this name given her as one of distinction for her being the "Soco" or Headwoman for the "Yaesay" secret society. I cannot really account for her refusing the gospel always. She, however once told me on her being questioned that God has not done any thing for her, and that she depends always on her medicines. Her house is full of charms, greegrees, and idols, of different descriptions and in them she places implicit confidence. While there are so many in the country who have renounced these things; a few are still halting between two opinion. I greatly detest secret societies and have always been opposed to them. Ah! there are yet many Battles to fight as well as victories to gain. Therefore then,

"O ye herald of the cross, be up and doing,
Remember the great command! away!
Go ye forth and preach the word to every creature,
Proclaim it in every land."

A WATCHMAN.

Aug. 10th '86.

Mr. Editor,—A well known and skilful fisherman by the name of Fabbah met with an unprepared for death on the 20th inst. He and three others, went out early in the morning to catch fish with Cast nets, and succeeded to the joy and satisfaction of their hearts. They landed at Pobabroke, a small fish and bird island in the mouth of the Kahgborroh river, waiting for the flood tide, to return to Thebbee or Sherbro town. When the canoe, under [illegible] was drawn up high and dry, Fabbah [illegible] and [illegible] the [illegible] waves over their heads and the water a little above their armpits, unfortunately swamped, Fabbah was instantly siezed by a monster like an aligator. Alas! he screamed in vain and struggled for help, his partners were not only amazed but were stricken with fear and the chill of death. For about ten minutes, they were speechless, nervous, and motionless. This distressing news is making a deep solemn impression on all its surroundings, and connection, and none the less in the minds of all our Mission children. He was a real good-hearted friend to them. Fabbah I understand is from Russel, or Campbell in Sierra Leone. What a stroke it will be to all his home friends and relatives. 'In the midst of life we are in death." Yours, J. C. S.

An old story is being revived of a prayer-meeting held by his neighbors for the relief of a poor fellow who had accidentally broken his leg. While Deacon Brown was praying, a tall young fellow with an ox-goad nocked at the door, saying "Father could not come to the meeting but has sent his prayers in the cart." They were potatoes, beef, pork, and corn.

The Early Dawn.

BONTHE, SHERBRO.

SEPTR. 15, 1886.

We regret, that by some strange freak of fortune, many articles intended for insertion in our last issue, remained over and as a result were placed in the first page of the present issue; where dates of writing occurs they do not mislead, but where there is reference to certain instants, as in the case of the 14th inst. in the first article on Human Aligators by J. Gomer it misleads bad as August and not September was meant by the writer; of course we deplore such blunders, but cannot always avoid them, as our foreman has to do the best he can, at times, after recieving general instructions as to the make up of the paper, and we cannot always think of what is left out even when a proof sheet comes before us; while of course proof readers are not supposed to know of such things, and cannot correct them, as they neither know of the make up of the page or the dates of the events.

ARRIVAL OF THE COMMANDANT.

Since our last issue, perhaps, the most important event that has transpired in our place is the return of Mr. Moseley the New Civil Commandant who was appointed while on leave to succeed the late Mr. Laborde. Mr. Moseley has taken to himself a wife and brought her with him to increase the light of the benign influence which he himself has always shed in this community in his two previous sojourns with us. We believe we speak forth but a universal sentiment, when we say that we heartily welcome Mr. Moseley and his bride among us, and wish them abundant health and success.

KONCONANY—Since our last issue Mr. J. W. Baker who is in charge of the above named Station writes us of continued success in the Mission work in almost every way, and seems very hopeful of the future prospect of the work.

COUNTRY GAMBLERS ARRESTED.

On the morning of the 10th inst. The police were busy, picking up these chaps, about the streets and in the yards of business houses; they had been detected the night before in one or more of their accustomed haunts. We are glad that the arm of the law can be made to reach these deadly persistes of society and check at least their career for they are a nuisance to the community. Not only do these Black legs hinder the attendance of men and women from places of worship on Sundays but they divert the money of our Community from its proper channel and thereby cause no little of the want and wretchedness in the country.

RAINS AND SICKNESS.

The rains continue heavy for the most part and the weather quite changable and uncertain in other respects. The result of rain and damp, with cool winds, is chills, fevers, headaches, & many other unpleasant conditions of the human system a good deal of sickness is therefore to be found in our place among all classes foreigners and natives, seem to share alike in the matter, except that the former suffer less if any thing.

COLONIAL & INDIAN EXHIBITION.

THE GAMBIA.

London, 22. July '86.

The Gambia is to be heartily congratulated upon the very excellent display which it makes in the West African Court of the Exhibition—It is evident that much time and attention have been bestowed upon the numerous Exhibits shown in this Section. The most striking Exhibit is without doubt the beautiful Natural History Collection sent by His Excellency Captain C. A. Moloney C.M.G., the late Administrator, which is most deservedly brought prominently to the notice of the Public—this magnificent collection which occupies a great many Glass cases, shews at a glance the various Birds, Butterflies, Insects and shells which are to be found round and about the Gambia, and will be a source of enlightenment and pleasure to all those interested in this particular branch of Natural History, and who probably up till now had very dim and limited ideas of what the Gambia was capable of producing in this way. In this Section is also shewn a small but unique collection of shells, from the West Coast of Africa, exhibited by the Duchess of Montara and Montserrat. The Gambia does not show much Timber, but what little there is, is good. The choice specimens of Rosewood looked uncommonly well, and being squared and carefully got up, they showed to their best advantage, the Gambia alone sends specimens of this particular kind of wood. There are several interesting examples in Pottery, which is of a reddish colour, resembling Terra Cotta. Produce is represented by samples of Palm Oil, Palm Kernels, Ground Nuts in the shell and also decorticated,—Ground Nut Oil &c., samples are also shown of Shark oil and Porpoise oil. We were very much pleased with a small octagonal Table, inlaid with wood of various colors, and a large model of a Schooner, calls for particular comment as being a beautifully finished thing, the length is about seven feet with a centre beam of 2 feet 6 inches, and as it stands with all of its sails set, it makes a most imposing spectacle and cannot fail to attract the notice of every visitor to the West African Court.

We were very much charmed with the numerous country cloths and gowns the beauty and depth of the colour and symmetrical designs most elaborately worked, fairly delighted us, the Gambia in this industry would seem to be far in advance of Sierra Leone and even the Gallinas "print."

Many specimens of fish in bottles are shown, noticeably the Electric Cat Fish, Mud Fish and the Gambia Eel.

The Wesleyan Missions and the Catholic Mission each contribute a number of Religious Books printed in the Jolloff language,—Altogether we are greatly pleased with the Gambia Exhibits, which are most interesting, we only regret that we are unable to particularize the Exhibitors to whose Exhibits we have called attention, but unfortunately no names are attached to the labels. We are consequently debarred this pleasure.

AFRICANUS.

"To The Editor Of The Early Dawn"

Sir,—I crave herewith a space in your Valuable Journal. I am a novice in newspaper writing. Really I must confess, I feel it a pleasure to throw stones at other peoples' houses; but never take the trouble to raise up one for them to throw stones at. Of course, I don't mean that I used to criticise articles but simply reading those of others whilst I never write any for them to read. I believe this is rather unfair. Well, to come to the point, what moves me to this, a Sermon shewn me by a friend (a Subscriber of a Periodical "The Christian Herald, London,) by the celebrated Dr. Talmage.—Subject. "Behold I bid the lying one." Would that every reader of a "news Paper see this masterly piece; I believe all who are or intend sending forth Articles for this flying Roll which in its widest sense, can be no other than the "Newspaper" in whatever form or garb—will(when they should have known that they will, at a not very far period, give an account of whatever word or sentiments sent forth at the "general Inquisition) to say for the welfare of the nations" And I am so thankful to say, that the medium of your Journal as per Editorial in first issue, is solely to that end i. e. "Welfare of the nations."

Well Mr Editor as initiating into public minds permit me to do so(as craved) through your valuable journal and will be thankful to be informed from any pen, private or Official, laymen or clergy, officials or medicals or any other "sis" throughout Journalism

1.—a Freemasonery coeval with Christianity?

2.—Are the observances of both their Rites uniformly consonant to Salvation? of course, I mean the Salvation of souls.

With these I go off Mr. Editor as EARNSHAW. C.

Shaingay,
Aug. 86.

HOW DOES THIS HAPPEN?

Mr. Editor.—Having taken a careful observation of events as they happen, I am necessitated under the present circumstances to bring things to view, Since the ending of last harvest up to now, which is, properly speaking, from last January, there have been many outrages committed in this part of the country by robbers; and as I am apprised a Society was formed which is a secret one to carry out their diabolical plans, and members of the same society use charms and greegrees to protect them as they say from being caught while they rob. It was this act that was continued which brought the slaughter of a man about the town of Yarpumah, (Tucker River,) who was caught while robbing in a cassada farm and chopped to death. Even now the thieves are carrying out their plans by going out to rice farms at night and by having torches, tied on their heads they reap a good quantity of rice before day-break. I have contemplated for a while and cannot come to what is the real cause of this evil; but as one who has lived in the country for a long while, I purpose here to give my ideas respecting the cause. Now idleness is said to be the rust of time, and indeed the majority of natives are habitually idle: the public cry now is, there is no cassada. Scarcity of food I would venture to say has done a good deal to bring about thieving and stealing among the natives: the result of this in part, is laziness and unpultivation of the soil as it should. It should not be omitted that the people of Thomdale suffering from Hunger the most: Especially is this true of those living about Bembell (b"ll) and") and Bembelloh (bohoh"). It must also be remarked that there is one peculiar characteristic in the natives of Thomdale and that is debt owing. This habit, has been acquired by a majority of the leading headmen of towns which is imitated by the poorer classes too, It is this that encourages debt is taken by some whose property and estate do not value (£) one third of the debt and hence when creditors are hard on them, their whole time is giving to cutting palm nuts and gathering kernels to meet the amount of debt. Some must be so engaged that they can not find time to make farms, then the young-growing palm trees must be cut down to get from them Palm wine and Cabbages as these form one of the staple article of food, to substitute Cassada and rice. I for one, will accept any movements as touching the non-giving of Credit to the natives as by the acquirement of that habit of debt owing, many have become miserable, and most times unable to pay their debts hence, sometimes when they are asked to pay their debts, and it cannot be done as instantaneous as required, they pawn their children in order to meet up the settlement of their encounts.

I remain, Mr. Editor
Sincerely Yours,
A WATCHMAN.

MR. O. J. THOMAS.—Assistant Examining Officer, Salijah, when leaving for his new Post of Duty, gave us a pleasant call, and specially requested that his paper, The Early Dawn be continued for 1887, if by any means it should escape him to renew.

Mr. Benson S. Caulker—Bookkeeper Mendi Mission, left this place pr. s. s. John Brown, on the 6th inst for Shanigay on a short visit to his friends.

The Rev. James Boothe is expected, we learn, to return to Fouricarriah Limbah Mission shortly. It is always pleasant for us to note the return of Missionaries to their former fields of labour, as it implies their devotion to the cause.

SHERBRO DIFFICULTIES.

There are two classes of these,—our correspondent "SAMMIE" is our last issue spoke very truly of one class; but there is another that perhaps of which it has not yet occurred to any one to write, & still must have been observed, by every one who has travelled much over the Sherbro Disgicts. The difficulty to which we refer is that of the natives to dwell in peace together, there seems to be a sort SMASH-MANIA which is very contagetious; & has spread itself like dire contagion, over most of the country lying near us. This difficulty or disease consists in the desire of every man to be a King or Chief, and to obtain his desire more peacably, he removes a little distance from his native town and obtains a spot upon which to build his own place. In earlier years this greeting of new towns was not perhaps undertaken for many reasons by so many or by any with so little means and so few people hence in those former years they built more substantially and with a greater number of houses. But in these latter years the propensity to rule has so increased that fewer are to be found in each Village while their number has increased in the country almost beyond conception in fact it is difficult to walk through the bush or along the river side to the sea shore anywhere without stumbling upon some new town, Village or Farkie, each having its headman or King some of whom are so self-important as to ignore any superior Authority hence we see many disturbances arising from time to time in the native Districts every second fulgrown man you meet is a Chief or King and really there is no central authority. This too accounts for the continual breaking of treaties and at other times the apparent reluctance of many nominal Principal Chiefs in making treaties of peace or for the good of the country as they very well know—that the very Jungle is filled with insubordinate petty chiefs and headmen of self manufacture who are as likely to violate the treaty terms the next day after they are made as a dark cloud is to drop rain. This is a difficulty that is very wide spread; reaching as far as we can hear of, in fact there is no chief in all this lower coast region south of the Tucker river that has sufficient power to control the Multitudinous hoard of Bush Kings that fill the Jungle of his domains or that any civilized Government can treat with to profit and time and money thus used is worse than thrown away—i. e. if it be spent in the usual way—as no chief can keep his nominal subjects from breaking the treaty for even a single day hence if it last longer, it is only a matter of chance or providence not any power of the chief. But the question will arise is there then no remedy? To this we answer yes a simple one that is sure to cure the whole matter. an Itinerating agency of intelligent persons Missionaries would be better that would regularly visit the country towns Villages and Farkie whose business it should be to teach peace; and as there is no better peace than that of the son of Peace even the Gospel of Christ we should recommend it as the CURE ALL for these troubles. And to this end would invite and even urge the attention of Foreign and Local Missionary societies to the to the importance of Multiplying, not Kidgloved Drawing room Missionaries, but good plain christian men, able to walk and to rough it through the swamps and jungle, that will preach Christ and His peace, to the degraded heathen that inhabit the Multiplicity of Country Towns and Villages.

THE CROSSINGS AT CUT-OVER.

Dear Mr. Editor—Since I wrote in your issue of 30th June, respecting the dangerous state of the crossings at the Cut Over, to Mocolo, and failed the attention of the Overseer of Roads to the same, no steps whatever have been taken to put the place in proper order. I have been fortunate enough to find the cause of this delay, and I must in justice exonerate Mr. Walker the Overseer of Roads from all blame.

Is it because the Officer who was in charge of the Government here had no authority to do so? If so, by is not to be blamed, the blame must rest somewhere else.

But now that our worthy and indefatigable Commandant Mr. Moseley has returned to this place, and as he is known as a man who is not in the least careless about keeping the place in a healthy condition, I hope his first act of gratitude to the suffering public who cross to and from Mocolo, at ebb tide will be, the repairs of the crossings at the Cut Over and I am sure it will last in their memory as a token of gratitude and due appreciation of their lives.

I hope this my second letter about the Cut Over crossings will not pass unheeded as "prevention is better than cure" the lives and limbs of men are sacred. Thanking you for space occupied.

Yours as usual
JUSTITIA.

"To The Editor Of The Early Dawn"

Dear Sir,—I am very sorry to inform you that I was taken ill at the close of the month of June. And I am not yet fully recovered. Also that I am bereaved by death of my dear brother Samuel Lewis, who departed this life June 4th 1886.

On the 25th of April a quarterly meeting was held here by the Revd J. Gomer, during which it pleased God, to select me as an Exhorant to seven villages.

On the Sabbath following the morning Service was conducted by the Revd J. Gomer. At the close of the Service he administered the Lord's supper, assisted by the Revd J. C. Sawyer, who also baptized ten persons. This was the largest and most interesting gathering we had then had from the beginning of the present year; surely the Holy spirit was present with us in life giving power. It is good for every servant of Christ to labour on faithfully in the face of disencouragements, and opposition, and patiently wait for the results.

The evening service was conducted by S. H. Ashcroft Esq. The villages alloted to me were Marthyn, Mocombo, Pangkah, Moryah, Mogoyaing, Caurray Sumanah and Mongray. Before my illness I together with Charles Vherro had been visiting these places, where we met with earnest hearers. Except in Caurray Sumanah, where we met with great many discouragements. Two thirds of the inhabitants are under the sway and controll of the mohamedan religion. In the last named village I met a woman, although poor and sickly as she was, there were marks of real kindness in her face. I once requested of her to offer prayer, and in her prayer she said "O Jesus master look upon me for I am a sinner; be my friend and my doctor."

It is a fact some of my country people have more faith in mohamedanism than in Christianity; and it needs the united prayers and efforts of all sincere Charistians to put a stop to all false religion in this country. The religion of Christ is what my people need and God has it for them as well as other nations.

Yours truly
John J. Lewis.

To the Editor of "The Early Dawn."

Dear Mr. Editor—I wrote you an article bearing the signature "A British Subject," which appeared in your paper of July 31st, about the newly established Purrah called "Go Yellah", how effective it is rooted, you will be surprised to learn that on the 30th of July, three Sierra Leoneans were going to join this Devilish assembly, more also the ring leaders of them are Sierra Leoneans, one born in Freetown where the light of the Gospel is now ever shining, and the others are villagers. That day was their great Meeting Day, when the two Chiefs F. T. Caulker and Canray Bassy had overlaid themselves with Sebbehs and other dazzling charms set themselves upon their heap of destruction and desolation called a Throne. Then they ordered their warden bring the 3 Sierra Leoneans and when they enquired of them for their certificate of which they had not, they send them back that they should obtain certificate or recommendation from their land lords before they will be admitted. So they were not admitted that day until the next meeting which did not take place. After the meditations of the natives came to my place, and he told me that they are going to have three Sierra Leoneans the next meeting. The next day one of the Sierra Leoneans came to me, and I asked him what is the use of joining such heathenish practices? he told me that they can take all advantage over the natives in any act of cruelty or such like without any enquiry. I told him that they were crucifying an afresh in this Themdale District. Now there was a great contention between Confusion the arch Chief at Bombelloh and the "Gopalish" members, for speaking the truth contrary to their "One Word." If a member has any matter with one who is a member, he is to be in the wrong—Why? be he is no member, for which this Chief as a lover of truth, was against, and was compelled to resign their membership, he is deprived of the fit to which the general Chief of this country had conferred upon him, and that is the reason why the Parrish is not taken off about Bombelloh, and Palm Nuts are lying waste while the poor people are dying with starvation. There is nothing that will put down this strong hold of Satan except the name Jesus. The Sierra Leone people of this place utterly forget themselves in buying and selling on Sunday, & mingling themselves with all heathenish practices. I believe that that there is no Mission Station in this part of the Themdale country, we (I for one) cry as the people of Macedon to say Mission to come over and help us.

More of this in my next. Thanking you for the space allowed me in your valuable journal.

I am yours truly,
J. J. DOOMARDEY.

One of our sextons, in making his report of burials, is explicit to a commendable degree. For instance, such entries as this occur: "Died, John Smith; male; aged three days; unmarried."

"Everything has gone so smooth to day," said a little girl; "all my lessons in school were perfect, I helped clear away the dinner things, I have learned my Bible verses, and I have 'most done my knitting; and it is because I feel willing-hearted to-day."—

"Mother" said a dear little child one cold night, waking up as her mother went through the chamber, "I asked God to take care of some poor child to night, and I told him to-morrow I would try to hunt her up and help her, too."

A woman returning from market got into a South Hill-Street car the other day with a basketful of dressed poultry. To her the driver, speaking sharply, said, "Fare?" "No," said the woman, "fowl." And every body cackled.

At about the hour of five,
A flaggy craft like a hearse,
Propelling from Bonnighton's point,
Like a dancing princess with silver joint.

2. A minute or two later, I heard
A sound as the horn of a shepherd,
Feeling forth from corner to corner,
And the inhabitants of Bonthe
Were thronging from streets and lanes,
To behold a grand spectacle.

3. About [illegible] evening, I saw
And [illegible] silver white yacht
Advancing on the gentle waters to anchor.
The [illegible] Monday,
And with [illegible]
I beheld the object of my expectation complied.

4. My eyes I did believe not,
But took a First Class telescope,
And observed Consul. Moseley & suite.
The former clad in a most elegant Ocanian
The latter in the latest Paris fashion.
With a beautiful well selected CHAPEAU

5. As soon as the vessel anchored,
The Government Boat was grounded,
With [illegible] and the public,
The Acting Commandant and Assistant
Went on board, and the Sub Collector and Treasurer
Followed afterwards in his quiet way.

6. The Police Constables in their full dress,
Marched down the wharf and
Saluted Commandant Moseley & suite,
As soon as they were passing by them.
The Bugler then followed in
The usual way and all was well done.

7. Hurrah! Hurrah!! Hurrah!!!
For Commandant Moseley, who is
A kind hearted gentleman, taking
Interest in every one, rich or poor,
And by this, God has promoted him,
To the post of Civil Commandant.

8. Hurrah! Hurrah!! Hurrah!!!
Thus shall it be done to the man
Whom the Lord delighteth to honor;
To him and wife long life we pray
Good health and prosperity also
With children to crown their heads.

FRIENDSHIP.

Friendship, which is an alliance the sweetest and noblest upon the face of the earth, is a combination, the principles of which are mutual esteem and love. These are its two grand constituents; and without this condition, it is like a tender shrub trembling in the breeze, unable to stand before the storm of adversity and is exposed to annihilation from the least breath of jealousy or suspicion. Hence the ephemeral duration of those connexions called friendly; today they live and blossom, but to-morrow they die. The worm of envy feeding upon the vitals of their existence has terminated the union. Selfishness had supplanted attachment, and in the bosom where love glowed rancour dwells. But when the principle is compounded of esteem and love, friendship is secure, both from sudden and gradual extinction. Love is efflorescent, it burns intensely and is often consumed in its own ardour. It is a weak passion and blind. It is raised by the appearance of those soft and amiable qualities which play upon the strings of the heart. A disposition to please developed by a person in conversation with us, often excites our ardent attachment. His language enchants, his politeness irresistibly delights, his gentlemanlike attainments overpower, in every respect, he is one of whom we are fond and who is qualified for a companion. Like when separation between the generality of lovers, absence is an infernal of misery, as warmly is heart united to heart. The union might continue, were not a disclosure of his character gradually made. But when this takes place, the warm bands of attachment generally melt; drop falls after drop till coherence is destroyed. Why it may be asked, does love thus quickly die away? Because it is not strengthened with esteem. The charms of conversation will not atone for concealed deformity of heart, the graces of politeness may be only the varnish of immoral conduct and ornamental acquirements the wretched substitution for useful knowledge. The discovery of a character which is so lovely on one side and so disreputable and odious on the other, [illegible] to break up the connexion. Love not thus supported by esteem, or friendship must fall. This compound principle must be its basis, if permanency be intended. When friendship is thus grounded what association is so noble? Can kings boast so valuable an acquisition as that of a friend? A crown is a brilliant pageant, a throne is the seat of supreme authority is wielded; but is any occasion to such power and splendour, comparable with that of a friend? A crown imposes so heavy a responsibility, as often to distract and defect the head of the wearer—thrones are often, like the rocking tower, shaking by convulsions of nature. But considering them in their most favorable aspects, what do they confer? Do they make any accumulations to the happiness of the possessor? Alas! they are merely the symbols of drawbacks upon his felicity—giving in exchange for the composure of mind which he surrenders. Does a throne then exclude friendship? Not necessarily. But by whom is it surrounded? With mercenary characters—Men who court the favour of their sovereign as means of advancing their respective interest. Among such, few kings can therefore congratulate themselves on the enjoyment of a friend, and few subjects, however exalted their station, on being the friends of their royal master. The excellence of established friendship consists, independently of its utility and pleasures, in its superiority over the destructive power of time. It is not broken by the darts of death. The kings of terror may exhaust all his strength in vain to destroy the amicable and interwoven relation between two kindred spirit, but destroy it he cannot; all that he can do is to interrupt the relation for a season, by his malignant visit. Such a relation on earth, between two pious individuals, is only the commencement of never-fading friendship in the oven. It is the origin of a celestial harmony of souls, progressively increasing to all Eternity. Now, I ask, what can be more noble or more exalted than a congeniality of this kind? It is heaven begun upon earth. And the Almighty Father will look down from above with ineffably glorious smiles of approbation upon his children who thus live together in love.

THE FATAL GLASS OF GROG

By Rev. E. J. Richmond.

It was not an unusual thing for Mr. Bender, the mate of the good ship Peace, to indulge in a glass of grog; indeed, it would have been a very unusual thing for a day to pass without that indulgence, so freely are the shades of night fired; but to-day he took a stiffer glass than usual. What mattered the weakness of the mate so long as Captain Barton, the owner of the ship, was a sober, Chris-

A Pretty Picture the Cabin Presented,

a real home scene; for Captain Barton had not only the soul of his home, but his little world with him. The fine ship was his fortune, it was a little [illegible] had he had permitted the insurance to expire and was attempting this one voyage before he insured again; but he dismissed the troublesome thought as he kissed the baby, Jessie, in the air and listened delighted by her "da-das" and "goo-goos," which seemed more musical than any language he had ever heard spoken. Dick, a manly little fellow of three years, was busy at work fashioning a boat, while mamma, with a [illegible] brightness in her eyes, sat at the table busy over her work basket.

"How industrious you are, little wife" Captain Barton said in a rallying tone. "Come, put away the work, and let's enjoy ourselves, Bender is to have charge of the ship to-day. So you have enjoyed your visit to mother, and are content to go home"

Mrs. Barton's eyes were brimming with tears, while a smile was on her lip as she answered: "You'll think me silly, dear, but I am trying to forget. That is why I am so industrious. No other place will ever seem so dear to me as my native city, though our Southern home is beautiful. Now that you own this good ship our future looks bright, and I am very happy... And the tears were dashed away.

They were off Barnegat Beach, a dreaded locality for mariners, but fifty years ago, the date when these events transpired, much more dangerous than now. "Yes we are all here," he answered, unclasping the hands which had fastened themselves in his hair, "and, as you say, the future looks bright for—" and Captain Barton rushed upon deck to find his good ship amidst the breakers. The lookout had warned the half-tipsy mate of the impending danger, and been bidden with a volley of oaths to "attend to his own concerns, life was in charge." Poor Bender was sobered now. The ship was fatally broken on the hidden rock on which she had struck, and the deck presented a scene of wild confusion.

Mrs. Barton heard the terrible roar of the breakers and the confusion on deck and was conscious that the ship was slowly sinking. The water was even creeping over the cabin floor. She lifted her children into the lower berth, and as the water increased in the upper berth a gent, which had the freedom of the Ship, crept up beside her for safety.

One of our sextons, in making his report of burials, is explicit in a commendable degree. For instance, such entries as this occur: "Died, John Smith, male aged three days: unmarried."

"Everything has gone so smooth to day," said a little girl; "all my lessons in school were perfect. I helped clear away the dinner things, I have learned my Bible verses, and I have 'most done my knitting; and it is because I feel willing-hearted to-day."—

"Mother" said a dear little child one cold night, waking up as her mother went through the chamber, "I asked God to take care of some poor child to night, and I told him to-morrow I would try to hunt her up and help her, too."

A woman returning from market got into a South Hill-Street car the other day with a basketful of dressed poultry. To her the driver, speaking sharply, said, "Fat." "No," said the woman, "fowl." And every body cackled.

THE FATAL GLASS OF GROG

By Mrs. E. J. Richmond

It was not an unusual thing for Mr Bender, the mate of the good ship Fame, to indulge in a glass of grog; indeed, it would have been a very unusual thing for a day to pass without that indulgence, as firmly are the chains of habit fixed, but to day he took a stiffer glass than usual. What mattered the weakness of the mate so long as Captain Barton, the owner of the ship, was a sober, Christian man.

Captain Barton was down in the cabin enjoying the society of his wife and children, who were just returning to their Southern home from a visit to Mrs. Barton's mother in New York, and Mr. Bender was in charge of the fine new vessel, which seemed strong enough to defy the fiercest storms.

A Pretty Picture the Cabin Presented, a real home scene, for Captain Barton had not only the soul of his home, but his little world with him The fine ship was his fortune It was a little injudicious, but he had permitted the insurance to expire and was attempting this one voyage before he insured again; but he dismissed the troublesome thought as he heard the baby, Jennie, in the air and listened delighted by her "ditdas" and "goo goos," which seemed more musical than any language he had ever heard spoken. MANY subscribers are now renewing their subscriptions to this Journal; and others are becoming subscribers to it and many are the Encomiums pronounced by those who write the Editor concerning the enterprize. All of which are encouraging to the Editor and the promoters of the undertaking yet as much more will be needed to make the paper al that it should be, we ask our friends and patrons help to Roll up the List of Subscribers, which can be easily be done by doing as Mr. D. W. Du ing, Mr. Z E T. Williams, Mr. J. W. Baker and others, who have sent us the names of their friends.

We have given place to several Articles in this issue on or relating to the Comdt's return more out of our high regard to Mr. Moseley and the good intentions, as we believe, of the writers rather than the real merit of some at least of the productions, and this is especially true, with regard to the one on the first page, we make this explanation to avoid what would otherwise be the subject of just, and may be severe criticisms, h ping our readers will bear with us for this time.

COMMDANT MOSELEY'S RETURN.

TOWARDS sunset on the evening of the 6th. inst., Mr. Moseley now Commandant of the District, who had been away for about eleven months, for the benefit of his health, accompanied by Mrs. Moseley, landed from the Colonial Steamer the Countess of Derby,—meeting a splendid reception. The Chief of the District and his bride were escorted on shore by the Asst. Col. Surgeon, and the Acting Sub-Treasurer and Collector, who had gone off to receive them At the landing were the subordinate officers of the various Departments, who e cordial welcome was acknowledged with much affability by the distinguished pair. A few yards above this party, drawn up in a line, and looking smart and tidy in their uniform were the Police Constables who, as the procession moved along their line, in the most appropriate style, paid the respect due to rank on the occasion.

Dr. Jarrett had the honor of receiving Mr. and Mrs. Moseley, and putting them up for a few days. This was an unavoidable circumstance, the arrangements in view of their advent not having been completed when they arrived.

The evening being fine, the whole community of Bonthe was soon active in consequence of the news of the event spreading. By 7 o'clock, no less than 300 to 400 people mostly of the aboriginal portion were assembled in front of Dr Clot Jarrett's house eager to testify their joy as well as to gratify their curiosity. As might have been expected, the most of the crowd lost no time in joyful demonstrations as soon as they caught sight of the newly arrivals, who from their elevated position were enjoying the spectacle below. It was moonlight and this added to the enjoyment of the hour. There was singing, dancing and gesticulating, and in other primitive ways the merry makers expressed their merriment to the delight of the spectators, and all for the entertainment of Mr. and Mrs. Moseley. Things went on like this until past 10, when enough having been seen and done of native custom for the occasion, these sons and daughters of the soil were in need to depart for the night.

On the afternoon of the following day the 7th Mrs. Moseley gave an "At Home" to the Public Officers at which all attended. Much real pleasure was enjoyed on the occasion, as it gave both to the inviter and the invited an early opportunity of becoming acquainted the one with the other. The result of this meeting and subsequent ones as we learn with great pleasure is that Mrs. Moseley's character as a lady as well as her unfeigned interest in the people among whom she has come to sojourn becomes established

Earlier in the afternoon the Trade s were represented by J.B. Wright Esquire, J.P., Mr. C. B. Collier and a few other gentlemen. An appropriate address of Welcome was delivered on the occasion.

On the following day, the 8th a shed having been erected and tastefully decorated as far as the weather allowed Mr. and Mrs. Mosley were invited there by the Public Officers, who entertained them for about half an hour, which was occupied in delivering a welcome address prepared for the occasion, and in listening to the encouraging reply of Mr. Moseley. The day was wet and the time occupied in getting through the ceremony had to be scatched amidst the drizzle. Too much cannot be said in praise of Mr. J. F. Brown the Acting Sub-Treasurer for his Artistic skill and good taste in getting up this place while both the address and its masterly delivery by Mr. H. R. Williams the Postmaster were to the point.

Mr. Moseley's reply to his Officers as that to the Traders on the previous day was full of sympathy and encouragement to individual effort as well as to combined action. It may not be amiss to ask that these addresses be furnished for publication with due comment at the next issue of this paper, so that the General Public may share in the worthy feelings which find expression in them and which were evidently the result of Mr Moseley's popularity in the Sherbro District.

COLONIAL AND INDIAN EXHIBITION.

THE GOLD COAST.

LONDON, 30. July 1886.

If we may judge from the magnificent Exhibits of Golden Ornaments and Nuggets shown in this Section, we can fairly assert that the Gold Coast does not belie its name, for it would indeed be a task of no ordinary difficulty to get together a collection of more grandeur than is here shown. The Gold Coast has fairly surpassed itself, and deserves the very greatest praise. The exquisite Natural Colour of the Gold is peculiarly fascinating and defiases a round the Exhibits, so to speak, a tone of musical softness and extreme delicacy, which is greatly admired and commente l upon by the thousands of visitors who daily flock to this great National Exhibition.

The first two cases contain the Barbaric Ornaments paid by the King of Ashantee as a portion of the indemnity claimed at the close of the war in 1874, consisting among the great many other things, of several very massive circular pieces of embossed gold of large dimensions. Some being fully four inches in diameter —a bunch of golden bells, gold padlocks, gold dust, gold buttons of every conceivable shape which are so numerous as to fill several bowls, neckiets, which must weigh not ounces but pounds, and lastly the celebrated Golden Axe, which, by the way is somewhat disappointing as instead of being all gold as one might be led to suppose, it is nearly the handle which in three Sections is encased in thin precious metal, the intervening spaces being covered with Leopard Skin, the whole handle is about two feet long—axe itself is simply a rudely native made chopper of country iron, the whole thing has a strangely savage appearance, but seems quite in keeping with the huge Royal Umbrella which was captured at Coomassie in 1873, and which stands open, by the side of the Ashantee Gold towering high above it. This Umbrella and the Golden Axe, have been graciously lent to the Royal Commission by Her Majesty the Queen, and by the aid of these two Exhibits alone, the Public is enabled to form a pretty fair idea as to what extent civilization has penetrated into this part of Western Africa.

Passing on we come to some Grand Specimens of Quartz, simply alive with Gold, from Crocker's Reef, Wassaw, and which is Exhibited by that old and renowned Firm, Messrs F. & A. Swanzy, Mr. G. F. Cleveland shows a string of Thirty Six large Nuggets, Mrs. Addo, a string of 133 smaller nuggets and Mr. T. F. Brace who is by far the largest native contributor, exhibits a very varied and choice collection of Jewellery, comprising massive Albert Chains beautiful Gold Beads, and Trinkets of all kinds and descriptions. This gentleman also sen ls some well made and curious examples of silver work, noticeably a bunch of about Sixty Silver keys —Mr. F. Swanzy, Mr. J. F. Crocker, and Mrs Clavver each make a superb displays of Gold Jewellery of the most varied descriptions and massive to a degree. Lady Marshall and Miss Marshall also make handsome Exhibits of Gold Watches, Rings and Trinkets, and the Gold Coast Commission shows a numerous collection of personal ornaments in gold, which are the only articles marked as being for Sale.

Sir James Marshall C.M.G., the courteous and indefatigable Executive Commissioner for the West Coast of Africa, shows among the miscellaneous Exhibits, a small collection of Ashantee brass figures used by the Natives as Gold weights, a very curious Ashantee wooden ladle of grotesque design for measuring Gold taken at Coomassie. An Ivory War horn taken in 1873 which is so deeply encrusted with blood that scarcely any part of the Ivory is visible. 3 small cases of stuffed birds of brilliant plumage and many different "Fetishes". Lady Marshal exhibits the Tail of an Elephant, while Miss Marshall shows a curious musical instrument consisting of a small slab rately carved grained having a netting of beads, which is used during the performance of the celebrated Adoukin dance. Mrs. Elliott sends two large glass cases of stuffed birds from Cape Coast of unusually gay plumage, some very choice examples of Black Pottery from King Koffee's Palace at Ashantee are exhibited by the Duchess of Mantua and Montserrat. Mr. G. F. Cleveland sends a Stake Stool having a Superabundance of massive Silver ornamentation all over it and a most heterogeneous collection of Tom Toms models of canoes, wooden stools of every shape and style help to make up the Exhibits in this particularly interesting Section. we must not however omit to mention the large exhibit of Messrs. F. Schroder and Co., which is a careful compilation of the principal products to be found on this part of the West Coast and are shown together in an imposing glass case, This most interesting and instructive Exhibit consists of Cotton, Ginger, Coffee, Copra, Orchella weed, Palm Oil, Palm Kernels, Guinea Grains, Chilies Rubber, Calabar Beans, and Gum Copal, to which may be added a small Selection of Gold ornaments, and a few Leopard and Monkey skins.

Gentlemen,

Circumstances in some measure compels us to write and report the conduct of Kong Gbuyah's people they loaded ten canoes with so many troops and landed at Tombay they say that they come to take their Chief either willing or not they must have him. Had it not been for one Mr. S. A. Pratt Agt. for S. R. A. Mosley who threatened them "that if they do but say anything he will have to blow up their canoes with canon" before they went away, But now they are gathering troops to come and see weather they can be able to Bombard the place now we have to set a watchman every night to watch the place, so you can easily put this before the Commandant's hearing.

Yours truly.

THE COMMANDANT'S RETURN.

The return of Mr. C.H Harley Moseley as Commandant of the Sherbro District has been made the occasion of much popular demonstration; and the feeling it has evoked is as widespread as it is just. For the space of 15 months when he held the acting appointment here, Mr. Moseley exposed such qualities as won the confidence, respect and attachment of all; and now that he has attained to the position which, by his ability, his patience, and his devotion to duty, he most justly deserves, it is fitting that hearty congratulations should be tendered to him from every quarter. That Mr. Moseley has the interest of Sherbro at heart, cannot for one moment be doubted; the enthusiasm with which he has been welcomed by all classes speaks for itself. It would be difficult to find another Commandant, I will not say so efficient—(for there have been others as efficient as he)—but so efficient and popular together, who could so successfully awaken such an appreciation of his services as the numerous proofs of which this Isle is composed. In a community where there are such diversities of interests and aims, it is no easy matter to weld together the jarring elements that must underlie such a society as this. But the Commandant has sufficiently shown that he can steer clear of the Scylla of racial animosities, on the one hand, and the Charybdis of social jealousies on the other. Not the least feature in Mr. Moseley's character is the honor and respect he pays to religion. He has wisely recognised in the Church a factor which cannot lightly be dispised, whether for one's personal benefit, or the spiritual and moral advancement of the community at large; and if he is actuated by deeper feelings of reverence for his Creator and genuine faith, as we do not for one moment doubt, he cannot but be prosperous all through his career.

Mr. Moseley has a ble l to his happiness —abride; an amiable and accomplished lady who, by her winning ways and suavity of manner "wreathed smiles," has already won the admiration of all —Mrs. Moseley does not repel, but attracts; and if she adheres to that centripetal line of action which she has so generously commenced,—the hearts of many will beat faster and faster with earnest and fervent wishes for her welfare. We welcome Mr. Moseley back as Commandant of the Sherbro District—with slumber health, than when he left as last year. We tender to his charming bride and himself our warmest congratulations, we wish them long life, in our midst, and God speed.

A WELL WISHER.

To the Editor of the Early Dawn.

Dear Mr. Editor,—Will you kindly find a small space in the columns of your valuable Journal for this piece of news which I hope will amuse your readers.

For the past few months our friend at Gbarlaibor has been very much cast down since the arrival of a gentleman who has just taken charge of one of the Trading Factories of P. Z. & Co., in this locality; the reason for his being thus cast down is, that previous to this gentleman's arrival he has been blowing his horn in the Sherbro language to the poor ignorant people that he is "Gbarbk," he is "Smoking"—i. e. "He is a rich man,"—that he has "ranged" Keal te Payt, which means "that he has built a stone House," (which is not his, he is only an occupant pro tem), and that he has also a "Pussyt," [Harmonium.]

The poor ignorant people hearing him make such self lauditations, flocked to his place where he takes the highest advantage of them by treating them as he likes.

Fortunately a relief to the people arrived in the person above named, who treats them with the highest courtesy and respect, (although they are natives) and thereby secures their confidence.

This extraordinary Gbarlaibor chief who is well known among civilized and native people as a bragger, and boaster &c., and who thinks that his present position will last for ever, is now mild in his demeanour.

He is to be seen now and then in the small Factory adjacent to his Factory, using kind words to the people that they should not forsake him, and I hope the lessons he has learnt from the new comer will teach him that it is not self but Union that makes a man become popular, but by "doing to others as he would be done by."

I wish the newly arrived gentleman success in his undertakings. "A hint to the wise is sufficient" Let him read Prov. xxvii. 1—2.

Yours Mc. Editor,
TRUTH.

The infant mission at Mo Moseley under the auspices of the Wesleyan connexion is rapidly growing. It is reported that the Rev. J. C. Thomas visited that station on the 19th inst. where he preached morning and afternoon to a large and interesting congregation of natives. Marked attention was given and the preached word appreciated. George Tucker the first convert of that mission retains his integrity, and is doing his utmost by his example to bring others to Christ. The Day and Sabbath Schools are prospering under the supervision of Mr. Macauley the Catechist.

Mr. J. A. Williams has presented a few pieces of cloth on behalf of the unclothed children who attend both school and service, which will be made up into shirts for the boys, and other clothing for the girls by the sisters of the Dorcas society formed here some months ago.

THE FATAL GLASS OF GROG

Still the water was rising. "Merciful Heaven! need they die thus in the sight of the shore?"

An umbrella hung on brackets beside her. She seized this and frantically pounded a glass in the roof. Already Captain Barton convinced that his ship was lost, had said, "We must save my wife and children."

The waves broke ruthlessly over the deck as they were brought above, and the small boat with a seaman aboard was tied to the stern.

Mrs. Barton was securely lashed to the side of the vessel, and saw her children tossed to the man in the boat. The baby was thrown first, but fell into the water blown down the sank, but the brave strong father in after her. He has caught one little boat, and now, with the little innocent in his arms climbs into the boat. She is saved!

Little Bob fares better, He lands safely in the bottom of the boat. And now comes the command to the poor half-drown mother! "Drop—let go!" and dropping into the sea, she is caught in her husbands arms and borne into the boats. A little later they were safely landed on a desolate beach, and Found at Last a Fisherman's Hut.

Chilled and drenched with salt water though they were, no change of clothing could be obtained, and when Mrs. Barton's torn dress was dried at last she mended it with a piece of sail cloth. Shoes for the little ones she made from the same coarse material, thankful for deliverance from the cold, hungry waves, though they had swallowed up all their much prized earthly possessions.

Tidings of the wreck soon reached a neighbouring town, and people came flocking to the shore. The sign of distress known only to the initiated was given by Captain Barton and he found himself as a freemason surrounded by brothers. These procured a convey and took to the city from which they had started with such high hopes only a few hours before.

Mrs. Barton's mother sat at the window of the house from which her beloved daughter had so recently gone out, brooding over the separation, yet cheering herself with the reflection that, though separated, fortune smiled up on her, when a carriage stopped before her door. The child-face at the window took on strangely familiar, and a gentleman helping a lady down who wore a calico sun bonnet and draggled dress "How like he was to Captain Barton! But that was folly."

Suddenly the bonnet fell back, and the fair face of her daughter was revealed. She was now by her side, exclaiming, "My children! What can this mean?"

When they were again within the door shelter which Mrs. Barton had left so reluctantly, Captain Barton said solemnly. "Thank God! mother, my treasures are safe. We have been wrecked, and my earthly possessions all lie at the bottom of the ocean. And it is all due to Mr. Reader's fatal glass of grog."

DEATH, the Great THRASHER.

It is also true, in grace as in farming, there is a time for thrashing. I tell you bluntly that is death. Just as a farmer with a flail beats the soul out of the straw, so death beats the soul out of the body. Every sickness is a stroke of the flail; and the sick bed is the thrashing floor. What say you is death a good man—only taking the wheat out of the straw? That is all. An aged man has fallen asleep. Only yesterday yen saw him in the sunny porch, playing with his grand children. Calmly he received the message to leave the world. He bid a pleasant good bye to his old friends. The telegraph carries the tidings, and on swift rail trains the kindred come, wanting once more to look on the face of dear old grandfather. Brush back the gray hairs from his brow; it will never ache again. Put him away in the slumber of the tomb. He will not be afraid of that night. Grandfather was never afraid of anything. He will rise in the morning of the resurrection. Grandfather was always the first to rise. His voice has already mingled in the doxology of heaven. Grandfather did always sing in church. Anything ghastly in that? No. The thrashing of the wheat out of the straw. That is all. The Saviour folds a little lamb to his bosom; the little child filled all the house with her music, and her toys are scattered all up and down the stairs just as she left them. What if the hand that plucked four o'clocks out of the meadow is stiff? It will wave in the eternal triumph. What if the voice that made music in the home is still? It will sing the eternal hosanna. Put a white rose in one hand and a red rose in the other hand, and a wreath of orange blossoms on the brow; the white flower for the victory, the red for the Savior's sacrifice, the orange blossoms for her marriage day. Anything ghastly about that? Oh, no. The sun went down and the flower shut. The wheat thrashed out of the straw. "Dear Lord, give me sleep," said a dying boy, the son of one of my elders; "dear Lord give me sleep," and he closed his eyes and awoke in glory.

Henry W. Longfellow, writing a letter of condolence to those parents, said: "Those last words were beautifully poetic." And Mr. Longfellow knew what is poetic. "Dear Lord, give me sleep."

"Twas not in cruelty, not in wrath
The reaper came that day;
'Twas an angel that visited the earth
And took the flower away."

So it may be with us when our work is all done: "Dear Lord, give me sleep."—Sel.

A CONSCIENCE TROUBLED MAGISTRATE.

A Jeweller had occasion to travel in the way of business, taking with him many valuable things, Watches rings, Precious stones, and so on. He was accompanied by a journeyman, who knew what his master had with him. On the way, the servant, watching his opportunity, snatched a pistol from the masters saddle—it was dangerous to travel without arms in those days—and shot him dead. Then he rifled him of all his money, jewels, and precious things, hung a large stone to the body, threw it into the nearest canal, and made off to a distant part of the country. It was in the old days when there was little communication between one part of a country and another, when there were no railways, nor telegraphs, nor police, only stage coaches, carriers Waggons, and Village constables. Thus he set up business, in a small way at first, to avoid suspicion, and gradually increased it, till he became one of the foremost men in the place where he lived. No doubt he must have thought upon his crime sometimes, but his conscience grew harder and harder like the freezing ice on the pond, and gave him less and less trouble as time went on. Besides, so foolish was he, he did all sorts of good works with his money, and lived respectably in the hope that that would be a satisfaction for his wickedness, He prospered so well, and was thought so much of, that in the end he was chosen chief Magistrate of the place. In that capacity, he was reckoned a good and fair man, who did his best to administer the law to rich and poor alike. One day, as he sat on the bench with his fellow-Magistrates, there was a man brought before him accused of murdering his master the evidence was clear, and the people in court waited with great suspense to know what the sentence would be. But what is this! the chief Magistrate cannot be well. How ashy pale his face is! how he shakes and trembles! What dreadful contortions pass over his countenance! the conscience that was nearly asleep, is now aroused and speaks, not in whispers but in thunder tones, "Wilt thou pass sentence on this wretched murderer! Thou! Thyself a murderer!" The miserable man could no longer rest in peace, but went forward and took his place by the prisoner in the Dock and confessed that, thirty years ago, he had been himself guilty of murdering his master just as this man Enquiry followed, and he was punished.—Sel.

"It is not all gold that glitters" is an old oft-repeated saying, but it would be well to remember in these days of glittering generalities.

"Avoid that which you blame in others" is, we think, an excellent motto or precept, and perfect obedience to it would save many, much trouble and annoyance and at the same time would secure them the much coveted prize, of a good Name which is better far than abundance of Silver, Gold, or Rubies, and more enduring than time itself.

WELCOME TO COMMANDANT MOSELEY & WIFE.

1. On Monday afternoon the 6th of Sept., I spied and was told to remember, At about the hour of five, A flaggy spot like a bee hive, Popping from Bomplake's point, Like a dancing princess with silver joint.

2. A minute or two later, I heard A sound as the horn of a shepherd, Peeling forth from corner to corner, And the inhabitants of Bonthe Were thronging from streets and lanes, To behold a grand spectacle.

3. About five minutes ensuing, I saw And what? a silver white yacht Advancing on the gentle waters to anchor, The minutely expected Comdt. Moseley, And with gladness as I looked, I beheld the object of my expectation coupled.

4. My eyes I did believe not, But took a First Class telescope, And observed Comdt. Moseley & suite The former clad in a well made Oxonian The latter in the latest Paris fashion, With a beautiful well selected CHAPEAU

5. As soon as the vessel anchored, The Government wharf was crowded, With Officials and the public, The Act'g. Commandant and Assistant Colonial Surgeon Went on board, and the Sub Collector and Treasurer Followed afterwards in his quiet way.

6. The Police Constables in their full dress, Marched down the wharf and Saluted Commandant Moseley & suite, As soon as they were passing by them.

The Bugler then followed in The usual way and all was well done.

7. Hurrah! Hurrah!! Hurrah!!! For Commandant Moseley, who is A kind hearted gentleman, taking Interest in every one, rich or poor, And by this, God has promoted him, To the post of Civil Commandant.

8. Hurrah! Hurrah!! Hurrah!!! That shall it be done to the man Whom the Lord delighteth to honour, To him and wife long life we pray Good health and prosperity also With children to crown their heads!

FRIENDSHIP.

Friendship, which is an alliance the sweetest and noblest upon the face of the earth, is a combination, the principles of which are mutual esteem and love. These are its two grand constituents; and without this coalition, it is like a tender shrub trembling in the breeze, unable to stand before the storm of adversity and is exposed to annihilation from the least breath of jealousy or suspicion. Hence the ephemeral duration of those connexions called friendly; today they live and blossom, but tomorrow they die. The worm of envy feeding upon the vitals of their existence has terminated the union. Selfishness had supplanted attachment, and in the bosom where love glowed rancour dwells. But when the principle is compounded of esteem and love, friendship is secure, both from sudden and gradual extinction. Love is effervescent, it burns intensely and is often consumed in its own ardour. It is a weak passion and blind. It is raised by the appearance of those soft and amiable qualities which play upon the strings of the heart. A disposition to please developed by a person in conversation with us, often excites our ardent attachment. His language enchants, his politeness irresistibly delights, his gentlemanlike attainments overpower, in every respect, he is one of whom we are fond and who is qualified for a companion. Like when separation between the generality of love, absence is an interval of misery, so warmly is heart united to heart. The union might continue, were not a disclosure of his character gradually made. But when this takes place, the waxen bands of attachment generally melt; drop falls after drop till coherence is destroyed. Why it may be asked, does love thus quickly die away? Because it is not strengthened with esteem. The charms of conversation will not atone for concealed deformity of heart, the graces of politeness may be only the varnish of immoral conduct and ornamental acquirements the wretched substitution for useful knowledge. The discovery of a character which is so lovely on one side and so disreputable and odious on the other, may well cause us to break up the connexion. Love not thus supported by esteem, or friendship must fall. This compound principle must be its basis, if permanency be intended. When friendship is thus grounded what association is so noble? Can kings boast so valuable an acquisition as that of a friend? A crown is a brilliant pageant, a throne is the seat of supreme authority is wielded; but is any occasion to such power and splendour, comparable with that of a friend? A crown imposes so heavy a responsibility, as often to distract and defeat the head of the wearer—thrones are often, like the rocking tower, shaking by convulsions of nature. But considering them in their most favorable aspects, what do they confer? Do they make any argumentations to the happiness of the possessor? Alas! they are merely the symbols of drawbacks upon his felicity—giving in exchange for the composure of mind which he surrenders. Does a throne then exclude friendship? Not necessarily. But by whom is it surrounded? With mercenary characters—Men who court the favour of their sovereign as means of advancing their respective interest. Among such, few kings can therefore congratulate themselves on the enjoyment of a friend, and few subjects, however exalted their station, on being the friends of their royal master. The excellence of established friendship consists, independently of its utility and pleasures, in its superiority over the destructive power of time. It is not broken by the darts of death. The kings of terror may exhaust all his strength in vain to destroy the amicable and interwoven relation between two kindred spirit, but destroy it he cannot; all that he can do is to interrupt the relation for a season, by his malignant visit. Such a relation on earth, between two pious individuals, is only the commencement of never fading friendship in the oven. It is the origin of a celestial harmony of souls, progressively increasing to all Eternity. Now, I ask, what can be more noble or more exalted than a congeniality of this kind? It is heaven begun upon earth. And the Almighty Father will look down from above with ineffably glorious smiles of approbation upon his children who thus live together in love.

THE FATAL GLASS OF GROG

By Mrs. E. J. Richmond.

It was not an unusual thing for Mr. Bender, the mate of the good ship Fame, to indulge in a glass of grog; indeed, it would have been a very unusual thing for a day to pass without that indulgence, so firmly are the chains of habit fixed, but to-day he took a stiffer glass than usual. What mattered the weakness of the mate so long as Captain Barton, the owner of the ship, was a sober, Christian man?

Captain Barton was down in the cabin enjoying the society of his wife and children, who were just returning to their Southern home from a visit to Mrs. Barton's mother in New York, and Mr. Bender was in charge of the fine stay vessel, which seemeth strong enough to defy the fiercest storms.

A Pretty Picture the Cabin Presented,

a real home scene; for Captain Barton had not only the soul of his home, but his little world with him. The fine ship was his fortune. It was a little injudicious of he had permitted the insurance to expire and was attempting this one voyage before he insured again, but he dismissed the troublesome thought as he kissed the baby, Bessie, in the air and listened delighted by her "da-das" and "goo-goos," which seemed more musical than any language he had ever heard spoken. Dick, a sturdy little fellow of three years, was busy at work fashioning a boat, while mamma, with a suspicious brightness in her eyes, sat at the table busy over her work basket.

"How industrious you are, little wife" Captain Barton said in a rallying tone. "Come, put away the work, and let's enjoy ourselves. Bender is to have charge of the ship to-day. So you have enjoyed your visit to mother, and are content to go home?"

Mrs. Barton's eyes were brimming with tears, while a smile was on her lip as she answered: "You'll think me silly, dear, but I am trying to forget. That is why I am so industrious. No other place will ever seem so dear to me as my native city, though our Southern home is beautiful. Now that you own this good ship our future looks bright, and I am very happy... And the tears were dashed away.

They were off Barnegat Beach, a dreaded locality for mariners, but fifty years ago, the date when these events transpired, much more dangerous than now. "Yes we are all here," he answered, unclasping the hands which had fastened themselves in his hair, "and as you say, the future looks bright for—"

A grinding Crash Arrested the Words,

and Captain Barton rushed upon deck to find his good ship amidst the breakers. The look out had warned the half tipsy mate of the impending danger, and been hidden with a volley of oaths to "attend to his own concerns. He was in charge." Poor Bender was sobered now. The ship was fatally broken on the hidden rock on which she had struck, and the clock presented a scene of wild confusion.

Mrs. Barton heard the terrible roar of the breakers and the confusion on deck and was conscious that the ship was slowly sinking. The water was even creeping over the cabin floor. She lifted her children into the lower berth, and as the water increased in the upper berth a gust, which had the freedom of the Ship, crept up beside her for safety.

All of which are encouraging to the Editor and the promoters of the undertaking yet as much more will be needed to make the paper al that it should be, we ask our friends and pations help to Roll up the List of Subscribers, which can be easily be done by doing as Mr. D. W. During, Mr. Z.E. T. Williams, Mr. J. W. Baker and others, who have sent us the names of their friends.

We have given place to several Articles in this issue on or relating to the Comdt's return more out of our high regard to Mr. Cowley and the good intentions, as we believe, of the writers rather than the real merit of some at least of the productions, and this is especially true, with regard to the one on the first page, we make this explanation to avoid what would otherwise be the subject of just, and may be severe criticisms, hoping our readers will bear with us for this time.

COMMANDANT MOSELEY'S RETURN.

TOWARDS sunset on the evening of the 6th. inst., Mr. Moseley now Commandant of the District, who had been away for about eleven months, for the benefit of his health, accompanied by Mrs. Moseley, landed from the Colonial Steamer the Countess of Derby,—meeting a splendid reception. The Chief of the District and his bride were escorted on shore by the Asst. Col. Surgeon, and the Acting Sub-Treasurer and Collector, who had gone off to receive them. At the landing were the subordinate officers of the various Departments, whose cordial welcome was acknowledged with much affability by the distinguished pair. A few yards above this party, drawn up in a line, and looking smart and tidy in their uniform were the Police Constables who, as the procession moved along their line, in the most appropriate style, paid the respect due to rank on the occasion.

Dr. Jarrett had the honor of receiving Mr. and Mrs. Moseley, and putting them up for a few days. This was an unavoidable circumstance, the arrangements in view of their advent not having been completed when they arrived.

The evening being fine, the whole community of Bonthe was soon astir in consequence of the news of the event spreading. By 7 o'clock, no less than 300 to 400 people mostly of the aboriginal portion were assembled in front of Doctor Jarrett's house eager to testify their joy as well as to gratify their curiosity. As might have been expected, the most of the crowd lost no time in joyful demonstrations as soon as they caught sight of the newly arrivals, who from their elevated position were enjoying the spectacle below. It was moonlight and this added to the enjoyment of the hour. There was singing, dancing and gesticulating, and in other primitive ways the merry makers expressed their merriment to the delight of the spectators, and all for the entertainment of Mr. and Mrs. Moseley. Things went on like this until past 10, when enough having been seen and done of native custom for the occasion, these sons and daughters of the soil were in ucel to depart for the night.

On the afternoon of the following day the 7th Mrs. Moseley gave an "At Home" to the Public Officers at which all attended. Much real pleasure was enjoyed on the occasion, as it gave both to the inviter and the invited an early opportunity of becoming acquainted with the one with the other. The result of this meeting and subsequent ones as we learn with great pleasure is that Mrs. Moseley's character as a lady as well as her unfeigned interest in the people among whom she has come to sojourn becomes established.

Earlier in the afternoon the Trades were represented by J.B. Wright Esquire, J.P., Mr. C. B. Collier and a few other gentlemen. An appropriate address of Welcome was delivered on the occasion.

On the following day, the 8th a shed having been erected and tastefully decorated as far as the weather allowed Mr. and Mrs. Mosley were invited there by the Public Officers, who entertained them for about half an hour, which was occupied in delivering a welcome address prepared for the occasion, and in listening to the encouraging reply of Mr. Moseley. The day was wet and the time occupied in getting through the ceremony had to be snatched amidst the drizzle. Too much cannot be said in praise of Mr. J. F. Brown the Acting Sub-Treasurer for his Artistic skill and good taste in getting up this place while both the address and its masterly delivery by Mr. H. R. Williams the Postmaster were to the point.

Mr. Moseley's reply to his Officers as that to the Traders on the previous day was full of sympathy and encouragement to individual effort as well as to combined action. It may not be amiss to ask that these addresses be furnished for publication with due comment at the next issue of this paper, so that the General Public may share in the worthy feelings which find expression in them and which were evidently the result of Mr Moseley's popularity in the Sherbro District.

COLONIAL AND INDIAN EXHIBITION.

THE GOLD COAST.

LONDON, 30. July 1886.

If we may judge from the magnificent Exhibits of Golden Ornaments and Nuggets shown in this Section, we can fairly assert that the Gold Coast does not belie its name, for it would indeed be a task of no ordinary difficulty to get together a collection of more grandeur than is here shown. The Gold Coast has fairly surpassed itself, and deserves the very greatest praise. The exquisite Natural Colour of the Gold is peculiarly fascinating and diffuses around the Exhibits, so to speak, a tone of musical softness and extreme delicacy, which is greatly admired and commented upon by the thousands of visitors who daily flock to this great National Exhibition.

The first two cases contain the Barbaric Ornaments paid by the King of Ashantee as a portion of the indemnity claimed at the close of the war in 1874, consisting among the great many other things, of several very massive circular pieces of embossed gold of large dimensions. Some being fully four inches in diameter—a bunch of golden bells, gold padlocks, gold dust, gold buttons of every conceivable shape which are so numerous as to fill several bowls, necklets, which must weigh not ounces but pounds, and lastly the celebrated Golden Axe, which, by the way is somewhat disappointing as instead of being all gold as one might be led to suppose, it is merely the handle which in three Sections is encased in that precious metal, the intervening spaces being covered with Leopard Skin, the whole handle is about two feet long—axe itself is simply a rudely native made chopper of counter iron, the whole thing has a strangely savage appearance, but seems quite in keeping with the huge Royal Umbrella which was captured at Coomassie in 1874, and which stands open, by the side of the Ashantee Gold towering high above it. This umbrella and the Golden Axe, have been graciously lent to the Royal Commission by Her Majesty the Queen, and by the aid of these two Exhibits alone, the Public is enabled to form a pretty fair idea as to what extent civilization has penetrated into this part of Western Africa.

Passing on we come to some Grand Specimens of Quartz, simply alive with Gold, from Cracker's Reef, Wassaw, and which is Exhibited by that old and renowned Firm, Messrs F. & A. Swanzy, Mr. G. F. Cleveland shows a string of Thirty Six large Nuggets, Mrs. Addo, a string of 133 smaller nuggets and Mr. T. F. Bruce who is by far the largest native contributor, exhibits a very varied and choice collection of Jewellery, comprising massive Albert Chains beautiful Gold Beads, and Trinkets of all kinds and descriptions. This gentleman also sends some well made and curious examples of silver work, noticeably a bunch of about Sixty Silver keys —Mr. F. Swanzy, Mr. J. F. Crocker, and Mrs Cleaver each make a superb displays of Gold Jewellery of the most varied descriptions and massive to a degree. Lady Marshall and Miss Marshall also make handsome exhibits of of Gold Bracelets, Rings and Trinkets, and the Gold Coast Commission shows a numerous collection of personal ornaments in gold, which are the only articles marked as being for Sale.

Sir James Marshall C.M.G., the courteous and indefatigable Executive Commissioner for the West Coast of Africa, shows among the miscellaneous Exhibits, a small collection of Ashantee brass figures used by the Natives as Gold weights, a very curious Ashantee wooden ladle of grotesque design for measuring Gold taken at Coomassie. An Ivory War horn taken in 1873 which is so deeply encrusted with blood that scarcely any part of the Ivory is visible. 3 small cases of stuffed birds of brilliant plumage and many different "Fetishes." Lole Marshall exhibits the Tail of an Elephant, while Miss Marshall shows a curious musical instrument consisting of a small elaborately carved gourd having a netting of beads, which is used during the performance of the celebrated Adunku dance. Mrs. Elliott sends two large glass cases of stuffed birds from Cape Coast of unusually gay plumage, some very curious specimens of Black Pottery from King Koffee's Palace at Ashantee are exhibited by the Duchess of Mantua and Montserrat. Mr. G. F. Cleveland sends a Stake Stool having a Superabundance of massive Silver ornamentation all over it and a most heterogeneous collection of Toun Toun models of canoes, wooden stools of every shape and style help to make up the Exhibits in this particularly interesting Section. We must not however omit to mention the large exhibits of Messrs. F. Schroder and Co., which is a careful compilation of the principal products to be found on this part of the West Coast and are shown together in an imposing glass case. This most interesting and instructive Exhibit consists of Cotton, Ginger, Coffee, Copra, Orchella weed, Palm Oil, Palm Kernels, Guinea Grains, Chillies Rubber, Calabar Beans, and Gum Copal, to which may be added a small Selection of Gold ornaments, and a few Leopard and Monkey skins.

NEWS ITEMS.

We have been pleased to learn from the United States through Bishop Flickinger, D. D. that Mr. Rufus Clark, of Denver Colorado, has given $5000. Messrs. J. W. Domingo, and E. D. Palmer

Gentlemen,

Circumstances in some measure compels us to write and report the conduct of Kong Gboyah's people; they loaded two canoes with so many troops and landed at Tombay they say that they come to take their Chief either willing or not they must have him. Had it not been for one Mr. S. A. Pratt Agt. for S. B. A. Murfor who threatened them "that if they do but say anything he will have to blow up their canoes with canon" before they went away. But now they are gathering troops to come and see weather they can be able to Bombard the place now we have to set a watchman every night to watch the place, so you can easily put this before the Commandant hearing.

Yours truly.

THE COMMANDANT'S RETURN

The return of Mr. C.H Harley Moseley as Commandant of the Sherbro District has been made the occasion of much popular demonstration; and the hearty welcome it has evoked is as widespread as it is just. For the space of 15 months when he held the acting appointment here, Mr. Moseley evinced such qualities as won the confidence, respect and attachment of all; and now that he has attained to the position which, by his assiduity, his patience, and his devotion to duty, he most justly deserves, it is fitting that hearty congratulations should be tendered to him from every quarter. That Mr. Moseley has the interest of Sherbro at heart, cannot for one moment be doubted; the enthusiasm with which he has been welcomed by all classes speaks for itself. It would be difficult to find another Commandant, I will not say so efficient—(for there have been others as efficient as he)—but so efficient and popular together, who could so successfully awaken such an appreciative feeling from the heterogeneous masses of which this Isle is composed. In a community where there are such diversities of interests and aims, it is no easy matter to weld together the jarring elements that must underlie such a society as this. But the Commandant has sufficiently shown that he can steer clear of the Scylla of racial animosities, on the one hand, and the Charybdis of social jealousies on the other. Not the least feature in Mr. Moseley's character is the honor and respect he pays to religion. He has wisely recognised in the Church a factor which cannot lightly be despised, whether for one's personal benefit, or the spiritual and moral advancement of the community at large; and if he is actuated by deeper feelings of reverence for his Creator and genuine faith, as we do not for one moment doubt, he cannot but be prosperous all through his career.

Mr Moseley has a bride to his happiness —abride; an amiable and accomplished lady who, by her winning ways and suavity of manner "wreathed smiles," has already won the admiration of all —Mrs. Moseley does not repel, but attracts; and if she adheres to that centripetal line of action which she has so generously commenced,—the hearts of many will beat faster and faster with earnest and best wishes for her welfare. We welcome Mr. Moseley back as Commandant of the Sherbro District—with sounder health, than when he left us last year. We tender to his charming bride and himself our warmest congratulations, we wish them long life, in our midst, and God-speed.

A WELL-WISHER.

Bonthe,
22 Sep. '86.

To the Editor of the Early Dawn.

Dear Mr. Editor,—Will you kindly find a small space in the columns of your valuable Journal for this piece of news which I hope will amuse your readers.

For the past few months our friend at Gbarlarlar has been very much cast down since the arrival of a gentleman who has just taken charge of one of the Trading Factories of P. Z. & Co., in this locality; the reason for his being thus cast down is, that previous to this gentleman's arrival he has been blowing his horn in the Sherbro language to the poor ignorant people that he is "Gbartch," he is "Stackay"—i. e. "He is a rich man,"—that he has "ringgah" Kail te Paye, which means "that he has built a stone House," (which is not his, he is only an occupant pro tem), and that he has also a "Pauyal." [Harmonium.]

The poor ignorant people hearing him make such self laudations, flocked to his place where he takes the highest advantage of them by treating them as he likes.

Fortunately a relief to the people arrived in the person above named, who treats them with the highest courtesy and respect, (although they are natives) and thereby secures their confidence.

This extraordinary Gbarlarlar chief who is pokkisons among civilized and native people as a braggart, and boaster &c., and who thinks that his present position will last for ever, is now mild in his demeanour.

He is to be seen now and then in the small Farkies adjacent to his Factory, using kind words to the people that they should not forsake him, and I hope the lessons he has learnt from the new comer will teach him that it is not self laudation that makes a man become popular, but by "doing to others as he would be done by."

I wish the newly arrived gentleman success in his undertakings. "A hint to the wise is sufficient" Let him read Psov. xxvii. 1.—2.

Yours Mr. Editor,
TRUTH.

Sea Bar, Sherbro,
September, 8846.

The infant mission at Mo-Moseley under the auspices of the Wesleyan connexion is rapidly growing. It is reported that the Rev. J. C. Thomas visited that station on the 19th inst. where he preached morning and afternoon to a large and interesting congregation of natives. Marked attention was given and the preached word appreciated. George Tucker the first convert of that mission retains his integrity, and is doing his utmost by his example to bring others to Christ. The Day and Sabbath Schools are prospering under the supervision of Mr. Macauley the Catechist.

Mr. J. A. Williams has presented a few pieces of cloth on behalf of the unclothed children who attend both school and service, which will be made up into shirts for the boys, and other clothing for the girls by the sisters of the Dorcas society formed here some months ago.

THE FATAL GLASS OF GROG.

Still the water was rising. Merciful Heaven! must they die thus in the sight of the shore?

An umbrella hung on brackets beside her. She seized this and frantically punched against the roof. Already Captain Barton convinced that his ship was lost, had said, "We must save my wife and children."

The waves broke ruthlessly over the deck as they were brought above, and the small boat with a seaman aboard was tied to the stern.

Mrs. Barton was securely locked to the side of the vessel, and saw her children fastened to the mast in the boat. The baby was the darling first, but fell into the Water Down, down she sank, but the brave strong sailor is after her. He has caught one little foot, and now, with the little impotent in his arms climbs into the boat. She is saved!

Little Dick fares better. He lands safely in the bottom of the boat. And now comes the command to the poor half-frozen mother! "Drop—let go!" and dropping into the sea, she is caught in her husband's arms and borne into the boats. A little later they were safely landed on a desolate beach, and Found at Last a Robertson's Hut.

Chilled and drenched with salt water though they were, no chance of clothing could be obtained, and when Mrs. Barton's long dress was dried at last she mended it with a piece of sail cloth. Shoes for the little ones she made from the straw matting material. Thankful for deliverance from the cold, hungry waves, though they had swallowed up all their much prized earthly possessions.

Tidings of the wreck soon reached a neighbouring town, and people came flocking to the scene. The sign of distress known only to the initiated was given by Captain Barton and he found himself at a friendly seaside hotel by brothers. There prevailed a cravey soon back to the city from which they had started with such high hopes only a few hours before.

Mrs. Barton's mother sat at the window of the house from which her beloved daughter and son recently came out, for nothing but the separation, yet cheering herself with the reflection that, though separated, fortune smiled upon her, when a carriage stopped before her door. The child-face at the window looked strangely familiar, and a gentleman helping a lady down who wore a calico sun bonnet and draggled dress. "How like she was to Captain Barton! But that was folly."

Suddenly the bonnet fell back, and the fair face of her daughter was revealed. She was now by her side, exclaiming, "My children! What can this mean?"

When they were again within the dear shelter which Mrs. Barton had left so reluctantly, Captain Barton said solemnly, "Thank God! in other, my treasures are safe. We have been wrecked, and my earthly possessions all lie at the bottom of the ocean. And it is all due to Mr. Bowles's fatal glass of grog."

DEATH, the Great THRASHER.

It is also true, in grace as in farming, there is a time for thrashing. I tell you bluntly that is death. Just as a farmer with a flail beats the soul out of the straw, so death beats the soul out of the body. Every sickness is a stroke of the flail, and the sick bed is the thrashing floor. What say you is death a good man—only taking the wheat out of the straw? That is all. An aged man has fallen asleep. Only yesterday you saw him in the sunny porch, playing with his grand children. Calmly he received the message to leave the world. He bid a pleasant good bye to his old friends. The telegraph carries the tidings, and on swift rail trains the kindred come, wanting once more to look on the face of dear old grandfather. Brush back the gray hairs from his brow; it will never ache again. Put him away in the slumber of the tomb. He will not be afraid of that night. Grandfather was not afraid of anything. He will rise in the morning of the resurrection. Grandfather was always the first to rise. His voice has already mingled in the doxology of heaven. Grandfather did always sing in church. Anything ghastly in that? No. The thrashing of the wheat out of the straw. That is all. The Saviour holds a little lamb to his bosom; the little child filled all the house with her music, and her toys are scattered all up and down the stairs just as she left them. What if the hand that plucked four o'clocks out of the meadow is still? It will wave in the eternal triumph. What if the voice that made music in the home is still? It will sing the eternal hosanna. Put a white rose in one hand and a red rose in the other hand, and a wreath of orange blossoms on the brow; the white flower for the victory, the red for the Savior's sacrifice, the orange blossoms for her marriage day. Anything ghastly about that? Oh, no. The sun went down and the flower shut. The wheat thrashed out of the straw. "Dear Lord, give me sleep," said a dying boy, the son of one of my elders; "dear Lord give me sleep," and he closed his eyes and awoke in glory.

Henry W. Longfellow, writing a letter of condolence to those parents, said: "Those last words were beautifully poetic." And Mr. Longfellow knew what is poetic. "Dear Lord, give me sleep."

"'Twas not in cruelty, not in wrath
The reaper came that day;
'Twas an angel that visited the earth
And took the flower away."

So it may be with us when our work is all done: "Dear Lord, give me sleep."—Sel.

A CONSCIENCE TROUBLED MAGISTRATE.

A Jeweller had occasion to travel in the way of business, taking with him many valuable things, Watches rings, Precious stones, and so on. He was accompanied by a journeyman, who knew what his master had with him. On the way, the servant, watching his opportunity, snatched a pistol from the master's side—it was dangerous to travel without arms in those days—and shot him dead. Then he rifled him of all his money, jewels, and precious things, hung a large stone to the body, threw it into the nearest canal, and made off to a distant part of the country. It was in the old days when there was little communication between one part of a country and another, when there were no railways, nor telegraphs, nor police, only stage coaches, carriers Waggons, and Village constables. Thus he set up business, in a small way at first, to avoid suspicion, and gradually increased it, till he became one of the foremost men in the place where he lived. No doubt he must have thought upon his crime sometimes, but his conscience grew harder and harder like the freezing ice on the pond, and gave him less and less trouble as time went on. Besides, so foolish was he, he did all sorts of good works with his money, and lived respectably in the hope that that would be a satisfaction for his wickedness. He prospered so well, and was thought so much of, that in the end he was chose a chief Magistrate of the place, to that capacity, he was reckoned a good and fair man, who did his best to administer the law to rich and poor alike. One day, as he sat on the bench with his fellow-Magistrates, there was a man brought before him accused of murdering his master the evidence was clear, and the people in court waited with great suspense to know what the sentence would be. But what is this? the chief Magistrate cannot speak well. How why pale his face is! how he shakes and trembles! What dreadful contortions pass over his countenance! the conscience that was nearly asleep, is now aroused and speaks, not in whispers but in thunder tones, "Wilt thou pass sentence on this wretched murderer! Thou! thyself a murderer." The miserable man could no longer rest in peace, but went forward and took his place by the prisoner in the Dock and confessed that, thirty years ago, he had been himself guilty of murdering his master just as this man Enquiry followed, and he was punished."—S.S.

"CIVILITY" we have read, "is a kind of charm that attracts the love of all men" then why do not men practice it more generally the world over? Why is it rather the rare exception, of men's practice, than the rule of their lives? Let every one ponder well these questions and try his life by the rule of civility, adhere to the practice of the same during life, and see if the world will not appear brighter to him.

TEMPERANCE MOVEMENT.

"Wine is a mocker, strong drink is raging, and whosoever is not wise is deceived thereby."

Your able Leader in issue of the 31st August dealt most forcibly but justly on the intemperate habit prevalent in the Sherbro District. I must in strict justice congratulate you for the noble and candid statement it contains.

It is an admitted fact that intemperate habit or drunkenness, is one of the reigning peculiar evil equally common among men and women, and as you have wisely commented there is hardly any step taken to suppress this crying sin of the times. During the "Mission Services" three fourths of the petitions put forth are for drunkenness.

The question which naturally forces itself on us is, what is to be done to alleviate this vice which is ruin our young men and women in our midst? They seem to have became wedded to Bacchus Will the Church be faithful to her trust in remaining quiet when the watchman on top of the Tower sees the people runing headlong to distruction?

Are there no true children of God in our midst who would lift up his voice like Luther and cry against the sins that is now slaying our people by thousands? will not the "Early Dawn" cause its voice to be heard, and would not cease till a Temperance Mouument be formed?

Already the Church of England's Temperance society has created much sensation in England, men high and low, Minister and Laymen are interesting themselves towards this great monument in crying against drunkenness and intemperance.

It is a sin,—a grievous sin—it effects men physically as well as intellectually. It has ruins many a house, seperate many a family, and young men, and women have insidiously caught the contagion, and blasted their future prospect with their own hands.

I therefore raise my voice for a Temperance Society.

CYRUS.

HOW DOES THIS HAPPEN.

Mr Editor.—It has been remarked in your valuable journal for June 30th "that cannibalism has not yet been stamped out of the country," and to my understanding, you no doubt refer to that section of country belonging to Bullom District of British Sherbro. Since the above-mentioned paragraph was perused, I have always pondered over it deeply, and thought to myself, is not this also true of the country belonging Shengay District and Thaundale land? Of course the water-crafts for the present are becoming egregiously powerful and so extraordinary that every body this way trembles. On the river and on land every body keeps a look out. If it would not be out of place, I will say right here what has recently taken place, as I determine now and then to expose this habarous practice from last month to now, five individuals have been caught and eaten. One was caught by a leopard at Bompeh tooke.

This fact is concealed for even the very relative to the individual who was caught would not move their lips to say any thing on the affair. The secret of this is, they were bribed with few pieces of calico &c. Alas! Would that give satisfaction for their lost one? The cannibals are moved pushing ahead towards the Capital viz Shengay Town.

They have visited the Yaiahain Points, and if stringent investigation for real facts concerning this matter is not made, I fear, that "the last error shall be worse than the first" I may be thought of as being rather hard on those who have taken a delight in feasting on human flesh commonly speaking what cannot be avoided must be endured.

Fact is fact and must be presented as it is. The chief should not sit with folded hands cannibalism is having its sway within the length and breadth of his jurisdiction. The measure he adopts is not that which is essentially necessary to put a final stop to such abominable act. There are fears a Sierra Leonean was lately caught while fishing at the opening of the Cargboro's River.

I remain always the same
A WATCHMAN.

To the Editor of the Early Dawn.

Dear Sir,—It afords me the highest pleasure of informing you that nearly all the towns beside Manbee in the Thaundale District or beyond its limit and as far interior and up the mainland the glad tiding of Salvation are heard by the people, I rejoice in the success of the gospel in this region, you will take courage from the rapid progress made here by the Rev. R. C. Taylor in charge of this Station; I wish this Brother happy success in all his undertaking. But my heart burn for other towns and people which I mention in my last article Drawn nearer to me by the strongest ties of nature that are still beyond this gospel influence.

With this, I am, sincerely yours,
J. J. DOOMAHGEY.

A woman returning from market got into a South Hill Street car the other day with a basketful of dressed poultry. To her the driver, speaking sharply, said, "Fare!" "No," said the woman, "fowl." And every body cackled.

To the Editor of the Early Dawn.

"IS FREEMASONRY COEVAL WITH CHRISTIANITY?" "ARE THE OBSERVANCES OF BOTH THEIR RITES CONSONANT TO SALVATION? OF COURSE, I MEAN THE SALVATION OF SOULS."

Dear Mr. Editor—The above are two questions about which Mr. Earnshaw C. in your last issue, required to be informed through your valuable journal.

As an Anti Mason, and Anti All Secret Orders, I feel that I will be doing injustice to my faith, and injury to my country, if I should allow the questions to pass my notice without saying a word.

Had Mr. Earnshaw desired to know whether Secret societies generally are coeval with Christianity, I would attempt to prove clearly to him that they are antecident to Christianity and coeval with the fall.

But speculative Freemasonry originated at Apple-tree Tavern, London, in the year 1717. It was instituted by some mechanics or masons who with the object of monopolizing the trade, combined themselves into a secret band of brotherhood. This selfishness soon turned its course from its original design, by controlling not the architectural departments, but seizing also the reigns of Commerce, Legislature, Ecclesiastics, and Governments.

It has undertaken to shelter crimes, and to protect a guilty member from punishment however heinous his crimes may be. It has vouched to keep a secret all its dard and abominable practices, and those who have the courage enough of liberating their consciences of the tyrannes perpetuated in the lodges, have been submitted to foul murders, implacable persecutings, as the penalties of their obligations.

Freemasonry as a secret order has its origin in idolatry. We are acquainted with a kindred society as early as in the days of Moses. The Magicians of Egypt, and the Magi of Persia are secret others. The rites and ceremonies of Masonry are borrowed partly from those of the Eleusinian secret oders, or Mystery of Ceres, founded at Attica by Eumulpus, and are very idolatrous and superstitious. Their religion is based on the fable of Jubela, Jubelo, Jubelum, and their fanciful founder Hiram Abiff. They do not recognize Christ by name, and no member can pray in the name of Christ in any lodge without violating his masonic obligations Dr. A.G. Mackey in his Masonic Lexicon, Art. Religion, says "The religion on Masonry is pure theism (deism) on which the Mason may engraft his views, but not permitted to introduce them into a lodge." Freemasonry is carnal, and "therefore do mind the things of the flesh." The open and plain religion of Christ cannot afford it the happiness of the world and therefore, it resounds for charity and brotherly love, in the secret pavilion of the wicked: Here Jews, Mohamedans and even heathens are united in the same bond of brotherhood, with Christians to worship the golden image of hypocrisy and selfishness.

BONTHE, SHERBRO.

OCTR. 15, 1886.

KONG GBOYAH,—Reputed the pest of the Tucker River called on us on the 6th inst, he felt that he had been hardly dealt with, by the Authorities here, who it appears had fined him for non appearance, when indeed he said he had done his best to return in time, and was now back ready to answer his case; we tried to explain to him that the proceedings as far as the court was concerned were just and that justice would be given him here by the Authorities; however as we had heard many evil reports of him, we thought best to tell him of the same; of course he denied many, and possibly all the charges, that had been reported against him. But one thing seemed very evident from his demeanour, and that was his vindictive spirit, of something like revenge; and while it appears that he has been wronged possibly in course of the events, connected with the troubles in which he has been involved, yet we were not at all well impressed with his manner. However to us it would seem that the best place to try such cases as Kong Gboyah's would be on the ground where committed.

A gentleman in London writes us the following about our little JOURNAL:—"The Dawn under date Sept. 15th, has come to hand (of 16th ult.) having first Exhibition review in it, this issue seems to me a capital one, lots of interesting matter in it. I hope it will be appreciated by the Sherbro people; to me it is wonderful that you are able, in such a place to produce so excellent a paper it certainly reflects immense credit upon you and your staff."

ADDRESSES.

SHERBRO,
September 1886.

To C. H. Harley Moseley Esq.
Civil Commandant &c. &c. &c.

WE the undersigned representing the respectable Native Tracers of Sherbro, desire to pay our respects to you and to welcome you back again in our midst as Her Majesty's Representative and head of local affairs here.

In doing so, we beg to express to you our keen appreciation of your past untiring efforts in having been instrumental in representing as opportunities offered by the local authorities in Freetown the existing state of trouble some affairs in this country prior to your leaving for Europe.

We trust that the experience you have gained during your travels with His Excellency Sir, Samuel Rowe in and about the districts agitated by the war, will qualify you to deal more extensively in your knowledge of Local Native affairs and that you will do your utmost by representation or otherwise o bring the present affairs and future possibilities of this country prominently before proper Authorities by so much as would lead to the material advancement and prosperity of the country politically, commercially, and socially.

We beg here to express our satisfaction in and to congratulate you upon, 1st. Your permanent appointment to the Commandantship of this place.

Second.—As in the order of things though not least—your recent auspicious marriage.

Permit us Sir, to welcome Mrs. Moseley in conjunction with yourself, and we pray that she being among us may enjoy much blessing and good health, and that you both may share in the blessings and long life and prosperity.

We subscribe ourselves Sir,
Your respectful & obliged Servants,

(Signed) C. B. Collier,

BONTHE, SHERBRO.
September 8th 1886.

To
C. H. HARLEY MOSELEY ESQ.
Civil Commandant of Sherbro.

Sir,—We the Public Officers of the Sherbro District in the Settlement of Sierra Leone here assembled, respectfully beg leave to address you, desiring to congratulate yourself and Mrs. Moseley, and extend to her as well as to yourself a hearty welcome.

We congratulate you, first of all Sir, on your recovery from the severe illness that has been your departure from our midst in October last on your restoration to health and vigour, and your safe return; and secondly; on your happy union in marriage with the lovely object of your choice;—an event which we had all hoped for, and now take a pride in, and expect flattering possibilities from (which union may Heaven bless) and thirdly, on your confirmation in the command of this District, a country whose resources are being gradually developed, and is so promising in a social, moral, commercial, and political point of view.

You are no stranger Sir, to our high sense of your personal importance here, and you need no contribution of this nature from us to testify our sincere regard for you; still this public expression is due from us at this time, not only to keep up that respect, but more particularly to impress Mrs. Moseley with the important fact that her worthy husband, as Her Majesty's Representative, has been successful in his work, and won so much popularity in the Sherbro Community.

Confident of the usual encouragement we have received from you, Sir, in various shapes (for which we are ever grateful) we as subordinate Officers, pledge ourselves to supply in our respective positions, as we trust we have done in the past, that assistance and support which are indispensable to success in carrying on the affairs of the District, and which are due to you, Sir, as Civil Commandant of Sherbro.

Wishing you the blessings of health peace, long life and prosperity.

We remain, Sir,
Your humble Servants,

THE COMMANDANT'S REPLY.

The Commandant in reply thanked the Officials and Merchants for their kind addresses and for the hearty welcome they had given Mrs. Moseley and himself. He further stated that since his arrival in Sherbro it had been his earnest desire to do all he could to further the interests of the place, and so far as lay in his power to establish Peace and Order. He was pleased to know that his efforts were appreciated and it was his intention to continue cheerfully the same course to the best of his ability. He concluded by wishing the inhabitants prosperity and happiness.

Bendoo, Sherbro,
Sep. 18, 1886.

To C. H. Harley Moseley Esq.,
Civil Commandant Sherbro, &c.

Sir,—We the undersigned inhabitants and others in conjunction with the Catechists and Schoolmaster of Bendoo, desire most respectfully to congratulate you on your safe arrival once more in the Sherbro, and hail with much pleasure your return with a partner who, we trust, is likeminded with yourself, a true sharer of your joy and sorrow. We pray that your life may be long spared to reap those honors and distinctions which your well merited reputation and social virtues deserves.

We have no doubt you have returned to us with your health fully re-established. May it be the Lord's will to spare you long to each other, and to bless you both, and make you a blessing to us and the Sherbros so many thousands of whom are around our borders. It is to be hoped that you will be enabled to develope further plans for the consolidation of the race, over which Her Majesty has been pleased to nominate you the Head and that the several peace missions which are now pending in the River Countries by different Chieftains will be sound and lasting.

Once more congratulating you and Mrs. Moseley on your safe arrival and wishing you every needful blessing.

We have the honor to remain Sir,
Your obedient Servants,

REPLY.

Dear Sir,

I regret exceedingly I was not at home when Messrs. Norman and Smart called on Saturday. Will you be so good as to convey to the inhabitants of Bendoo my sincere thanks for the Congratulatory letter they sent me.

I feel highly sensible of their kindness in writing to me as they have done and appreciate their kind expression in reference to my marriage. With our united kind regards.

Yours very faithfully

EARLY MARRIAGE—ITS ADVANTAGES AND DISADANTAGES.

"Wedlock is an ill,men eagerly embrace."

We consider the above subject as one among others that might be dealt upon, with great caution and care, of considerable interest, in as much as it relates not only to the actions of all those who have not yet attained matrimonial periods but who though compled prior to that period have failed to gain yet that well earned experience most necessary to assure conjugal happiness and felicity.

For many months in the past we had been under the consideration of undertaking this rather arduous work but as often we feel inclined to carry out our desires so often have untoward circumstances transpired to prejudice our intention and consign it to the regions of the past, the necessity which however animates us to undertake the work at all chiefly results from an eager desire to satisfy the curiosities and minds of those who might be induced either by the lives of, and examples set down by new couples who live in comfort, happiness, and concord to consider on the advisability of effecting Early marriage, or from the wrecklessness and utter indisposition of those who by their ill conduct and total disregard for that true affection which alone should induce holy matrimony even in minor years to discountenance the idea of getting married at early periods of life.

With such honest pure, and laudable motives, with a desire simply to produce beneficial results, it is to be expected that no offence will be taken at our remarks,no matter their weight, or nature of the practical insinuations they venture to throw out. Ourselves, being once individuals of insatiable curiosity who have had prospects and all hopes to obtaining positions of eminence and trusts blended to an alarming extent not only through early marriages but want of that well earned experience essentially needful to warrant the rather successful government of new homes, have fully considered the subject as one necessary to be dealt upon for the guidance and instruction of those who either have preceded or followed us or are thinking to tread the steps we have trod. In attempting therefore to bring this subject before your readers we shall deal upon three main lines of thought along which a treatment of the subject in its general aspects must necessarily lead us

IMMORALITY—AS ONE OF THE BARRIERS TO AFRICA'S PROGRESS.

To the Editor of the "Early Dawn"

Dear Sir,—On all occasions of social gatherings, religious or secular, I believe the progress of the community or nation is their aim and end. It is, and has been an enthusiastic declaration, that "Africa shall rise." Many who have discoursed, written, and debated on this Subject of Africa's progress, are now in their graves. One of these a famous writer in a pamphlet on Africa gave these beautiful lines:—

"For though her sons are scatter'd and her daughters weep apart,
While desolation like a pall weighs down
each faithful heart,
Like a palm beside the waters, like the
Beauteous cedar tree,
They shall rise in strength and beauty,
When the Lord Jehovah wills."

From the nature of existing circumstances, I fear, that without a reform, it stands ten chances to one, whether they will not at the last, rise from their graves, to find once noble anticipations, only "a wish"

Facts are stubborn things, but in the midst of innumerable incongruities, truth will crave its way. True it is that there are many noble educational establishments steady and zealous Philanthropists, who by their untiring instructions and devotions inculcated, are calculated to bring about this glorious result But when? This is the problem. Every other moral quality (like judgement) begins at home; and aforetime immoral qualities also emanated from the same source.—home.

It is not my intention to say anything about the isolated cases of morality ably exercised and experienced by a few within the sphere of my knowledge; so that those who may intend carricature, must not think that I am ignorant of them. My aim is at the moral progress of the community, (if I may use the term progress) which has been so often expressed in many Missionary and Official reports as the "sine qua non" of the Africans; (Sierra Leone and Sherbro being understood.) Can these reports be true! Let a few observations prove. Hence, the causes of such immorality. To begin with, let me turn to a portion of the mothers of the land; and if any of this fair sex deem me partisil and enquire why I make them prominent in this subject, I'll beg them not to think that it is because that I am under the impression that Eve was the first actor in the drama of the Fall: but that "sine prejudicio, it is my humble wish that they may be benefited by what may be pointed out, so that they may in every instance become what God had intended them to be—man's helpmeet—his solace—his ministering angel—his most beloved companion, and "training up the children(who will compose the future community) in the way that they should go." I reiterate Mr. Editor that I am not ignorant of some isolated moral virtues, strictly adhered to by the fair sex; whose deportment and ministrations in religious, social, and private life, speak comfort and deserving praise. God bless them. But sad it is to tell that these are but few, they are to be found like oasis, amidst a vast barren and sandy deasert. They are met with only once in a while. While it is to be deeply regretted that the great mass of them in the community are the responsible parties for this reign of immoral propensities. "Facts are stubborn things." and if any should choose to cavil against the details I shall have to mention, I will only to ask them to say nothing, but what the God of heaven will say "Amen" to.

To be concluded in our next.

If there are any mysteries in Freemasonry, they are blasphemy, deceit, and childishness.

I say blasphemy, for they have no right in using the name of God in the administration of their brutal and illegal oaths in which they pledged their life for the abrogation of a trivial and beneficial secret of which even the swearers were then ignorant. It is also a foul blasphemy, to personify the Living God, as the Master Mason does in the administration of the Fifth Libation, when to lighter the imagination, and fill the candidate with awfulness, he cries out in a shout from within his desk, "I am that I am."

I say deceit, because all masons have been disappointed; they have found that there are no more secrets in the lodges than what could be found in blacksmith shops, and yet they urge men to the mysterious happiness of dark lodges.

When I say childishness, I refer you to their fantastic tittles, to their aprons, and foolscap, and their protestations to mysteries by which candidates are kept seven days in the grave.

There is nothing in Freemasonry, which could not be found in the Purrah, Kofang, or the Egungun and Ora of the Aku Nations. If these can save a soul, then Freemasonry will.

We do not deny that there is something of worldly love and affection in these societies, for "the world loveth his own."

It was said of Pythagoras that when on his death bed, his wife sent him a message, reminding him not to forget the wonderful things they had seen in the mystery of Bacchus. Some believe this meant drunkeness. This is true in some respect, as secret societies from their early date are generally combined with intemperance. But it meant their love, which had been intensified by secrets known only to them in the Mystery of Ceres. It is even so now in Freemasonry. Their members are visited on death beds and given a farewell grip and tokens of love; and the Bundo member in her last groanings of death, is called aloud by her Bundo name, to remind her of the mysteries of bundoism. I shall be exceedingly happy to prove to my dear Mr Earnshaw that Freemasonry is worse than heathenism, in five articles; and if he desires it, he will kindly let me know by your medium. Meanwhile I remind him again that the name of Christ is not to be used in Masonic lodges. It is not in their ceremonies of the burial of the dead. And that soul, whose body is interred without hopes of rising in Jesus, by a secret association who own no Christ, must be expected to usher to a world of seclusion, burning with fire and brimstone: for "neither is there Salvation in any other, for there is no other name under Heaven given among men where by we must be saved."

I remain,
Your humble Servt.,
J. AUGUSTUS COLE.

"To the Editor of the Early Dawn"

Dear Mr. Editor—Permit me a small space in the columns of your valuable journal, which no doubt will draw the attention of the public.

Seh Lolo the then reigning Chief of Manoh in the Bargroo District, who has for a few months ago, selected as a Chief to act instead of Gonah Cambeh, who since feels the weight of himself, began his cruel reign by loading necks of the poor helpless natives who are within his reach, with chains of considerable length. I have no doubt Mr. Editor entertain the hope, that if such inhuman practices carrying on to such an extent will only induce one to refer matters to the Authorities. Meanwhile I remain Dear Mr. Editor,

Truly Yours,
AN EYE WITNESS.

Several articles have been unavoidably left out of this issue; but specially those on the Exhibition and Praying Gbannah others also some of which with the above will (D. V.) appear in the next Issue; of course others again will not suit by that time.

FROM SHENGAY.

On the 7th Sept. as Bannah Sarah, Barnattie, Seafah, (three men) and Myah (a woman) Joseph Gomer & James Peabody were crossing from Plantain Island in a small canoe loaded with cassada about 7. p. m., the canoe swamped, the men called loudly for help, men on shore heard their cries and got a boat and went in search but the hollowing had ceased and no one was to be seen no signs of the canoe, after searching for some time the boat returned, and all the people were mourned for as lost, the evening of the 9th inst. about 7 o'clock the whole party except James Peabody, walked into Shaingay alive and well, when the canoe filled with water the men managed to get it turned over emptied the cassada out then swam and gathered the boys and the woman, laid them across the canoe, and the tide swept them far out to sea, they clung to the canoe for 22 hours; the boy Peabody whose strength failed him went down. A flood tide next carried them near the mouth of Bompeh river, and about 5 o'clock a fishing canoe found them, gave them a paddle and helped them to the shore: they went in to Rembee, were kindly cared for, and next day they set out for Shaingay, where they arrived just as we were commencing our Prayer Meeting, to which they all came, though none except Gomer had ever attended before.

FROM MANDO.

It is reported that a country gentleman of great repute most of whose wives are guilty of adultery, imposed on one of the offenders the following Fine—To cook a Binky of rice twice for those whom he sent to receive from him, one barrel of rum, two long strings of coral beads, about 200 leopard teeth and ten slaves, a total of about £71. 10. 0. The man sent the bearers back with one slave, six country cloths, one piece shirting and promised to follow with other presents to crave for pardon.

Shaingay Town,
24th Sept. '86.

To the Editor of the "Early Dawn."

Dear Sir,—It is not my policy to oppose or contradict any opinion inserted in Public papers, but as far as truth concerns, allow me to say a word or two, respecting what the supposed John Milton of Shaingay wrote; who is supposed to know more about my father than myself. In true speaking Mr. Editor there was never a stone chapel built at Shaingay town, but a mud chapel; so far Mr. Milton excuse Zainus in this point, as man is liable to mistake. But with regard to the idle chief advising his successor to rebuild the mud chapel at Shaingay native town, this is very true. As soon as the late Chief died, our regent Chief ordered the people of McCaibay to cut Mangrove posts brought them down to Shengay, and piled them on a piece of ground near the late Chapel after which he made another use of them.

This shows Mr. Editor that Zainus was actually right. If this not sufficient, the letter that was written at Bonthe by a cousin in the family towards the rebuilding of the mud Chapel? As you Mr. Milton are a native of Shaingay do you know anything of this letter? If you know then show, me the new mud Chapel for you tried to convince us that the present Chief is willing to build the chapel but does not want to force the people to do so. Do you mean to tell us that all those churches that are built in Sierra Leone and civilized countries, people are forced by their Governors and Rulers before they are built? I trow not; If the Chief is not reluctant towards this work of God, then let him collect his family, sub-Chiefs and subjects together and acquaint them of this fact that he is about doing, what his dear late brother charged him, and that is the rebuilding of the mud chapel. Then Mr. Editor many of his sisters, brothers, and other relations and subjects will be quite willing to give up what they have towards the rebuilding of Zion.

Is this not a shameful thing for us the Pastor of St. Matthew's to preach, at the Barray at Shengay and we call the Barray a Court house Zion? Why should we hide the truth when we know that we must have to die, John Milton Zainus is actually acquainted with facts perhaps he is not a native of Shaingay as you are, but he seems to know more of the Royal house of Shaingay than you. Allow him with what he knows; not all natives are acquainted with Royal places.

Up up our Regent Chief, let's rebuild our Chapel Zion. Delay is dangerous. How many have waited and saw not the day? With God's assistance to day let us rebuild the Chapel, it will be late for tomorrow.

Thanking you Mr. Editor for the space occupied.

Yours truly
A CAULKER,
An eye witness, the present Chief's daughter.

N'CHARMANY STATION.

Of the Shengay Mission is all right it is in good working order. Rev. H. J. Willams and his wife are exerting a wholesome influence over the people, they made my stay very pleasant, I have however one criticism to make on the town, yes two for the town is miserably dirty 2nd there is altogether too many dogs in it, they are actually a nuisance. Our services were held in the village in a barra, a flock of dogs went with us from the Mission Station, and at the barra they were met with a drove of the town dogs they got into a fight and disturbed the meeting very much, after the fighting ceased a number of them came up on the platform, I tried for a while to keep them off, but found they bothered me in my discourse, and they laid down, but occasionally I would step on one, and then there would be a growl. It is a shame for people to allow dogs such freedom in the place where God is worshipped especially since there are unclean animals, and these were all poor lean and hungry looking dogs, a man came in to our morning worship lately and brought a dog with him and lifted him on the seat and the dog sat by the side of his master, now that's what I call dog equality, it may be all right but I should not like to take a dog for my equal and then I do not believe that Our Heavenly Father is pleased to have us bring dogs with us when we came to worship him.

If you must keep worthless dogs please leave them at home when you go to the house of worship.

A collection was taken up in one of our Churches recently, and when the box reached the seat occupied by a lady, her daughter, and her son, the two ladies found themselves without a cent of money. But Young America reached over and deposited a cent in the box, and then whispered to his sister, "There! I just saved this family from being whitewashed!"

COLONIAL & INDIAN EXHIBITION.

London, 6. Aug., 1886.

The Exhibits from the Gold Coast are so very varied and numerous that we were unable to conclude our remarks in the last paper, we therefore continue our Review of this Section in the present instance.

Ornithology is further represented by a very exhaustive and interesting display of stuffed Birds exhibited by Mr. Swanzy, who shows fine collections of Butterflies and Beetles, amongst the latter are some of gigantic proportions measuring fully 3 & half inches in length, and of great breadth of the stag beetle species, with fearful looking horns (Antenna). Most repulsive long haired Tarrantulas are there too, of great size, many varieties of the Green Beetle and a praying Mantis, 4 inches long. Mr. Swanzy also shows several varieties of Reptiles in Spirits, Snakes and Camelions, some stuffed Iguanas, the skins of two Armadillos. Alligators' eggs and two fine specimens of the Queen Ant. Mr. Swanzy is to be congratulated upon the completeness of his collection, a very cursory glance at which will do more towards enlightening the Public in these particular branches of Natural History than could be obtained from a long course of book-study.

Mr. Horace Brandford Griffiths of Accra, sends Three splendid Tusks of Ivory, weighing 72 lbs., 34 lbs., and 33 lbs respectively.

Dr. Easmon Exhibits a very daintily looking Ivory Horn about 3 feet 6 inches in length; carved at the Butt end and tapering off in an octagonal shape to a fine point, it has a beautiful appearance and seems to be an unusually fine piece of native work.

King Tackie sends some curiously made Native Shoes, which would appear to be made from the dried stems of the Palm leaf, the shape is quaint and we judge that they are peculiar to this part of the Coast.

Sir James Marshall C.M.G., shows a Cloth which was taken from the King's Palace at Coomassie in 1874, the back ground is white, and all about are most grotesquely drawn Birds, embroidered in many colours, the whole device presenting a strangely weird appearance, it is however the only cloth of this description which we have noticed in the West African Court. There are several Silk Cloths, beautifully worked in coloured silks, noticeably those exhibited by Mr. G. F. Cleveland and Mr. Alexander Bruce—Mr. T. F. Bruce makes a great display with Paddles which are ranged in a group along the wall—the fantastically carved heads being coloured in the most primitive fashion, give them a peculiarly wild and savage look.

Fetish charms of every conceivable description abound every where, turn where you will some Fetish or other meets you, but perhaps one of the most frightful objects on this way is that shown by the above named gentleman. Mrs. T. F. Bruce which consists of a small drum made from a small white calabash the top covered with skin from the sides project several wooden ornaments of the usual savage description inexplicable to the majority of Natives themselves and certainly to all persons in every land, but no doubt having some heathenish mystic signification, this drum rests upon the upright carved black figure of a woman of the most distorted and inhuman proportions the figure in fact being hardly discernible as being intended for that of a human being, it is scarcely possible to describe this fiendish looking object, but it shows very distinctly the barbaric nature of these peoples, and the fearful state of paganism in which they are engulfed.

Several interesting photographic views are shown of Quittah, Cape Coast Castle and Elmina, and a capital display of natural products is made (chiefly by Mr. F. A. Swanzy) comprising gum copal, Tiger Nuts fruit of the Dolin Palm-tree, Silk, Cotton, Cola-Nuts, Palm-Oil, Palm-Kernels, Ground-Nuts Fibres, Rubbers, Bennie-Seed, Ginger, Cocoa, Copra, and Calabar Beans. Mr T. F. Bruce sends a very fine sample of large block gum copal, from the interior which resembles the cowrie gum from New Zealand and is the only specimen of the kind shown from west Africa.

Our next review will be upon the Exhibits from Lagos.—

VICTORIA CHAPEL,

TOMBAY,—TUCKER RIVER.

To the Editor "Early Dawn."

Sir,—Kindly grant me a space in your respected journal to put in for the information of your readers that during my visits, enquiring as I was wont to do for something new, I was gratified to find one thing which to me seems very surprising. Victoria Chapel was to have been a House built for the worship of God, at a place named Victoria near Tombay in the Tucker River, through the combined resolutions and good will of five gentlemen (one an Agent of late) and the respectable Traders, residing respectively at Mye, Kormenday, Belargboo and Camarsunoo. They had collected a handsome amount for the purpose. The undertaking was fully appreciated by the natives around, who of their scanty means gave to the good cause.

A Meeting was appointed to convene on a certain day to consult the Commencement and Model of the intended Chapel. The day arrived; and one of these members from unavoidable cause was absent, the others having met, at last separated with impreccations on the head of the absent member and determined not to have any thing to do with the Chapel, thenceforth and forever. The impreccated sent and made apology for his absence and even offered them to charge him if possible with neglect, and forfeit the office he held as a punishment for such neglect, only that the work go forward; (how condescending) but to no purpose.

As a consequence, the building of the house intended for the worship of God has been neglected, and the undertaking is now regarded as a farce and has become a by-word.

If this was an act of ignorant and unenlightened men there would have been some room for an excuse, but by men who were intelligent, and with education; who are christians by birth and profession, (real or false they will one day realize) to make such a beginning and not to continue or finish, in the face of the injunction of holy writ. "When thou vowest a vow unto God, defer not to pay it: for it is better that thou shouldest not vow, than that thou should'st vow and not pay"——seems rather a marvel. I send this information with hopes that those gentlemen (who I believe are either readers or subscribers to your Journal) be awakened to a sense of their true position and not forget themselves, because "apparently entangled with the rancor of prejudice. Thanking you Mr. Editor for the space allowed me.

I am, Sir, yours truly,
Tucker River, A TOURIST.

MOCAIBA CIRCUIT.

This circuit has five villages viz, Mocaiba, Mokella Mayama, Moharraw and Good Hope for two years this circuit has had no regular Itinerant for the reason that the towns are hard to reach, they are far inland and there is much water to be waded through, the people of the different towns have repeatedly sent to ask why they were neglected.

Mr. Richard Domingo a young man that has grown up in our Mission and has learned the blacksmith trade (but unfortunately he can not get employment at his trade,) has taken this circuit to travel he left Shaingay on Friday and held his first meeting in the night, the people were highly pleased to know that they are to have regular services every week, and promise to attend, Mr. Domingo being a sherbro, speaks to them in their own language and this the people prefer rather than to have an interpreter, If this circuit can be kept up we may look for good results for the head men of these towns are all friendly to the Mission.

One man was asked by another, with whom he was on the best of terms, where he had taken up his abode. "Oh" he replied, "I am living by the canal at present. I should be delighted if you would drop in some evening."

The Early Dawn

BONTHE, SHERBRO.

OCTR. 30, 1886.

EARTHQUAKES are reported from almost every part of the Globe; nearly every Exchange has an account of some tearful catastrophe, and altho' these are among the Biblical Signs of the last Days which are by most people understood to mean the end of time. Yet as far as we have read and are informed, the most religious Journals of the day have not commented, as a rule, either very seriously or largely upon these quakings of our Globe as omens, and it seems further remarkable that in proportion to the number of disastrous Earthquakes, the destruction of lives (human) has been small (unless the reports have not given the fatality in full) from which we infer that our Beneficent Heavenly Father is dealing mercifully with his children, and that we should deal wisely with him.

TORNADOES.—Their season having fully arrived, some weeks ago, the storm King seems to have been well supplied; and has consequently been furnishing us with one every night for some time past; and most of us who have tested their strength, have been quite well satisfied, that they have been genuine Tornadoes.

OUR SAY.—we mean what we promised sometime, ago to say when the pamphlet Sherbro and the Sherbroes should come to hand. We have been favored with a single copy by the kindness of some friend, and have carefully examined it and while it has no doubt been especially prepared for American readers it is yet full of interest to any one who wishes a concise account of the people called Sherbroes and it is especially well adapted for the purpose of giving information to foreigners of the country and people at the water-side. We expect a supply next month.

CANIBALISM.

Under various forms or rather disguises is now reported from almost every quarter and would appear to be more general than for many years past, however this is very possible only apparent, and not real as the disguises under which it occurs now have in the past not been so often and closely watched as at present hence what in those years was often attributed, for want of investigation, to wild beasts and crocodiles was, no doubt then as now, really canibals in disguise. To us it would seem that something more should be done than has been to put an end to this Horrible practice by sea and land.

VISIT TO GBARGROO.

It has been our pleasure since our last issue to visit the above named District and we were pleased at Avery on the Manoh River to find that while secular business seemed some what dull, good religious interest prevails among a portion of the people and large gatherings at the Avery Chapel on sunday the 17th inst. when it was our pleasure also to hear a fine sermon delivered by Cop'l J. W. Nicol and further attend other interesting Religious meetings during that day and the Monday following. Guavas are a abundant on the Mendi Mission Farm, a fine Crop of Casada also and Coffee are growing on the same premises. Lumbering seemed rather dull, the Mills not making more on an average, than half time, for want of suitable Logs to Saw. An Order for the Training School Building at Shaingay was being executed; some others are awaiting the arrival of suitable Timber.

We had heard much of the depredations of Leopards in that region catching goats and sheep but at length a child is reported has been caught, and from all appearances, it would seem that the Leopards are canibals in disguise.

Tuesday the 19th we visited Danville Station at the head of the Gbangbah Branch of the Gbargroo river. We found the station prospering under the charge of the Rev. W. S. M'Cauley who seemed cheerful in his work in which he has so far succeeded well. Gbangbah we noticed is being rebuilt without the stockade. Our boatmen were startled by a mysterious monster in the water while eating their breakfast at the Danville wharf which they say approached very close to them and they believed to be a human aligator. From Gbangbah we returned to this place completing our Trip of more than one hundred miles through the various branches of the Gbargroo river.

The September number of The Noon Day Sun Chicago O. (U. S. A.) has come to hand it is full of choice Matter as usual; we are much pleased with its style and make up and its visits, although some times long delayed, by the distance it has to travel, are always awaited with pleasure some time ago, we copied at length from it, an article entitled "The shadow of Death" which pleased us greatly but from some cause failed to note that it was an original article and for that reason marked it selected and thought no more of it until the Editor of our little Favorite was giving us a rubbing down for not giving The Noon Day Sun due credit, at the time we could not respond but now wish to say that it was a head and not a heart Blunder for which we beg to be excused.

LONDON LETTER.—GLIMPSE OF FRANCE.

We give the following from a private letter from our good friend in London England under date of Sept. 23rd who had just returned from a visit to France and gives us glimpse of a sea side Village of that country.

DEAR MR. EVANS,—I am very much pleased to find that you were interested in my letters. I have been away from home and have only just returned, so that I have not yet been able to collect much news, and indeed at this time of the year people are so unsettled that there is not much doing. However the holidays and the summer are now over, and Londoners will be getting to work again in real earnest. I have been to a little sea side village in France, where life seems very different from life here.

French people are very industrious, the land is cut up into smaller portions than with us, and the owners have to work very hard to make their little farms pay at all, so they engage in many small industries, and you will see the women sitting in the market with quite small quantities of fruit or vegetables to sell. Nearly all the fish selling trade is done by the women, the men going out in the boats to catch the fish. Hoping I may soon have something of more interest to send you Mean while.

I am yours truly,

L. ——A.——

HOW DOES THIS HAPPEN?

Mr. Editor,—How is it that some worthless people about us here are becoming notorious for high-hand wickedness even to commit daring aggressions? Gbannah Kankah of the town of Mogben, Cargboroh River, on the 30th ultimo, plundered the farkie Mo-Timpeh, Tucker River, built by Peeh Chaindain who is the present headman of it. The Gbannah Kankah had a wife, who deserted and resided at Mo-Timpeh and was there for a few months, when he sent that the headman Peeh Chaindain should compel her to return. Peeh Chaindain replied that he could not do so, for he could not conscientiously compel the woman against her will,—she being a freeborn and not a slave. In resentment for this, Gbannah Kankah sent for his nephew a "Croogbah" (Warrior) who came with his troops and on his arrival was told to go and plunder the farkie of Mo-Timpeh and bring Peeh Chaindain in chains. But fortunate for him that he was not in town when these marauders reached there. They plundered every thing in the town together with seven goats. Peeh Chaindain is indeed in distress, and I do pity him for the great loss he has sustained. The maraunders had made another gathering to return to Mo-Timpeh in order to perpetrate more of their dishonest deeds, had it not been for the interference of a Mohammedan Foday who interceeded on Peeh Chaindain's behalf. You cannot imagine how many insolent words are uttered by those who claim to be sub-chiefs (but they are not sub-Chiefs) for I know only a few who are real sub-chiefs among these is Canray Sokatha, a man who is honest in his purpose, and decent in his manners and behaviour. If you can very well remember Mr. Editor, I stated in one of my articles published in your most valuable periodical, that there are those in the country, who are making laws for themselves, and putting them in force. While they are here in this (permit me to say Gbangbah) or wilderness and after having a belly full of palm fire, they always commit such acts that the honorable Chief of the entire Country, Regent T. N. Caulker of Shaingay and Plantain Islands would not even venture to commit. They sometimes act as it there is none to question, "What dost thou?" If this incongruous principal inbibed is allowed to continue, toore is every reason to believe, that many will fall short of the respect due to their Chief, and sometimes result in petty wars; though for the present it may seem to be an inconsiderable matter yet if duly considered one would know that I am always for the truth. What has happened no doubt has not yet reached the hearing of the Chief, and I trust that when it reaches him he may not slack his hand in checking plundering in the country.

A WATCHMAN.

Oct. 13th, 86.

The Commandant Mr. C. H. Harley Moseley and wife, gave us a very pleasant call on the morning of the 28th instant. It was our first opportunity of meeting with his worship since his return to the Sherbro, and it afforded us no small degree of pleasure; which was greatly entranced by the presence and an introduction to his very amiable lady and companion Mrs. Moseley who seems to vie with her very estimable husband in the highest qualities of true gentility; we wish them much happiness and success.

Bishop William Taylor writes from Central Africa that missionaries with big families are no encouragement to his mission. He says: "Wm. H. Read, for example, has wife and six children. I wish I had forty such families at command for Africa." He adds that only one or two of the eight can go yet, "no efficient service as teachers, but they can 'edify.'" For this purpose 2,500 acres of good land have been staked off, and there will be plenty of work for all hands. This is the Pauline principle. It is also the German. Dig and teach, hoe and preach.

Mr Wm Hughes—Our esteemed friend and chief Government clerk as a Deputy coroner of this place we regret to note has not been well for some days altho able to be out at times. Mr Hughes we also learn has been quite ill we wish them a speedy recovery.

NEWS ITEMS.

BIRTH.—On the night of the 13th inst. at Tombay, Tucker River, Mrs Betsy Cordelia Palmer wife of Mr. E Donald-on Palmer of a daughter.

KONCONANY.—Bro J. W. Baker under date of 19th instant, writes of interesting services on the previous Sabbath Chapel filled, he also further says that the day school is thriving.

DANVILLE.—Rev. W.S. Macaulay has indeed given a new aspect to things in that station and we were pleased to meet in the School 12 boys and 8 girls not on paper but actually busy with their lessons in school.

AVERY.—Interesting services large gathering on Sunday 19th inst. Corp'l J. W. Nicol preached a very able discourse at 11 a. m. sunday school at 2 p. m. preaching 4½ p.m.

FIRE.—at Timpehtook Boccary Soso's new town several houses mostly filled with new cut rice in the straw overhead were consumed by fire on the 19 inst. the accident it is said was caused by a woman carelessly burning rice chaff in the Town.

REBUILDING.—The town of Gbangbah is being rebuilt but the stockade has fallen into decay except the few plumb sticks which are growing into a kind of hedge about the Town.

From U. S. A.—Our latest advices from America say that Revs. R. N. West and D. F. Wilberforce with their wives and Rev. J. M. Lesher, sailed from New York on 18th Sept hence are now due on these shores.

Personal

SEY-LOLO.—Chief of the Eastern Gbargroo we learn was in Town about the 21st inst.

Mr. E. A. Lewis was down we believe with his Landlord on business about the 20th inst.

MANDOE ITEMS.

The District Superintendent visited this station on the 25th inst. His stay though a brief one was delightful. Many important and perplexing matters received his careful attention. The People of Mandoe thoroughly cleaned their town of every weed on the 25th inst. as though they thought of doing honor to the Dist. Supt. who arrived here on the 25th.

It is reported that Canray Bassy intends bringing some war boys to plunder this place. How true we dont know.

EARLY MARRIAGE.

Thus grief still tread upon the heels of pleasure,
Married in haste, we may repent at leisure.

In writing upon the first of the three great divisions into which we have thought necessary to treat the above Subject, we really desire that the above quotation from "Concreve," "The old Bachelor," "Act V. Scene I." would not serve as discouragement to those who may be on the eve of effecting Early Marriage or in any way tend to discourage or prejudice their intention.

Now a days, that the world is overrun with Romantic Fortune-Hunters, who sniff their noses about to smell in order to detect where fortune is by Early Marriage, now a days that inexperienced youths there are who through indigent circumstances may easily be got to go contrary to their souls' desire and contrary to their consciences to effect Early Marriage and make a Bargain with anticipation of reaping some pecuniary gain thereby, it is indeed a risque to write upon the above Subject, without giving some offence where none is intended.

We cannot conceive that among your readers, there may be any one heart so calous or understanding so depraved as not to feel any sense of sympathy for the helpless and incensiderate manner, youths in most civilized coasts, go about to effect Early Marriage through mercenary motives, even without first ascertaining the worth of their Purse and the standard of their experience.

A boy who admires his person in a mirror, his clean collar and breast and perhaps with a small salary of some 36 or £15 per annum, soon enters into a resolution of making his fortune by marriage with the daughter of one of the C who may be able to furnish himself and partner with almost all the necessaries of life, thereby making his entire existence one of wrestlessness and everlasting regret—We do not condemn the system of Early Marriage, on the contrary we are of opinion that it is the safest method for the restraint of vice, and the promotion of virtue. It is the source upon which in some measure or the other, a country's social and moral improvement depends. It is an institution calculated for a constant scene of so much delight as our being is capable, it helps the suppression of crimes and misdemeanors, and as well augments by lawful means the population of the country where it is encouraged and patronized, in fine, it is like mirriage in matrimonial periods, the state capable of the highest human felicity and unanimated by mercenary motives it is a move in the right direction. Consequently, we cannot condemn the system.

What we chiefly are against is its being carried out by unlawful means.—In this fault-finding age, Fortune-Hunters and Fortune Stealers under the garb of honest men very indiscretely labour in the choice of wives, they care less about making good selection, and so soon as they are indaced by the hope toget some property Real or Personal, they effect a marriage regardless of all ills, all consequences and disadvantages that must necessarily be the result of an indiscreet selection, and mark you! these sorts of "Fellehs" may by their lives and examples, evinced by a shameful and yet public demonstration of their conduct set very bad examples, or offered grave discouragements to those who are thinking of imitating their examples.

The youngman who in securing a wife at an early period of life, does so with caution and discretion is certain to enjoy happiness and obtain affection for, and sympaty of his partner in every particular, we say caution in regard to the haphazzard manner which the selection of a wife is made under the false and troublesome cloak of love; we say judgement relative to the fatal consequences that generally follow the track of marriage where no true love exists. If he marry from mercenary motives, he is sure ere long to become the object of pity & compassion. Perhaps with a small annual salary along side the probable expenses of a loving father and compassionate sister, he uses the strictest economy to shield himself from the reproach of a wife who being in every respect his superior, may always be ready to bring his worth his purse and position to the test. In some way or the other sometimes he is disappointed, either he is befooled or his anticipation as regards domestic happiness are destroyed in their growth. Poor youngman enjoying such an unpleasant trent at home, he soon finds equal uncomfortableness abroad—within he is miserable, without he is uncomfortable.

What a miserable apostate state then he may find himself; Imagine he walks about without his mind, his phisiognomy becomes dark, his countenance sad, and seems to defy even that of the phrenologist. What then we ask is the gain of Early marriage from mercenary motives?

The young woman who unfortunately is the victim of mirriage from mercenary motives is likewise the subject of her partners' grief and discomfort, especially when she is conscious of the motives that induced their union—With inexperience blushing in her face, she soon discovers herself the superior of her husband she would nothing encourage unless that which would bring him into direct contact with friends and at last into calumny and shame. She would not hesitate to under take any liability without her husbands knowledge and as a woman of fortune, would pride a little too much upon her wordly consequently value herself greater than her husband.

To be married therefore at an early period of life and obtain felicity is to insist on a good like and not an haphazard selection. For an indigent young man to be married to a woman in love of worldly pursuits, who is addicted to indulge in the want and use of the newest and most recent fashion is the surest method to obtain misery, discomfort, and wretchedness, in a word as it is evident marriage in absence of mercenary motives is sure to produce comfort, peace and cheerfulness, which last we must regard as the test promoter of health so early marriage with mercenary motives is certain to be productive of serious consequences. The system of choosing a wife superior to oneself in either talent, position or wealth and affluence is highly condemnable as will lead to unpleasant results. In such an union displeasure must exist. Repinings and secret murmurs of heart which always gives imperceptible strokes to the delicate fibres of which the vital parts are composed, must in the event of such an union, exercise their influences and in most cases prove very fatal.

We would however rather not choose to run the risque of pointing out the many instances indicative of the sorrows that unequal marriage, especially in early periods of life have produced, as we are afraid of introducing any thing that might seem to bear hard upon the merits or demerits of young married couples, being wholly sensible that though our arguments may be supported with all the powers of reason we might instead of gaining the opinion of those concern expose ourselves to their discesteem.

THE GRACCHI.

The opening services of Zion Wesleyan Chapel at Gbangbatook took place on the 10th inst, when two appropriate discourses were delivered at 11 in the forenoon by the Rev. J. C. Thomas and at four in the afternoon by the Rev. W. S Macaulay of the Gbangbiah Mission. At the morning service there were 112 natives, and half that number in the afternoon. Chiefs from the neighbouring towns assembled and showed their appreciation of the gospel. The Chapel was built by the Sierra Leone traders under the auspices of Messrs Pratt and Roman for the benefit of the natives in that direction; The Chiefs, who at the outset thought the traders had some improper object in view, were reluctant in granting the site, but now having found out that the object of the traders in asking for the site was simply to extend the Redeemer's kingdom, are glad that the Chapel has been built. It is to be hoped that converts to christianity would grow out of that seed ling mission.

To the Editor "Early Dawn."

Sir,—As you are more than interested in the cause of Education and improvement will you be good enough to give out Subjects for composition or essay to be written and to be published in the colums of your valuable paper, with prize to be awarded for the best composition or essay. This, I think will be a stimulus as well as an advantage to the reading public who will avail themselves the opportunity of competing for the prize; as also it will tend in a great measure to improve the youthful minds of our community. Pupils of schools may also share similar advantages as time and circumstance will admit.

Thanking you for the space I have occupied.

Yours very truly,

A.

OTTERBEIN STATION, BOMPEHTOKE.

Dear Mr. Editor,—If you remember some time in April I wrote an Article which appeared in your Issue of April 29th in behalf of the above named Station that is neglected. I was trying to show, first, The necessity of reopening it for the love of the name it bears only, which is Otterbein; that Venerable saint, who was the founder of your Church in America; And in the Second place, of the results that had accrued from it in comparision with the results of the other Stations. But since that article was published for the past six months I had been listening and looking quietly to see some thing done for this neglected station, but at best no step taken. Well I sit down, and after good consideration, I fancy that if I try again my article may be picked up by some one and a change for the better will be made. I must try to put before you Mr. Editor, that the pure religion of Christ is love. By loving each other shall men know that we are Christ's disciples. Saint Paul sums up Religious duty under these two heads, love to God and love to man; on these two hang all the Law and the Prophets. There is no exception to Christ's love for his church, and he has left us an example that we should follow his steps; so if we look into it closely we shall find that love is the very reserve o true religion, it is the main spring which puts everything in motion. This was the true feeling possessed by David, who having tasted that the Lord is gracious, was exceedingly desirous that not only those he saw around him but those afar off even should experience the same loving kindness. After this in the 67th Psalm we find a special prayer there, for the enlargement of Christ's kingdom. Phillip and also the woman of Samaria through love for their brethren, went out after they had found Christ inviting others to come, saying, come see the Christ who has told us all things. Whom you find Jesus tell others the story that your loving Saviour may be their Saviour too and looking into it closely I think that this was the christian feeling of the U. B. C. in America towards dark dark Africans in sending them the Gospel. This is indeed the true love which every child of God should have for his fellow creature. But if such be the case, his love should never be allowed to abate, even if cast on a sterile soil. "A good action shall never be thrown away if it is even done to a dog" much more to the saving of precious souls. Some part of the Scripture says that we must not be weary in well doing, and the divine injunction is, "Be thou faithful to the end and it thou art faithful till death I shall give you a crown of life, well it such is the case why don't you endeavour with Bompehtoke till death to receive that crown. We may say that Otterbein station may be looked upon as casting the children's bread to the dogs,but we should remember that the dogs eat the crumbs that fall from the master's table, do I beg earnestly to give the crumbs to Otterbein Station. There are too many little children who are unable to walk over land to Kookoong station for school, on this account they cannot be sent to school; and the station is not allowed to take any more boarders, or mission child ren just now. So they are not going to school. Dont be discouraged the tares are speaking away the wheat is remaining But some one may ask how do you mean that the tares are passing and the wheat is remaining I mean to say the old Sherbro people who have no delight in Religion and who are so stiff necked to hear the gospel preached are dead, and we the children whom it has pleased the Almighty to send as to school are remaining so few as we are, shall only the teacher for the remaining elders and heathen Bretheren to believe on the gospel. Time will not allow me to put all before you; let some thing be done for Bompehtoke, and great shall be your reward.

Thanking you Mr. Editor for the space occupied.

I remain yours as before,

G. M. DOMINGO.

GBANAH PONNOH OR THE PRAYING SHERBRO.

A young Sherbro gentleman about 8 miles from Mando Station, a regular attendant at divine service at the little Town M.,—was once asked by one of his own nationality how is it that he, as well as people of other distant towns S. 10, and even 12 miles off never find it difficult in walking so many miles every Lord's day to go to meeting Especially that Gbanah Ponnoh from N'koleh (8 miles off)who passes here regularly every Sabbath unless unavoidably prevented. He sometimes sleeps at my house when benighted and once at midnight I awoke and went to look at him and there he was on his knees praying, and his comrades began to laugh and mock. But the Christian gentleman candidly told them that they may laugh at Gbanah now, but at the end, they will find the tablet turned on their own heads, and praying Gbanah if he remains faithful will laugh at them in turn.

Men may scoff and mock at the Christian and his religion now, but at the end when the awful realities of the Spirit world break upon their vision they will be too glad then to exchange place with the Christian, but will simply be told the two memorable words as spoken by our Savior "Son remember."

IMMORALITY &c.,

Concluded from our last.

It is not a fact that the majority of mothers, make their sons and daughters emissaries of their vices, and is it not even more so with their servants? How many could we enumerate of mothers and daughters selling propriety, chastity, modesty, candour and conscience for the paltry gain of lucre? If the home and life must be moral, can it be denied that a great share of it depends on the mother? On the heads i. e. the manoeuline portion of the Community rests the burden of providing for the necessities of the family; and those whether from the drudge necessitated to leave hishome early daily: the middle classes of Tailors, Hawkers, who for the sake of a more commodious locality to effect an adequate acquisition of the "wherewithals" to make the home happy, must go off from his home. Traffickers, Officials, professionals, subordinates,all these "go forth to their labor until the evening." And can it be denied in the face of conscience, that in most of these cases, instead of the wives (mostly mothers) showing a lively interest in the toils of their husbands, and endeavour to set forth an example of industry, diligence, and affectionate feeling for the cares of the absent one for them, do they not invariably feel it a kind of pleasure when the hours for their partners departure arrives, and do they not instill the seeds of immorality in their children and servants by applying their services in hasty preparations of solids and fluids to feed their vicious caprices, and which action their little minds fail not to imbibe? Mr. Editor, this is general, and it is a sore evil.

If Africa must rise, gross immorality, incest, polygamny and all the kins of this ancestral abomination, must be regarded as an enemy to progression, and an effort(it must by striving) be made for their entire annihilation. If not, Africa " shall still be lien among the pots," and can never realize the place of having " her wings covered with silver and her feathers with yellow gold." Thanking you Mr. Editor for the space kindly granted me. I close for the present, with hopes of being spared to continue the subject.

I am Dear Mr. Editor,
LUTHER.

SPEAK SOFTLY.

Charity of speech is as devine a thing as charity of action. The tongue that speaketh no evil is lovely as the hand which giveth alms. To judge no one harshly, to misconceive no man's motives, to believe things are what they seem to be until they are proved otherwise, to temper judgement with mercy, surely is quite as good as to build up churches, establish asylums, and to found colleges.—Telescope.

COLONIAL AND INDIAN EXHIBITION.

LAGOS.

LONDON, 13 AUG., 1886.

This part of Western Africa, to judge from the Exhibits, has a speciality for certain articles which we do not find amongst the specimens of Native Manufacture shown in the other Sections of the West Coast. Brass-work is one of these specialities of which there is a large and very varied display, comprising Water-jugs, Coffee-pots, Bowls or Calabashes, &c., also grotesque groups of figures, and animals and a great many small works of the Customary Savage and distorted forms, to which it would be difficult to give any particular name but which too painfully show the uncivilized condition of the Natives in the immediate vicinity where this kind of industry is carried on, which we presume must be some distance in the interior, these rude productions compare unfavorably with the really beautiful examples of Leather-work, of which there are numerous specimens,we give the palm however to the large costumes which are worked in many colour-ed leathers, and having very elaborate and symetrically designed patterns they are complete works of Art and decisively create much comment and attraction from an admiring Public, there are some very curious Leather-bottles of strange shape, exhibited by Mr. Jos. Thompson, who sends also fine specimens of House-armour. Mr. J. S. Buckner shows some quaint looking Horse apporttinences and trappings, a "bit" with indescribable and intricate leather adornments being most peculiar. Leather-leggings and high boots embellished with fantastic ornamentation in many colours are creditable specimens of Native productions. The Grass-work exhibited is exceptionally fine and calls for the highest commendation there is an evenness and smoothness about it which makes it very attractive. Some of the Baskets are of great size, and beauty and apparently vastly superior to anything of the kind at any other part of the Coast, we observed some Hats, which for fineness of plait and exquisite finish closely resembled the famous Panama, this is evidently an industry in which the Lagos people excel and which they would do well to further cultivate and extend, as they seem capable of bringing it to great perfection.

The Catholic Mission exhibit a choice collection of Wood-work, Embroidery and Needle work generally, all of which has been worked by the girls of the Convent School, which calls for special praise. This Mission also sends some interesting Curiosities, amongst them an Ivory Horn used by the night Police of the King Pogto Novo, also a small Musical instrument, a small Gourd with the costomary netting around it, but instead of being string with Beads or Shells to jingle against the Gourd, the bone of a snake are used, giving it a strangely savage appearance.

Sir James Marshall C.M.G. exhibits probably as finely-a carved Task, as it is possible to obtain, the length of the Ivory is about 3 feet, and is simply a mass of elaborate carving's from the point to the butt there being no less than 700 distinct figures upon it. A smaller carved Ivory is shown by Mr. F. J. Crocker, and is also a very choice piece of workmanship.

The large and fine plan of the town of Lagos, prepared by W. T. G. Lawson C. E. a native, is certainly one of the features of the Lagos exhibits, indeed of the whole West Coast, it is a grand production and assists very materially to mitigate the deplorable want of Civilization which unfortunately prevails generally in the Exhibits from Western Africa.It is truly as an Oasis in an arid desert, and shows conclusively to what a high state of culture Natives are capable of attaining by careful Training and Education.

Mr. Geraldo Samuel native Calligraphist exhibits a specimen of his art, in the following ode which is highly illuminated in fancy colours and is mounted in a frame of Country Wood.

GOD SAVE THE QUEEN.

"Victoria thou Queen of the favoured Isles
In India honoured in Africa blest,
Couldst thou but lend thy listening ears awhile
To Afric's voice thou know'st her best beloved
Off on Albion's shore from Afric Coast
Receive the fruits of toil and jeopardy
In vain the Cystal talk sought in their boast
Afric loves thee, Queen of liberty."

Mr. Editor,—Permit me through the columns of your valuable Journal to make a few corrections on the article headed "N'Charmany Station" of 15th inst from the pen of the Revd J. Gomer. In the first place I am opposed to that Article as having "N'Charmany Station" as a Subject from the fact that it does not at all contain any thing suitable for that Subject, but a few obscure statements which I think will mislead the minds of the public. I do not handle my pen to criticise but to give an elucidation of facts I quote the following from the Revd gentleman's Article. "The town is miserably dirty" is a correct statement. That "there is altogether too many dogs in it" is incorrect. The fact is, there are only eight dogs owned by a native and they are of Service, as they assist in entering buildments. That "a flock of Geese went with us from the Mission Station" is only an exaggeration of facts; as there were only four dogs in the Mission Station there. In point of fact Mr Editor, I calculate that this reflected greatly on the teacher of that Station, and also that dogs use to form part of the attendance in divine Service. Let it be understood that the house of worship, as at last achieved of her company by death. As the widower's means were limited, the funeral was was plain, but respectable enough to satisfy any reasonable relative. The brother of the deceased lady, however, was not a reasonable man; and on the return of the mourners to the house he ridiculed the funeral, said that it was mean, undemonstrative, and so quiet that all the neighbors must have considered it niggardly.

"Yes it was rather quiet" responded the widower; "but what did you expect? Did you want me to show my submission to the decree of Providence in removing my late lamented spouse, by closing the funeral with a display of fireworks! I did think of a cheerful display of some sort, but abandoned the idea because I feared the neighbors might talk about it, and say that I was giving too much expression to my feelings.——Sel.

Yours sincerely,

As green as a gosling,
As brisk as a bee;
And now let me stop,
Lest you weary of me.

EXPRESSING HIS FEELINGS.

A——man whose matrimonial life had been anything but happy in consequence of the quarrelsome habits of his wife, who thus contrived to keep him constantly in hot water with the neighbors, was at last relieved of her company by death. As the widower's means were limited, the funeral was was plain, but respectable enough to satisfy any reasonable relative. The brother of the deceased lady, however, was not a reasonable man; and on the return of the mourners to the house he ridiculed the funeral, said that it was mean, undemonstrative, and so quiet that all the neighbors must have considered it niggardly.

"Yes it was rather quiet" responded the widower; "but what did you expect? I did think of a cheerful display of some sort, but abandoned the idea because I feared the neighbors might talk about it, and say that I was giving too much expression to my feelings.——Sel.

The Early Dawn.

BONTHE, SHERBRO.

Novr. 15, 1886.

DRUNKENESS.

From what we can gather from our community here the prevailing sentiment of the better classes of society is opposed to Drunkeness; but unfortunetely the best and most influential men among us are favorable to moderate drinking or in other words the free use of intoxicants as a beverage hence no Tea, Dinner, or other party is, or can be given without the use of wines, and such seems to be the awful depravity of nature that the majority of men and women indulge too freely, and if at first they only become funny, they gradually loose their moderation and if any adversity overtakes them they are sure to become drunken. But popular drinking produces drunkeness in many other ways a few only of which we may now mention; first in persons of weak constitutions who not being able to bear up under what others regard as a moderate quantity; Second those who have the handling of the wines, especially at Dinner parties, as in some cases, we have seen mere boys supplying the company with the various kinds of beverages, all of which no doubt in some way they get a taste. Third, Children of parents who use freely the various kinds of drinks in one way or another partake of them often enough to imbibe a taste that very likely will never be satisfied with moderate drinking. In the fourth place the general effect on the ignorant masses is very pernicious; so much so that thousands of laboring men and women are being drawn, by the example of moderate drinkers into the way that ends in drunkeness and debauchery. But to us, the worst phase of the drinking habit that curses our town to day is that of the women indulging in the use of Rum, Gin &c., the lowest of all abominations, and these can sometimes be met with in the places of Worship, as was the case in one of our churches only a few Sabbaths ago, a woman in the house of God smelling like a Rum Cask. Now we appeal to the better classes of our community to know if they do not feel that something should be done to checkmate the increase of the drunkeness that has become so common in our streets, that it has at length, and that too in feminine garments, dared to cross the threshold of our most sacred precints, to insult the worshippers in the house of God with the stench of rum. Oh! that we had words to express our feelings against strong drink, drunkeness, and their shameful results.

DOGS.

Of late have become rather a nuisance in town and country, for like some of the people, though not too religious, yet they insist on attending the chapels and living in houses with their owners. When these canine gentlemen and ladies get into the House of Prayer they never lie down and keep quiet with out much constraint, but insist on walking about as if employed to inspect the Audience, and they even feel it their duty sometimes to "speak out in meeting" which is to say the least of it quite unbecoming in pious dogs, and certainly no others ought to be allowed to attend Religous Services. But we, like the Rev. J. Gomer of Shaingay are opposed to dog equality and hence our friends will excuse for saying that dogs have no business in the house of God or any other house with genteel people, however useful they may be to catch Bush Beef.

A FEW OMISSIONS.

In our last three Issues we omitted to note several items of interest among the which we may mention the return of our Bishop, Dr. Flickinger to Europe from the United States. The safe arrival of Mr J. H. Ashcroft home to England and the improvement of his health; Also the return of Capt. Judson A. Lewis, U. S. Consul at Freetown from his European tour and of Mrs. Lewis' visit to America from which she is expected to return about the end of this month, and several other items that we cannot mention but we trust we shall be a little more careful of future notices especially when we have the information as in above cases in due time.

HUMAN LEOPARDS.

During our last visit to the Gbargroo, while at Avery Station, on the Manoh Brauch of river; we were informed of a boy being sent on an errand, who in going hurriedly along ran upon three huge men painted in such manner as to resemble leopards, of course this discovery was, accidental and the men spoke to the boy and bade him pass on, however he would not but returned and reported what he had seen; other men were sent to search for the painted men but of course the latter had secreted themselves and could not be found.

OPINIONS ON POLYGAMY AND BAPTISM.

From a Report to the "Christian World" Oct 14th of the Proceeding of the Church Congress at Wakefield England, we clip the following from the item on Foreign Missions.

"At the sitting devoted to foreign missions the question of polygamy occupied a prominent position. It was largely dealt with the Bishop of Exeter, who related that General Gordon once asked Bishop Temple whether converts might be allowed to retain three wives each, as the Bishop did not think it could be allowed, and Gordon replied, "What a pity! I might convert all Africa if you would allow that." The Bishop of Exeter said his view, founded on the general opinion of the best authorities on the subject, was in favour of admitting a polygamist to baptism and excommunicating a convert who took more wives than one. That, he thought, would stamp out polygamy in a generation a strong converts, and permit the Gospel to penetrate the whole system of society. Nor should all converts be required to renounce each of they would only so far overcome their repugnance as to join in communion with brothers or sisters of a lower caste. As to polygamy, a different view was expressed by the Bishop of Zululand, who said he did not feel bound to recognise the contract of the polygamous husband, the case of the women he thought was different, since she was fateful to the one man to whom she was bound, and he had allowed baptism in such cases. The Rev. J. Johnson, examining chaplain to the Bishop of Sierra Leone, and a native minister in West Africa, condemned the admission of polygamists to baptism.

The Annual meeting of the U. B. C. will be held, we are informed, at Shaingay to commence on Friday the 17th of December 1886. All the ministers teachers &c. of the Mendi, Bompeh, and Sherbro Missions are expected to be present on the above date at Flickinger Chapel Shaingay the hour of meeting to be hereafter given.

To the Editor "Early Dawn."

Dear Mr. Editor,—Let me through the medium of your valuable Journal bring before the notice of the Authorities at Bonthe the undue advantage taken by the Tomah Wolf and his followers over British Subjects and God's people here. About three weeks ago while engaged in quiet family devotion to retire for the night, the Tomah Wolf and his followers came out of their bush making hideous noise around the town and finally stopped in front of my house and made one more hideous noise (when they are out none dare to be out from their houses) when they listened and understood that we were having Family Prayers the devil fell into a great rage bellowing and yelling in the most unearthly manner, and one of his followers said in pass brogue "you no 'fraid, you nose go cut "?

We however continued in prayer to our Heavenly Father and retired. After a while the herald who pretends to understand what all the unearthly yellings were about, said in a loud voice to the people of the town that a man has defied their power today for when the peril spoke a man who said he was paying to God dared to speak and that the devil will not allow that any more. This class of people Mr. Editor is the most troublesome, disturbing and lazy part of the people, in and around this place. They virtually hold sway here for they boast much of having the power to cut people's noses by their greegrees. This keeps people of all classes in continual dread of them. Now Mr. Editor, I believe the God who gave me being alone can do with me what he wills.

And though two sparrows be sold for a fathing, yet one of them shall not fall to the ground without our Heavenly Father's notice. But this is not all, they disturb the public peace in that because they hate work they do not wish others to work. And when the poor people are out looking after their business, either cracking nuts or separating the Kernels from the shells, extracting Palm Oil or hoeing their garden, or a woman may be slanching her clothes and hanging them to dry, cooking in the kitchen, which unlike English kitchens is built apart from the dwelling house, a child maybe going for water or on his way to school, a man may be going on business and on a sudden you hear the Tomah wolf proceeded a few places by his herald who cries "kefuer kefuer" (run run) and then Mr. Editor, men, women and children seized with an indescribable panic, go tumbling one over another into their houses, those at a distance from their houses, rush into other people's and Nuts, Palm oil, Clothes, Cutlasses, Hoes cooking utensils, breakfast or dinner perhaps on the fire, are left to take care of themselves, the Tomah Wolf, his herald and followers enjoying the sight as cruel Nero did at the general conflagration of Rome. They often take pleasure in frightening the people of God out of Church during Divine Service, with the most cruel satisfaction. These and more than these are what we are experiencing from these disorderly, proud, and cruel people, and yet Mendi is within British jurisdiction. Now Mr. Editor as it is generally admitted by all of Her Majesty's subjects in and around these parts, as the welcome and congratulatory Articles with which the two previous issues of your valuable journal were replete, could testify, that we are blessed with a christian gentleman as our Commandant, a lover of order, christian progress and everything that is elevating. Will the Authorities give the matter a prompt and earnest attention which it requires that our Sovereign Lady the Queen be duly represented by a Police Constable to be stationed here?

Thanking you for space allowed me

I remain,

Manda, Sherbro, Nov. 4. 86. Dear Mr. Editor, Yours respectfully, B. C. T.

NEWS ITEMS.

Vienna and London seem to have been much stirred over a Report of the assassination of the Czar of Russia about the 22nd ult. Several dispatches of which seem to have flashed over the wires between St. Petersburg and Vienna ere the truth could be ascertained; when from our best information it would appear that His Majesty had not been killed but that he had killed some one else. But however this may have been, it appears certain that the report of his assassination was false.

Birth.—We understand that Mrs M. L. Jarrett wife of Doctor Jarrett colonial surgeon of this place has been delivered of a son on the 31st ult. We hereby congratulate the Doctor and Mrs Jarrett upon their new arrival.

It has been reported here that the s. s. John Brown came out to Shaingay a few days ago and hence it is believed that the missionaries have arrived from America.

We regret to note the bereavement that has lately befallen Mr R. T. Collier of this place in the loss of a daughter who we believe was attending Annie Walsh memorial School in Freetown at the time of her death.

Personal

Mrs T. E. M. Dillett—of Shaingay was in town and called on us about the 12th inst she left on her return to Shaingay on the 13th.

Mr. S. A. St John—Of this place has been taking, we believe some Photographic views of buildings and Premises in this place: those he was kind enough to send for our inspection, we pronounce very fine indeed. We understand further that ere long he is to Photograph quite a number of the principle Stations of the Mendi, Sherbro and Bompeh Missions.

GBARGROO ITEMS.

Avery Station; seems to be in a very prosperous condition, religiously, there appears especially to be a real good spiritual work going on among the children and young men of the Industrial School of course many have not yet yielded to this influence, but if it continues as now, they must ere long fall into line with those who are trying to live good.

A New Factory, in sight of the Mendi Mission House, at Avery Station, but above and accross the River we have been shown a site that is being cleared and we are informed that Mr. Wm. Lewis junior, contemplates opening a Factory shortly on the same; we only wish him a good Business.

Photography.—On our last visit to the Gbargroo, Mr. E. Albert Lewis presented us with Four Photographic views which he had taken of the Manoh lake at low and high tide—also of the House and Station; these we prize very much and feel under many obligations to the Donor for them, and wish him greater success and larger patronage in this line of business.

Koconuny.—All seemed quiet there on our last visit about the 1st instant. We called on the Teacher and his School, but it being Monday, it was not a favorable time, however, Mr. Baker assured us that on other days his attendance is good. The headman was rejoicing in his Religious Prospects. While Corporal Peacock seemed to be in fine bodily health; neat and tidy in personal appearance and manly in his bearing.

To the Editor "Early Dawn."

Dear Mr. Editor,—Permit me a space within this issue to return my sincere thanks to Mr. J. Augustus Cole, who has so ably and intelligently informed, and also furthered and assisted my views which had generated the questions on "FREE-MASONERY." I was aware that I would be charged or looked upon as one wavering in my faith and profession. I am to say, if it be thought so it is all mistake. I fully know and firmly believe in the only salvation through Christ; for indeed "there is no other name whereby we can be saved."

True it is, that "wonders will never cease;" for when such Secret Societies as the Purroh, Kofong, Egoogo and Oro are only (what we may call) rude forms of Free masonery; perpetrated by the one an inferior, and other a superior class of people; where then is the moral difference! The Africans indulging in theirs, are subjugated with the doubtful pharaseology "Can the Ethiopian change his skin, or the leopard his spots' But when men, ranked amongst what we are taught to recognise as civilized and enlightened; intelligent men in Commerce, Legislation Ecclesiastics and Government; especially Ecclesiastics, serving God, mammon and Baal: the commerce of civilized nations, manufacturing the "aprons," "collar" and the electrum of folly;—what must it be called! I would my worthy friend Mr J. Aug. Cole, who is in every way qualified as an Author would issue a Pamphlet on this subject (regretting that I am incapable) for in this as well as in the rum traffic, it would seem an undeniable fact, that The fathers are eating sour grapes, and the children's teeth are set on edge. However as something akin to my wish is expected to be published by the Author of The hope Sherbro's future greatness I close with wishing that your readers will not surmise at least that I am in conjunction with Pythagoras. Thanking you Mr. Editor, for occupying your columns.

I remain, yours, EARNSHAW C.

Shaingay, Novr. 13th '86.

To the Editor of the "Early Dawn"

Dear Mr. Editor,—Although I note with regret, in your issue of the 15th ult: of the closing at present the prosperous and enterprising Store of the S. M. Mission, as by its continuance, it would have, as has been plainly evinced, that much as well, if not more could be done in merchantry without the nefarious traffic in demon Rum, yet I am happy for the extension of the "Early Dawn" Printing Office, as by this it is to be hoped, that this now popular Journal may not only continue to be so, but that it will soon make its appearance as many others of it contemporaries in the trans Alantic shores, if not even in an eight paged form, but in more extensive garb, to meet the wants of the times. Wishing you unalloyed success.

I remain Mr. Editor, Sincerely yours, EARNSHAW C.

Shaingay, Nov. '86.

Dear Mr. Editor,—Whilst proceeding on my tour up the Tucker River on the 28th inst as far as to Sankoh where one Madame Pitts residing, the news was brought to me, that a Soo-soo man a stranger belonging to Mangalbe, went to steal at a cassada farm at Mo-Conday where Mrs Postmaster was transacting her business of late, this said robber was well armed before he went out to officiating his dirty tricks, however he proceed on or about 12 o'clock noon and jumped at Farmah's old cassada field, and the said Farmah,s boys two of them went out that very day to keep watch at their cassada farm, he was on his nasty and bad habit in the height pulling the cassada whilst this man who went a little boy caught hold of the man by the wrist and they wrisling on, on the meantime this little boy was making alarm but to no avail then the Soo soo man drew off his sword and cut off the owner's boys fingers off and deserted your bush leaving his he cap and his gown.

What do you think Mr Editor ? If not through the mercy of God the robber would have created a toilful murder and fled away as he did now. In walking alone now we gets dread of which craft and the robbers really. I am surpised to see how the country is attacked by thieves and witch craft by water as well as land.

Yours as usual, TOURIST.

Dear Editor—I believe some of your readers are of the opinion that Zainus had failed, from the fact that some of your correspondents(I need not mention any name) wrote against the Article. But permit me a space in your valuable journal Mr E. to tell them that he has not failed.

Dear readers before going any further I must first tell you of a certain correspondent,allow me to mention his name as he styles himself,y John Milton a native of Shengay that he is an impostor. First, he calls himself a native of Shengay whilst he is not so. He deceives your readers and forges the right of an inhabitant of Shengay. The people are still indulging in their heathen customs, forgetting the great God and the labors of his servant especially the Rev J. Gomer as I may say is flesh of our flesh and bones of our bones. I as one, a true native of Shengay not as that John Milton have the belief that it is because of the chapel not being again rebuild. Although I am an adult, yet if I had the hold of any office at Shengay I would have effect to have Shengay's fame spread over the world both in Religion and civilization. Thanking you Mr. Editor for the space occupied.

THE EASTERN CRISIS.

Philippolis Oct. 21.

An Official Telegraphic despatch received here to day, bequest the Deputies to the Sobranje to assemble at Tirnova on the 27th inst. Colonel Nicolajeff, Minister of War, arrived here this morning.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 22.

Several of to-days papers, commenting upon the article on the Bulgarian crisis published yesterday by the Journal de St. Petersbourg, expresses the wish that the semi-Official organ had enlightened the subject to a greater extent upon the public. The Novoe Vremya regrets that the cause of the late fall on Bourse was left in the dark. The Novosti is of opinion that the article would have produced a more tranquillising effect had it offered some guarantees for an absolutely pacific solution of present complications.

FRANCE AND THE ENGLISH OCCUPATION OF EGYPT.

Paris October 22.

The Journal des Debats, in an article to day referring to the approaching reimbursement of the quarter per cent; which was deducted from the coupon of the Egyptian Preference Dept by virtue of the London Convention, Censures the financial measures taken by the English Administration with the object of averting European intervention in egyptian finance. The article concludes as follows;—"Whatever England may do she will not succeed in withdrawing Egyptian affairs from the just controle of those who have collective, or individual interest in the Nile Valley. England delays the evacuation Egypt as long as possible in the hope that European complications—which she plainly seeks to provoke—will allow her to establish herself permanently in that country. It is imagined in London that France if the case presented itself, would resign herself to an act of appropriation which would render England mistress of the route to her colonies and Sovereign of the Mediterranean. Great people sometimes cherish great illusions."

GENERAL SIR F. ROBERTS.

Rangoon, October 22.

General Sir Fredrick Roberts will leave India for Burmah immediately. The Globe.

It seems rather unfortunate that most men, however honest, or religiously disposed, otherwise, are prone to the idea, that they must in some way, when considering the characters or actions of others, pass upon their faults, or even foibles, as well as their virtues; and at the same time feel, that others in speaking of them should be as charitable as only to mention their goodness, even to the catout, of exaggeration of statement.

EARLY MARRIGAE.

Dear Sir,—A strict attention to our health which during the past week, had been very much injured sided by curious Concurrent circumstances over which we can exercise no control, has prevented us to send you any portion of this "Early Marriage" for your next week's publication.

On Sunday last we took in, suddenly ill, suffering from cold internally, accompanied by sympathetic pains, all over the parts of the upper limbs, to great pressure, which really makes manipulation painful to us.

We however hope ere long, to continue the Good Word so much intended for the benefit of all concerned.

With due regards Sincerely Yours, THE GRACCHI.

Hearts That Once Beat In Unison.

For a year past a pair of souls in Flushing, Long Island, have been accustomed to share a thought between them, and two devoted hearts have beat in such close and perfect unison as to produce but one rounded and complete throb. Now, alas! they do so no more forever, and all on account of a cough.

Miss. C——and her fiance, Mr. L——, attended the sociable at the Baptist church parlors recently, and were happy as usual in each other's society, except that Mr. L—— was somewhat disturbed by a hacking cough with which Miss C was suffering. When at last the sociable was over, and the pair started on the three quarter-mile lap to Miss C——'s house which, it being moonlight and not too late, it is safe to assume was not to be covered too quickly—the lady was seized with a violent paroxysm of coughing. In great distress Mr L——supported her tenderly, wishing he might cough for her, when a happy thought struck him. He always carried troches in his pocket; possibly one was about him then. A quick search filled him with triumph.

"Take this," he said, pressing it upon her "it will give you relief, I am sure," and the young woman gratefully put the small flat disk upon her tongue.

They walked on. Miss C—— sucked upon the troche and hung upon her lover's words and one or the other acted so soothingly that her coughing spells were few and far between. Several times Mr. L—— inquired with solicitude if the troche were dissolved, receiving each time the assurance that it was not yet.

There was a prolonged and interesting farewell at the door, in which, for the time both cough and remedy were forgotten. As Mr. L——moved away, however, his anxiety returned, and he called back, "Shall I leave another troche?" And in the light of later events it struck Miss C——there was a mocking cadence in his tone.

She tightly decline his offer, and entered the house. A few moments afterward, by the light of her bedroom lamp, a discovery took place which so aroused her indignation that in a moment Cupid fled, and before she slept the letter containing the fatal words "all is over was written.

In his anxiety he had unwittingly given her a trousers button.—Harper's Monthly

FALLING IN LOVE.

A Champion of lovers and the ordinary course of love-making has risen up in the person of Mr. Grant Allen, who, in the current Fortnightly, throws down the gauntlet of defiance to Sir George Campbell and his recent suggestion, that the foolish matrimonial tastes of young people should be superseded by the deliberate choice of their parents with a view to the improvement of the race. For the present method of choice by instinct Sir George would substitute selection by art, under the impression that if this were done, there would be physical and mental giants in those days. But he is altogether wrong, according to Mr. Grant Allen, who, being a thorough Darwinian, sees in Falling in Love, as conducted by the human species, the last and highest development of that process of Sexual Selection which runs through the entire animal kingdom and is itself a branch of the greater process of Natural Selection by which all forms of life have reached their present condition. Taking the average tendencies of men and women, we find they fall in love with what is young, and beautiful, and strong; and that as individuals they fall in love with their compliments—short people with tall, dark with fair. These tendencies make for the perfection of the race. It is not a part of this theory that there is only one man or woman in the world for whom the lover is destined; for probably every one could find dozens of suitable mates, and most people do fall in love over and over again. Yet towards the vast mass of our fellow-creatures there is indifference, and this is due to nature's guiding voice. But if Sir George Campbell's plan were tried, the result would probably be that constitutions would be spoiled, and stereotyped patterns of amiable imbecility produced. Under the existing system, the delicately balanced organs and faculties of the race have preserved their equilibrium, and every good point is being improved; so that it would be an act of folly to interfere with this marvelous instinct. But if we get such good results from Falling in Love, how comes it that so many weakly children are born? To this question Mr. Grant Allen is ready with the answers, that no instinct is perfect; that after all each man marries, not the absolutely best-adapted woman, but the best obtainable there and then; and that Falling in Love has never yet had among civilised races a fair field and no favour. Heiresses, however ugly, hysterical, or unhealthy, have generally been married; and among the upper classes only a small percentage of marriages, is due to love, or instinct, alone. Religion also has played an influential part in preventing natural marriages, by interposing conventional barriers between persons of different faiths. The great counterpoise to this unwise interference is to be found in novels, the writers of which always side with the young against their parents, and make it their mission to deliver the world from Sir George Campbell and his theories. For the rebels and sentimentalists are right in this case, and prudent parents wrong. If husbands and wives have been chosen not for manliness or beauty, but for "sterling qualities of mind and character," we should now be a miserable race of prigs and book worms. The men who marry balances at the bank die out. Falling in Love, on the other hand, actually does assort together mutually helpful people. Although they choose while as yet they have but little knowledge of the world, the result of their choice tends generally to their own happiness, and still more to the production of their offspring. Marriage for love will probably, therefore last forever; at least Mr. Grant Allen hopes so. And in this hope most of his young readers will undoubtedly share. —The Christian World.

WORTH DOING.

Always say, "Yes, sir," "No, sir," "Yes, papa," "No, papa," "Thank you," "No, thank you" "Good night" "Good morning." Never say "how," or "which," for "what." Use no slang terms. Remember good spelling, reading, writing and grammar are the base of all true education. Clean clothes, clean shoes, and clean finger nails indicate good breeding. Have a place for everything and everything in its place. Rap, before entering a room and never leave it with your back to the company. Never enter a private room or public place with your hat on. Always offer your seat to a lady or an old gentleman. Let your companions enter the carriage or room first. At the table, eat with your fork; sit up straight; and when leaving, ask to be excused. Never put your feet on cushions, chairs, or tables. Never overlook anyone when he is reading or writing. Never talk or whisper aloud in a private room when anyone is singing or playing on a piano. Loud coughing, hawking, yawning, sneezing, and blowing are ill mannered. In every case cover your mouth with your handkerchief, which never examine. Nothing is more vulgar than spitting on the floor. Treat all with respect especially the poor. Be careful to injure no one's feelings by unkind remarks. Never tell tales. Never ridicule the lame. Never mimic the unfortunate. Never be cruel to insects, birds, animals, or any other brutes.—Sel.

"To The Editor of the Early Dawn"

Dear Mr Editor—I am in stance of this Station wants a boat. Was not a boat given to this Station when it was was newly opened, enabling the teacher to go down to the superintendent for consultation &c &c when necessary? why should the present teacher be transported as it were a? Man that we as teacher do not go down to Bonthe frequently as I do not always habit at Mandow, in going to Bonthe, hence the teacher is obliged many times to write out his report and other Station matters long before the appointed time proposed, I can not show you all the various reasons why a boat should be given to this Station but I hope I will be able in my next to show some more reasons. From what the teacher has often said of the superintendent I believe he would be very willing to grant a boat to this Station if the good people in America who are supporting this Station will instruct him to do so. The teacher spoke of encouragement in his last report. I would that in his next to read from the "Early Dawn" that a boat has been granted to this Station. Then I will feel more than paid for my pains the work will be more encouraging The teacher I guess will have to thank the good people of America for their untiring efforts the superintendent for his encouragement and the Master, who is the grand disposer of all things and I too will send my tribute of praise on behalf of my country people. Thanking you for the space allowed me.

With this I am, Dear Mr. Editor,
Sincerely yours,

COLONIAL AND INDIAN EXHIBITION.

BAGOS.—Continued.

One of the most instructive exhibits in this section is made by Prices' Patent Candle Company Limited, and shows to what uses Palm Oil may be applied. Probably there are very few persons in Western Africa who really know what actually becomes of the Palm Oil which they buy from day to day and year to year, and which is exported from the Coast in such great quantities. The above Company by their most interesting exhibits show that no less than 10 different results are possible of being obtained from the crude Palm Oil. These results are contained in handsome narrow white glass bottles, about 3 feet high and perfectly plain, so that the contents may be more distinctly seen.

No. 1. Contains Palm Oil in its Crude State.

" 2. contains Palm Oil after Separation, this is Amended Prime Yellow.

3. Rough Glycerine obtained from Soapmaking. Dark Brown.

4. Pure Glycerine by Distillation from No. 3 - White.

5 Palm Oil after acidification and Separation, this is Amended Prime Yellow.

6. Stearic Acid, or Candle Material, obtained from No. 5 - Dirty White.

7 Soft Patty Acids, Intermediate material passed from No. 6 - Dirty White.

8. Oleic Acid, Oil pressed from No. 7. —Dense Dark Brown.

9. 17-18 Oil, purified Oleic Acid, as used for wool scouring—Light Brown.

10. Pale Oleic Acid, for pharmaceutical purposes—Light Yellow.

A peculiar feature is the variety of colours which are produced in the several stages through which the raw oil passes.

Mr. G. L. Gaiser is to be greatly thanked for his magnificent and exhaustive collection of Natural Products embracing as it does over 60 different specimens, but for the forethought of this gentleman, Lagos would indeed have been poorly represented. There are a few articles of well made Furniture noticeably a Table about 3 feet 6 inches wide inlaid with 25 different Woods and being highly polished and of pretty design, but a very elegant appearance this exhibit is made by Mr. Justice Smallman Smith On the wall is arranged a neat device comprised entirely of country made Walking sticks. Many having curiously carved handles, mostly grotesque heads of men with very long black Beards, as so many have this adornment it might be infered that the Beard has some typical signification. Some models of Native Huts are shown, one being very large about 6 feet by 3 feet these models give a very good idea of the rude and primitive style of living amongst the Natives.

A curious exhibit is made by Mr. F. Evans and we believe the only thing of the kind in the Exhibition, an Executioner's mask, which is a kind of Nett in Brass Steel Beads, and having a fringe about 4 inches, depending from it, made of larger sized beads, of a slate colour; the whole arrangement is very barbaric both in conception and appearance. The Lagos Government show an illuminated Mahommedan Book, or more properly speaking, "single leaves" or Sheets of paper which are profusely covered in colours and gold descriptive of Mosques, interspersed with verses from the Koran, the wirl-bats or lines wherein the indentures of the designs interwingled by the quaint Arabic characters, render those productions very picturesque and striking but attractive. The remaining exhibits are simply a heterogeneous collection of what would be termed in England "Curios" comprising a great assortment of articles in Brass work, Leather work, Mats, Baths, Country Sofas, Chairs, Rattaches &c. which call for no special comment but which help materially to show the public the state of civilization in Western Africa. That this great National Exhibition has done, and is still doing, much good in diffusing knowledge to the Masses is admitted on all sides, the food of real practical information to be gained by a few visits is unlimited, and we believe it is not too much to say, that hundreds of thousands of the three millions of persons who have already visited the Exhibition, have become better acquainted with The Colonies and India in a few months that the Exhibition has been open than they could possibly have hoped to acquire by any amount of Book-reading—they are not only enabled to see, but they can also handle the productions of every English Colony, and not merely this, but so perfect has the management been under the personal direction of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, that in several instances, many things of great interest, are actually manufactured daily before the Public, by Natives brought purposely to England from different part. of Her Majesty's Dominions, if anything were really wanting to prove conclusively to Englishmen and Englishwomen their country's greatness, this drawing together under one roof in miniature as it were, of England's vast possession and their resources, the Universe, should be more than sufficient to convince the greatest skeptic, that the old England of to-day is still the old England of the past, and so long as Her most gracious majesty Queen Victoria is spared to rule over her gigantic Empire so long may her Peoples rest assured that England will continue to be as it has always been the most favoured country in the world.

Mr. Editor,—In glancing over an Article in your last issue from the pen of an Eye Witness, I was rather surprised to think that he felt so much annoyed at the Article, by the Revd. J. Gomer on N'Charmany Station, because that he objects to dogs attending Services; and then proceeds to inform your readers of mistakes—1st, as to a flock of Dogs from the Station, where, as he says there were only four dogs, 2nd too many dogs in the town, for he says there are only eight dogs in the town and that they all belong to one man, who lives close to, and attends the place of worship; from all of which I gather that at that one Service at N'Charmany there were about twelve dogs, and from the fact that the Eye Witness could not keep back the Station Dogs, nor yet drive out the town chaps, I should infer that these cats are an unruly lot, at least, and would be more than likely to attract more attention than resist anything else. The very idea of twelve dogs, and some of them growling too, in one country Harem during Divine Service seems enough to provoke an Angel, especially in the face of the Scripture which says "Give not that which is holy unto Dogs." Thanking you for space accorded.—I remain, MEETING AN ANGEL.

An old clergyman over 80 years of age, who had spent 50 years of his life in a parish of New England, met a little boy on the street who had not yet seen him before. "Good morning my little child" he said; "what is your name? As he spoke, he laid his reverend hand upon the little fellow's head. The boy told his name, and the gentleman said, O, I am glad to see you! I hoped to meet you; I have been looking for you. I knew your dear mother, who is now in heaven." The child ran home, and almost breathlessly exclaimed, "O auntie dear, I met an angel from heaven, and he knows my dear mamma up there, and stopped me on the street to tell me!" The long silvery hair of the aged messenger of God and his saintly face, with those kind words spoken, made this beautiful impression upon the mind of the motherless child.—Itinerant.

Lord Derby's belief that we are on the eve of a considerable commercial revival is also held by baron HENRY DE WORMS, President of the Board of Trade Dinning a new political club at North Shields, Baron DE WORMS said there were better accounts of our foreign trade, imports and exports alike having increased. There was a rise in the prices of wool, coffee, and rice. There were hopeful signs that a reaction was coming. Trade, he declared, was being calmly and quietly re-established. It is to be hoped that this optimistic view will be justified in the future. The lane of depression has been long, and it is quite time that we turned the corner. May the Government keep us out of warfare, which more than anything else "breaks the arm of toil!"—Christian World.

Recently, a clergyman, while announcing in his pulpit an appointment for the ladies of his congregation to meet at the Orphan Asylum, on a benefiary visit to the institution, closed the announcement with the following words: "The ladies will take their own refreshments, so as not to eat up the orphans."—Sel.

WAHT SHALL WE READ?

Would indeed seem to be a pertinent question today among those who read at all, in the various communities of this Coast for it appears that this question must be settled in some way, ere we can expect to have a really intelligent populace on these shores, otherwise our schools and institution of learning will fail to enlighten the masses even of those who are under the influence of civilization. At the present young men are chiefly the Reading Class. And this might adjust itself to the general instruction of the people; but for the fact that their taste for reading seems to be in a large degree for a class of literature which can only interest themselves while it does not really instruct any one; long incoherent articles written on abstract subjects, which the writers themselves, perhaps did not fully understand, are what seem, (next to personal abuse, called criticism,) to be the best suited to the taste of our young men, and hence their reading is in many cases to no profit; and as the sterner realities of life come on, they loose their relish, in a large measure, for reading; hence it is that the readers are mostly to be found among our youngmen, and really they have not seemingly decided in the matter, but have merely followed their fancy or taste, hence we believe that their minds or attention needs to be called to the importance of a decision on the subject of reading that they may read that which will enlarge their knowledge, to this end we hope to make a few suggestions in future papers on this subject.

COMMANDANT'S DEPARTURE FOR THE BOOM ON SPECIAL PEACE MISSION.

The Commandant, with an escort of Police Constables left the District on the morning of the 26th instant on a special Peace Mission.

Taking into consideration the zeal and energy always put forth by Mr. Moseley to establish peace among the Chieftains of the adjacent Sherbro Rivers, we trust that the present peace mission which he has undertaken may be productive of good results, not only in the interest of Her Majesty's Government which he represents, but also to the interests of the community at large.

Lumber—It is feared now by some parties that the timber supply on the Manoh river is being rapidly exhausted and that in a few years there will be no timber suitable for making lumber especially scantling for buildings and plank for boats and canoes. And we must say, from some appearances, at least, that these fears are not altog-ther ungrounded however we hope to speak again when we have further information on the subject.

INFLUENCE.

There is perhaps no human being, but that exerts some influence either for good or evil. It is hateful, pernicious and debasing, or it is lovely, wholesome and elevating, but of whatever kind it may be, it is surely doing its work; either leading downward to destruction and woe, or upward to happiness and peace. As accountable beings it becomes us to consider this matter, before we proceed too far, as it is possible for us to say, and do much more than we shall or ever can live to counteract. If Christians, our sense of this duty of consideration should be felt more intensely from our experience of sorrow for past acts, when passing through the fearful vale of Penitence, and many times since have we perhaps felt to regret our course in many cases. We should therefore before acting, think what will be the probable (at least if not the possible) effect of that action upon those about us -Do we (Laughter.) Occupy, however! said I aboard ourselves from the house of God without a well founded reason, may not our absence lead another to take the same step, and the second a third, and so on until many vacant seats will be found in the place of worship-how much harm has been done in this way! If we attend Church, and mind-on or never interest ourselves in its welfare, neither singing or praying, how soon our example will be followed by others, until the entire society in many cases will become worse than the Laodicean.

Dear Mr. Editor—In the September number of a periodical from Boston Mass. U. S. A. I note the surprising statement of the imprisonment of a Rev. gentleman, an Editor, with several of his confrères for preaching in "Boston Common" I am at a loss to know what sort of an enclosure that Common would be, so that the preaching of the gospel of Christ, and reading God's holy word in it, should be treated with imprisonment. I need not ask if the tenants are civilized men, for I observed that they have a Superintendent, and no half barbarian can be, nor is it in England justified by make an appointment under that title, any original compact between Church and State, or only the tyrannic usurpation of a King in heart a Catholic, though not a Papist. But if this "essence of the Establishment" be allowed, then surely the State, which assumed the headship of the Church simply as a means of political power, has the right to lay that headship down now that the conditions have totally changed; and the Church which might perhaps once have been called National is now but one of a number of religious sects. The State, if it is to exercise any religious control at all, should exercise the influence for the spread of the broad principles of universal religion, and should not restrict its control to the management of a narrow and limited sectarian institution.—Christian World.

STRAY STRAWS.

Dear Mr. Editor,—This title appears rather insignificant, when considered in its real form, it is natural to question, to what use can these tiny things be applied especially when they are astray? or for there may be, nay, can be some use for them, when collected together. But how often do we find "The mountains in labour and an insignificant mouse brought forth." I therefore for one, believe greatly in insignificant projects. Many a humble reason strange has worked revolutions; many a single leafed Tract has achieved great wonders that thousands of great bound volumes; many a scattered little kindness, has carried bliss and comfort to many a home and heart: and holy wit gives us the humbling fact, that "God hath chosen the foolish things of the world to confound the wise, and weak things—to confound the things which are mighty" &c. "Stray Straws" therefore are intended to be merely brief and humble topics and suggestions that may occasionally appear in the columns of your respected, and valuable Journal, (i. e. if they be so fortunate as to be esteemed worthy a place in it.) I hope to prove, beneficial to our community. As a facim ile of what it shall be, I give one with this prologue——

December of 1886 with all her hopes and pleasures has already emerged from chaos with iron energy to say, "Be gone! dull care" Strapping lads and lasses, bathing in glowing expectations of their X'mas doings; blissful subjects of Cupid, in livid anticipations of giving and receiving reciprocations of the pleasant times of the season; each and all are under lively preparations to give the libations of life their proper and full share; and right it is they should, for "Christmas comes, but once a year."—Whilst arranging and preparing all the, paraphernalias for this most supicious season; permit me to say Prepare to beware of Social Dispitations.

With usual thanks Mr. Editor, for space granted me.

I remain,
Yours truly,
LUTHER.

MR. SPURGEON AND THE ORPHANS.

On Tuesday evening, prior to his annual health visit to Mentone, Mr Spurgeon met the children and friends of the Stockwell Orphanage at that institution. After taking tea, and witnessing some athletic feats of the boys in the playroom, the company met again in the dining hall where Mr. SPURGEON first of all gave greetings to the boys and girls of the orphanage who were present. Then addressing his helpers, he said that money was needed from all quarters. Some of their subscribers had gone to heaven, but the best Friend of all did not die. Though they did not expect to be saved by works there was joy in doing service for Christ. The managers of the orphanage needed prayers also, for theirs was not easy work to carry on. A good spirit reigned in the Orphanage still, they had troubles such as arose in every family, addressing a word to the assembled children, Mr. SPURGEON said he hoped they would show their gratitude for the benefits they enjoyed by being obedient and making home happy. Some pieces were then sung by the children of the Orphanage Choir after which those present were reminded that they might help the institution by getting openings for the boys to sing. When giving out, "Sing a Song of Sixpence," Mr. Spurgeon said he would not read a verse at a time for he had heard the piece fifty years ago. Being a thorough tragedy, it was to be sung solemnly. The Hand-Bell Ringers also gave several performances. The Rev. V. J. Charlesworth, the Head Master, in a brief speech, remarked that Mr. Spurgeon though a Baptist was not a bigot. More children belonging to Church of England parents had been admitted than from families belonging to other denominations.In theology their President believed in election but not as regarded institutions like that, where they selected those in greatest need, and avoided the abuses of the voting system. The children did not wear a uniform. For their maintenance £500 a year was required; but they never lacked a meal,or got into debt. After two of the boys had moved and seconded a vote of thanks to the chairman, Mr. Spurgeon expressed his own gratitude to Mr. Charlesworth and all the staff. The singing of "All Right" was followed by a brief speech by the Rev. J. W. Harrald, Mr. Spurgeon's private secretary. The collection of the day amounted to £240. About 20 letters a day or 6,000 a year, are received asking for children to be admitted; but the vacancies in each year occur for only 30 boys and 30 girls.

The Christian World.

Dear Mr Editor.—Kindly grant me a little space to insert that for the health of the reading public, and the safety of the pure language of our Sovereign Lady the Queen, I would ask your correspondent "Tourist" of 15 Nov. to spend some of his touring hours in attentive consultation of a Lewine's or a Collin's English Grammar, for after all his amazing efforts, he has done nothing but murder the Queen's English in cold blood, with a pompous interjection of "nothing. If it be the very Tourist of 30 Oct. I fear he has been frightened with borrowed wings if this be the case, I'll advise him to consult Esop's on the "Jackdaw and the Peacocks."

Thanking you for this indulgence Mr. Editor, I am yours truly.

I'll take the World at any Cost.

By Mrs. WITTEMOYER.

A young lady who was very worldly and frivolous, although she had been connected with a Sabbath-School for years, was brought under deep conviction for sin. The Spirit pressed the thought upon her that she must give up the ball room and the vanities of fashion. There had been no teaching on the subject. It was the spirit that brought to her where sacrifice must be made. For many days there was a sharp struggle, and we urged her to give up the world and take Christ at any cost. But at home there were adverse influences. The mother although a member of the church laughed at the idea of giving up the world for Christ. After days of struggle she came to us and said: "I have decided. You say take Christ at any cost, I now decide to take the world at any cost."

We pleaded with tearful eyes with her to reconsider the matter as I did not reject Christ. But the only answer was, "There will be time enough yet; mother says I am too young to become a Christian."

One month from that time, arrayed in a gaudy white robe, flashing with jewels, her long, beautiful crimped hair hanging down over her shoulders, she came into the sitting room where her father and mother and other members of the family were, that they might have an opportunity to admire her before she joined the gentlemen awaiting in the parlor. A carriage was at the door to take them to a ball. Somehow as amid their compliments she was turning about for their inspection, her clothing took fire from a gas jet. In a moment she was in a blaze. Her father sprang forward and caught her in his arms, and tried with his naked hands to smother the flame, till they were burned to the bone. Table covers, everything at hand, were seized, and at the last the fire was quenched, but she, the beautiful one, the child of the world, lay crisp and blackened and unconscious. She lingered in agony for two days, but she never recovered conscious ness.

She had taken the world, cost what it would,
And oh! what a fearful cost.

OUR CHURCH DEBT.

A debt upon the house of God,
It moves me even to tears,
To have it whispered all around
In everybody's ears;
For this is Father's house you know,
Where we have often met,
And when we meet to sing and pray,
We often think of debt.

The steeple pointing to the skies
Oft to my mind doth bring
The passage in the holy book,
"Owe no man anything"
Nay in affliction I have lain,
For many weary days,
But like God's banished ones, I've turned Toward that sacred place.

And oft my heart, like David's, pants,
Within those walls to meet,
And with God's people dear to me,
Bow low, at Jesus, feet;
For when we gave the house to God,
And the good old Bishop said,
Let all the people say, Amen,
I lowly bowed my head.

And thought this is a hallowed place,
God's holy home is here,
And those who bide beneath his wing,
Shall have no cause to fear;
God spoed the day when freed from debt
Those gathered in that place,
Shall sing the praise of Him who paid
The debt of all our race.

AN ORTHODOX CHINAMAN.

Concerning future rewards and punishments Colorado furnishes the following illustration, which occurred recently in a Court in La Veta, where the testimony of a Chinese was objected to on the ground that he did not understand or regard the obligation of an oath. To test him as was interrogated thus:

"John, do you know anything about God?

"No, me no bally well acquain with Him."

"Have you no Joss in China?"

"Oh, yes gotee heapee Joss."

"Where do you go when you die?

"Me go to San Francisco."

"Nev, you don't understand me. When Chinaman quit washee all the time and no live any more, where does he go?

Oh, yes, me sabe now. If he bally goodee man, he go up sky. If he bally goodee bodee man he go lopee down hollee, allee same Melican man!"—Sel.

"Poor John, he was a kind and forbearing husband," sobbed the widow, on her return from the funeral. "Yes," said a sympathising neighbour, "but it is all for the best. You must try and comfort yourself, my dear, with the thought, that your husband is at peace at last."

FROM GBANGHAH.—A report has just reached us to the effect that the place is again threatend by War, and that the people have commenced to rebrild the stockade. This is rather sad if true, but we are inclicned to believe to be only a rumour as usual.

WHAT SHALL WE READ?

Would indeed seem to be a pertinent question today among those who read at all, in the various communities of this Coast for it appears that this question must be settled in some way, ere we can expect to have a really intelligent populace on these shores, otherwise our schools and institution of learning will fail to enlighten the masses even of those who are under the influence of civilization. At the present young men are chiefly the Reading Class. And this ought aught itself to the general instruction of the people; but for the fact that their taste for reading seems to be in a large degree for a class of literature which can only interest themselves while it does not really instruct any one; long incoherent articles written on abstract subjects, which the writers themselves, perhaps did not fully understand, are what seem, (next to personal abuse, called criticism,) to be the best suited to the taste of our young men, and hence their reading is in many cases to no profit; and as the sterner realities of life come on, they loose their relish, in a large measure, for reading; hence it is that the readers are mostly to be found among our youngmen, and really they have not seemed duly decided in the matter; but have merely followed their fancy or taste, hence we believe that their minds or attention needs to be called to the importance of a decision on the subject of reading that they may read that which will enlarge their knowledge, to this end we hope to make a few suggestions in future papers on this subject.

COMMANDANT'S DEPARTURE FOR THE BOOM ON SPECIAL PEACE MISSION.

The Commandant, with an escort of Police Constables left the District on the morning of the 26th instant on a special Peace Mission.

Taking into consideration the zeal and energy always put forth by Mr Moseley to establish peace among the Chieftains of the adjacent Sherbro Rivers, we trust that the present peace mission which he has undertaken may be productive of good results, not only in the interest of Her Majesty's Government which he represents, but also to the interests of the community at large.

Lumber.—It is feared now by some parties that the timber supply on the Manoh river is being rapidly exhausted and that in a few years there will be no timber suitable for making lumber especially scantling for buildings and plank for boats and canoes. And we must say, from some appearances, at least, that these fears are not altog-ther ungrounded however we hope to speak a gain when we have further information on the, subject.

INFLUENCE.

There is perhaps no human being, but that exerts some influence either for good or evil. It is hateful, pernicious and debasing,or it is lovely,whole some and elevating, but of whatever kind it may be, it is surely doing its work; either leading downward to destruction and woe, or upward to happiness and peace. As accountable beings it becomes us to consider this matter, before we proceed too far, as it is possible for us to say, and do much more than we shall or ever can live to count benefit. If Christians, our sense of this duty of consideration should be felt more intensely from our experience of sorrow for past acts, when passing through the fearful vale of Penitence, and many times ince have we perhaps felt to regret our course in many cases. We should therefore before acting think what will be the probable (at least if not the possible) effect of that action upon these about us :Do we about ourselves from the house of God without a well founded reason, may not our absence lead another to take the same step, and the second a third, and so on until many vacant seats will be found in the place of worship,how much harm has been done in this way! If we attend Church, and sell on or never interest ourselves in its welfare, neither singing or praying, how soon our example will be followed by others, until the entire society in many cases will become worse than the Laodicean.

Dear Mr. Editor—In the September number of a periodical from Boston Mass. U. S. A. I note the unsparing statement of the imprisonment of a Missionary gentleman, an Editor, with several of the Royal supremacy, for the exercise of his vocation for preaching in the "Boston Common" I am at a loss to know what sort of an enclosure that Boston Common would be, or that the preaching of the gospel of Christ, and praising unto God's holy word in it, should be treated with imprisonment. I need not of the Church of England is a very poor one I observed that you have a Superintendent receives no support from Scripture, and not only so—the tyrannic insurrection of a King in heart a Catholic, though not a Papist.* But if this "essence of the Establishment" be allowed, then surely the State, which assumed the headship of the Church simply as a means of political power, has the right to lay that headship down now that the conditions have totally changed; and the Church which might perhaps once have been called National is now but one of a number of religious sects. The State, if it is to exercise any religious control at all, should exercise that influence for the spread of the broad principles of universal religion, and should not restrict its control to the maintenance of a narrow and limited sectarian institution.—Christian World.

STRAY STRAWS.

Dear Mr. Editor,—This title appears rather insignificant when considered in its real form, it is natural to question, to what use can these tiny things be applied especially when they are astray! and for there may be, may can be some use for them, when collected together. But how often do we find "The mountains in labour and an insignificant mouse brought forth." I therefore for one, believe greatly in insignificant projects. Many a humble remon stranee has worked revolutions; many a single killed Fruit has achieved great wonders than thousands of great bound volumes; many a scattered little kindness, has carried bliss and comfort to many a home and heart; and holy wit gives us the humbling fact, that "God hath chosen the foolish things of the world to confound the wise, and the weak things to confound the things which are mighty" &c. "Stray Straws" therefore are intended to be merely brief and humble topics and suggestions that may occasionally appear in the columns of your respected and valuable Journal, (i. e. if they be so fortunate as to be esteemed worthy a place in it.) I hope to prove, beneficial to our community. As a facinile of what it shall be, I give one with this prologue:—

December of 1886 with all her hopes and pleasures has already emerged from chaos with iron energy to say, "Begone! dull care." Strippling lads and lasses, bathing in glowing expectations of their Xmas donations; blissful subjects of Cupid, in livid anticipations of giving and receiving reciprocations of the pleasant tinges of the season; each and all are under lively preparations to give the liburities of life their proper and full share; and right it is they should, for Christmas comes, but once a year."—Whilst arranging and preparing all the paraphernalias for this most suspicious season; permit me to say Prepare to beware of Social Dissipation.

With usual thanks Mr. Editor, for space granted me.

I remain,
Yours truly,
LUTHER.

P.S.—"Social Dissipation" will be briefly treated on in future issues.—L.

The Archbishop of York in opening his Diocesan Conference, made a declaration which seems to require explanation. Speaking on the question of Disendowment, he said: "The facts of the condition which constituted Establishment, he said, was that the supremacy, but the essence of the Established Church was that the sovereign in the essence of Establishment, then the casus foederis arose, and the people, the Church of England is a very poor one I observed that you have a Superintendent receives no support from Scripture, and not only so—the tyrannic insurrection of a King in heart a Catholic, though not a Papist.* But if this "essence of the Establishment" be allowed, then surely the State, which assumed the headship of the Church simply as a means of political power, has the right to lay that headship down now that the conditions have totally changed; and the Church which might perhaps once have been called National is now but one of a number of religious sects. AN ORTHODOX CHINAMAN.

Concerning future rewards and punishments Colorado furnishes the following illustration, which occurred recently in a Court in La Veta, when the testimony of a Chinese was objected to on the ground that he did not understand or regard the obligation of an oath. To test him he was interrogated thus:

"John, do you know anything about God?

"No, me no belly well acquaint with Him."

"Chinee you no Joss in China?"

"Oh, yes gotee heapee Joss."

"Where do you go when you die?

"Me go to San Francisco."

"Poor John, he was a kind and forbearing husband," sobbed the widow, on her return from the funeral. "Yes," said a sympathising neighbour, "but it is all for the best. You must try and comfort yourself, my dear, with the thought, that your husband is at peace at last."

FROM GBANGHAM.—A report has just reached us to the effect that the place is again threatend by War, and that the people have commenced to rebuil t the stockade. This is rather sad if true, but we are inclieated to believe to be only a rumour as usual.

BULGARIA, INDIA, AND EGYPT.

The elections to the Bulgarian National Assembly, whose important function it will be to elect a prince, have resulted in an overwhelming majority for the National party. In spite of Russian agent, the people have shown their determination to stand by the Government, and the only disturbances seem to have been such as were due to foreign rowdies, hired and imported by the Czar's emissaries. In Sofia, the capital, some Montenegrins did all they could to exasperate the populace, with the sinister intention of inciting it to some act of violence, such as the sacking of the Russian Consulate, which would, doubtless have been made the excuse for an immediate Russian occupation. A report comes also from Dubnitza of the murder, Macedonians, of the prefect and two deputies, but details are wanting. General Kaulbars, who has almost assumed a dictatorship in the Czar's name, was on a stumping tour round the garrison towns while the elections were proceeding, but, so far as appears, he has met with nothing but disappointment in his attempt to stir up a revolt against the Regency. A Note has been presented M. Nekliudoff, the Russian Consul at Sofia, to the Bulgarian Minister for Foreign Affairs, declaring the elections "illegal, and as having no value" in the eyes of the Imperial Government. Europe will watch with interest this unequal contest between the so called Liberator of Bulgaria and the nation whose independence that "liberator" is now threatening. From India news has come of rioting between Mohammedans and Hindoos at Delhi, Etawah, Hoshairpur, and other places. The cause, religious excitement owing to the coincidence of the Moharram and Dusehra, the two great festivals of Mohammedans and Hindoos respectively, is happily free from the political elements and the riots, deplorable though they may be, have no bearing upon the stability of British rule. The followers of the Prophet are always, at the Moharram season, roused to a state of religious frenzy, and are then impelled by their traditional hatred of Hindoos, as idol-worshippers, to "go for" any of them on ostentatious show of their idolatry. Outbreaks of this kind were far more frequent formerly, and the promptitude with which they have been suppressed will render them of still rarer occurrence in the future. The only ugly feature was the refusal of the police at Etawah to charge the rioters, else more, it is believed, to overawe than to sympathy with the dictates of peace. Mr Hoey, the magistrate, acted with commendable vigour in detaining a detachment of British troops on their way to Burmah through Etawah, by rail, and thereby preventing a serious collision between the rival mobs. The news from Egypt, that Tunis has been taken by some of the Frenchies, will recall to many of our readers the stirring events that took place in the Eastern Soudan two years ago. Osman Digna's old stronghold has once passed into Khedive's hands, and he has appropriately decorated the three tribal leaders who, under Colonel Kitchener's direction, have brought about the capture.—

To the Editor of "The Early Dawn."

Sir.—Since my taking charge of the work at Mophus, I made two journeys to Mocobo, and organized a Seekers' Class during my first visit to that place. The people have been for some time without any Religious service and were right glad of my visiting them. I also organized a Class in the towns on the down line between Mocobo and Mophus, thus forming a connecting link between both circuits. I was determined to to launch further out, and having heard much about the difficulties of getting to Bailli, a town further up the river I was determined to try and get there accordingly on Saturday morning Sept. 19th we launched forth, the rain fell heavily all the morning, but I felt that I was under orders to go, I therefore obeyed the great Commander and went on. As we came up at Mocobo the boys pleaded for us to remain there but I urged them on, they got rather sulky and would scarcely pull. Coming to Tofaneh, Providence sent us aid for there we met three men waiting for passage to Bailli. I gladly supplied them, gave them paddles (always carry spare ones in our canoes) and away we flew from town after about half hours paddling we saw the place. It is "beautiful for situation" being built on the crest of a plateau. Sidling down to the river we landed and by order of the headman we were showed a house in which we were accommodated, and who came himself a little later to see us and gave us a hearty welcome; many others came to see us, and I invited each to the meeting which was to be held that night, they promised to attend and well they redeemed their words, for the ringing of a little hand-bell which we carried they came out with one accord. Prior to the ringing a man asked me "was news?" good news to all, I have brought the gospel, "To you is the word of his Salvation sent." The promise is unto you and your children" and all who believe, and to the close of which I organized a Seekers' Class of a goodly number.

At 5 o'clock next morning we woke the people up again by the ringing of the bell, held a a short service, commended them to God and started down the river.

We intend, God allowing soon to go up to Matanga, which is the last town by water on the Cockboro river. I will write again as soon as we have made the trip.

Mophusu Mission,	Yours,

TAKING ADVANTAGE OF AN ACCIDENT.

Three men of war ships—Dutch, French, and English—while anchored in port, were contending with each other for the best display of sailorship, so that the captain of each vessel determined to send aloft an active sailor to perform some deed of grace and daring. The Dutch captain sent a Dutchman, the French a Frenchman and the English an Irishman. The Dutchman stood on the top of the main mast with his arm extended. The Frenchman then went aloft and extended both arms. Now the Irishman thought if he could stand on the top of the mainmast with a leg and an arm extended he would be declared the most daring sailor. Nimbly he climbed aloft until he reached the highest point, then he carefully balanced himself on both feet, extending his right hand with a graceful motion. Then he threw out his left leg until it came into line with his right arm. In doing this he ingloriously lost his balance and fell from the mast, crushing the rigging toward the deck. The various rope with which he came in contact broke his fall, but his velocity was not too great to prevent his grasping a rope attached to the mainyard, To this he hung for two seconds, then, dropping lightly to the deck, landed safely on his feet. Folding his arms triumphantly, as if full and all was in the program, he glanced toward the rival ships and joyously exclaimed:—"There hate that if you can."—Noon Day Sun.

PRE-HISTORIC AMERICA

The question as to the date at which this continent was discovered by Europe, seems in a fair way for settlement. We have long believed that the original discovery was made by the Norsemen, some eight or nine hundred years ago. These intrepid sea-kings had long before that settlements in Iceland and Greenland, whence they drifted southward, certainly as far as the New England coast, leaving mementoes of their visits in many places at which they touched or transiently settled. And now Canon Kingsley throws the weight of his scholarship and antiquarian lore into the same scale. In the second of his Boston course of lectures he elucidates the inquiry to the legends and sages of the Norseland, leaving no doubt on the minds of his audience that Bjarne Grimolfsen, so early as 863 years ago, had had certainly visited these shores and it is not likely that even he was the first. The lecture of Mr. Kingsley abounded with ancient citations of the most interesting kind, containing many references to early Norse and English history, and, for the reports of explorers and the traditions of their successors, the lecturer made it quite clear that the old Norse navigators not only discovered these shores, but coasted so far south as to hear of the high civilization which all antiquaries admit to have once existed in the milder zone of our continent.

"HOME SWEET HOME."

So often sung of by those who are blest with the voice to sing; is a place, some one says where mother is or lives; a saying no doubt largely true, whether she dwell in hut or Hall, whether fortune smiles, or poverty frowns, whether prosperity reigns or adversity prevails. But that mother indeed can scarcely be what she ought to be without the Holy influence of the Religion of Jesus neither that place where she dwells a home indeed without the refinement of a christian faith, the greatest civilizer known to the world not alone in theory but by practical operation among the most savage tribes of the earth. Home then, sweeter Home, is where the spirit of Jesus dwells, and then whether mother is there or not, whether there is a dwelling or not, just as long as the spirit of God is within the soul, the Father is there, and there is rest, there is Home. Not all of us have mothers, or if we have, can we dwell with them, but we all may have the Father's presence by his spirit, enjoy the rest of the Son, and dwell with the Father yonder, in that Sweeter Home in Heaven.

GAIN WITHOUT PROFIT.

Would possibly seem rather strange, at all events of not really contradictory, and yet strange as it may seem, there is perhaps, in all this wide, wide, world, nothing more common among men, possibly of every clime' complexion and language; for instance, a man may be seen setting out on a trading voyage, to any of of our rivers, with a supply of Merchandize, which he sells out if successful at from 20 per cent., to 100 per cent., above its original cost, which is indeed a gain on his investment; but how often has such gain been without profit, from various causes. But that which I have observed most among men & which has the devotion of their entire lives and energies is money getting, and many of them realizing gain in their exchanges of wares, for many consecutive years, and yet often after a long life toil I have seen the same men possessing sometimes but a moderate share of this world's goods, and their entire frames broken down with care and labor, and seemingly struggling to retain the mere shadow, of an unpleasant life, amid a thousand cares. Sometimes I have seen them after a life of worldly gain despoiled by one misfortune after another, of almost every earthly thing and I have then wondered what profit had they of all their labour under the sun. But yesterday I passed the place of a friend, and a trader who has for more than twelve months been afflicted, and when I saw him last he was very poor and feeble, barely able to move on the streets, and yesterday as I looked at his place of business in its neglected state I was obliged to sigh and say to myself no profit has he of all his gain under the sun.

I have often of late been led to think of what profit is it to a man if he gain the whole world for his possession and loose himself or become a cast away from society, from all enjoyment, from Heaven from the face of the Earth, from men and worst of all from God; never more to enjoy himself in the land of the Living. Reader did you ever ponder the thought seriously of Gain in earthly good, without the faintest hope of Heavenly enjoyment! If not then now for once stop and think of it ere it be too late.

A MARTYR'S DIARY.

One year, almost to a day, after the martyrdom of Bishop Hannington in Central Africa, an account, written with his own hand, of the imprisonment and hardships that preceded his murder, arrived in England from Zanzibar, and was published to the world. His journal gives evidence of the same consecrated and heroic spirit which had led him to determine to visit in person the mission at Uganda, when, through the savage hostility of the native king, it was under a cloud, and to hurry thither at all costs along the shortest and most dangerous route. He had come to Lubwa, where a tributary sultan of King Mwanga holds sway, and was there met with insolent demands for guns and powder, and that he should stay for some days. Unawed by threats he pushed on his way laughingly through a crowd of soldiers, but afterwards yielded to what looked like conciliation, and promised to stop for a day. The real nature of the feeling towards him was, however soon made manifest, when his guns were stolen, a sentry was appointed to guard and follow him, and he and his headman were violently attacked on a hill whither they had gone to view the Nile in the distance. The Bishop was thrown to the earth by a group of ruffians, stripped of his valuables, threatened with a club, hastily dragged by the legs over the ground, and on regaining his feet, was dashed against trees as he was hurried along at the rate of five miles an hour, till finally he was imprisoned in a hut, and told that there he would be kept while communications respecting him were made with Mwanga. Even while being dragged along in expectation of imediate death he sang "Safe in the Arms of Jesus," and "My God I am Thine." The remainder of his narrative, neatly written in one of Lett's pocket diaries, is concerned with the details of his detention up to the moment of his execution. He found himself at first in an unventilated and filthy hut, which, while suffering from great pain, thirst and sleeplessness, he had to share with twenty other men and an unlimited supply of rats and vermin. Sometimes physical weakness would assert itself, as when, after enjoying the fresh air for a brief period, he burst into tears at the dreadful contrast of his prison hut, but again he would recover his manhood in the "caged lion frame of mind." Even his savage captors perceived how ill he was, and for the last few days of his time These relentings on the part of the feeble chief seem to have been partly due to the fear as to how Mwanga might take the news that had been given him, for one afternoon, says the Bishop, "to my surprise my guards came kneeling down, so different to their usual treatment, and asked me to come out. I came out and there was the chief and about 100 of his wives come to feast their eyes on me in cruel curiosity. I felt inclined to spring at his throat, but sat still and prepared myself to myself, Matt. v. 44, 45, and felt refreshed." the object of the visit was to induce the Bishop to report favourably of this chief to the King. Afterwards it became one of the fashionable amusements of the chief's numerous wives to come and gaze at the prisoner, who was presently attacked by the agonising pains of rheumatism and by fever. All this time, too, he was in suspense as to whether any message had been returned. He became very broken down in health and spirits, but comforted himself with Christian resignation, and did not even take advantage of some opportunities of escape that were given. At length he learned that three waiters had arrived from Mwanga, but the news they brought he did not know. On the eighth day of his imprisonment he made his first entry in the diary—in these words—"I can hear no news, but was held up by Psalm xxx., which came with great power. A hyena howled near me last night, smelling a sick man, but I hope it is not to have me yet." On that day he was slain, leaving behind this memorial of calm and holy devotion to the cause of Christ and to the welfare of the dark races of the unkown continent. How worthy those races are of every effort for their improvement appears from the strong testimony to their valour and faithfulness just received from the Austrian Governor Dr. Emin Bey, who, since May, 1882, has been holding a fort for Egypt in the Equitorial Provinces.—"The Cristian World."

MISCELLANY.

Certain persons who profess to be ardent democrates object to the use of the prefix "Mr." or to the suffix "Esq." to a gentleman's name. Mr., they say, comes from magister, a Latin word meaning master, and is applied in England to an inferior rank of gentleman. Esquire, means a shield-bearer, and is derived from the French ecuyer, which meant, original, a kind of body-guard or servant to a knight. We get these titles from England, where they once had a meaning. The "esquire" certainly, ought to be abolished. it has no significance when applied to an American gentleman. The "mister," however, distinguishes the male from the female, and the "Mrs." and "Miss", are of value in showing whether the lady is married or single. If it were possible to still further discriminate between married and unmarried men and between widows and wives, it might help to prevent some mistakes. While "esquire" should not be tolerated, it is quite permissible to add fairly won college honors to one's name, as for instance B. A., A. M., LL.D., and professional initials such as M. D. and D. D.

If there is any great good in store for you, it will not come at the first or second call, nor in the shape of fashion, ease, and city drawing rooms.

Your body, not your soul only, is the temple of the Holy Ghost. Take a look at yourself in the light of this truth.

A dying testimony for Christ may not be permitted for you; a living testimony may be given by you to-day, To-day!

Christianty is the only true and perfect religion; and in proportion as mankind adopt its principles and obey its precepts they will be wise and happy.—Benjamin Rush.

WEEK OF PRAYER.

We have received a CIRCULAR, through the kindness of Dr Flickinger, from the Evangelical Alliance, inviting Christians every where to observe the Annual Week of Prayer, beginning with suitable Sermons on Sunday January 2nd, and ending with sene on January 9th 1887, of which we may give a fuller notice in our next issue, and whether we do or not, we trust Ministers, Catechists, and Teachers in charge of Missions and Churches will give attention to this important matter, that Christians few or many may be invited to observe the Week of prayer as above indicated.

CENTENNIAL AND JUBILEE.

Some time ago we saw a circular from Freetown, addressed to the ministers and Leading men of the Sherbro, concerning the celebrating, or rather making preparations to celebrate either one or both of these events during the coming years. And moreover the [illegible] have had [illegible] some in Sherbro no one seems [illegible] awake to its importance [illegible] offers a line on the subject. Is it because that Sierra Leone's future greatness does not lie there that [illegible] is it because no one dares become a part of a permanent to make an effort a thing that [illegible] exhibition. This if effected [illegible] would doubtless be a good thing, however, if such a thing [illegible] should occur, there would no doubt be many regrets on the part of Exhibitors of the west [illegible] Sierra Leone, and the [illegible] African Section; as these anniversary of so great and good a [illegible] Sovereign as Queen Victoria [illegible] are not likely to occur again within this century. Hence sent articles to the Exhibition the importance of erecting and then too, the variety might some fitting monument to commemorate it. have been much greater, had every one done what they could have done for the enterprize.

The s. s. Susu belonging to Messrs Fisher and Randall (Limit'd), that arrived in this Port on the 27th ult., remained in the harbour several days during which time it was our pleasure to go on board by the kind invitation of the Captain who treated us nicely, and we must say that she is the most cleanly and tidy vessel we have boarded in this port. From what we can learn, the Susu is one of the best small steamers plying in these waters; she has now been running for about 8 years and is still in fine trim. We congratulate her Owners and officers upon their great success, and further trust that the day is not far distant when there may be as good a vessel employed in the Mail and general Passenger service between Sherbro and Sierra Leone.

OUR LONDON CORRESPONDENT WRITES AS UNDER DTAE.

26 Nov. '86.

"You will I am sure be gratified to here that Sir. JAMES MARSHALL C. M. G., Commissioner for West Africa at the Colonial and Indian Exhibition is about to forward a very handsomely colored Diploma of large size together with a Medal to the Rev. J. Comer, Rev. J. [illegible] Van, C. B. Cole Esq, [illegible] Wright Esq, and other Exhibitors who have helped so materially to make the Exhibition a success, and so much interests. I heartily congratulate the little Sherbro."

THE EXHIBITS.

From our best and most reliable information, we are [illegible] that Exhibits in part at least, from the Colonial and Indian Exhibition, which has closed in London, will be transferred to the Jubilee Colonial and Indian Institute and thus become a part of a permanent exhibition. This if effected would doubtless be a good thing, however, if such a thing should occur, there would no doubt be many regrets on the part of Exhibitors of the west Sierra Leone, and the [illegible] African Section; as these anniversary of so great and good a [illegible] Sovereign as Queen Victoria [illegible] are not likely to occur again within this century. Hence sent articles to the Exhibition the importance of erecting and then too, the variety might some fitting monument to commemorate it. have been much greater, had every one done what they could have done for the enterprize.

The Colonial and Indian Exhibition was closed on the 10th of November and some think will be reopened again by the Queen next June, and will form the nucleus of the permanent Jubilee Colonial and Indian Institute which is to be built on its site, but which of course will take a very considerable time to construct.

CHUNGKING RIOT IN CHINA.

Seems from all the information we can gather to have been instigated, by the treatment received by Chinese in America together with that of the resident catholics. The outrages now ever reached all classes of European and American foreigners and would therefore at first sight appear to have been caused by the general and prevailing prejudice existing among the Chinese against Foreigners; but from the fact that various ways the Americans were made prominent in the matter, and that full accounts of the American riot had been communicated to Chinese papers and the Chungking people were in receipt of this information; would lead us to believe that the American treatment of the Chinese was the principal cause of the riot and that the outrages on others except perhaps the Consulates were merely incidental. It is however to be hoped that Americans, as Christians, will be led by these outrages in China, to adopt some better Chinese policy, more becoming to an enlightened republic than at present exists.

HOW DOES THIS HAPPEN?

Retrenchment when pronounced in the ears of any one who is engaged whether in secular or spiritual work, does not give a pleasant sound. He that desires prosperity in his labors is not in favor of less as the sound at all; for the internal action is palpitation, and the external is restlessness. A movement without co-operation and consultation is like enacting a person when he does not deserve it. How often do I pause at this momentous subject and with an aching heart do I consider it.

I am for the main, therefore I ask the pardon of those to whom the truth may prove an offence. It is indeed true the facilitating arm of the Shaingay Mission was curtailed, which resulted in the halt of the late and great improvement made under that indefatigable head of affairs the Rev. J. Gomer. I am of the opinion that Commerce must in some way co-operate with the missionary work in order to civilize and Christianize the Sherbro Country. Despite of the indignant and sarcastic terms used by the ignorant, still if the looked-for end is accomplished, there is no reason whatever to justify the project laid out, which resulted in great inconvenience. Need I say what those inconveniencies are? No, needless; every one who has to share it, will bear me out in making such a remark.

Granting me a little more space Mr. Editor, shall proceed to say that I am against the so-called retrenchment. Inimically speaking let me say that those in power ought to know that when there is a request made, that the solicitor or solicitors see, feel, and experience the necessity of forwarding such a request; hence requests are not to be repudiated before further inquiry and information from those whose advice and consultation can be for the best. Taking a retrospective view of past laborers, marked out in points by success, and which could not have been achieved in the absence of external means, one would not have dreamt of such an eclipse as Retrenchment. On the main calculate every plan tending to that end as unjust measure, though in the light presented may seem justifiable, yet I beg to differ in opinion as to the past and present speak better than they can be described with pen and ink. The soldier who is earnest to conquer his foe fights by putting forth his utmost effort so as to gain the victory; and if the victory is almost gained and the word of command goes forth from the Commander, retreat, retreat! surely the soldier though desirous of victory is oblidge to obey.

With these I remain yet,

A WATCHMAN.

Dec. 3rd.

ON CANNIBALISM.

Dear Mr Editor,—Your esteemed correspondents the Rev. J. Gomer as well as Mr. "A Watchman" in more than one of their valuable articles have called attention to the great evils practised by the man-eating portion of our people. Cannibalism seems so common now a days that people think it deserves no more than a passing notice. Some persons justify the Chiefs who plunder such places and those in juxtaposition to where it is practised others think otherwise. The Chiefs themselves seem puzzled what step to take to put down this monstrous evil in our midst. At Barboo a place contiguous to Mando, these daring and dreadful men-eating people have been about their fiendish tricks and they have caught and eaten a beautiful young girl, for reasons they alone can tell. This is the second time in this year that they have thus pounced upon a harmless one with impunity. The plunderers are up to their duty, trying to lay the hands of justice upon them but where is he who can point out these wolves in sheep's clothing? What then! Is all lost! must the Chiefs and honest part of their subjects go tomfoolering all the time plundering the guiltless and harboring the guilty! No! thank God there is a remedy at hand. Let the chiefs stand sincerely by their missionaries and teachers, speak a kind word in season and out of season on behalf of the gospel, having due regard to the maxim "Example is better than precept," and cannibalism in all its horrid features will be wiped away from our midst, devil-men become God-men, and the country be speedily won for Jesus. The gospel is the only sovereign Panacea for human woes.

"Let birds and beast each other tear,
But why should man act like a bear."

Thanking you for space occupied,

Yours truly,

Mando, R. C. T.

NEWS ITEMS.

FROM LONDON.—We learn that New Lord Major Sir Reynold Manson came into Office on the 9th ult. and it was anticipated that some disturbance would be created by the large number of persons out of work at the time, as the shew progressed through the City; but owing to the very great precautions taken by the military and police authorities, every thing passed off most satisfactorily and socialists little game was defeated.

The Commandant C. H. Harley Moseley Esq., returned on the 10th inst. from his Peace Mission to the Boom, after an absence of about 14 days from this place; we have not the opportunity of an interview with his Worship since his return, but trust the mission has been a success.

Personal

Rev. J. C. Thomas, Pastor of the Wesleyan Chapel of this place was quite ill inst Saturday, but he is better again.

Rev D. F. Wilberforce-Principal of the training School Shaingay, who has recently returned from the United States, made a short visit to this place about the 8th inst. He is in good health and looking well: He promises a better visit after the Annual meeting when we understand that Mrs Wilberforce will also accompany him.

Capt. J. Evans.—We have been pleased to learn recently visited our port in the s. s. Hercules that arrived out last week. He was, we believe, the Purser of that vessel.

CORRECTION.—In our last issue we stated that Avery Itinerants reported large attandance at Mo-Cassa; we should have said Mo Tassoe, which report is now still further confirmed by even a larger attendance of 179.

SHAINGAY ITEMS.

We understand that the work of the Rufus Clark Training School at Shaingay will be commenced in advance of the erection of the Building and for the time will be connected with the day school.

The Training school building we are inform that the stone for the above building are being prepared with all possible expedition.

The Missionaries and friends are preparing for the annual gathering of the Ministers Teachers and others on the 17th inst Bishop Flickenger is also expected to be present on the occasion.

Bishop Flickinger D.D., has arrived out from England and reached Shaingay about the 10th inst, will hold a Council of the U.B.C. Missionaries on the 16th, and preside over the Conference of the same Church on the 17th and 18th instants.

Rev Henry J. Williams returned to his charge at N'Charmany, we understand early last month; his absence we believe was occasioned by the death of an uncle's wife at Kent Sierra Leone.

MANDO.—Interesting Services were held on Sunday 28th ultimo, at Mando Station by the Rev. J. M. Lesher of Shaingay. 44 persons were Baptized by the Rev. Gentleman on the occation.

GBARGROO ITEMS.

AVERY.—We met Mr. S. A. St. John there busy Photographing on the week days, and preaching on Sunday. This to us seems the practical method of doing with thy might what thy hand findeth to do.

Mr Thomas R. Avery,—One of the seniors of the Good Hope School of the Mendi Mission, of this place, who has recently received the appointment of assistant teacher in the Avery School is doing well and giving satisfaction, we are glad to learn, in his work.

Mr. Wm. Lewis junr., is busy with work on his new place of Business, and we now understand that he has found a fine stream with sufficient water power, is erecting a new Saw-Mill, which we trust will be a success.

KONCONANY:—Interesting Services were held at that Station on Sabbath the 5th instant by the Supt. of the District.

Mr. O. A. Campbell of Mo-Kibbie, the Principal Trader now, we understand about Konconany, attended Divine Services on the 5th instant with all his straightway, and we were further informed that this is Mr. Campbell's usual way of doing it, for this we were glad, and trust many other Traders in the Rivers will find it convenient to do the same.

MANOH STATION

Mr. Editor—I feel to do justice to the above named station under my supervisory of the progress of spiritual work done, say, few past months. As at all other times, this station is never lack of due commendation for their indescribable merit, and warm zeal they have for Religion. I feel, that I cannot talk much of this station, as I am the teacher in charge lest some may think that I am exaggerating things; yet I believe, there may be one or two who have witnessed the work here, and will be able to justify my statements. Much has been said of this station, so I must be brief. If this station had as large numbers of people as in some of the other stations, I believe from their present earnestness, we would have larger members of people in our congregation than what we have at present. But I do hope by the Providence of God that these youths who are now growing up, when they come to years of maturity will put forth all efforts to increase our members. I am glad also to report that since the begining of this year, our indefatgable Genl. Superintendent the Rev. J. Gomer, has baptized 20 Children and Infants.

We had a very fine time last Sunday the 28th inst., known by all Christians as Advent Sunday, when we were again visited by said Rev. J. Gomer, to hold the quarterly meeting. Our meeting house was densely crowded by the people here, the whole of that Sabbath, when suitable sermons were delivered to meet such an occasion. The sermons were attentively listened to. After the close of the morning service the sacrament of the Lord's supper was administered, 14 persons communed.

The Day school also is doing pretty well, in regard to their elementary subjects. But one thing I am now going to say is this. The children here it seems that they have their own ways. Whenever they like to attend school their personal appearance can be seen; but when disliked, they stopped them selves, and no force can be used on them by their parents. The chief thing I see is, that these children if boarded, would do better than to allow them to be in their own homes. I have received a letter from America sent by late Mrs. Professor Heywood to consult our Genl. Superintendent to see after my question sent to her of our having a boarding school here, which letter I have forwarded same to him, and he promised to do something for this Station. I think, if this is done we will have a very fine school, with steady attendance of children, and our labor in teaching can be seen on them. Our number on Roll at present is 22 children of both sexes.

The towns itinerated are properly attended to, except during the heavy rains. I stopped from visiting them on account of the mighty water by the way, and the many swamps and marshes that have produced some cold in me. But I have commenced again, to visit them. I must confess that these towns have a willing and ready heart for Religion. As soon as they see me in their respective town, they assemble themselves for service. We have been trying to make light subscription and we have succeeded in getting at present ready cash the sum of sixteen shillings. I have more names who promised, but not yet paid. I will be too glad to forward the amount when they will be able to do so. I must close, asking your prayers for 168 members in this station.

Rev J. A. Evans Dear Bro—Glad to acquaint you that I reached my Station three weeks ago and met family well. Mrs William is at Shaingay on a visit to her brother. N'Charmany is becoming very unhealthy from the fact that the town is dirty and I could not prevail on the natives to keep it clean. A woman of a nearer farkie (Sortide-Boylon the 25th ult. at midday when it thundered complained what she was suffering from heart disease; and the night following same day, she died when it thundered again. This led the natives to suppose that she is a witch and hence her case was an extraordinary one and her abdomen was opened and inquisition was held as to whether there was a witch inside of her bowels or not as they claim.

I am sincerly yours

Dear Mr. Editor,—Sir, Since your last issue I am happy to inform you of my visit to Mo-Tassa, (name of the place misunderstood in that paper for Mo-Casey) and held interesting services there and at Mo Cango and Mc Karangai. Agreeing with our Itinerants' Report there was a pretty congregation of 179 that assembled to hear the word, both residents and strangers, from some of the farkies.

A seekers class was then considered needful and therefore one in each of the places was organized. Total seekers enrolled 41 which give great cause for thankfulness to God and hope for the future.

A Scotch Highlander who served in the first sad war with the American colonies was brought one evening before his commanding officer, charged with the capital offence of being in communication with the enemy. The charge could not be well preferred at a more dangerous time, only a few weeks had elapsed since the execution of Major Andre; and the indignation of the British, exasperated almost to madness by this event, had not yet cooled down. There was, however, no direct proof against the Highlander. He had been seen, in the grey of the twilight, stealing out of a clump of underwood that bordered on one of the huge forests which at that period covered by far the greater part of the United Provinces, and which in the immediate neighbourhood of the British, swarmed with the troops of Washington. All the rest was mere inference and conjecture. The poor man's defence was summed up in a few words. "He had stolen away from his fellows," he said, "for no other purpose than to spend a few hours in private prayer."

"Have you been in the habit of spending hours in private prayer?" sternly asked the officer, himself a Scotchman. The Highlander replied in the affirmative. "Then," said the other, drawing out his watch "never in your life had you more need of prayer than now; kneel down sir, and pray aloud, that we may all hear you."

The Highlander, in the expectation of instant death knelt down. His prayer was that of one long acquainted with the appropriate language in which the Christian addresses his God It breathed of immenent peril and earnestly implored the Divine interposition in the threatened danger; the help of Him who, in times of extremity, is strong to deliver. It exhibited in short, a man who, thoroughly conversant with the scheme of redemption, and fully impressed with the necessity of a personal interest in the advantages which it secures, has made the business of salvation the work of many a solitary hour, and had in consequence acquired much fluency in expressing all his various wants as they occurred, and thoughts and wishes as they arose.

"You may go, sir," said the officer, as he concluded; "you have not, I am sure, been in correspondence with the enemy tonight." "His statement," he continued, addressing himself to the other officers, "is, I doubt not, perfectly correct, No one, I feel assured, could have prayed as he has done without a long apprenticeship; fellows who never attended drill always get on ill at review.—Christian Herald.

Dear Mr Editor.—Observing the interest that you take in us, I as a lover of truth am a well wisher of Mando's future greatness I always feel sad at finding things in such a sad plight. The Temah Society of this place are about exerting a wonderful influence over the Mohammedan and British subjects within this District, this with the degradation of the people constitutes all together, and unfavourable state of affairs and they still continue their acts of cruel and diabolical work. Some times we were often prevented from having Service at all on the Lord's day by the Temah devil and his followers.

I close by seconding the motion of Mr R. C. T. who made application of having a Police Stationed here who I think will assist greatly in putting things to right. Thanking you for space occupied.

Am always the same,

To the Editor "Early Dawn."

Dear Mr. Editor,—What compels me to love and respect your little journal most, is, that it aims at our elevation by unceasingly pointing out the curse of our race, rum, the representative of spirituous liquors on this coast, being the cheapest offered to drinkers. Rum Mr. Editor, what over others think of it, to me is a stumbling block in the way of converts to christianity. I sincerely believe our traders can get on more prosperously without rum I never in any trade about those parts that for every 5s shillings honest profit they acquire in the rum traffick, they can acquire five times that amount of profit if they would simply offer for sale that which will benefit and elevate our race. Four days ago a sherbro woman relative of one of our members here went to a factory at Condobey on the Yai-Tucker river, bought and drank too freely of rum. On her return home, though her domesties pleaded with her not to go in a canoe she insisted on going in a small canoe. They however launched, a few strokes brought them in mid channel, the alcohol began to act, she rose from her seat and ere the word of warning was given she capsized the canoe. Her domesties thinking it useless to offer assistance to a helpless drunken woman in midchannel at the peril of their own lives, swam safe to shore. But, alas! the poor woman perished in the waters. How will her soul appear before God? Will a rum seller in the absence of the manufacturers answer the question as an accountable being? Let our traders here cease selling rum, that pestiferous drug which turns the world upside down, if they truly love their race. How true the saying. The sword doth slay by thousands, but Rum by tens of thousands.

UNEXPECTED DEATH.

Mr Editor,—You will allow me space in your valuable columns to insert this for the benefit of your readers, perhaps it may awaken some careless ones, who forget themselves to be but dying men in a sinful world.

On Wednesday night last the 24th inst a man by the name of James Sarton of Wellington, Sierra Leone, who for some years has been in the Sherbro, fishing, latterly, he was at Gbanghaltook and during his stay there he was very useful in all religious meetings, but of late he was fishing as I said, at Langoobabah's place (Bargroo River) and on the above mentioned date, between 6 and 7 p. m. he told his fellow fishermen, that he was going to look after his morrel, he took his canoe that was large enough to contain 10 or 12 men, he alone went out the distance from the shore to his morrel is not more than 800 yards (as my informant told me) this man did not return up to the next morning and there was no voice heard calling for help that night.

On the following morning the other fishermen went out in search of the lost man but he could not be found, on friday the 26th inst his canoe was discovered by one of the fishermen near the Gbanghish River, but nobody found inside, his bait knife, and every thing which was inside the canoe, and up to date this man is not found, no doubt he was turned over and there met his end.

O! may we all pray unto himwho is our life, and with whom we have to do, to prepare us always for whatever death we may have to meet with, either by sea or by land, that we may be able to meet him with joy and find our heaven in him;

"For tis fit we should to dust return,
Since such is the will of the most high;
In sin conceived to trouble born,
Born only to labour and die"

Submissive to thy just decree,
We all shall soon from earth remove;
But when thou sendest, lord, for me,
O let the messenger be love!"

Thanking you Mr Editor for space occupied

Yours truly
A PILGRIM.

Dear Mr Editor-Permit me through the columns of your valuable journal to state in my present eagerness, Sir I observe an Article in your issue of November 15th signed An Eye Witness, who as a nunskull was trying to correct the Rev J. Gomes's Article, and himself was far from the truth. By saying that there were only eight dogs at Charmsay Mr Editor am I allowed to make corrections on An Eye Witness' Article? I noticed about 19 dogs at Charmsay, seven belonged to Mr J. A. Greewood a trader, four to Mr H. J. Williams, the teacher, and eight owned by a countryman making the total of 19 dogs, I find that the Rev J. Gomes was right in all his statements. Now Mr Editor I beg to suggest that any Article intending to oppose another in your paper should bear the signature of the writer in full, from what Mr An Eye Witness states in his Article makes me even to believe that he had never once been to Charmsay. Thanking you for the space allowed me in your columns, I am yours the same

DISTRICT MEETING.

It was rather an imposing gathering in respect to numbers and dignity that assembled at the Eighth Annual Session, of the Sherbro Mission District of the United Brethren in Christ of West Africa, in Flickinger Chapel Shaingay Dec 17–19. The meeting was largely attended by the Preachers Teachers and Itinerants representing Shaingay, Bompeh, an d Mendi Missions.

The year has not been without its trials, hardships and discouragements. Satan and his emissaries having especially leagued themselves among our people, for the reports tell of some who were overcome by the way. Notwithstanding this it has been a year of large increase and triumphs.

We do not fully estimate the progress of truth, nor appreciate the success of Christian efforts till we view the results of these efforts and achievements as a whole. This was especially true of the reports presented at the meeting. It seemed at first but little that was accomplished, but as one after another of these soldiers of Christ arose and told how amidst discouragements and battles hard fought he had yet a handful gain'd for the year, it made the heart rejoice to hear and note a gradual increase to above 1300 as the gain of the year in the number of those who had declared a faith in the Christian religion. Surely heaven itself had been made glad, and the angels in the presence of God made to sing for joy over these victories of the year.

Taking into consideration these results achieved by this small force, and those of the forces now engaged in the work of Evangelization, the results must be wonderful.

The Sabbath Services were impressive. About the close of the morning service a Missionary Contribution was called for to support a Mission Station among our more benighted brethren. The proposition was heartily accepted, and resulted in a subscription of £10. Chief Caulker who was present at the Service entered his name upon the subscription list.

There were present some distinguished visitors, among them Mr. St. John, who cheered us with words of encouragement. He had lately visited several of our stations and saw a work more extensive and thorough than he ever thought was being done by our American Missions in this part of the country.

A new impetus was given our work as various questions touching each department of the work were taken up and discussed. Who looking upon this meeting composed as it is for the most part of the sons of Africa, and hearing their discussions of the most effective plans and methods to be employed in the work of saving their benighted brethren, and feeling the inspiration of the moment, cannot exclaim, O Ethiopia! "Look up for your redemption draweth nigh!"

MANDO STATION.

The Lord has really blest this Station during the year. I have experienced more of sunshine. Of course a little cloud came over us about the middle of the year through the influence of the Secret Society called Tomah. This Station is peculiarly situated in the midst of Secret Societies not one is wanting. But the devil has been made to tremble for his interests here, the Mohamedan power has also been shaken by the power of God. There were two incidents that occurred which tends to gladden my heart.

During one of our morning services I watched with interest a Tomah boy whilst passing our place of worship he cast a wishful glance at us. This boy was sent for by the chief of the society. He only passed a few steps and asked who came to call him, said he "I wished to go here," pointing at us he turned and came in. The other is the testimony of a man who said frankly to a Mohamedan, formerly you could get three beals of money Cay Tay, making a charm but now you will find it hard to get two bars six shillings for making the best charm.

The Lord has really been with us during the year and I am thankful.

R. C. TAYLOR.

Dear Bro Evans—God in his kind providence has blessed my work of the past year and crowned it with abundant success both religiously and numerically. In number it is almost triple that of the last year though there were some dark clouds sometimes, yet they were not sufficient to darken the dawn, when I sent our captain stands before us leading us on to victory. On Sunday the 25th July I baptised 11 persons The meeting was very interesting and profitable to all. Two men who were no friends to the Mission attended meeting that day and paid profound attention after the close they came and asked me to explain to them about baptism which I did. From that day they are regular church goers and members of the seekers class. As all the heathen are now members of class I then got a fair opportunity to bring before them the subject relative to the destroying of the devil house which stood prominently in the wharf and where sacrifices were done to the devil annually. I spoke several times about destroying it but to no purpose. Four Sundays before its destruction, I called in all, four of the head men, and sold through my interpreter, that as the whole of them are now trying to fear God, and be on the Lord's side, let us see to removing the devil from the town and disarm it so that all your hearts can be placed upon God, and he will guard and guide you. They were undecided but finally put the whole matter on the Chief of Bompeh and Chief C. B. Caulker Which matter I brought before the Chief at Mando Town on Saturday the 11th Dec. who told me to go and destroy it he has nothing to do with it. However to make sure of confirmation of the whole he agreed, and went over with me, and in the evening of the same day the majority of the people assembled together in the chief's yard. There I addressed them telling them about the devil, and the chief afterwards addressed them also, and asked them several questions which they readily answered and agreed that it be destroyed, so that very night I set it in flames and it blazed and burned till Sunday morning. This caused some excitement and some women cried aloud for the devil, and some said that they had thought to dig it up and throw in the water or pass some ceremony for it when the chief told them that fire is the very best thing for the devil, as the devil is now burnt to death by fire and gone back to hell, and he is perfectly satisfied to let God reign in his country and let all their devils be destroyed. There are many on the Lord's side.

MEN BUT WHY NOT COWS?

Last year I wrote several Articles about Cows and their profit and usefulness During this month I have seen a practical illustration, I may say, of both utility and profit, it was at Shaingay, where the Rev J. M. Lesher is erecting a stone building, for the Training School lately located at that place Instead of having men carry the stone, or convey them by hand on trucks, as is usually done, he has hired the use of an American waggon drawn by six bullocks, to haul the stone from the water side to the place of building, and in this way he has in a very short time brought together a large quantity of stone. While at the same time, the travel of the waggon and cattle cleans the roads of grass and beats it down hard and smooth, for pedestrian passengers. Hence my question: Men, but why not use cows, for conveying burdens? when by their use we can have better roads with less expense for cleaning; while carriages drawn by these animals might, in many cases, do away with the tedious mode of conveying produce over land in Hampers, and since trader and native traffic more profitable then now and possibly it would lead to the extention of trade to a great extent into new regions of country.

MR HAWEIS AT NOTTINGHAM.

The Revd H. R. Haweis lectured at Nottingham, last Friday on "Music and Morals" At the close of his address the Town clerk, Mr Johnson, who, in the unavoidable absence of Lord Belper through domestic affliction occupied the chair, presented Mr Haweis with an address that had been some what hastily got up and signed by 420 churchmen and Nonconformists in Nottingham expressive of their hearty sympathy with his recent endeavour to weaken the invidious barrier between the church of England and Dissent by showing his willingness to preach in the City Temple, London Mr Haweis said in reply that he had been taken quite by surprise by this unlooked for but most welcome tribute of feeling to a great principle on the part of the youngmen in Nottingham. He was assured that the church's treatment of Dissenters in the past had been all wrong and very fatal to the Establishment. The only wise thing for a Church calling itself national was to make itself national, and this might be done by relaxation of admission, formularies, and a wider sympathy with all christian workers of other denominations, in other words Comprehensiveness and Charity—Christian World.

The Queen of Spain has signed a decree which confort immediately freedom on the remaining slaves in Cuba. When it is borne in mind that not forty years ago no less than 40,000 slaves were being shipped every year from Africa to Cuba, the friends of humanity cannot but be thankful now at seeing an end to this stupendous iniquity, for which objects the Anti-Slavery Societies of London and Madrid have so long laboured. Brazil now alone in the western world still clings to the old and evil distinction of being a vast slave-holding country, where more than a million of slaves yet exist, who themselves or their parents have been imported from Africa, in spite of solemn treaties with all the laws of Brazil.—St.

VISIT TO THE ANNUAL MEETING.

It was our privilege to attend the Annual District Meeting of the U.B.C. Church, held at Shaingay, and we were much gratified in beholding the personal appearance of its Membership, among which we may not by mention a few, for want of space. Dr. Flickinger, the presiding officer of the Meeting small in stature is 62 years of age is of German extraction, and resists so well the inroads of advancing age, that he would readily pass for a man of 45 years, and while he is firm and decided, usually yet there is a play of ready wit and pleasantry about him, that makes him companionable and pleasant, in his general bearing and especially so in the Bishop's Chair. Revd J. Gomer has a large well proportioned body surmounted by a good head with a pleasant face, is very earnest in every movement and intends to make every one count a full score, he is a ready speaker and a man of extraordinary tact in the management of men. Rev. J. C. Sawyer is a rather tall man and somewhat slender in form, he is about 50, and a man of ability, yet very modest, humble, and retiring, but deeply pious, and when he speaks his words are impressive indeed. Revd. J. W. B. Johnson perhaps the next native in continuous service, is quite a large man of good height rather slow of speech, but can say what he wants to say, and we should think that he is pretty hard on fetish and Devil worship and certainly next to the Rev. J. C. Sawyer. Mr. Johnson possesses the most ministerial bearing of any man in the body. Rev. W. S. Macaulay is a short man but has a solid body and has the appearance of a determined will with a strength to do hard labor, he is a plain man, whose fort is to work. Rev. D. F. Wilberforce a small man is the cultured and polished speaker and writer of the house, can discourse readily, and seemingly upon any topic, and is too well known to need description. There are other men as Lesher, Pratt, Evans, Williams, Taylor, Morrison, Grey, and some whose names do not come readily to mind; but let it suffice to say they are men of Intelligence; and these annual gatherings seem to bring out their capabilities more and more every year, and it would seem that the meeting is one of the most promising enterprizes in connection with any Missionary Work, on this Coast it being a deliberative assembly of great freedom for the discussion of practical Methods and not where men are obliged to march in one groove or fashion all they say according to any one man's notion; makes it rather a desirable, as well as a suitable association for the unity of persons of intelligence, for mutual help and encouragement, and being of a religious make up is likely to influence the lives of many in the better way; and already having under the leadership of its members over four thousand persons: and ministering a wholesome doctrine to more than fifteen thousand others, with more than seven hundred youths under daily training in letters, and the religion of Jesus must certainly ere long work a wonderful reform in the tribes about us as well as bring many thousands to a knowledge of our Lord and of his Christ. There were some distinguished visitors; with teachers engaged in the work of the missions, but who are not members of the meeting. Notably among the visitors was Mr. S. A. St. John, Photographer of Bo the, Mr. Bright of Freetown and others, Mrs. J. Thompson among the Teachers, is in every sense, prefered as she is the pious daughter of the eminent Bishop Crowther and very sacrificing and devoted in her labors." Other good teachers as the scholarly Mr. J. A. Richards, and Messrs. Baker, Josh. Luke, Goodman, McKie and others were present. Indeed in a word a noble company was that, which we were privieged to meet in the U. B. C. District Meeting, and their associations were indeed soul inspiring to us and and we wish each one greater success for the year to come than has ever attended their Labors.

We clip the following from a private letter recently received from a subscriber to the Early Dawn who resides in England.

"The Edition of the Early Dawn 15th Oct. to hand by last mail and printed upon your new paper, is admirable. It grows a greater Enigma to me each time I receive it, how you with your limitted resources in the Sherbro river are able to turn out such a really Excellent Journal which would do credit to many a large town: it shows what utmost insuperable obstacles may be overcome in an uncivilized country; when ability, energy and enterprize are brought to combat with them. The educated portion of Sherbro Community have much to thank the Shaingay Mission for, and to you and your staff in particular, they are deeply indebted for supplying them with a local news paper, very frequently is produced (especially I am sure, during the rainy season) under most difficult and trying circumstances."

WAR TROUBLE AGAIN—Our most recent information from the Boom and Kittam is that war is impending. Dewah, it is reported, has taken the strong hold, of Gooahung, where eight towns were combined in one in the Upper Kittam, and killed the Chief. It is also further reported that he now threatens Bandajumah, Queen Nyatoh's Town with war. And while such is reported of the Kittam we hear too that troubles are expected again in the Boom. These reports are rather sad if correct, and there are many reasons to fear that all are true.

EVANGELICAL ALLIANCE INVITATION FOR THE ANNUAL WEEK OF UNITED AND UNIVERSAL PRAYER, AT THE COMMENCEMENT OF THE YEAR.

JANUARY 2–9, 1887.

BELOVED BRETHREN IN CHRIST.

This is the fortieth time that we have the privilege of inviting our fellow Christians throughout the world to set apart a week for united prayer.

In view of the past thirty-nine years, we have abundant cause of thanksgiving for the large amount of blessing which the Lord has vouchsafed in connection with the annual concert of prayer. Year by year the number of those who have thus united in supplication has gone on increasing. Year by year testimonies have been multiplying which prove how largely the season of common supplication has been blessed to the refreshment and enlargement of believing hearts, as well as to revivals of religion in many lands. To Him who heareth prayer be all the glory!

Never was prayer more needed than at the present time. The state of the Church and the state of the world alike call for fervent and abundant supplication. We have come on "perilous times." We see "distress of nations." There is much of insubordination and lawlessness in various countries. In nearly all lands there is much suffering, on account of the stagnation of trade. In Europe there have been ominous threatenings of war. Most nations are called to solve political problems of great perplexity. As Christians, we must call to mind the promises given to prayer, and the special promises given to united prayer. "Call upon me Me," says the Lord, "in the day of trouble; I will deliver thee, and thou shalt glorify Me."

While there is thus much cause of anxiety, which should make us feel that only God can be "a very present help in trouble," there are also signs of the times which are greatly fitted to cheer and encourage us. Among these none are more remarkable than the quickening of the Missionary spirit, the amount of blessing which is graciously granted to the evangelising of the nations, and the "great and effectual doors" which are so wonderfully opening to us. Therefore, with fervent supplication, let us mingle hearty thanksgiving to the Father of mercies and God of all comfort.

Is not the Lord now working as of old, when he gave the promise — "I will shake the heavens and the earth, and the sea and the dry land; and I will shake all nations: and the desire of all nations shall come, and I will fill this house with glory, saith the Lord of Hosts"? (Haggai ii. 7.)

We remain, in brotherly love, on behalf of the Evangelical Alliance, Yours faithfully,

(Signed.)——

Rev. Joseph Cook says: "I am no fanatic as to Sunday, but it does not seem to me accidental that Switzerland, Scotland, England, United States, the countries which best observe Sunday, constitute the entire map of safe popular government."

This issue is very late on account of the pressure of other duties and the Holidays.

NEWS ITEMS.

The United Brethren Missionary Teachers' Institute was, by the general consent of the members of the Annual District meeting, blended with it at the last Session Dec 17 19 and presided over by Dr. Flickinger.

THE S. S. COUNTESS OF DERBY.—Arrived here on the 29th instant having on board several distinguished passengers, we understand, but regret that we are not in possession of all their names.

Bishop Flickinger D. D. and Revd J. Gomer it is reported left Shaingay for Freetown on the morning of the 27th inst.

Chief T. N. Caulker was reported as absent from Shaingay on trip to Freetown about the 27th inst.

KOOLOONGE.—We are sorry to learn from Mr J. A. Richards in charge of that Station, that he has recently lost another of his promising school boys, Nathaniel Caulker, who has been decoyed into the purro bush.

On Christmas Day, things looked right smart at Kooloonge as never they were before—The Mission Children had a Treat which they heartily enjoyed, (there's no doubt about it) and Messrs Kolb, Humphrey, M. Lefevre and J. A. Richards entertained a few friends to Dinner; among whom were J. N. Lefevre Esq and Mr. G. M. Domingo of Bompeh tooke, Mrs. Kolb and her cousin Miss Berken of the "Annie Walsh" who had come on a vacation visit, Masters Lefevre and Ishmon. It was a most enjoyable season.

Towards dusk on Christmas day whilst the friends were at the Dinner Table, the Parrish people made an advance from Moh-Pieh road, leading to the Mission Compound at Kooloonge, and were determined on passing through, but were obstructed by Mr. P. H. A. Humphrey in charge of the Farm, who happened to be hard by, and would not on any account in spite of all their wiles, go into the house as they requested. They then made out for the bush and took the Beach track to the Lodge at Bompeh tooke. This is the second time they have made the attempt.

As Chief Neale Caulker's men were passing through Kooloonge on Monday the 27th inst., from the search they had gone to make at Mentibye and other places, in consequence of the War every day, reported as coming,—one of the girls called Sally Williams suspecting them to be War-Boys, ran away from the yard where she was engaged washing clothes, into the Mission House, going from one apartment to the other until she got to the loft, shouting out with all her might as she went along, "O, me mummy, ar die today!!" causing no small amount of amusement to all.

A good deal of dissatisfaction is being expressed far and near—Chief T. N. Caulker's men who have been lately sent out to hunt up the War-Boys reported to be lying in ambush, have been contrary to instructions given, plundering and distressing towns through which they passed. Ba vamah near Kooloonge and Mentibye have especially suffered in this way. The former town has been deserted

Mr. Claudius Clemens—son of Mr J. A. Clemens bookseller and stationer of this place arrived here by the Mail-boat last week, he has been away for some years and we believe attended different schools in the United States and is a young man of ability and much promise we congratulate Mr J. A. Clemens upon the return of his son.

Mr G. A. Metzger J. P. of Yerk is not gave us a pleasant call on Christmas day after Service; we were glad to learn from Mr Metzger that he likes our little Journal, and that his friends in Freetown often have it from him, and that he gathers much information about the surrounding country from its columns.

Mr. Chas. A. E. Campbell was in this place this week from Mosam where we believe he is doing a good business.

Miss M. T. Birken student of the Annie Walsh Memorial School Freetown arrived on the evening of the 28th instant on a visit to her friends in the Sherbro she is the guest of her uncle Mr J. A. Williams of this place.

Mr. J Arthur Richards of Kooloonge Station, also arrived here on the 28th instant, he is looking well and seems to be enjoying married life he is the guest of the writer at the Mendi Mission House this place.

Mrs. Noel and Miss. Parkes who arrived per. Colonial steamer, Countess of Derby, on the 29th inst. gave us a pleasant call on the 30th and we were pleased to learn from them that Mr. J. C. E. Parkes is expected to visit this place shortly.

MR. W. H. DAVISON called on us on the 30th instant he is looking well and reports trade ashrisk in the lower Kittam at this time, and does not apprehend any danger from the wars further up the country.

GBARGROO ITEMS.

Reports have reached us recently about the deaths of Bahina and Gbon Donguna; both of these have been known as great warriors—throughout this and other adjacent territories.

MOBITH.

This is a large Town on a north branch of the Tucker river, I will tell you how I came to get there; I had special business at N'Charmany Station the place where the dogs went to Church on Sept. 5th last, and Mr. "Eye Witness" tried to apologize for them; I left Shaingay at 6 am., in the little boat Susan with Capt. Charles H. Stivers; the boat has a light cloth awning; when opposite Bompehtooke the breeze turned against us and a heavy rain came on. My large rubber blanket that had served me faithfully all through the [illegible] Freetown on [illegible] and I had to take the rain; my nephew (little Joe) was with me, he had only his suit on, it was 5 p. m. When we reached N'Charmany, Saturday night and Sabbath morning our Services were well attended: one young man walked about 9 or 10 miles to be baptized, the head man of the town attends all of the Services; he is a good member of the Seekers Class; not one dog was present at any of the Services though many are in the town still; after the 11 o'clock Service I said to the Brother in charge "Dr. H. J. Williams, I wish to visit some of your outstations that I have never yet visited; well, said he, I will accompany you; we must start at 1 o'clock; we had with us four school boys to help us with the singing; the first village we came to, Mr. Williams told me that the people were very wicked, and would not allow him to preach to them; at the next (Samnah) we held a short service, about 30 were present, and some of these went with us to the next Town, Mo-Bith, it is on high ground on the bank of the creek, it is a large clean town with very neat and good houses, there were Twins' houses in the town and a large Devil house at the entrance of the town yet I saw no naked people in the town and no one was at work. About 60 people attended our service; about 20 were members of the Seekers' Class. The services were held on the piaza of a house, the congregation were partly in the house and partly on the piazza amongst those out in the open yard was a fine looking elderly Mahomedan with his head all wrapped in a white turban, showing that he was a Mahomdan priest. A large flashy coloured counterpane was made into a gown and worn by him, it reached to his feet; after the service I called on him at the house but could not converse with him as no interpreter was present that could understand him. Returning we passed through Samnah the headman presented me with a basket of Oranges; the tide was up and the water which we had to wade was deep; little Joe was carrying his clothes on his head stumbled and fell and wet all of his clothes, we were back in time for the night service at N'Charmany. Mo-Bith, is the cleanest Town I have seen in this country, for many a day. At three o'clock next morning we were off for Shengay and at 5. p. m. I started from Shengay to Freetown, to meet the Bishop, arrived in Freetown just half hour ahead of the Bishop.

Sir,—The great interest ever manifested by the British Government in procuring peace here as well as elsewhere—that in the far future great good may be done for this part of the West Coast, combined with which, the love for my native land has ever stood in juxta-position and with that burning zeal to the plans and plain dealings of your government in fostering up such plans and schemes to benefit that part of the country lying as yet indirectly under the power of the government, I deem it not unnecessary in presenting before your worship a brief but concise history of the town of which I have the pride to boast, that there my navel-string was deposited, and for which your majesty has been laboring to better and foster the progress not only in the cultivation of its soil and the elevation of its people but also in its christianization and the good to be derived, therefore, with the object the Government has on hand, and the apprehension of same I have the honor to be Sir, your humble and obdt servt.,

IDEALS OF MANHOOD

A YORK correspondent writes:—"The unpretentious building in the old Cathedral City of York, where, in days gone by, the Rev. James Parsons was wont to draw such crowded congregations, and where, in recent years, the Rev. John Hunter ministered with not a little success, is still a centre of spiritual activity. The present Pastor, the Rev. Jos. Vickery, worthily maintains the traditions of Salem Chapel. His teaching is spiritual, cultured and practical—eminently adapted to meet the wants of the age. The especial sympathy he displays with young men has been a marked feature of Mr. Vickery's Ministry. He misses no opportunity of placing before them noble ideals of life, while by his teaching he does not a little to inspire them to seek after these ideals. During the present month Mr. Vickery is delivering a series of Sunday evening discourses on 'Ideals of Manhood Viewed in the Light of Scripture,' the subjects being drawn from both ancient and modern literature—Tennyson's 'King Arthur,' George Eliot's 'Adam Beade,' Shakespeare's 'Brutus,' and the Bible. Last Sunday evening a fairly large congregation assembled to hear the opening discourse on Tennyson's 'King Arthur.' The preliminary devotional exercises being ended, Mr. Vickery read as his text Isaiah xxxii. 1. It was his intention, he said, for a few Sunday evenings to speak to them about certain ideals of worthy manhood. The one great end of life, he continued, was the growth of a noble character. There could be no right character without right ideas to inspire it. Just so far as we acted up to moral ideals, should we be manly men. In every age, and in the literature of all nations, there had been historical and legendary figures clothed upon with ideal goodness—the legendary King Arthur, Alfred the Great, the Cid of Spain, Charlemagne of Gaul. God ruled through great men. Tennyson, who more than any living poet, had given fuller voice to all the deeper questionings of the latter half of the nineteenth century, had given us a noble conception in the Idylls of the King.' Arthur loomed before us as a vast shadowy form of real manhood. The story of his life as given by Tennyson was briefly summarised by the preacher, who depicted Arthur growing up in quiet seclusion, his being called to the throne, his early marriage to Guinevere, his attempts to redress the wrongs under which his country groaned, his founding of the famed Round Table of Knights, who were sworn to teach the heathen and uphold Christ, to 'live sweet lives in purest chastity,' and his untimely death fighting against heathen hordes. King Arthur was a grand embodiment of of an heroic ideal. Proceeding, Mr. Vickery pointed out the most marked characteristics of the hero king. (1) His faith in goodness; (2) his passion for truth; (3) his purity and guilelessness; the clear-faced King sincere "in his own own purity;" (4) his nobleness of spirit; (5) his love of right doing. In concluding, Mr Vickery said that we were told that in these days spiritual ideals, high resolves, and noble visions had no meanings for young men. He denied the assertion, and and would not believe that the young men of our day were less noble than their predecessors. He urged them to imitate the character of King Arthur and of a greater than he, their Saviour Christ. The service was brought to a close by the singing of the hymn, 'Soldiers of Christ Arise' and the pronouncing of the Benediction."—The Christian World.

Dear Mr. Editor,—In reading your valuable and interesting paper of the 30 Nov. I observed an article signed by "A —— W —— Bollom / Shore. in which he made some remarks on my Article of the 18th November which tend to give some annoyance. Had your Correspondent called my attention to any errors found in my article, it would have done him a great deal of good, but he seemed to show himself to you Mr Editor and the public in general that he is much better acquainted with the English language than I or anyone else. If there is any error found in the article it is owing partly to an oversight as it was written very hurriedly to meet up your paper of the 18inst. which I observed myself.

I trust your correspondent will be satisfied with explanation, and will not look upon himself as the only one who understands more about the English language than anybody else.

Thanking you Mr. Editor for the space occupied.

MISCELLANY.

Hold fast to the Bible as the sheet-anchor of our liberties. Write its precepts upon your hearts, and practice them in your lives. To the influence of this book we are indebted for the progress made in true civilization, and to this we must look as our guide in the future.

The best of man that ever wore earth around him was a sufferer a soft, meek, patient, humble, tranquil spirit; the first true gentleman that ever breathed.—Decker.

The Gospel of Jesus Christ must be a divine reality. The sermon on the mount can not be a merely human production. This belief enters into the very depths of my conscience.

As to Jesus of Nazareth, I think his system of morals and his religion as he left them to us are the best the world ever saw or is likely to see.

EVENING HYMN.

BY J. G. MATTOON.

The following lines were composed by Bro. J. G. Mattoon, and were sung at his funeral.

Another day is past and gone,
Another evening come,
The wheels of time still bear me on,
To my eternal home.

The twilight of each dying day,
Still whispers in my ears,
"Thou, too, O man, must pass away;
Why lay up treasures here?"

Another station now is passed,
Another warning given,
Prepare to meet thy God at last,
Prepare, prepare for heav'n.

So when death's shades around me fall,
From out the gath'ring gloom
O may I hear the Savior a call,
"Servant, well done, come home."

MINUTES OF SHERBRO MISSION DISTRICT MEETING.

The Sherbro Mission District Meeting of the U. B. C. of West Africa, met in Eighth Annual Session in Flickinger Chapel, Shaingay, Friday 11:00 a. m., December 17th 1886. At the conclusion of the Devotional Exercises conducted by himself, the Bishop read his opening Address. The Meeting was organized by the election of D. F. Wilberforce as Secretary. The Roll being called, the following members were found to be absent:—R. N. West, C.A. E. Campbell, J. A. King, H.J. Weeks, F. C. Dixon, F. M. Stewart, W. S. Sage.

The Bar of the Meeting being fixed, Bros Hero, Richards, Baker, St. John and Coker were admitted to advisory seats. A Committee consisting of Revs J. A. Evans and R. N. West, was appointed to re-arrange the Minutes of the last District meeting and Educational Meeting, and enter same in their proper places in the Record Book.

The Secretary was appointed a committee to purchase a proper Record Book for entering the minutes of the District Meetings.

The Educational Subject being taken up, Rev. J. Gomer moved that our schools be placed under the Sierra Leone Educational superintendency, so that pupils and teachers may be examined by the Inspector of Schools. The motion was strongly opposed. The discussion following the motion was participated in by Bros. Gomer, Evans, Wilberforce, Taylor, and others. Mr. Gomer having drawn out the discussion desired to withdraw his motion by the consent of the meeting. D. F. Wilberforce read a paper intimating the wish of the committee that he work up general school interest. He also read a set of rules with a chart prepared by him as a guide for teachers in our schools. The paper was adopted.

Mrs Thompson who had charge of Senehoo, and Mr. McKie of Mofuss were admitted to advisory seats. On motion it was ordered that the chart prepared by Mr. Wilberforce be printed and expense provided for.

Mr. St. John made a speech favoring the Educational plans adopted and views presented. (Mr. St. John is a stranger and a Wesleyan member) His remarks were of a very encouraging nature: he saw during the rounds he has been making among our stations, a work more extensive and thorough than he ever thought was being done by our American Mission.

The following committee was upon motion, appointed to prepare a list of books and course of study for teachers, touching subjects upon which they are to be examined a year hence.—Committe:—Evans, West, Wilberforce.

The Chair announced the following committees.

On Devotion,—Gomer, Lesher, Wilberforce.

On Missions—S. B Morrison, vice [Stewart, absent.

On Sunday Schools,—J. M. Lesher.

On Day Schools,—J. C. Sawyer.

On Publishing Interest,—J. Gomer.

On Church Erection, J.B.W. Johnson

On Mendi Mission,—D. K. Flicking[er, Gomer, Evans, Lesher, Wilber- [force.

On Training School—D.F. Wilber- [force.

On Resolutions,—D. F. Wilberforce.

Meeting adjourned to meet next morning at 7:00 a m.

SECOND DAY, DEC. 18,

The Meeting was called to order at the appointed hour, 7.00.a.m. The presiding Bishop read a chapter from the Scriptures, and prayer led by Bro. R.C. Taylor. The Roll of membership was called—Absent,—West, Sage, Stewart, Dixon, Weeks, King, Campbell. The Minutes of first day's Session were read and approved.

Rev. J.A. Evans, Presiding Elder of the Mendi Mission District, reported giving statistics for all the stations in the District. The Pastors and members of that District passed the examination as to ministerial character (see report in full) Bro. G.N. Jowett, Pastor of Good Hope, Bonthe, being absent. Bro. Evans stated that a new impetus was given to the work since the appointment of Rev. G. N. Jowett and Bro. Heroe.

Rev. R.N. West of the Bompeh Mission though absent on account of sickness was yet able to report by a letter, which was read by the Secretary. The members representing the District were all passed except H. J. Weeks who was suspended last year. Bro. Weeks was not present to answer for himself though he had signified to some one of the members, an intention to attend the meeting. In view of these facts the suspension was continued one year longer. The meeting adjourned at 8.55 a.m. to meet at 11:00. a.m.

The meeting was convened at the appointed hour. The devotional exercises conducted by J. B. W. Johnson Rev. J. Gomer the Presiding Elder of Sherbro or Shaingay District read his report, showing that notwithstanding the efforts of satan specially manifested during the year there was great encouragement (see Report)

On motion, Mr. Bright of Free Ch. was admitted to advisory seat in the meeting.

The Bishop called for verbal reports from the principal stations. Mr. McKie of Mofuss told how he was enabled to do itinerating work in fifty two towns as reported by the Presiding Elder.

Bro. Sawyer our Veteran worker reported encouragingly for Mambo and Rembee stations; giving some very interesting incidents of Missionary life.

Correspondents were appointed for the Religious Telescope, Itinerant, Woman's Evangel, Early Dawn, Joyful Messenger.

Mrs. Thompson who has been in charge of the Lesher school at Senehoo and had done good work was enabled to present a very interesting report of her station.

Bros Joah of Manoh, and Richards of Kooloonge though not members of the meeting, were asked to report for their stations. The characters of the members, of the District were passed satisfactorily except those of Messrs Dixon, King and Campbell. The names of these brethren were referred to a Committee consisting of Bros. Lesher,

The Committee on first years course of reading reported as follows. "Your committee on course of reading (as Bro. R.N. West was absent in consequence of illness) consisted only of the undersigned who had, before him at different times Bros. R. C. Taylor, C. T. Grey, H. J. Williams, S. B. Morrison and J. W. Pratt. Bros. Taylor and Grey were examined. Bro. Taylor had read some of the books and other books: was ready with answers from the Bible and Watson, but answered well all the questions that were asked on the subjects required to be read. Bro. Grey had read some of the books, answered readily from the Bible, nothing from other Books prescribed, but answered all the questions asked on the subjects required to be read. And it is recommended that these two brethren be passed to the 2nd year's course of reading, but that they review the work of the first year, and familiarize themselves with the required books of the course as prescribed. —Bros. Williams & Morrison had not been able to get the books, but desired to read them. Bro, Pratt says he is willing to read and has read such books as he could obtain, poverty alone has prevented him from getting the books required. It is further recommended that these three brethren be allowed another year on the 1st years course, and urged to obtain and read the required books —J. A. Evans, Report adopted.

The Report of the committee on Day schools was called for, read and adopted

The committee on Sunday schools read its report which was adopted as also report of Committee on Publishing Interests.

JAN. 15, 1887.

THE "AT HOME" given on the 1st inst by the Comd't and Mrs. Moseley we understand was a well gotten up and very enjoyable affair; but we regret very much that our Reporter failed to get his account of the affair ready for the Press, for this present issue, but we are glad to say that we believe no time, pains or expense were spared by our very popular and hospitable Commandant and his highly esteemed and gifted Lady to make all feel At Home indeed; of which we hope to give a better account in our next issue.

Roll of Honor.

We give below a list of the names of those who having contributed Exhibits have been awarded a Metalic Medal and Diploma which has now been received through the Comdt's Office of this place.

We heartily congratulate the Authorities of the Colonial and Indian Exhibition for awarding such handsome, as well as such appropriate awards to Exhibitors, and further congratulate the above named gentlemen, upon being so highly favoured as to receive such awards, and trust they may be stimulated thereby to greater efforts in all such enterprises, and especially to the bringing forth to light, the Hidden and undeveloped Resources of this vast Continent in time to come.

[LONDON LETTER.]

LONDON, DEC. 10, 1886.

Dear Mr. Evans,—I wish I could bring you and all the readers of The "Early Dawn" to the window of the Mission House in which I am writing. I will try to tell you what you would see.

"You look down from a high house upon the River Thames. There is a beautiful garden by the side of the river in which are seats where people can rest, and also statues of some of our great and good men. There is also just opposite the window a tall stone column called Cleopatra's Needle, which was brought from Egypt in the north of Africa, where it lay on the ground in the sand for many hundred years.

A great many steam boats are always going up and down the river very quickly. There is a great bridge over which railway trains rush with much noise. They bring many thousands of people into London every day. It is very wonderful to see these long trains going along at such a marvellous rate.

A little further down the river is another railway bridge over which three heavy trains can pass at the same time. There is an immense station on the river bank from which trains are being started all day long. It is a very curious fact that where that great Cannon Street Station now stands, was the spot where London first began about two thousand years ago. In three days all these river banks, where now are such fine streets, filled with houses, churches, shops and a continual crowd of people, there was then only one dense forest, in one corner of which a few savages made a little clearing, built a few rough huts which they surrounded by a stockade, just as your natives do in Africa.

This has set me wondering whether some of these days a great civilized town may yet be seen on the banks of the Sherbro river. Our British Natives could not find out civilization for themselves,—the Romans came and taught them. We hope your people who have the advantages of learning from Europeans are profiting by the teaching, and are growing into a great industrious Nation.

Yours very truly

I. ——A ——

We regret very much the lateness of the present Issue, as well as the fact that we were not able to get out a supplement with it. But circumstances over which we had no control has necessitated the delay and also prevented us from Issuing the supplement.

ALARMED AT OUR RAPID INCREASE.

Dear Mr. Editor—You may remember that I said at the close of our Annual Meeting last month to Messrs Gomer, Lesher Wilberforce and yourself that the large increase of members alarmed me. After a nett gain of 1012 in 1884, and 1203 in 1885, I supposed we would report little increase at the end of 1886, but a careful looking of the chart after deducting fully one third reported as the nett gain for 1886, still gives us an increase of 1311 for last year, making total members in Africa 3910. We may well rejoice with trembling when we consider that the large majority of those members need, and must have, if they are to be kept in the right way with much attention. They need to be instructed, encouraged, and carefully watched over, and with our present itinerant force this is well nigh an impossibility. The men of experience in charge of stations with their Day Schools, and other duties cannot vi it the villages and towns most distant from them as often as this should be done. Hence young men and Mission boys who are inexperienced do much of this work.

The Presiding Elders and others having the oversight of the young itinerants ought to urge them to give special attention to those, whose names are enrolled upon our Church registers. May be for next year less effort should be put forth to get new members and more to build up in the faith of the gospel those we have, unless the people are brought to a saving knowledge of the truth, and helped to live a good life, their names being on Church Registers will do them little good.

KONCONANY LETTER.

Mr. Ed.—The Meeting House was under repairs, just begun by Mr Baker. But he had not collected any amount to carry on the Work. So I have laid the people late to make subscriptions on the past Sabbath, which amounted to 23 Shillings and Six pence, a part of which has been paid.

The Watch night service was largely attended, and we also have services this week I am,

Your obedient Servant,

Jan 5th '87. T. N. JOAH.

Bear Mr. Editor—In my last visit to Sherbro, you asked that I would favor you with news from interesting to the publics, I beg on so with pleasure, at same time do not guarantee the correcting of all I may give you, as the greater part will be received on the "on dit" of the natives, I shall however endeavour to deny or corroborate them as they may turn out false or true.

The first I regret taking to report is the Burning of the town of Soonginah in Loquleh Country upper Boom River, when most of the trades established there, suffered more or less from the conflagration, as it occurred at night it is suspected to have been the act of an incendiary. The fire commenced on a small hut adjoining the house occupied by our S. S. Master and thence spread over the town. Messrs Davison and Mariner, are said to be the greatest losers.

Naboh, King of the Loquboh Country has issued orders to all the Towns within his jurisdiction to at once set about rebuilding their War Fences, as the Boom River is drying up rapidly, and it is only in this season that war generally breaks out, the losing of such orders is neither encouraging nor reassuring to Merchants and Traders.

The morning previous to was received via Levuma that Chief Fabundoh's town was attacked by the Timbo people on Thursday eight 20th January, but was repulsed.

Since writing the above I have been informed that Fabundoh's town was not actually attacked, a war party had started out for that purpose, but the enemy were too weak for the task, they returned to the place of departure for a larger force.

Yours truly,

RAOUL.

WELCOME TO THE CHRIST—CHILD.

If every little child could see
Our Saviour's shining face,
I think that each one eagerly
Would run to His embrace.

Though black the hand, red, brown [and white,
All hearts are just the same;
Each one is precious in His sight,
Each one He calls by name.

And those who hear, in every land,
With loyal hearts and true,
Will grasp some little brother's hand,
And lead him onward too.

From "Little Helpers," Boston America.

FIRST SINGING OF "HOME, SWEET HOME."

Perhaps the most thrilling quarter of an hour of John Howard Payne's life was that when Jenny Lind sung "Home, Sweet Home" to him. The occasion was the Jenny Lind concert in Washington, the night of December 17th 1850. The assembly was, perhaps, the most distinguished ever seen in a concert room in this country. The immense National Hall, hastily constructed for the occasion on the ruins of the burned National Theatre, was filled to overflowing. Among the notables present and occupying front seats were President Fillmore, Daniel Webster, Henry Clay, General Scott, and John Howard Payne. Jenny Lind opened with the "Casta Diva," and followed by the "Flute Song" (in which her voice contested rivalry for purity and sweetness with a flute in the choir), then the famous "Bird Song," and next on her programme the "Greeting to America." All the pieces were applauded apparently to the full capacity of an enthusiastic audience, and Mr. Webster, who was in his most genial after-dinner mood, complimented the plaudits by rising from his seat and making Jenny's profound bow, as if responding for the country to her "Greeting." But when the "Swedish Nightingale" answered the encores by turning in the direction of the box occupied by John Howard Payne and giving "Home, Sweet Home," with all the wonderful tenderness, purity, and simplicity fitting both the words and the air of the immortal song, the difference was at once seen between the mechanical applause called out by a display of fine vocalization, and that elicited by the "touch of nature that makes the whole world kin." Before the first line of the song was completed the audience was surely off its feet, and could scarcely wait for a pause to give expression to its enthusiasm. People ordinarily of the most demonstrative sort clapped, stamped, and shouted as if they were mad, and it seemed as if there would be no end to the uproar. Meantime all eyes were turned upon Payne, a small-sized, elegantly-made, gray-haired gentleman, who blushed violently at finding himself the centre of so many glances.—Ex.

FROM SHAINGAY.

Of late the regent Chief has had his hands full curbing, Mad-ambitions and Revengful people, the first and worst of these is one Gbannah Thie the headman of a town on a branch of the Tucker River by the name of Mentibie, some months ago he made a raid on some villages and plundered them. Chief Caulker caught Mr Gbannah Thie, had him severely whipped and kept him 2 or 3 weeks in chains then sent him home again, the gentleman was not pleased with his treatment and set himself about being revenged, he got Mr. Gbor-Kioh, head man of the town Bauh-mah, to enter into partnership with him—they sent money (cloth, gin, rum, etc., etc.) to the Mendi country to buy war; the warriors to avoid suspicion came in groups of from 2 to 5 and put up principally at Mentibie and Bauh-mah; the neighbouring villagers became alarmed at the number of Mendies passing through their towns, word was sent to the Chief who at once set about ferreting out the cause, and the result is that Gbannah-Thie his son, a young man about 25 and Mr. Gbor-Kioh are all in chains in Shengay.

NEWS ITEMS.

There was an Entertainment and Tea meeting and also a sale of Fancy Articles by the members of St Matthew's Sabbath School on 5th inst. His Excellency the administrator in Chief Capt J. S. Hay attended. The proceeds for new Church building fund.

His Excellency Administrator in Chief arrived per S. S. Countess of Derby on the 5th inst and returned on the 7th inst.

A meeting of the members of St Matthew's Church assembled at the School Room to consider about the building of a New Church, The Commandant and wife were present the former made appropriate remarks on the subject.

Promises to about £406 was subscribed. S. B. A. Macfoy £150. C. B. Collier £30. and others £20. downwards.

There was a Regatta Boat Race on the 12th inst., which was a rare treat indeed.

School Exhibition.—At the Mendi Mission presided over by the Revd G. G. M. Nicol B. A. pastor of St Matthew's Church. Was a pronounced success on the evening of the 14th inst.

FROM THE NORTH—It has been reported to us from Sasu Country, that the War Troubles that way are being settled; if this be true we may certainly hope for Better days with both the North and South quiet.

Personal

Rev. G. G. M. Nicol, Miss. E. Thompson and Mrs. G. A. Metzger gave us a pleasant call on the 3rd inst.

Mr. S. B. A. M'cFoy and two sons called on us about the 11th instant. The sons are fine, clever looking youngsters. Mr. M. we understand shares in the general opinion of a fair prospect for the Trade in Sherbro.

We are glad to learn that there has been an increase of Two Thousand Pounds in the revenue of Sherbro, and that with the reviving Trade, and the suppression of the Smuggling business; it is to be hoped that it will continue to increase; which certainly is a rather promising omen of better days.

SHAINGAY ITEMS.

Mr. & Mrs. C. A. E. Campbell made a flying trip from Mosam here, to visit Mrs. Elizabeth Caulker, mother of Mrs. Campbell and to transact a little business with Bishop Flickinger.

Regent Chief T. N. Caulker is in Freetown on business with the Governor; several river Traders have been seized of late and sent to Freetown for smuging.

Mr Albert St. John Photographer has just completed a round to the principal Mission Stations of the Shaingay and Mendi Missions, has taken several views of each Station, he has also taken views of Purrow Bush, Devil houses and various other sketches of African life. The Rev. J. Gomer is having these taken for private purpose.

Mr. St. John is a fine Artist and the sketches are good amongst them is a group of all members of the District in meeting including the preachers Teachers and Itinerants; Bishop D. K. Flickinger and Rev. J. M. Lesher are both very prominet in the group; there are 37 persons all told in the picture.

Rev. D. F. Wilberforce and family have gone for a few days to Goangbaih;—A house is being got ready for them to live in here, and also for them to take care of the Female members of the Training School, it is the large stone mansion belonging to Mr. Campbell.

We have more abundant reasons to be thankful to our beneficent Heavenly Father for his great goodness in bringing us again safely through the vicissitudes of another Conference year of almost twelve months duration, for indeed the Lord has been very merciful to us, and not and yet has kept us safely. At the beginning of the year there was spiritually a fair prospect before us but shortly after the first month had passed the usual laxity was discernible in in most of the stations especially was this true of Good Hope and Danville at the former, the school Teacher early showed a lack of energy and soon seemed to lose pretty much all of his influence for good, and finally had to be dismissed in August. The teacher at Danville was without success and was persuaded to resign about the first of April. Konoonany did rather better in the early part of the year and many seekers were enlisted and there were over 30 adults and children baptized there in March. At Avery it went ill with one of the itinerants so much so that he was dismissed about the middle of January. Another of the voluntary Itinerants fell into sin and was dropped from the list, several others followed in the same line Mando, Brother Taylor and wife were along at their work until he secured his own expense for a time a young man to assist him who has since September been employed by the Missions.

But to revert to the other side of the scale or that of success, first of all I may say all the vacancies that occured were supplied or filled almost without delay: but of course not without some inconvenience yet as little as possible. At Good Hope the Rev. G. N. Jowett was appointed Pastor in August and from that time an effort was made to raise something for the Pastors support. Of course owing to the hard times only a small amount has been raised but it is a begining, and we trust in time will increase to even the entire support of the Pastors. There has been a large increase in members, especially seekers over 1,000 of which has been received on the District. Some twenty or thirty Communicants have been so recognized as such on the Records. But this does not of course represent all the believers by any means, as a large share of the Seekers are believers as usual, and great care is exercised in receiving these into our Classes.

I have visited all the stations during the year but Mandoe only once in person, however was in close communication with it all the year. The other Stations were visited some three or four times each.

J. A. EVANS, P.E.,

To the Members and Friends of Sherbro Annual District Meeting.

It is with sincere regret that I am unable to be with you in our Annual Session which convenes on the morrow, but though absent in the body I shall be with you in spirit and pray earnestly that the blessing of the Lord may be richly shed in all your hearts, and that you may go forth with renewed strength and zeal to fight the battles of the Lord.

Though we have been absent the greater part of the year yet the Lord has prospered his work in Bompeh Mission as the accompanying Statistics will shown again praying the Divine blessing may be upon you.

R. N. WEST, P. E.
Bompeh Mission District.

SHAINGAY DISTRICT.

The year just closing has been one of variations. We have had our bitter and our sweets, our ups and our downs. A few of our members have passed from labour to reward. Chief Bah-Mattie of Bompehtooke and Sateah Kate of Shengay were full members and we have good reason to hope that they are with their Saviour. Three of our principal laborers have been guilty of gross immorality and were dismissed. The conduct of one was most aggravating and beastly and it was only to save the reputation of the Mission that he was not delivered to the Civil Authorities to be dealt with. Bro Richard Lake could not get on well with his people at Rembee. There was nothing against his moral character. I thought it best for both him and his people to relieve him of the station, and accordingly put the station under Bro Sawyerr and Bro Lake has assisted Bro Sawyerr at Mambo, and the work is looking up, Bro Lake is rendering good service at Mambee.

Though I have cautioned our itinerants against receiving seekers unless they are satisfied that they are sincere and promise to lead good lives, there has been an increase of members of 621, there has been a degrease of believers of 46 caused by removals dismissals and deaths. There are at present 1.36 members full members, 2295 seekers, giving a total membership in the district of 2471.

Sister Jane Caulker of Cottah conducts a private Class of 21. She teaches them at night 4 of this number have been baptized.——J. GOMER P. E.

Better Days And Brighter Prospects

Seem to be in store for the Sherbro Trade is evidently reviving to this there is not a dissenting voice, croakers are even now forced to admit this fact, while considerate men feel quite sure of it even after making all possible allowances for probable contingences, from the speculative there seems to be but little of that wild enthusiasms that often runs wild with our best financial interests and deranges every commercial prospect. Produce for the present cannot be expected to come down in large quantities as it is a little out of season for almost every thing.

—LONDON, DEC. 10, 1886.

DEAR MR. EVANS, I wish I could bring you and all the readers of The "Early Dawn" to the window of the Mission House in which I am writing. I would try to tell you what you could see.

You look down from a high bank upon the River Thames. There is a beautiful garden by the side of the river in which we sometimes play. FROM SHAINGAY.

Of late the regent Chief has had his hands full curbing Mad ambitions and Revengful people, the first and worst of these is one Gbannah Thie the headman of a town on a branch of the Tucker River by the name of Mentibie, some months ago he made a raid on some villages and plundered them. Chief Caulker caught Mr Gbannah Thie, had him severely whipped and kept him 2 or 3 weeks in chains then sent him home again, the gentleman was not pleased with his treatment and set himself about being revenged he got Mr. Gbor-Kioh, headman of the town Bauh-mah, to enter into partnership with him—they sent money (cloth, gin, rum, etc., etc.) to the Mendi country to buy war; the warriors to avoid suspicion came in groups of from 2 to 3 and put up principally at Mentibie and Bauh-mah; the neighbouring villagers became alarmed at the number of Megdies passing through their towns word was sent to the Chief who at once set about ferreting out the cause, and the result is that Gbannah-Thie his son, a young man about 23 and Mr. Gbor-Kioh are all in chains in Shangay.

NEWS ITEMS.

There was a Regatta Boat Race on the 12th inst., which was a rare treat indeed.

School Exhibition.—At the Mendi Mission presided over by the Revd G. G. M. Nicol B. A. pastor of St Matthew's Church. Was a pronounced success on the evening of the 11th inst.

FROM THE NORTH—It has been reported to us from Sussu Country, that the War Troubles that way are being settled; if this be trine we may certainly hope for Better days with both the North and South quiet.

Personal

Rev. G. G. M. Nicol, Miss. E. Thompson and Mrs. G. A. Metzger gave us a pleasant call on the 3rd inst.

Mr. S. B. A. McFoy and two sons called on us about the 11th instant. The sons are fine, clever looking youngsters. Mr. M. we understand shares in the general opinion of a fair prospect for the Trade in Sherbro.

We are glad to learn that there has been an increase of Two Thousand Pounds in the revenue of Sherbro, and that with the reviving Trade, and the suppression of the Smuggling business; it is to be hoped that it will continue to increase; which certainly is a rather promising omen of better days.

SHAINGAY ITEMS.

Mr. & Mrs. C. A. E. Campbell made a flying trip from Mosam here, to visit Mrs. Elizabeth Caulker, mother of Mrs. Campbell and to transact a little business with Bishop Flickinger.

Regent Chief T. N. Caulker is in Freetown on business with the Governor; several river Traders have been seized of late and sent to Freetown for smuggling.

Mr Albert St. John Photographer has just completed a round to the principal Mission Stations of the Shaingay and Mendi Missions, has taken several views of each Station, he has also taken views of Purrow Bush, Devil houses and various other sketches of African life. The Rev. J. Gomer is having these taken for private purpose.

Mr. St. John is a fine Artist and the sketches are good although not equal to many we have seen before. Especially was this the case with the Devil Houses and Devil Bush. Among the pictures of groups of natives including the preachers Teachers and Emigrants; Bishop D. K. Flickinger and Rev. J. M. Lesher are both very prominet in the group; there are 37 persons all told in the picture.

Rev. D. F. Wilberforce and family have gone for a few days to Goangbala; —Allhouse is being got ready for them to live in here, and also for them to take care of the Female members of the Training School; it is the large stone mansion belonging to Mr. Campbell.

We have more than had reasons to be thankful to our Beneficent Heavenly Father for his great goodness in bringing us again safely through the vicissitudes of another Conference year (and most twelve months duration, for indeed the Lord has been pleased to take away most earlier months than usual) and to keep us safe.

The beginning of the year there was quite a fair prospect before us but shortly after the first month had passed

Comfible in the case of Rogbanna and Denville at the former, the school Teacher early showed a lack of energy and soon seemed to lose pretty much all of his influence for good, and finally had to be dismissed in August. The teacher at Denville was without success and was persuaded to resign about the first of April. Konnoway did rather better in the early part of the year and many seekers were called and there were over 30 adults and children baptised there in March.

At Avery it went ill with one of the Rulers and so much so that he was obliged to leave about the middle of January. Another of the voluntary Itinerants fell into sin and was dropped from the list, several others followed in the same line. Mambo, Brother Taylor and wife were alone at their work until he secured his own expense for a time a young man to assist him who has since Septemper been employed by the Mission.

But to revert to the other side of the scale or that of success, first of all I may say, all the vacancies that occured were supplied or filled almost without delay; but of course not without some inconvenience yet as little as possible. At Good Hope the Rev. G. N. Jowett was appointed Pastor in August and from that time no effort was made to raise something for the Pastors support could not be here, he was sure his name would be dealt with and erased from the roll. The report was adopted. The Minutes of the session were read and approved.

I have visited all the stations during the year but Mambo only once in person, however was in close communication with it all the year. The other Stations were visited some three or four times each.

To the Members and Friends of Sherbro Annual District Meeting.

It is with sincere regret that I am unable to be with you in your Annual Session which convenes on the morrow, but though absent in the body I shall be with you in Spirit and pray earnestly that the blessing of the Lord may be richly shed in all your hearts, and that you may go forth with renewed strength and zeal to fight the battles of the Lord.

Though we have been absent the greater part of the year yet the Lord has prospered his work in Bompeh Mission as the accompanying Statistics will shown again praying the Divine Blessing may be upon you.

SHAINGAY DISTRICT.

The year just closing has been one of variations. We have had our bitter and our sweets, our ups and our downs. A few of our members have passed from labour to reward. Chief Bah-Mattie of Bumpehtooke and Sarah Kate of Shangay were full members and we have good reason to hope that they are with their Saviour. Three of our principal laborers have been guilty of gross immorality and were dismissed. The conduct of one was most aggravating and beastly and it was only to save the reputation of the Mission that he was not dedicated to the Civil Authorities to be dealt with. Bro Richard Lake could not get on well with his people at Rogbanna. There was nothing against his moral character. I thought it best for both him and his people to relieve him of the station, and accordingly put the station under Bro Sawyer and Bro Lake has assisted Bro Sawyer at Mambo, and the work is looking up. Bro Lake is rendering good service at Mambo.

Though I have retained our itinerants against receiving seekers unless they are satisfied that they are sincere and promise to lead good lives, there has been an increase of members of 621, there has been a decrease of believers of 36 caused by removals dismissals and deaths. There are at present 1,36 members full members, 2290 seekers, giving a total member-ship in the district of 2,14.

Sister Jane Caulker of Cottah conducts a private Class of 21. She teaches them at night 4 of this number have been baptized.——J. GOMER P. E

Better Days And Brighter Prospects

Seem to be in store for the Sherbro Trade is evidently reviving to this there is not a dissenting voice, croakers are even now forced to admit this fact, while considerate men feel quite sure of it even after making all possible allowances for probable contingences, from the speculative there seems to be but little of that wild enthusiasms that often runs wild with our best financial interests and derranges every commercial prospect. Produce for the present cannot be expected to come down in large quantities as it is a little out of season for almost every thing.

To the Editor "Early Dawn."

Sir,—Bargroo seems to have had greater advantages than any other part of British Sherbro in the sales of spirits free from license wh ch is not granted to other places. In the year 1878 by some explanation made to His Excellency Govr. Sir Samuel Rowe respecting the condition of the trade in that River His Excellency thought it necessary to permit those trading there to dispose of spirits free of license. This indulgence then was supposed simply to allow the sufferers in the Kingbo war to recover the loss they had sustained in consequence of that war. But from the long continuance of this, great numbers of traders who can afford to pay license elsewhere have been invited there simply to avoid this; besides merchants in Sherbro frequently sent Boat loads of rum and gin and are effecting large off-handed sales of them there. The state of Bargroo now is far different from what was represented in the year 1878.

Bargroo is producing a large amount of produce to suit European markets while in that year it was said to produce rice only or in other word-Local provisions;

Black River a more insignificant part of British Sherbro has not been so favoured why such be given to traders in Bargroo and who are effecting as large sales of spirits nearly as those trading in other important rivers. The demand for spirits in that River has been increased some years ago and is daily increasing to the advantage of those who can afford to pay license. It is hoped that the Commandant of Sherbro would think it a part of his duty to call the attention of His Excellency the Governor to this important fact

To the Editor "Early Dawn."

Sir,—Possession of Lands is the subject for the day at present in Sherbro, Kittam, Imperreh and the Jong are said to have been handed over by each respective rightful Authority, notwithstanding the doubts which was said to have existed as to the right of transfer respecting Jong River especially Matro's juri-diction, this however we believe will be fairly determined at some future time. The possession of Country and Rivers in Sherbro has aroused the cupidity and avarice of many and it is evident that some are going about to wheedle the natives out of their lands.

If I am rightly informed, it is said of late that for a small loss sustained by the appropriating to their use a small quantity of produce during the war by some men of one of the surviving towns in the small Boom River a claim of a sum of money was made by a certain individual who was its proprietor, for its recovery, the amount of loss was said to have been exaggerated to such an exorbitant sum that the claimant has never yet but numerated, and which he knows they are incapable of paying. To assert such a claim a private meeting for some days was held in the bush and which resulted in the signing of a paper which might perhaps be understood by them to be a promissory note for payment of a sum of money. But it is hinted that it was a transfer of a portion of the small Boom River. This meeting which was held in the bush, and was intended to evade the interference of any that might betray its intention, and to dupe the natives in the bargain. A country can be transferable only by rightful Authorities and not by private individuals who are heads of towns and their people only.

Bey Koah the crowned king of that country and his only surviving minister Gphow can perform this and no one else. The result of such a meeting I'll ever regard as a sham transaction and it reports very shameful news of the claimant. A country has never been thrown away in such way and never can it be by boys and believe it he chooses that the paper he holds and regards as a found treasure he will soon find means for its use in foul way.

Yours—Sound.

To the Editor of the "Early Dawn.

Dear Sir,—When it was proposed that your journal should be published semi-monthly, it was thought that you would be supplied with news from Bonthe always. At first, the young men tried, but latterly and to the present moment no news whatever is sent from Bonthe.

I have been trying to find the cause but till now I could not find out. Is it because there has been no news at Bonthe lately for publication in your journal? I answer there have been many items, but I shall only name a few.

(1.) There was a Debate on "Agriculture," &c.

(2.) A Lecture by D.M.P. Thorpe, on "Unity"

(3.) Formation of "Sherbro Mutual Improvement Club."

(4.) Cricket match on X'mas & New Year's Day.

Why was not these inserted in the "Early Dawn?" We have been reading from its columns, news from Shaingay, Bargroo and elsewhere, but none from Bonthe. I must confess, it is a shame to our young men in Bonthe, for if others supply us with news from their quarters, we should also furnish them with ours.

I hope the young men will devote their time in reading and then furnish you with news to meet the wants of your subscribers, and the readers of your journal. Thanking you for the space I have occupied.

FIVE HOURS IN A DANCE HOUSE.

Dear Mr Editor—I have read with utter amazement the article which appeared in your issue of 31 Decr and signed N M'Caulay John.

You will kindly allow me space to make few remarks on that article.

N. M. J. designates the attendants at the Ball as vile ones, lewd women, jail birds &c but may I ask, was he not present at the ball? and if he was present, it stands to reason that he is included in that promiscuous gathering. It appears to me that he took umbrage at his not being invited to the ball, which gave rise to his meaningless article. I must say that with the exception of N. M. J. every one who were present at the ball, were quite pleased, and the gathering was in every sense a respectable one, composed of young Ladies and Gents of intelligence and respectability. I hope N. M. J will accept a few hints from me.

(1) He must learn in future to be truthful.

(2) He should not be covetous.

If he wishes to be a member of the S. M. I. C and to have the pleasure of enjoyment with them, why not come forward and put in his shillings, instead of rushing heedlessly into print?

Yours Mr Editor
Bonthe JUSTITIA.

Sir—The Tenders for Government supplies for 1887 have been forwarded, discussed upon and recommended; and the public is now in a position to know those who were recommended for the contract.

Permit me then a small space in your columns to ask briefly the following questions

1st Is it true that the Tenders for the Hospital and Gaol are given to Mr. M. Z. Macauley and that for Chiefs and native Strangers to Mr. A. T. Clay, while that for Canoes and Boats is given to Mr. J. B. Parkinson?

2nd Is it true that some of the native Governmennent Officials who sat as Commissioners to Adjudicate upon the merit of the Tenders forwarded, are in secret and close private arrangement with the Contractors for a distribution of the money consequently the native Government Officials used all their influence to back and recommend them?

3rd. Do not these native Government Officials receive ample wages from the Government? If not why not apply for an increase? Why traffic as it were with the Government in backing their interested friend to become the contractor and to have a share?

4th Is the price of those who tendered last year less than those who tendered this year? Why is not the contract given to one and the same person?

Awaiting your reply Mr Editor you may expect to hear from me again on the subject whether I am favoured with an answer or not.

I am Mr. Editor,
Bonthe, Yours truly
11th Jan. '87 B. M. W.

Some of the penny novel writers are in a hurry to get their pay, otherwise they would revise their work, and not allow such startling statements as the following to appear in type: "I grew up to manhood without ever knowing what the love of a parent really was, for my mother died when my eldest brother was born.

"My Dear," said a husband in startling tones, after awaking his wife in the night, "I have swallowed a dose of strychnine!" "Well, then, do for goodness sake lie still, or it may come up.

"It is cruel to keep that dog closely muzzled this warm weather," said a gentleman to a boy leading a small dog, the owner of the dog must be a cruel man. "O no, sir, he is the kindest hearted man in the world. He keeps the dog muzzled to prevent him from biting" "From biting children I suppose." "O no from biting the fleas that almost worry the life out of the poor animal.

MINUTES OF SHERBRO

MISSION DISTRICT MEETING.

BISHOP'S ADDRESS.

The past year has been one of unusual disaster, in a moral point of view to our African Mission, and of embarrasment to those managing its finances.

Owing to reduced appropriations there has been a constant struggle to meet wants which were essentially important to our success.

The saddest of all is the loss of several laborers on account of gross immorality which may well cause us deep humiliation and mortification: and which admonishes us who think we stand, to take heed lest we fall also.

Surely no professed minister of the gospel, can fall into such reprouchful crime against God, and right, who will stop to consider the reproach such a course brings upon the cause of Christ, or else he must be terribly corrupt in heart.

As the time for which we agreed to work Mendi Mission will expire with the year 1887, and the indications are we will be offered that $44 for permanent occupation, but the 5000 dollars subsidy will be withheld after next year, it will be necessary to prepare a paper expressive of the views of this body to go to the Board of Missions, next May, and through it to the U. B. of C. for F. M. in the City of Boston, Massachusetts. This matter requires careful consideration upon our part at present.

As a matter of course for next year as also for Sherbro and Bumpeh Missions we must make the best provision posible for Mendi mission with the means at our command.

I am glad that a couple members of this body besides myself are lately from the U. S. A. and know the feelings of the Church at home, and the prospect of securing money for the use of Africa in the future.

I am glad, and thankful to God to be able to report success in receiving money during the past year. Mr. Rufus Clarke and wife put 5000 dollars in our hands for the erection of a Theological Training School, and I was permitted to assist Mrs. S. Bischoff of Nalls, Germany, to close a transaction which put into our treasury 10,000 dollars for missions in Germany. The interest from this for two years, as well as 600 dollars interest from other funds in the hands of the Treasurer of the Missionary society, with some subscriptions I received, making a total of 2200 dollars for building Chapels in Germany, with good prospects of swelling this account to at least twice this amount, highly gratifying.

In England during the 1886 we have received fully 2500 dollars which has paid about 2000 dollars of the debt we owed Blackstock & Co., and the balance has been paid me on salary and traveling expenses.

I wish to call attention to the fact that it is all important for uniformity in conducting the work of this mission. Diversity of method, or plans of operation, will sooner or later bring confusion. I have no criticisms, or complaints to offer against any other methods of work. No doubt there is good in all, but still the work is to be done according to the order and discipline of the United Brethren Church. Employing as we do Laborers from various Christian bodies there must be care taken upon this point. All our Laborers ought to read our Church papers, and our book of Discipline, so as to know both the letter and spirit of our creed, and conform thereto so far as this can be done without a violation of a sense of right, or propriety. Above all let there be much prayer during our meeting that God may direct our deliberations.

One more thing no our Laboring fo us is in the future to order books or papers only through Messrs. Gomer and Evans.—Agents.

PUBLISHING INTERESTS.

The Literature of our Church is 1st Class and I feel proud always in showing our papers and books to people and am satisfied that there is none better.

I feel that all of our Preachers Teachers and Itinerants ought to Subscribe to the Telescope and the Bible Teacher monthly if nothing more. I would urge also that in view of the extra postage that is charged and the smallness of our marks salaries Rev. Wilberforce write the publisher and try to get something off the price of the Telescope so that more of our workers may Subscribe for it. We urge also that each person in charge of Stations collect money to Subscribe for the Missionary Visitor and when all of the Stations have collected enough to pay for 100 copies they send it to Shaingay and Cy. for the amount sent will be given them the papers ordered and distributed to the Stations in proportion to the amount given, these papers ought to be read by our children.

Resolved that we are well pleased with the Early Dawn it is just the paper that suits our people here, and we are glad to know that its Subscription list is increasing in this country, and we pledge ourselves to assist as best we can to increase its Circulation.

CHURCH ERECTION.

"The house of God is intended for all people and it is in accordance with the Divine injunction that houses should be erected for the public worship of God. The Lord Jehovah by the prophet Haggai, says to his children, "Go up to the mountain, and bring wood, and build the house; and I will take pleasure in it, and I will be glorified, saith the Lord." therefore, Resolved, That we will labor with ardent and renewed energy to bring before our people their bounden duty towards building a place of worship in every town where we are itinerating.

RESOLUTIONS.

MENDI MISSION.

Whereas the time expires for which we agreed to work Mendi Mission with the end of the year 1887, and whereas prospects are good for said Mission to come into our hands permanently, with all its buildings, including Saw Mill farms lands and boats which came to us from A. M. A. of New York, now from A. B. C. F. M. of Boston therefore,

1 Resolved that we earnestly request the Board of Missions in Boston not only to give us this field permanently, but to continue to give us the $2000 subsidy for another term of five years, by which time we hope our Board of Missions will be able to provide for its financial wants.

2 We request Bishop Flickinger to bring this matter before our Board of Missions at its next Annual meeting, and also before the Boston board, and if need be, are them to fully explain the following and other matters pertaining to said Mission, viz that during the four years we have worked said field, we have fully redeemed it from the low condition in which we found it, and brought it up to its former honorable position in the estimation of the people of this country. By our system of itinerating we now go into 152 Towns, most of which were never visited by any Missionaries before our Itinerants did it. 6 Avery Good Hope, and other Stations we have good Schools, and Churches organized with an aggregate membership of 1597. The prospects for future success, and rapid enlargement are excellent and the field ought to be diligently cultivated.

PASTORS SUPPORT.

Whereas our work is enlarging more rapidly than the means are provided for its support; and whereas the scriptures enjoin the duty of the support of the gospel upon its recipients, therefore resolved

1. That an effort be made by each preacher in charge of a Station or Mission to raise all he can for the Pastor's Support with a view to self support at the earliest possible moment.

Resolved, that we can not close this session with an expression of our appreciation of the work done by Bros G ower and Evans for the efficient manner in which they have managed the missions under their care especially during the recent absence of their Co-workers we hereby reaffirm our confidence in them.

A unanimous note of thanks be tended the people of Shaingay and vicinity also the mission for the entertainment provided for this meeting.

That we remember our absent brethren who from affliction or other causes can not be with us, we tender our sympathy with our brother R. S. West who though afflicted with rheumatism, this meeting, we hope he and wife may be spared to labor long in Africa.

That this meeting will always remember our Bishop who has ably presided at so many sessions of this District meetings, and will pray God to keep him so, he shall go from us and travel again, across the ocean on his return home.

TRAINING SCHOOL.

It is a cause for the deepest gratitude to Almighty God, that our fondest hopes are now in the establishment of a Training School in this mission. The building for which is being pushed foward by the Rev. J. M. Lesher for we believe that this institution will not only prove a boon to the young people of Sherbro and other places, but will greatly enhance and give permanence and system to the work of education in which we are engaged. We therefore resolve—

1st. That we tender to Mr. Rufus Clark and wife of Denver Colorado U. S. A. our thanks and express our highest appreciation of the generon gift which enables the erection of a suitable building for the accommodation of the school may they be abritantly rewarded both in this and life to come.

2. Our Bishop has our congratulations for his success in securing this donation, we hope that he and the Executive Committee may still be more successful in securing an endowment fund that may support a teaching force in the institution.

3. We believe in the necessity of a divine call to the ministry; and while we hope the youths of both sexes generally will avail themselves of the precious advantages now offered them we yet hope that those who may from time to time enter with a view to enter the ministry, may feel that they are divinely called to sacred work.

4. We pledge the institution our efforts to make it a blessing and suc-

COUNTESS OF DERBY.

THE GOVERNOR AT SHERBRO.

SOLDIERS,

MEETING OF CHIEFS.

The Countess of Derby arrived here on the 27th instant, about mid day with His Excellency the Administrator-in Chief with other officers, and a Detachment of Soldiers which we believe were landed and quartered in the Court Hall. The same afternoon at 5 o'clock a Meeting of the Chiefs was held which lasted about an hour, only a few of the many Chiefs present spoke and that too very briefly. We noted from Chief Louis Tucker of Bonhall and others that they had really little to say, as the wars presently were not threatening them. We further noticed also from Chief Beah Boom of Gbangbiah and Bey Sherbro of Yonney, that matters were somewhat different with them; in the case of Beah Bome nothing could be decided as his opponent Sourie Beyho was not present hence the matter was deferred until the Governor's return, when His Excellency directed that both Beah Bome and Sourie Beyho should appear before him. But Bey Sherbro's questions pertained to matters of higher jurisdiction, and hence were waived by His Excellency, however with an invitation to private interview on the matter at an hour to be arranged for by the Commandant during the next day. Chiefs Beah Bome and Louis Tucker were each granted a like conference in the same manner. Before rising His Excellency gave notice of a like meeting for 5 p. m. the next day and then invited the Chiefs to see the Queen's Soldiers His Excellency then rising with the meeting proceeded out into the open Court to witness a short manual exercise of the soldiers that had been standing in waiting for sometime for the order. The Exercise was interesting, and was enjoyed by the spectators; among whom we noticed besides the Government officials and chiefs present—Mr. J. B. Parkinson, Rev. D. F. Wilberforce, Principal of the Rutus Clark Training School at Shaingay, with a number of others whose names do not now readily recur to us. Of the further transactions as to the private or public conferences of the next day we have not received any information. The Countess of Derby left the harbour on the 29th instant.

Terrific Gales along the European Coast and among the British Isles, the greatest gales and storms perhaps, that have ever been known, prevailed during the last and the present month, and have been felt the more severely on account of the destruction of so many Lifeboats and life-boatmen in Dec. attending the rescue of the Mexico, we believe, not less than three life boats were capsized, and most of their crews were drowned. Other fearful disasters, almost without number, are chronicled in the European papers of ravages of storms on land and sea. Perhaps every one, having correspondence by post with England, has noted the awful tardiness, if not greater in the arrival of our Foreign exchanges; so much so as to render it about impossible to use their intelligence as news. The Contrast of the other side, with our Coast, is indeed great or has been, for the past two months as we have, much of the time, not had wind enough to sail a light pinace on our waters.

CENTENIAL & JUBILEE.

Since we called attention to this matter, to a former issue (Dec. 15th 86) our Community have been giving, some considerable attention, to it, as a result we had the pleasure of circulating an important circular notice with our last issue bearing the signature of the Leading men and Merchants of our Community calling attention to the very important events and asking a subscription to the necessary funds; which seems oportune in many respects; but chiefly because it comes just at a time when all are elated with the prospects of the reviving Trade that is anxiously expected with the return of the season; hence we trust no one will fail to contribute his share to this enterprize. A mass meeting of the citizens of this place was held too, we believe on the 24th inst. devoted to this important subject a report of which will be found in our present Issue and as our columns are open to the discussion of the same we trust those wishing may from time to time put before the public suggestions of some useful plan of celebrating the events now at hand of which some permanent Memorial should remain for the benefit of Posterity.

To the Editor "Early Dawn."

"Centenary of Sierra Leone" & "Jubilee of Her Majesty's Reign."

A Mass meeting was held in the Church School Room on Monday the 24th instant at 7. p. m., Dr. A. L. Jarrett Assistant Colonial Surgeon presided.

The Chairman in his opening remarks said that this meeting is convened for the purpose of considering whether it is possible to celebrate the Centenary and Jubilee, and that everyone in the meeting are at liberty to express their views on the subject and that after the speeches he delivered the Subscription List will be read by the Secretary T. E. McFoy Esq.

Mr. May (Dispensor) said that a similar should be given to the object in view, and he thinks that the Subscription List should be read before hearing the speeches of those present. This suggestion was received by the meeting. The secretary was called upon to read the List, when the Sum of £27. was announced as promises the Chairman said in order to encourage everyone to subscribe to this object the meeting is ready to receive any sum as low as a penny. The following gentlemen addressed the meeting;—Messrs. J. B. Sawyer (Acting Postmaster), J. D. Macauley, J. N. Crown, J. B. Turner, and the Customs Officials, Mr. Jos. King selected the Chairman how will the monies be appropriated; to which the Chairman replied that as the monies are not yet forthcoming he could not give an answer but after the monies are collected another meeting will be summoned. The following gentlemen are appointed members of the Sub-Committee—Messrs. J. D. Macauley, Crown, Turner, May, Benjour, Adams, D Collier, H. B. Williams, W. D. Parker (Orchestist), C. S. Brown (Janitor), and G. P. Wilhelm. Subscribers are to pay in their subscription before the end of March.

Several promises were made at this meetting the thanks of the Chairman was accorded to Mr. Turner and the Secretary for the deep interest manifested by them in the proceedings of the meeting this was responded to, Mr. May moved a vote of thanks to the chairman for his kindness in presiding on this occasion; the meeting came to a close at 9 p. m.

Bonthe JUSTITIA.
29th Jan. '87.

BOOM—KITTAM.

Dear Mr. Editor,—In your issue of 15th inst, I noticed a letter signed "Raoul" in which he says "Messrs Davison and Marner are said to be the greatest losers." It is fortunate that above he gives the stem as an "on dit" of the natives and promises to correct or corroborate the statement as may be necessary.

I will correct it for him, and say that the parties named were not the greatest losers, as Messrs J. N. Campbell and S. T. Macaulay lost as much, if not more than they by fire and robbery. As regards the War scare, it may be encouraging and re-assuring to know that, before rebuilding their Town, the Natives set to building their stockades—surely, this is a sign of peace.

I regret at some time to announce the burning of "Old Morfray" town—this happened on the night of the 19th inst (just thirteen days after Sumbuia)—Morfray being fenced in, the effect of the fire must have been terrible, as it was crowded with too many houses. The New Town has been spared from the flames for a future day.

Mrs Feary of Morgblatch, one of the Traders of the Old Town was fortunate in having her Goods &c. removed from the fire, but alas! another for a waiting her without the fence; having no one to watch over the Goods as they were removed, some kind persons walked off with them. The natives, it is said, were running about, swords in hand. The Traders in the New town are on the alert and have commenced removing a part of their surplus stock.

From the Kittam we hear that Dabwah acting at the instance of, and joining with Markalyah is determined to attack Bandajumah, Queen N'yaedi's town, but as Constables have been repeatedly passing between Sherbro and that place, and the Governor is expected to hold a meeting in the Gallinas, of all the Chiefs in the early part of next month, we hope action against these friendly chiefs may be averted. The intended attack is said to be in revenge of the death of Corbah a warrior belonging to Tikonkoh, who was put to death by order of (it is said) N'yaedi or her allies.

A New Company has bought up the Estate of the Sulymah and Sherbro Trading Company, and will soon, (if not already) commence Trading—Among the Employes just arrived for said Company, is one Mr. Domingue, who was formerly at Yelluma in the employ of the "Liverpool and Manchester Trading Company,—The Agent being his elder brother well known in the Niger. We may expect some sharp competition when this New Company shall have received their supply of Goods—As yet R.& F.'s Factory at Coronkoh is having the run of the trade.

Yours truly,
Jan. 25, 1887. GAUTIER.

It was reported here a few days ago that the Factory of Mr J. R. Parkinson at Matacong in the Imperreh had been plundered by the Imperreh people through the order of some one. If this is true I believe the Government should see into this at once to prevent any disturbances in the country as Mr Parkinson is an influential merchant trading in this country for many years and his land-lord and friends in the country will be sure to take revenge for the injuris done to their strangers.

NEWS ITEMS.

DROPPED DEAD.—Mr. Murray of York Island dropped dead in James St. Liverpool two days before the sailing of the last steamer that arrived out to Sierra Leone prior to Jan. 25th he had intended to sail by that steamer for this Coast we are informed by a private letter from Capt. J. A. Lewis.

We learn from recent London advices of the N tice, in the Inventors Guardian of a new Company called the Palma Trading Company; which is formed for the purpose of taking over the Business of the Sulymah and Sherbro Trading Company; of course it is not known whether this new Enterprize will float or not.

Ominous—We understand, from the English papers, that there is no small amt. of speculation, in political circules, about the resignation of Lord Randolph Churchill late Chancellor of the Exchequer.

JAN. 23—S. S. "Countess of Derby, from Freetown, with Mr Cameron and Mr. J. R. Sawyer as passengers for this place.

JAN. 23—S. S. "Countess of Derby" left for Freetown with Mr. H.R. Williams Postmaster of this place who goes on three months leave of absence."

Mr. Sawyer is the Acting Post master during the absence of Mr Williams on leave.

Mr. Cameron is the Officer in charge of the Government during the Commandant's absence to the rivers.

Conmandant Moseley with a staff of Police left this place for Gbangbiah on Thursday 20th, returned about the 22nd.

The Wesleyan Methodists had a Meeting on Sunday 23rd inst. to consider about the building of a New Church; many promises were made.

A Mass meeting was held on Monday evening 24th inst. at the St Matthew's school Room to consider what is to be done for the Centenary of Sierra Leone and the Jubilee of Her Majesty's Reign.

Several gentlemen addressed the meeting; Dr. Jarrett was the Chairman and T. E. M'cFoy Esq. Secretary.

JAN 27—S. S. Countess of Derby arrived here from Freetown His Excellency Administrator in Chief with Messrs. Jacob W. Lewis and J. C. E. Parkes and an escort of some soldiers from the 1st. West India Regt.

JAN. 27—Chief Beah Boome of Gbangbiah and also Queen Betsy Gay arrived at Bonthe this day.

FROM KONONANY.—We hear under date of the 25th inst. that Mrs T. N. Joah, who had not been able to proceed with her husband, at first to his new appointment on account of being absent in Freetown has since joined Mr. Joah on the 21st inst in his work and he now reports that for the season he has a good attendance at his services.

AVERY.—There is some sickness, reported, but not of a serious nature we believe among the Mission Children or Boarding pupils. Yet we are glad to hear of Good meetings there.

FROM LONDON—We learn of the death of Lord Iddesleigh secretary of state for Foreign affairs he died suddenly on Wednesday afternoon 12th inst this of course puts a serious period to all the political speculations, of late relative to his Lordship; and no one now need resign; as had been intimated, to give him a place in the Cabinet.

Personal

Rev. D. F. Wilberforce and Family were in this place a few days last week as guests of the writer at the Mendi Mission House, they were returning from a few weeks' visit to their Country seat at Danville near Gbangbiah.

Mr. J. W. Lewis Governor's secretary and J. C. E. Parkes assistant, gave us a pleasant call on the 28th inst they were enjoying their visit to Sherbro with his Excellency the Administrator-in-Chhief.

Mrs. Revd. J. C. Thomas who left this place for Freetown with her sons and others in the Wesleyan Mission Boat had an unpleasant voyage; however we are glad to learn that they arrived safely in Freetown at length.

The Commandant and Mrs. Moseley, who left this place on the 23rd inst. for Gbargroo were rather unexpectedly met by the Colonial Yacht, and taken to Freetown instead of going to Avery as was intended when they left here.

MR. WM. HUGHES Chief Clerk, after the Commandant and Mrs. Moseley were taken on Board the "Countess of Derby," on the 23rd inst. we believe proceeded to the Gbargroo on the original business of the Commandant.

Revd. R. C. Taylor of Mando arrived here on the 27th inst. on business with the District Supt. of the Mendi Mission; he left on the 29th inst on his return to Mando.

Mr. J. B. Sawyer and Mr. N. B. Nicol called on us today (31st inst.) we believe Mr. Nicol is preparing to amuse the young of our Community with his Merry-Go Round com mencing according to the cards handed us February 3rd.

DOES THE U. B. CHURCH AT SHERBRO SOLICIT CONTRIBUTIONS NOW? AND WHAT FOR?

SIR—That the United Brethren Church of America, in their efforts in Missionary enterprise to Africa had been philanthropic, generous and liberal in providing everything free of cost for the benefit of this country for an indispittable fact, and therefore it does not stand to reason that they as a Missionary body, should not solicit liberal subscriptions for the support of the gospel cause from those whom they have benefited, for the benefit of others, who are their own people, bone of their bone and flesh of their flesh.

It had been questioned in various quarters, whether the United Brethren Church solicit subscriptions now. The reason for these questions seems to be that, because that Religious Body had for a long time, say a period of about three decades of years, undertaken the work of evangelizing this portion of the heathen world at the risk and enormous expense of the liberal hearted Christians in America, without any pecuniary aid or assistance from the people themselves: it seems now, a world wide wonder that they should solicit contributions at this stage of their good work.

It should be understood that other Christian Denominations had taken the same course for a considerable time, but in order to instruct their people the necessity of self support, they are now thrown upon their own resources. The original intention of the United Brethren Church in America when about sending Missionaries to Africa was that in future the people should be taught the idea of self support, but owing to some unknown causes the Agents of the American Missionary Association in their work prior to 1883 did not carry out this idea in their operations, but since this Mission has been taken up by the U. B. C. they have endeavored to bring this matter before the people in accordance with their resolutions. The Society known as the Home Frontier and Foreign Missionary Society of the U. B. in Christ, had this among their resolutions of 1853, viz—

IX. Resolved. "That while we believe it will be many years before our Missions in heathen countries become self supporting, yet we will labor to produce this result as soon as possible."

If then, we have been provided for in the past, till we have (under God) arrived at our stage of religious manhood; it is reasonable to suppose that we should, without a groan or sigh shoulder up part of the responsibility of supporting our infant brethren and country men, who are groaning under the slavery of sin and wickedness, bound fast in heathenish darkness that the light of the blessed gospel of Christ may shine upon them, and make them free.—I am Yours &c.

A U. BROTHER C.

THE RECONSTRUCTED CABINET.

At last the shuffling of the ministerial cards has come to an end, and today there will be a council held at Osborne, at which Lord Salisbury and four of his colleagues will "kiss hands" on their appointments. As we announced last the Premier will take over the seals of the Foreign Office, Mr W. H. Smith will become First Lord of the Treasury and Leader of the House of Commons, whilst Mr. Goschen will find ample scope for the exercise of his financial genius as Chancellor of the Exchequer. In addition to these arrangements Mr. E. Stanhope becomes Secretary for War, and Sir Henry Holland succeeds Mr. Stanhope at the Colonial Office. The efforts to retain Lord Iddesleigh in the Cabinet have failed. Lord Cranbrook offered to resign in his favour the Presidency of the Council, and Lord Cadogan would have handed over to him the Privy Seal, but Lord Iddesleigh felt, we imagine, that his good nature and inability had been presumed on too much, and was tired of being sent from pillar to post to suit the convenience of his political friends. Considerable irritation prevails in some Conservative circles at his treatment, and it is said that Mr. H. S. Northcote will show his annoyance by resigning the office he now fills of Surveyor-General of the Ordinance. According to the latest rumours, Mr. Goschen has consented to stand for the Exchange Division of Liverpool, rendered vacant by the death of Mr Duncan. This is a bold step, as the Irish vote secured it for the Gladstonians at the last General Election. The Conservatives and the Liberal Unionists, however, are confident that they can return the Chancellor of the Exchequer. Much interest continues to attach the meeting of Mr. Chamberlain and Sir George Trevelyan with Mr. Gladstone's lieutenants, which has come to be known as the "Round Table Conference." It is to be held at Lord Hershell's and commences this week. If Mr. Chamberlain adheres, as it is said he does, to his original position, it is not easy to discover a basis for Liberal reunion. The announcement last week that Mr. Gladstone was prepared to limit the powers of the Irish legislative body to questions which might be delegated to it, afforded, indeed, some hope of compromise, but it has since been authoritatively contradicted. In reply to a Wallingford correspondent, Lord Randolph Churchill has written to the effect that he believes when his recent action is explained much of hasty adverse criticism may be modified. "I am perfectly and fully conscious," he adds, "of having sought for nothing but the public interest and I have also a very considerable expectation that before long the public interest will by no means suffer from the increased activity of criticism which Parliament may be tempted to bestow on the proposals of the Executive as regards finance and expenditure."—The Christian World.—Jan. 13, cess among us; to this end it shall received our sympathy and prayers.

As Rev. J. A. Lesher is expected to return to the U. S. A. within the year it is the wish of this meeting that he collect a library for said Training School and such other books that may be used by our itinerant preachers.

TEMPERANCE.

While we acknowledge our debt to christian nations for the Gospel which their benevolence has brought to us and while many of us rejoice in the saving power that we have realized in this Gospel of Christ, We yet deplore that fact, that from the same christian nations comes to us, monster evils in the shape of alcoholic drinks that are being sold to our people, and not only been a hindrance to Gospel work, but counteracted much that was done by christian effort, We therefore as watchmen upon the towers and seeing the ravages that intemperance has brought in this and other lands, do cry out against this burning shame and wrong, and raise a warning voice to our youths and people, that "wine is a mocker, strong drink is raging: and whosoever is deceived there by is not wise, for at the last it biteth like a serpent and stingeth like an Adder."

We would call upon the wives and mothers of the land to watch with a jealous eye this enemy to domestic happiness. For who hath woe? who hath sorrow? who hath contentions? who hath wounds without a cause? but they, and the families of them "that tarry long at the wine."

We pledge our feeble efforts for the suppression of intemperance and hope that the efforts that are now being put forth by the noble women of America and other christian nations for a universal war against this evil may prove successful, we bid the women of the Worlds W.C.T.U., God Speed.

DAY SCHOOL.

Whereas education in Day School is of so much of vital importance to our children, and as that without it, there will ensue a total wreck of Christianity and civilization in any community, and also as particularly in the Sherbro country, children are born, bred and reared to all the baneful and wicked influences of fetich ceremonies and practices; therefore Resolve,—1st. That some rules or or means be adopted and enforced to keep all the children in our Schools, to attend regularly, and that the parents and guardians of children do not detain their children at home to do dread gery work.

2nd.—That the Regent Chief be applied to, that he should render us assistance among his people, that every child within his jurisdiction attend school for full five days in the week.

3rd.—That all our Day Scholars be required to labor or pay for their school materials.

4th.—That there should be a Juvenile Prayer Meeting held once a month for God's blessing on the work of teaching and for the out pouring of the Holy Spirit on our children, for He has said "I will pour out my Spirit upon all flesh and your sons and daughters shall prophecy."

SUNDAY SCHOOLS.

The first impressions in life have much to do in molding and shaping character.

The wise man said, "Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it."

There is no department of church-work that opens a wider door for the accomplishment of permanent good than the Sabbath School.

Therefore Resolved, First.—That we as a Conference will put forth greater efforts to gather both young and old in our Sabbath school, and lead them to Christ as early as possible.

Resolved, Second—That we introduce a Monthly Collection in on schools for the support of the same, and thus early teach the children, that it is more pleasant to give than to receive.

Resolved Third,—That we beg the General Sabbath School Board of the Church of the United Brethren in Christ of America for Annual donations of Sabbath School supplies.

Resolved, Fourth.—That we are very greatfully to the kind friends of the Church at home for the liberal donations of clothing receives, during the past year; and pray them to continue to supply us with the so much needed clothing in the future.

Resolved, Fifth—That we return devout thanks to the American Bible Society for their liberal contribution of Bibles and Testaments in the past and kindly ask them to continue to aid us in the future.

MISSIONS.

Whereas there have been discouragements arising from spiritual weakness, which brought about sad regret, and which has been the cause of the discontinuance of some of the able workers in both the Sherbro and Mendi Districts; and whereas amidst these discouragements there have been fresh manifestations of the Holy Spirit working among us; therefore,

Resolved 1. That devout prayers be offered to God to forgive all such as have erred and have fallen; and that He be pleased to lead and direct the minds of our workers in the true and right way.

2. That hearty thanks be made to Almighty God for mercies vouchsafed to us in the past, and especially for the increased zeal manifested in the liberal actions of the kind friends in America who have felt and are still feel interested in the cause of poor Africans especially on this coast.

3. That we hail with joy the safe return of our Bishop and Missionaries from America, the Revs. Lesher, West, and Wilberforce, the two latter with their families; and that special prayers be made to Almighty God on their behalf that their entire health may be preserved and prolonged for the great work before them.

4. That as success has been achieved in the Itinerating Department of our work. We would specially implore the Divine aid and assistance on all the Itinerants and Preachers that they may be endowed with greater zeal energy, and effort, for the further advancement of the Gospel among our heathen brethren who are still enveloped in darkness.

D. F. WILBERFORCE.—Sec.

To the Editor of the "Early Dawn."

Sir,—Your correspondent "Anon" in his article of the 15th inst. seems to take umbrage at the advantage—he thinks the Bargroo Traders have in the sale of spirits free from license, hence his public effusions and appeal to remind the Commandant of Sherbro, and to show him that a part of his duty has been left undone.

Mr. "Anon" should know that the present Commandant is not a man to be reminded of his duty; for it is widely known and admitted that he is quite alive to his duties. If Mr. "Anon" transacts business at the Black River, a place where the Government thought proper to impose license upon the sale of spirituous liquors; and he feels that he is unable to succeed in business on account of its meagre condition, it would be wisdom in him to take his exodus to Bargroo and join the traders there, who will without fail accept and receive him into their ranks, and by that means he may escape the Gov't. license, and share the same advantage which has curiously rushed him into print rather than calling the Commandants attention to impose license payment upon his fellow traders at Bargroo.

How true is the every day maxim among Africans, "Black men have to kill, destroy, and ruin their own colour." "Because you are poor, I must be poor, because you are not better I must not be better."

Mr. Editor, one could at a glance see the "manna" of "Anon" who feels that he is fettered, grudges and envies the liberty of his fellows, and therefore labors to bring them in the same predicament as himself. Besides, as the sale of spirits being so detrimental to the moral, social and physical condition of our country, "Anon" as a christian should have made it his duty to advocate "anon" the utter extinction of the sale of that "hydra monster" of iniquity, which he knows well had been for a considerable time, the curse of his country, than advocating for a license to be imposed upon the sale of it.

"Anon" should forever bear in mind that the license he implores for the sale of Rum, etc. does not in any way mitigate the evils of the rum traffic any more than a free sale.—Truly yours

To the Editor "Early Dawn."

Dear Mr Editor—With the first Sabbath of the year the devil has been up again. We had a good gathering at Church. Mr J. C. Goodson as usual marched about 4 miles to attend service, I called the subchief of the Town in the morning and spoke to him asking him as this is the first Sabbath in the year to allow us to worship God without molestation. He readily gave his consent but such as none but hypocrites can give. We were quietly enjoying the sound of the blessed gospel on this first Sabbath morning when just about the close of the sermon we heard the well known hateful noise of the Town's small pieces of the congregation disappeared like shot from a gun. I can't tell you where they went to, but they were simply missing quite a number of the more faithful ones however kept their seats. In a least two minutes from the time we heard the noise, the herald rushed triumphantly into the house with his usual imperious command (keh na kehna) ran in, that for the first time he found that the people were inclined to obey God rather than man. He began to shout, but the instrument he usually carried, repeated his command four, five, six times, but all sat still. Then there was general confusion, the of them in his rage and fury against us, drew his sword from its sheath, passed by us and again with quite an air peculiar to the Temne people, uttering certain imprecations, that his conscience convinced him that he could not use his sword within the bounds of British jurisdiction with impunity. They are now herd at your correspondent J. J. Dumbaboy Hollis apparent to the chieftain, because he hinders Mendi's future elevation at heart and goes in for a Police constable to be stationed here. Certain culpable parties who wish to improvish the colonial coffers and still screen themselves from governmental notice are utterly opposed to the idea of a police being station ed here but I believe in God's own time they will be sadly disappointed, when our good commandant will think fit to give the matter his earnest attention, and Mendi, unbodily Mendi which is unfortunately situated in the bulge of the Temne and the Timneh bulge within it, will not only have a police stationed here, but instructions be given to its present chief to remove the bulges of their secret orders to a respectable distance from the Town, and the Atmosphere be purified and made free of all the poisonous matter that are now floating in the air and we be permitted to breathe God's fresh air. Thanking you for space occupied.—Yours,

R. C. TAYLOR.

A NORWEGIAN YULE FESTIVAL.

It was by the merest chance, if chance there be in human affairs, that I heard of the existence of a Norwegian Mission Church, close by the surrey Commercial Docks. And thus it happened: As I was going up to London, just after Christmas, a lady and gentleman joined the train a short way up the line, and at once began conversing in a language unknown to me, but distinctly suggesting German. After in vain trying to discover what tongue it might be that was at once so familiar and so incomprehensible, I asked them and was told it was Norwegian. We got into conversation. I found they were connected with the Norwegian Church, and that on the following evening they expected about 400 Norwegian seamen to tea.

The idea of 400 Norwegians at tea in London struck me as quite too charming for flesh; so being courteously invited to attend, to Rotherhithe I went. Very dreary the Commercial Docks seemed on that dark evening. A long street between high dead walls—timber—walls—gigantic piles of timber behind them, a sluggish canal with more stacks of timber beside it, darkness over head, slush under foot; and then all at once a brightly lighted schoolroom and church all gay with hunting, evergreens, snowy tables, shining urns, and everywhere swarms of honest Northern faces, and the North ern language all around. Tea was served in the schoolroom, which being far too small to accommodate all at the same time, the men quietly awaited their turn, in the church adjoining, and they awaited as if they could wait forever. Tea was by no means the solid affair it would have been had it been prepared for our own British Jacks, it was rather more like our "light refreshment"; a couple of small cups of tea and a very modest amount of cake was all they took. Bread and butter was considered too homely for the festivity, and was not provided. Every thing looked very elegant, and more suggestive of a "party" than of what we know as a tea-meeting.

After tea we all assembled in the church. The church struck me as quite a model building for the purpose of the Mission. It was neither too grand nor too plain. A warm, brick interior with handsome timbered roof; a good organ in a dimly lighted gallery; a great gilt cross on the communion-table; in the centre of the church a gigantic Christmas-tree, 18 feet high brought over from Norway expressly for this festival; the whole meeting draped with flags, and crammed full of people, made up a scene not easily to be forgotten. Presently the organ was softly played; then the pastor, the Rev. A. Grondahl, standing on the chancel steps began a yule song, "Glad Yule! Holy Yule!" which was at once taken up by the company, who were all furnished with a little book called "Julesang for Somcend," Christmas songs for seamen. Then came the lighting up of the hundred candles on the great Christmas-tree. This tree was by no means a childish affair, but was evidently regarded with seriousness both as a religious symbol and as a reminder of their own national connection with life. There was, in fact, a certain happy solemnity about the whole festival. The candles being duly lighted, the men drew numbers for the presents arranged within the chancel, and then went up, always with the most profound decorum and without the slightest trace of hilarity, to receive their scarf or cap, or whatever it might be that fell to their share. There were quite 400 packets all made in Norway, and on each was carefully stitched the card of the lady who had sent it, and the name of the place where she lived. It was really very beautiful—this kindly remembrance of the seamen by those at home. Later in the evening, the pastor read out the lists of places whence presents had been sent. They had come from all quarters of the Fatherland.

During the evening the pastor of the Danish Church in London spoke, and so did the Finnish pastor; for the gathering although exclusively Scandinavian was not exclusively Norwegian. A Norwegian lady read an original story and poem, and then the Yule tree candles gradually went out. The gas was turned up; and a solemn pilgrim's song, to the tune we call "Asonlon," was slowly sung. There was more light refreshments in the shape of oranges and nuts, and every one seemed silently happy, but carefully refrained from any outward expression of his feelings.

To me this gathering was extremely interesting; it was as if I were in the presence of the remote ancestors of our nation. A profound respect for those good people took hold of me; they all looked so sober, so honest, so apparently at any rate God-fearing. When the Finnish Pastor offered prayer, and the men who crowded the aisle and the find seats stood with heads reverently bent in absolute stillness, it was really very touching to see them; but beyond the quiet reverence they showed no sign. Yet when the blessing had been pronounced, and all was over, an old seaman rose and in the name of his comrades, thanked those who had so kindly entertained them, "and I should lie before Almighty God," he added, "if I were to say this has not been the happiest Christmas of my life. Out of the 27 Christmases of my sailor life, 23 I have spent at sea." No wonder, then, the old sailor rejoiced to see, once more the lighted candle of a Yule tree from his native "Norge." I feel as if I had been in Norway. I hope that seaman feels so too.—C. A.—In The Christian World.

GOVERNMENT SUPPLIES, SHERBRO,—1887.

Dear Mr Editor,—I have been so fortunate as to have a glance at the "Early Dawn" of Jan. 15, and in reading it, I find among other things, an article which treats on the Govt Supplies for the present year by a correspondent B.M.W.

Having carefully read the article and and taken into consideration the facts connected with the subject, I cannot but correspond [illegible] by your correspondent.

The public have been made to suffer during the past few years through the influence of certain officials who use every means in their power to debar others from obtaining the Govt. Contract for this place in order to give the preference to their most favoured friends with whom they are in close intimacy.

I must say Mr. Editor that these officers make it their duty to trade with those friends whom they have thus favoured and thereby share with them in the proceeds of their gains.

Let me ask, why is it that these men do not resign their appointments in the Government and take to merchandizing? It is to be regretted that the authorities are not conversant with this fact, or a stop would have been put to such dishonest practices, but now that the matter is brought vividly before them through the medium of your journal, I hope the Commandant or the Colonial Secretary will in future accept such Tenders as to their judgment is most suitable, and not allow the caprice of any subordinate officer to exercise any influence or control to keep others from receiving the Contract.

I await to see what steps the Govt. will in future adopt in this important matter to prevent the recurrence of such an act.

Yours Mr. Editor,
DAN.

Sherbro,
Jan. 29. 87.

Mr Editor—I regret to call your attention, to the way and manner, some of us Sierra Leone men conduct ourselves while in the Rivers, on account of Palm Nuts; envying hating and illtreating one another for the sake of a few Palm Nuts; even selling one another to the country people with our mouths in order to gain produce. Instead of telling them a Jesus, we ask them on Sunday to let us follow them into their Palm wine bush; and when we get our stomaches well filled with Palm-wine, then we begin to abuse our brothers. I dare say through our gluttony for Palm-wine we will loose our souls, we say after buy our nuts then we will serve our God, forgetting that time is not waiting for us. In conclusion Mr Editor I fear that the Palm Trees gain more souls than the Church. Thanking you for the space occupied in your valuable journal.

I am, yours truly,
A SUB-FACTOR.

SOURIE BEHYO'S ARRIVAL.

We are informed that Souri Behyo, arrived in this place from the Gbagroo, on the morning of Wednesday the 9th inst. attended by eight of his principal Warriors and about 50 followers. Beah Bome has also come down today to answer the complaint of Souri Behyo before his Excellency the Administrator-in-Chief who arrived the 13th inst. We are glad of the outlook for the proper adjustment of this matter in a way to save Bloodshed; and while at this writing it is impossible to say much on the subject in the way of comment; yet it is to be hoped that the circumstances will permit of such a dealing with the case as to give the native chiefs confidence in the justice and fairdealing of the authorities so that in future they may rather seek their arbitration in all serious matters of Difference instead of having recourse to bloodshed.

Interesting services were held on Saturday and Sabbath the 12th and 13th insts. at Avery Station Mendi Mission by the District Supt. assisted by the pastor of the charge the Rev. S. B. Morrison a good conference was held on the evening of the 12th which was well attended, and interesting in its reports and general business, and showed that much and good work has been done since the begining of the year The services of sabbath were all well attendad but the 11 a. m. service was the largest for many years, if not the largest ever held at that station. Three persons united with the Church, in full connection, a larger number communed, than has done so before for a long time. It was really a grand occassion.

Avery Intelligence.—Those reported to be sick in our last Issue we are glad to learn are rather improving or completely recovered. The Mill, we are, however, sorry to learn has been some what hindered in its work, on account of some repairs that were necessary on the DAM and aqueducts these are now mostly finished but have kept back the execution of orders to a considerable extent. Coffee and arrowroot are being prepared for the Market, which owing to the excellent quality of these articles are much sought for by the general public. In past years coffee was rather hard to dispose of at any price and remained over from year to year a light Crop last year, and a large increase in the local demand has changed the aspect so that now there is no old stock of Coffee on hand and the same is true of the Gbargroo arrowroot.

"CENTENARY OF SIERRA LEONE & JUBILEE OF HER MAJESTY'S REIGN."

Dear Mr. Editor,—A mass meeting was held in the Church School room on Wednesday evening the 9th inst.the chair was occupied by Dr. M. L. Jarrett.

After the opening of the meeting, the Chairman called upon the Secretary T. E. Macfoy to read the minutes of the last meeting, after the reading of the minutes, Mr. Turner moved for an adoption of the same, seconded by Mr. Thos C Jenkins.

The Chairman said that the reasons for summoning this meeting is to know from the gentlemen of the sub-Committee what they have done.he also asked the gentlemen present in the meeting to speak on behalf of the movement.

Rev. G. G. M. Nicol said, he would like to hear from the sub-Committee members what they have done.

Mr. Rowland May said, he regrets to report that he has not met with success since we met here last.

Mr. Brighton Turner says he is one of the unsuccessfully members, he has tried to show the people the importance of the object and the necessity of giving their support, towards the same, but he did not succeed. Mr. Bidwell Coker in answer to Mr. Turner rema ked that the cause of his unsuccess may be attributed to the limited time he has at his disposal, as he must attend his office at a time when he could see the people, and he believes that the other members of the sub Committee who are not situated as Mr. Turner is, may be able to report progress.

Mr. J. A. Dennis (Gaoler) said that the fault rests on Mr Turner, for he does not believe that any exertion was made by him, at all for with the few hours at his command he could have worked hard to win the people's mind. Mr. C. J Cole was called upon to address the meeting, he said that he does not think that we are met here this evening to consider the manner in which the Centenary and Jubilee are to be celebrated, but that we should engage some persons to go around with the list to collect from the people. This was agreed to by the meeting.

Mr. G. A. Metzger J. P. York Island said we are to consider the objects for which we are assembled, and he would propose that whatever suggestion or conclusion we may make or arrive at be made known to the public, and to take the different places seperately. He is here as a representative of York Island and he is glad to report that the people in that place are doing their best towards the movement.

Rev. J. A. Evans of the U. S. C. said, that he is a stranger in this place,but he is always willing and ready to take part in a movement of this kind, but he is afraid that much enthusiasm has not been manifested by the people towards this grand and noble object. He said that he had been acquainted with Her Majesty's Government in N. America for 12 years.He dealt at length on the evils of the slave trade and the efforts put forth by British philanthropists for its suppression under the benign rule of Her Majesty, whose Jubilee we are about celebrating. After making some appropriate remarks, he further remarked that these who may be privileged to witness the celebration of the Centenary are not those who have suffered, he took his seat amid loud applause.

Rev. G. G. M Nicol said, he was not present at the last meeting, but he is sorry that the people have not shown their appreciation of the object, and that unless we decide upon a certain object it will be difficult for us to carry out the object of the Centenary and Jubilee, the last remarks was received by the meeting with cheers and applause.

Mr. D. M. P. Thorpe, (Druggist) said, he was not here when the subject was brought about, he believes that one of the chief reasons why the people do not give any subscription is, that they would like to know what will be done with the money when it is collected, thereby encouraging them to subscribe until that is done, he said that for his part he will not give his subscription till he knows how the monies will be spent.

Mr. Hughes said, he was not present in the last meeting, but he would enquire, what will be done with the money raised?—

The Chairman replied that he had suggested that when the monies are collected a portion be appropriated towards the building of a Hall and a portion to be spent for festivites.

Mr Hughes further remarked that there will be a Hall, if so he will promise more, although a promise was made for him during his absence.

Mr. H. B. Williams (of Liverpool Factory,) asked the Chairman, what report must he convey to the people of Mocolo whom he represents, the Chairman in reply said that it is agreed in this meeting that a portion of the money (when collected) will be appropriated towards the building of a Hall in this place, and the other portion for Festivities.

A few strangers from Freetown and some other gentlemen of this place moved that the monies collected be sent to Freetown to decorate the Wesleyan Memorial Hall, or that the surplus monies be sent to Freetown &c. This motion was met with much opposition, it was therefore amended.

The meeting came to a close at 10 p. m.

Yours,
JUSTITIA.

To the Editor "Early Dawn."

Dear Mr. Editor,—The reports of the District Meeting of the Sherbro Mission which was published in your issue of the Jan. 15 and 31 have been read with the greatest interest. Among the different items contained in that reports are the following which are very interesting.

1. That the Committee is well pleased with the "Early Dawn" as the best and only medium of communication between the people of this place and abroad.

2. That Mr. Rufus Clark and wife of the U. S. A. have deposited 5000 dollars or £1,000 with Bishop Flickinger for the erection of a Theological Training Institution in connection with your Mission, and that the Rev. D. F. Wilberforce is the Principal.

(c) I am glad that your paper has been appreciated both here and abroad and hope those who contribute to it may continue to give you their support, for nothing tends to encourage an editor than when he is supported by the public in carrying out his original designs, for we all know how difficult it is to continue the publication of a local journal in this part. I must congratulate you on the success you have achieved during your four years of journalistic labours. (b) I am glad that a long-felt want has been supplied in the erection of a Training School for your Mission, and I believe every class in the community will avail themselves of the advantage now offered them, for if Sherbro is to be raised from its present position, it must be done by her children, and this is the proper time, as every one would like to have a higher education than is taught in our elementary schools here, without taking the trouble and expense of going to Freetown for this purpose.

The public therefore returns their thanks to Mr. & Mrs. Clark for their liberal and benevolent gifts, and may the sons and daughters of Africa who shall be trained in that institution be ever praying that God may spare the lives of their benefactors.

"Bargroo's" letter in your last issue is so complicated in its arrangement that no one but himself understands it. If he would write a sensible letter to the point, and not drift away from the subject of "Anon's" letter, he would be doing a great service to the parties whom he is kind enough to represent as their champion I must give him one bit of simple advice that he would attend to the office of his calling or profession instead of interfering with what does not concern him, he will be free from public censures, for "No man should serve two masters."—Yours, JUSTITIA

Sir—Allow me space through the medium of your valuable journal to ask the few pertinent questions, may be some one will be good enough to clear me out of my doubts.

I usually observe in the Church all the worshippers bow at the words "and in Jesus Christ our Lord" when saying the Apostles Creed; to me and many others this ceremony in the Church seems to be a dubious one, for (if I am correct) this bowing is altogether inconsistent to my views; therefore I beg to ask the following questions.

Is this ceremony in the Church consistent with the rubric or inconsistent? Why is this special honor conferred only on the second person in the Trinity and not to the first and third And? whether this bowing is a tradition in the Church?

I shall be thankful to any one who will give a full exposition of the above questions.

Thanking you Mr Editor for the space occupied.—Yours earnestly

Mr. D. W. During—Church Catechist of York Island has returned from his leave of absence to Freetown but we regret to note that he is suffering from a sore foot.

To The Editor "Early Dawn"

Sir—Your correspondent Bargroo a name is thought necessary to assume in the articles in your number of the 31st Janry. I propose, with a view to gain some consequence among the public, and to occupy some space as other correspondents of better capability to express their sentiments in your valuable journal, was induced to make a rash attempt to attack "Anon" who appeared in your issue of the 15th Janry on a fact stated by him.

"Bargroo" would have been well repaid for his trouble, had he been a competent man to guard his statements in a manner that might always insure him a column in the Public journals. But his glaring incompetence of public communication has brought each paragraph into such context which gave the public reason to understand that he was in the same path with "Anon" but his gross absurdities from it has brought him into such entanglement of its inextricable maze and Labyrinth.

"Bargroo" I am of opinion would be ready to do "Anon" the justice to admit "when he shall have been brought to understand what his drudgery of communication dictates. The insipidity of such a production has given him a stand with those who are always employed at a "hook and crook" rate on account of their laziness or illdness, to busy themselves about the Pulpit, during the absence of qualified persons.

Mr B has sadly permitted his judgement to be too freely warpen by the medium through which he was compelled to see, and being wrapped up in a flattering applause on the Commandant, and contemplating that he likewise was misled by such a shallow artifice, and from the fact of his statements of his former paragraph; it is evident, that, if such communication is worth taking notice of at all, it is only on account of the Public ridicule it has invited.

Mr B's remarks furnished "Anon" with an idea of his position when he was anathematizing "that hydra monster of iniquity, which is the curse of his country" and of the manner he ought to have suggested the means of utterly extinguishing it But from the style and language, he thought, it assumed would mark him out for a man of expression which cannot be expected from a trader. It is clear that he greatly Apostatized and proved his unfitness for either the one or the other. It would have been more becoming in him had he made such suggestion in the former paragraphs.

"Anon" has never been known in the condition he was said to be and I beg to state, that a reasonable man as he is would disdain to take any notice of the communication of one who has allowed and will always allow his pen to outrun his wit.

The manner of Anon's calling the attention of the Commandant respecting the Bargroo advantage was quite a justifiable one He adopted such a measure in order to command moderation in the free sale and use of that by-by headed monster.

I must be concise Mr Editor Mr B's communication has given pains to the side of my friend "Anon" and I fear he will do the same to your readers in his next attempt.

Yours,
ANON'S FRIEND

MY VIEW OF THINGS.

Dear Mr. Editor,—Allow me a space in your valuable and interesting journal, to explain my view of things in behalf of the Constables stationed at Sherbro, and would appeal to the undemeritioned, our able Merchants, who are daily witnessing their troubles in going up the rivers whenever threats of war are afloat, such as S.B.A.Macfoy Esq. J. B. Wright Esq J. P., J. A. Williams Esqs. R.T. & C.B. Collier Esqrs, J. B Parkinson Esq. C. J. Cole Esqr, and others to make it their duty (as our head and ruler of this District is of tenderly feelings toward every individual much more of his constables) to assist these poor constables. For we know that their assistance will in some way co-operate with the authorities for an increase of their salary, so as to encourage them the more under all bad treatment which they generally received by the natives up in the rivers, hence we see that constables in Freetown do not like to come down to Sherbro on account of hard duties and the worse part is the cold that they generally suffer from and ends in death. A few days ago a country man was telling me (from the upper Gallinas) about a corporal and a constable who were ordered to convey letters to Queen N'yarroh of Bandajuma, and were passing off to Dahwah, how he saw them sleep in the bush, there being no town near them and it was very late when I saw them—there was a very heavy rain that night—having heard what this Kind man has told me, I wondered to see that a Mendi man entertain such feelings toward Police constables. Now I appeal once more to all subscribers and readers of this journal, if a mendi man could thus feel for our constables, what ought we to do? Must we say, "we do not care, they are getting pay for that" what pay? Some of the constables spend more than £1. 17. 6. and £2. 2. 6. for two weeks, independent of other expense; let us all try to help our constables who are daily up and down the rivers on our behalf, to have places open for the trade,and when the war ceases, (as our indefatigable Comd't is trying to do) I believe it will go well with us in Business.

Thanking you Mr. Editor for space occupied, with hopes to further my view of things (if life is spared) in your next issue.

Yours, much interested,
CONSCIENCE.

KING THEBAW'S RUBY MINES.

THE British troops, after a tedious march, have taken possession of the Ruby Mines formerly owned by the Monarch of the White Elephant, as the dethroned King of BURMAH was pleased to style himself. On Tuesday General Roberts started for Mandalay to inspect our latest acquisition Some time must, therefore elapse ere the outside world adds to its scant knowledge respecting these remote treasure beds. Fancy might easily picture military Sindbads revelling in this gem-trewn region, But we are not left quite to conjecture on the subject, a European, and the only one ever connected with the mines having published his impressions. The ruby fields, which for centuries have furnished gems for the raiment of dusky potentates, by Nature are well protected from intrusion. After skirting fever-haunted jungles, threading narrow defiles, traversing a roadless country, and crossing bridgeless streams, our troops had to scale an elevation of 6,000 feet, which brought them to the village of Mogouk, the toll-house whence the wealth of the Ruby Mines passes southwards. The mines which cover 100 miles of territory, are shut in on every hand by lofty mountains. The annual yield of gems is valued at some £15,000, although they have always been sought in the most primitive fashion. Every ruby above a certain value became the property of the King. The bulk of the fire-crystals found their way into the possession of Chinese and Thibet merchants, who for ages have hovered about the region. When the mines come to be worked by British resources, the "output" should enormously increase. Thus far the stones have mainly become the property of moguls and pashas. Under the altered conditions, unless the hidden wealth is exaggerated, the gems should reach this country in sufficient abundance to render them not only popular, but comparatively cheap. With all the surveillance the precious stones are said to have been frequently carried off by ingenious natives in order to escape the official tax. Sometimes the rubies would be swallowed to be disgorged by the aid of an emetic when safe territory was reached. The folds of turbans would occasionally afford a safe concealment, but the stones were more often carried away hidden under toe-nails and eyelids, or buried in flesh-wounds made for the purpose. It is said that a London Merchant may in future regulate the working of these newly-acquired treasure beds. While our troops seize the mines with little opposition, Europeans will constantly have to combat a more formidable foe in the deadly malaria which seems to keep sentinel over the enchanted region.—Sel.

Editor "Early Dawn."

Sir,—In perusing your valuable journal of 15. Jan., I chanced to cast my eyes on the statement made by the writer "Sound" His expression on the prevailing differences of "Land Possessors" in Sherbro is a matter worth consideration. Really, I am induced to tolerate the onset of "Sound's" letter, for giving publicity to the lamentable fact which is an annoyance in our homes of to-day, it is a fact which scores of Traders in the community regard its proceedings as sheer injustice and heartlessness.

These being many unfortunate Traders who had suffered pressingly in the various wars in the country, losing money of their own as well as support obtained by merchants, still more no foot of ground has been granted to some for trade, to recover their recent losses I believe Sir, it is a hard thing to run the risk of annual payment to be made to one or more "British Chieftains" of fatal authority, who may have subcharges of the rivers, and now they are constrained to leave others to reap the harvest of Glory which they may have long laboured for. Prayer is requested in this awful conflict, the attention of Church and State is earnestly solicited, to remove all unpleasantness in our quiet District and lovely community of Sherbro, truly the adage "money is the great go, we live to learn more."

Characterising the onset of your correspondent's letter, I differ from him in the latter part, his informant I suggest gave some incorrect statement as to the wheedling of Land in a Bush-meeting in the small Boom Rivers: permit me cynically to give solution for you and your readers.

"Sound's" opponent, who is accused of wheedling has been a Trader in the Small Boom river prior to the Tallish engagement; he had given much facility in giving the natives much credit in money as customary which he expected to get,(but never)unconscious of the unforeseen struggle (Tallish skirmish); produce also that he had in store bought with lawful money, was in his absence taken (by the late chief of that locality being then his Landlord) and bartered for purchase of ammunition for their protection, and as a patriot, your writer's opponent had also spent some amount to quiet the difficulty then on hand which was all fruitless attempt.

The difficulty was of late in a little peaceful condition, your writer "Sound's" opponent calling on them to make restitution, a bush meeting was convened, headed by the late chief's successors his surviving sons and they decreed him with a document as acknowledgment, a mere promissory note for the amount spent by them in their distress for certain sum (unknown) an everlasting promise —the claim was not disputed nor do they refuse him his former place of business. Let us move with a conscience void of offence.

It is a question left to every thinking mind to determine as to whether the mere promissory note is a claim to land or not; no necessity to call such action "wheedling," and extraneous to saddle such person in an attempt of extorting stipulation. If the writer "Sound" had passed through the walls of trade in the adjacent rivers, and obtained respectably such a degree of honor in an harrassing exigency, he would do no otherwise than adopting some such system. The surviving minister G'bowe and his chief had no direct control or jurisdiction on the boundary in question, as he says there being a water mark that divided the possession of land to their respective claimants according to the country.

I hold on first Mr. Editor, as I am no emissary in the matter, my conscience obliges me to tell you the facts as there are some misinformation in part of the writer "Sound;" for when we are engaged in the arduous work of instructing the public mind in matters social and political, let it be correctly done.

I remain, yours faithfully,
GREEK WILLIAM.

To the Editor "Early Dawn."

Mr. Editor,—It is with shame and regret I have to inform you and your readers, what I have heard few hours ago about the ill-treatment of constables sent up to Chief Dahwah, and the awful disgrace Dahwah has brought upon the Governor, thereby treating the authorities with contempt. A letter and present was sent by His Excellency the Administrator-in Chief to Chief Dahwah,—the nature of the letter is only to enquire of his health, and wish he had been enjoying his strength.

The poor constables tried all their best through all the many swamps in the wilderness on their way —arrived at his place on the evening of the 10th Janry, where he now resides. As soon as they saw the two constables, his war boys headed by their chief, came out with threats as if to put an end to their lives; but the constables although to a smaller magnifested a bold countenance, despite their rage and threats, answered them in all their unbecoming and unreasonable questions —The letter was read and explained by the corporal at the request of Dahwah who after hearing the contents returned back the broken letter and present to the corporal for the Governor with an impious letter dictated to the corporal by him (Dahwah) for the Governor, not thinking to whom he was sending such a letter. The constables who arrived at his place at 4. 45 p. m., were not allowed to enter the gate, but at once ordered them out of his limit at 6. 10. p.m. The constables then returned back, and on leaving Dahwah's town a little as it was night, and being very weak, they entered into a bush to rest themselves till the morning. However I must stop, and wait to hear and see what steps the Authorities will adopt. Meanwhile I thank you for space occupied Mr. Editor.

Yours,
TRUTH.

GOD'S ELECT.

Mr Editor.—In attempting to bring before you this subject, I tremble at the thought of doing so from a consciousness of my inability to do justice to a subject of such magnitude, and weighty importance. But as a free thinker, and as every individual has a right to his own opinion, I therefore upon this venture to bring mine to view. I am not of divided opinion that the term is divided by Divines into three distinct heads; my purpose in this article is to show the importance of the ministry of Christ and that the term has reference also to individuals who are elected by God to some special work. By observation and by watching closely daily occurences and events of today, it is becoming the habit of the civilized world to have too much to say on the character of a minister of the gospel. The question which the venerable Apostle puts before that Gentile Church is one of practical consideration, hence professing christians should take heed, that they "judge nothing before the time untill the Lord comes" &c. Taking into consideration that he who ministers in holy things is one who is inwardly moved by the Holy Ghost to take upon him-self such a great responsibility, there is therefore no reason, why he should be publicly censured; I am of opinion, that he that desires that the work of God should go on must be pleased with it, whosoever is the instrument and therefore it is advisable to avoid all curiosity and all inquiry into things that do not concern us. There is nothing like imperfection or in consistency in the counsel of God but how vain and foolish is man to "Pick and choose" those who are to unfold God's word to a lost and ruined world. In consideration of this, the wise man says "There are many devices in man's heart nevertheless the counsel of the Lord that shall stand. Peter the Galilean fisherman brought no little astonishment into the minds of great numbers of jews and devout men out of every nation under heaven" When on that day of Pentecost he preached that wonderous sermon, by which three thousand were converted How glorious is that heavenly calling! and how serious is it to think that mortal man would venture to detract those thoughts which will render the mind fit for the reception of those truths which God through the instrumentality of his servants reveals to men. Under the consideration, the mind ought to be occupied in considering better things than be pervaded with that which is detestable to a right thinking man, and hateful in the right of his Creator. I am under the impression it is nothing but arrogancy on man's part as audacious as to be busy in bringing before the minds of the public, the imperfections of a Christian minister. Let us be careful of what the Apostle says, Who shall lay any thing to the charge of God's Elect? While I have stated few facts on an important subject,let me not forget to add that the ministry must be provided for, with the required necessities that tend to give magnitude to the work. "They that preach the gospel must live by the gospel" considering that he who is ordained and looked upon as minister of the gospel must be supported pecuniarily, that he looks not here and there, but keeps a busy hand only on his work. —Always the same

A DETERMINED WORSHIPER.

Sir,—Milton Wright one of the native converts at Palli was challenged on Sunday the 12th December that he must not attend Divine service that morning, because the devil is burnt and they wanted to know about it first, and no one dared to go in the Mission house or attend meeting. A man met him on his way to meeting whilst the second bell was ringing; saying very angrily to him "And where are you going, dont you know that by law no one is to go to meeting to day? Milton replied calmly and to the point, that he is going to God to beg him for his sins, and now that God calls him, he is bound to obey God than man. The man became speechless, whilst Milton walked on to the house of God quieity but surely.

IMPERIAL INSTITUTE.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE.

On Sept. 13 last his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, in a letter to the Lord Mayor of London, suggested as a suitable commemoration of the approaching Jubilee of her Majesty's reign the foundation of an institute which should represent the arts, manufactures, and commerce of the Queen's Colonial and Indian Empire. "Such and institution," his Royal Highness observed, "would be singularly appropriate to the occasion, for it would illustrate the progress already made during her Majesty's reign in the Colonial and Indian Dominions' while it would record yet by year the improvement of the Empire in the arts of civilisation." Subsequently, the proposal having met with very warm acceptance by the Colonies, his Royal Highness nominated a committee to elaborate the details of the scheme Subjoined is the full text of the report which this committee has made.

"The committee appointed by your Royal Highness to frame a scheme for an Imperial Institute intented to commemorate the fiftieth year of her Majesty's reign beg leave to submit to your Royal Highness the following report:

"They do not fail to remember that the scheme which your Royal Highness indicated in your letter of Sept. 13 last to the Lord Mayor of London had its origin in the remarkable interest excited by the recent exhibition, by which not only the material products, resources, and manufactures, but the loyal feeling of the great Colonies and possessions of her Majesty's Empire were illustrated in a most signal manner.

"The object, therefore,which naturally suggested itself first to the committee was the development, with some necessary modifications, of your Royal Highness's idea of creating a permanent representation of the resources and progress of the Colonies and India.

"On perusing, however, the consideration of the subject, the committee became persuaded that a memorial really worthy of the Jubilee year of her Majesty's reign could not be confined in its objects to any one part or parts of her Majesty's Empire, and that it must in some form and degree also comprehend a representation of the United Kingdom.

"Their desire therefore, in the following outline of the scheme which they recommend, is to combine in a harmonious form, and with a view to some practical and useful purpose, a representation of the Colonies and India on the one hand, and of the United Kingdom on the other.

"They submit that this object will be best indicated by giving to the memorial the title of the Imperial Institute of the United Kingdom, the Colonies and India.

"They think that the inasitute should find its home in buildings of such a character as worthily to commemorate the jubilee year of the Queen's reign and to afford accommodation suitable for an institution combining the important objects which they now proceed to describe.

"It is obvious that several departments of the institute such as the hall, conference rooms, &c., which will be found described under the Colonial and Indian Section and the United Kingdom Section respectively, will be common both to the Colonies and Indian and to the United Kingdom; but as others have special relation to a particular portion of her Majesty's dominions it will be found convenient to make the following division.

"A.—Colonial And Indian Section.

"The object of the Colonial and Indian Section will be to illustrate the great commercial and industrial resources of the Colonies and India and to spread a knowledge of their progress and social condition.

"To this end provision should be made for:

"1. The display in an adequate manner of the best natural and manufactured products of the Colonies and India and in connection with this the circulation of typical collections throughout the United Kingdom.

"2. A hall for the discussion of Colonial and Indian subjects, and for receptions connected with the Colonies and India.

"3. The formation of Colonial and Indian libraries, and establishing in connection therewith reading, news, and intelligence rooms.

"4. The incorporation in some form into the proposed institute of the Royal Colonial Institute and Royal Asiatic Society, if as is hoped, it be possible to bring about such a union.

"5. The collection and diffusion of the fullest information in regard to the industrial and material condition of the Colonies, so as to enable intending emigrants to acquire all requisite knowledge. Such information might be advantageously supplemented by simple and practical instruction. An emigration office of this character should be in correspondence with the provincial towns either through the free libraries or by other means so that information may be readily accessible to the people. These objects would be greatly facilitated if, as may be hoped, the Government should consent to the transfer to the buildings of the Institute of the recently formed Emigration Department,which would,by a close connect'n with the Institute, largely increase its usefulness.

"Facilities might be afforded for the exhibition of works of Colonial and Indian art.

"It is also considered desirable that means should be provided, not for a general exhibition, but for occasional special exhibitions of Colonial and Indian produce and manufactures. At one time a particular colony or portion of the Empire may desire to show its progress; at another time a general competition of particular industries may be useful. Whilst this permanent galleries would exhibit the usual commercial or industrial products of the several Colonies and India, the occasional exhibitions would stimulate and enlist the sympathies of Colonial and Indian producers, and keep up an active co-operation with the industrial classes of this country.

"B.—United Kingdom Section.

"The leading objects of this section will be to exhibit the development during her Majesty's reign and the present condition of the mineral and manufactured products of the United Kingdom, and to afford such stimulus and knowledge as will lead to still further development and thus increase the industrial prosperity of this country.

"We submit that these objects may be carried out by making provision for the following purposes:

"1 Comprehensive collections of the natural products of the United Kingdom and of such products of other nations as are employed in its industries, with full scientific, practical, and commercial information relating thereto.

"2. Illustrations of manufactured products, typical of their development and present condition, of trades and handicrafts and their progress during the Queen's reign, including illustrations of foreign work where necessary for comparison; together with models illustrating naval architecture, engineering, mining, and architectural works.

"3. A library for industrial commercial, and economic study which should contain standard works and reports on all subjects of trade and commerce. It will be desirable also to included a history of inventions of the Empire, and, as far as possible of the United States and other countries.

"4. Reading and conference rooms supplied with English, colonial, and foreign commercial and technicals periodicals,and a fullyequiped map-room for geographical and geological reference. The conference rooms will be of value for meetings of chambers of commerce and other bodies of a kindred nature.

"5. The promotion in affiliation with the Imperial Institute of commercials museums in the City of London and in the commercial centres of the provinces. To these the Institute would contribuite specimens, samples, and exhibibits of the commercial products likely to be specially valuable in particular localities. There should also be an organisation to connect the Imperial Institute with the provincial centres by lectures, conferences, the circulation of specimens, and other means.

"It is hoped that the Institute may lead to the organisation of high schools of commerce, such as are now established in the chief commercial towns of most Continental countries, but which have as yet unfortunately no existance in the United Kingdom.

"6. The building will also advantagiously afford accommodation for (a) comparing and examining samples by the resources of modern science, and (b) the examination of artisans under the various schemes already existing for the promotion of technical education.

"Space should also be provived for occational exhibitions of separate industries, or of the special industries carried on in great provincial centres; for example, there might at one time be an exhibition of iron manufactures, at another of pottery, at another of textile fabrics, &c., which would tend to stimulate improvement in the different departments of industrial life. This object might be assisted by separate exhibitions of the handi work of artisans.—Daily Telegraph.

VISIT OF HIS EXCELLENCY THE ADMINISTRATOR-IN-CHIEF TO THE GALLINAS DISTRICT.

We understand that, during the visit of His Excellency, an agreement was signed by the Chiefs at Cassey to pull down their War Fences. Among the chiefs present, we learn that there were Fahwoondoo, Mormoor Fofoe, Mormoor Jah, Boccarry Gpakrah and Boccarry Governor. His Excellency returned to this place about the 13th inst. The Commandant remained longer and arrived here on the 23rd inst. Up to the time of the Commandant's departure for Bonthe; the fences of the undermentioned towns had been destroyed viz: Manoh, Cotomah, Bejehun, Dambery and Poojehun. The remaining fences are those of Jarrah, Bahamah and Marimah.

We regret to note the illness of Comdt. Mosely since his return from the Gallinas; whither he had accompained His Excellency Capt. J. S. Hay, The Administrator-in Chief However we are pleased to think his illness is not serious and trust he may recover ere this reaches the public notice. We also further regret to hear of the illness of Dr. M. L. Jarrett.

Rotufunk Mission House was badly damaged by the bug-a-bugs during the absence of the Rev. R. N. West; and we understand from one of the Employees of that station that had Mr. West's stay been a longer one the building would have been rendered useless by the ravages by this very destructive foe of all Wood work as well as Textile Fabrics in Africa. We sympathize with the W. M. A. and Revd. R. N. West their Agent in their loss, and we are glad to learn that Mr. West is rapidly repairing the damages.

To The Editor "Early Dawn"

Sir,—On Sunday the 20th inst., I happened to find my way to St. Matthew's Church when the pulpit was occupied by its Pastor Rev. G.G.M.Nicool B.A., of Cambridge.

The learned pastor took his text in the morning from 1. Cor. xiii 13. "And now abideth faith hope, and love, the greatest of these is Love." In his discourse the Rev. Gentleman rivetted the attention of the congregation to the word Love, and showed that we are commanded to love our neighbours although they may be our enemies; and that however much they may have injured or intend to do us injury, we are to love an I pray for them. We may not associate with them, yet we must not wish them evil. He pointed from scriptures the history of our Lord, of Saul and David and also of Stephen as patterns for our example. He further admonished the females who are married to be patient under their various trials, and to imitate the noble example of Abigail, who though her husband was a fool and a drunkard, yet she did not forsake him, but rather than that, she loved him and pleaded his cause with David and thereby saved his life. 1. Sam. xxv. 3, 25 & 36 verses. The worthy pastor did not leave any stone unturned to impress upon the minds of the congregation the evil of entertaining a spirit of revenge against their enemies; but admonished them to commit their individual grievances to God who is the avenger of all, for He says, "Vengeance is mine, I will repay saith the Lord."

I must say Mr. Editor that there was not a single soul in that meeting who did not feel the force and power of the sermon, and I believe all went home satisfied, and under deep self examination and conviction; I also attended the evening service, when the Rev. gentleman again ascended the pulpit His text on this occasion was taken from Gen. ix 5. "And surely your blood of your lives will I require, at the hands of every beast will I require it, and at the hands of every mans brother will I require the life of man."

The sermon on this occasion I must confess was more powerful than that of the morning service. The preacher in a most vehement manner spoke against those who encourage others to commit sin, or have committed it themselves to the disgrace and ruin of their fellow-men, and show God's displeasure against such persons. He afterwards in a most pathetic manner admonished the congregation to be always circumspect in their dealings with their fellow men, and to rebuke those who are treading the wrong path.

It would take up much space to reiterate all that the preacher said on both occasions, but suffice it to say that the sermons were plain, practical and effective.

Such sermons as these are very much needed at the present time, when the minds of the people are infatuated pride, hatred &c., and when the aristocrats think that salvation could be purchased by riches, honor or formality in their worship. I hope the lessons learnt from the pulpit on the 20th inst will be the means of clearing the minds of the people from the errors of their ways.

The pastor has adopted the language of the prophet "Cry aloud, spare not lift up thy voice like a trumpet, and shew my people their transgressions and the people of "Sherbro, their sins". Isa. lviii 1.

May his life be long spared in our midst to reprove his people, per adventure they may forsake their sins. Thanking you for space I have occupied.

Yours, Mr. Editor,
A STRANGER.

To the Editor "Early Dawn"

Sir.—An important debate took place in the Church School Room on monday the 14th instant.

The chair was occupied by Rev G. G. M. Nicol the arguments on both sides were very interesting.

Subject. Carpentry and Masonry which is more conducive to our Ease and Comfort"

The following gentlemen took part in the debate.

CARPENTRY. Messrs R. May (opener) J. B. Sawyer J. M. Crown J. G. G. Shenbeni D. M. P. Thorpe. J. B Nicol W. E. Crown and Barbacuius Tipson.

MASONRY. W. Hughes (opponer.) H. C. Jenkins C. S. Brown G. N. Wilhelm H. A. Coker J. C. E. Parkes W. B. Coker.

Those on the side of Carpentry moved the audience with the force of their powerful arguments and proved to satisfaction that Carpentry is more conducive to our social ease and comfort.

The gents on the side of Masonry tried their best with the assistance of Mr Parkes who carried away the thought of the meeting by his eloquence and fluency of speech, but notwithstanding, they lost their ground, especially when the chairman took the floor and repudiated the speeches, especially that of Mr Parkes. The vote of the meeting therefore was given to carpentry.

Mr. May moved a vote of thanks to the chairman, and seconded by Mr. Bidwell Coker which was responded to. Meeting closed at 10 p. m.

JUSTITIA.

Bonthe Feb 15th, 87.

MANDO—Services on Sabbath the 20th inst, interesting al, though not so largely attended during the day, as they no doubt would have been if our visit had been previously announced, however there was much to encourage, especially in the early morning class when there was a good attendance, and 19 persons participated in the speaking service.

KOOLOONG.—We regret to learn that Messrs J. H. Ashcroft & Co, have closed up their business and that Mr. Kolb their Agent is about to remove. We are also sorry to hear of the continued illness of Mrs. J. A. Richards of the Mission Station at that place and sympathize with Mr. Richards the Pastor under the afflicting circumstances.

Mr. H. T. Coker, a planter of Bompeh was in this place about the 21st and called on us he reports all quiet for the present in Bompeh. Mr. Coker was one the Exhibitors of farm produce of several kinds at the Indian and Colonial Exhibition and was awarded a diploma for the part taken in that affair.

OUT-LOOK FOR PEACE.

It has been circulated that Dawah who is carrying on war in the upper Kittam, is in secret league with the Chiefs lower down, and that he says he cannot stop unless they bid him to do so. We cannot say this is the case but somehow he continues it seems his operations. We have however this hope in the case and that is His Excellency, has visited in person the lower district and held a Meeting of the Chiefs and they have signed an agreement to break down their War fences which means the cessation of Hostilities. Hence if they are truly in league with Dawah and were sincere in their agreement it is to be hoped that as soon as they can communicate with Dawah that he will at their instance cease to make war and peace will ensue.

A NEW SEWING MACHINE.—A remarkable step in advance in simplifying the sewing machine has been made by a German gentleman, and the practical nature of the invention was recently demonstrated. The new machine has not a wheel in it, and may be described as the working parts of a good sewing machine deprived of of all extraneous details, and condensed within the smallest possible compass. It measures only eight inches high by about two inches wide and one inch deep. It is fitted at the foot with a screw clamp, by which it can be fixed to the edge of a table, and fairly worked by a child. The working motion consists of a vertical plunger pressed downward by the finger from the top, the plunger being returned into position for the next push by a spring. It makes a perfect lock-stitch, and will sew all kinds of fabrics, fine or coarse, within certain reasonable limits. Beyond its efficiency, it possesses an advantage which appeals to all, viz. that of economy in price. So small is its cost that it can be purchased for about 21s.

IMPORTANT TO TEACHERS OF S. AND M. MISSIONS.

1. Persons applying for the position of School-teachers shall be required to present a certificate showing that said applicant has passed a master's examination or an equivalent examination. The authorities of the Mission shall reserve the right to examine or re-examine or not applicants coming with or with out certificates.

Examination shall be held as often as shall be ordered by the authorities of the Mission.

4. Whenever practicable School shall be kept during five days in each week, and not less than five hours daily shall be devoted to school work, except on Fridays when it may be necessary to close school before the usual hour.

5. Provision shall be made in each station for training girls in house and needle work, but the time for such work shall not include the regular school-hour.

6. The text books for our schools shall be those furnished by the Mission authorities, provided however that Teachers be not prohibited the use of other suitable books in connection with class-work.

7. The Eclectic Manual of Method is a help in teaching most of the subjects prescribed in our course of study. It is hereby recommended to our Teachers. Also Kellogg's Grammar and Composition.

MANDO ITEMS.

Bp. Flickinger D.D., and the Rev. J. Gomer, we are informed called at Mando station on their way from N'charmany and Tonkohloh to Avery station on the 19th inst.

Traders are seemingly most of them absent from Mando at present. Their whereabouts we did not learn, except that we understood that Mr. C. T. Cole was over on the Damah side while Mr. Jas. E. Finch we heard was at another place more interior from Mando.

The Toomah that has been holding forth in a grand way about the place is reported to have been rather a failure this year and its adherents are rather gloomy over the prospects and some say the medicine is spoiled this time and is therefore no use; this however is only another triumph for the Rev.R.C.Taylor.

Canny Church, a trusted employe in the Shaingay Mission for several years, but who has lately resided near Mando. we understand was was drowned with another man off False Cape last month.

'tinerating.—Itinerants reached or visited 15 towns out side of Mando on the 19th and 20th inst, and reported good success.

Mr. N. J. Macauley with two other Carpenters (John T. Williams and Eward E. Frith) left this place on the evening of Wednesday the 23rd for Shaingay to reinforce the already large corps of Mechanics employed on the Training School Buildings.

We regret to note the rather protracted illness of Mr. S. A. St. John Photographer, who prior to the 22nd inst had been suffering for some 15 days, he has since left for Freetown.

Mr. W. A. John we regret also to note has for some weeks been unwell but we believe he is now recovering.

BONTHE, SHERBRO.

FEB. 28, 1887.

VISIT OF HIS EXCELLENCY THE ADMINISTRATOR-IN-CHIEF TO THE GALLINAS DISTRICT.

We understand that, during the visit of His Excellency, an agreement was signed by the Chiefs at Cassey to pull down their War Fences. Among the chiefs present, we learn that there were Fahwoondoo, Mormor Fofee, Mormor Jah, Boccarry Gpackrah and Boccarry Governor. His Excellency returned to this place about the 15th inst. The Commandant remained longer and arrived here on the 23rd inst. Up to the time of the Commandant's departure for Bonthe, the fences of the undermentioned towns had been destroyed viz: Manoh, Cotonah, Bejehun, Dambery and Pooghun. The remaining fences are those of Jarrah, Bahamah and Marinah.

We regret to note the illness of Comdt. Mosely since his return from the Gallinas; whither he had accompanied His Excellency Capt. J. S. Hay, The Administrator-in Chief However we are pleased to think his illness is not serious and trust he may recover ere this reaches the public notice. We also further regret to hear of the illness of Dr. M. L. Jarrett.

Rotufunk Mission House was badly damaged by the bug-a-bugs during the absence of the Rev. R. N. West; and we understand from one of the Employees of that station that had Mr. West's stay been a longer one the building would have been rendered useless by the ravages by this very destructive foe of all Wood work as well as Textile Fabrics in Africa. We sympathize with the W. M. A. and Revd. R. N. West their Agent in their loss, and we are glad to learn that Mr. West is rapidly repairing the damages.

To The Editor "Early Dawn"

Sir,—On Sunday the 20th inst., I happened to find my way to St. Matthew's Church when the pulpit was occupied by its Pastor Rev. G.G.M.Nicol B.A., of Cambridge.

The learned pastor took his text in the morning from 1. Cor. xiii 13. "And now abideth faith hope, and love the greatest of these is Love." In his discourse the Rev. Gentleman pointed out the advantage of our congregation to the word Love, and showed that we are commanded to love our neighbours although they may be our enemies; and that however much they may have injured or intended to do us injury, we are to love and pray for them. We may not associate with them, yet we must not wish them evil. He pointed from scriptures the history of our Lord, of Saul and David and also of Stephen as patterns for our example. He further admonished the females who are married to be patient under their various trials, and to imitate the noble example of Abigail, who though her husband was a fool and a drunkard, yet she did not forsake him, but rather than that, she loved him and pleaded his cause with David and thereby saved his life. 1. Sam. xxv. 3, 25 & 36 verses. The worthy pastor did not leave any stone unturned to impress upon the minds of the congregation the evil of entertaining a spirit of revenge against their enemies; but admonished them to submit their individual grievances to God who is the avenger of all, for He says, "Vengeance is mine, I will repay saith the Lord."

I must say Mr. Editor that there was not a single soul in that meeting who did not feel the force and power of the sermon, and I believe all went home satisfied, and under deep self examination and conviction: I also attended the evening service, when the Rev. gentleman again ascended the pulpit. His text on this occasion was taken from Gen. ix 5." And surely your blood of your lives will I require, at the hands of every beast will I require it, and at the hands of every mans brother will I require the life of man."

The sermon on this occasion I must confess was more powerful than that of the morning service. The preacher in a most vehement manner spoke against those who encourage others to commit sin, or have committed it themselves to the disgrace and ruin of their fellow-men, and show God's displeasure against such persons. He afterwards in a most pathetic manner admonished the congregation to be always circumspect in their dealings with their fellow men, and to rebuke those who are treading the wrong path.

It would take up much space to recitate all that the preacher said on both occasions, but suffice it to say that the sermons were plain, practical and effective.

Such sermons as these are very much needed at the present time, when the minds of the people are infatuated pride, hatred &c., and when the aristocrats think that salvation could be purchased by riches, honor or formality in their worship. I hope the lessons learnt from the pulpit on the 20th inst will be the means of clearing the minds of the people from the errors of their ways.

The pastor has adopted the language of the prophet "Cry aloud, spare not lift up thy voice like a trumpet, and shew my people their transgressions and the people of "Sherbro, their sins". Isa. lviii 1.

May his life be long spared in our midst to reprove his people, per a-fewture they may forsake their sins. Thanking you for space I have occupied.

Yours, Mr. Editor,
A STRANGER.

To The Editor "Early Dawn"

Sir—An important debate took place in the Church School Room on monday the 21th instant.

The chair was occupied by Rev G. G. M. Nicol the arguments on both sides were very interesting.

Subject. Carpentry and Masonry which is more conducive to our Ease and Comfort"

The following gentlemen took part in the debate.

CARPENTRY. Messrs R. May (opener) J. B. Sawyer J. N. Crown J. G. G. Sherbro D. M. P. Thorpe J. B. Nicol W. E. Crown and Bartomatus Tipson.

MASONRY W. Hughes (opposer.) H. C. Jenkins C. S. Brown G. N. Wilhelm H. A. Coker J. C. E. Parkes W. B. Coker.

Those on the side of Carpentry moved the audience with the force of their powerful arguments and proved to satisfaction that Carpentry is more conducive to our social ease and comfort.

The gents on the side of Masonry tried their best with the assistance of Mr Parkes who carried away the thought of the meeting by his eloquence and fluency of speech, but notwithstanding they lost their ground, especially when the chairman took the floor and repudiated the speeches, especially that of Mr Parkes. The vote of the meeting therefore was given to carpentry.

Mr. May moved a vote of thanks to the chairman, and seconded, by Mr. Bidwell Coker which was responded to. Meeting closed at 10 p. m.

I am, &c.,
CRITIA.

Bonthe, Feb 26th, 87.

MANDO—Services on Sabbath the 20th inst, interesting although not so largely attended during the day, as they no doubt would have been if our visit had been previously announced, however there was much to encourage, especially in the early morning class when there was a good attendance, and 19 persons participated in the speaking service.

KOOLOONG—We regret to learn that Messrs J. H. Ashcroft & Co, have closed up their business and that Mr. Kolli their Agent is about to remove. We are also sorry to hear of the continued illness of Mrs. J. A. Richards of the Mission Station at that place and sympathize with Mr. Richards the Pastor under the afflicting circumstances.

Mr. H. T. Coker, a planter of Bompeh was in this place about the 21st and called on us he reports all quiet for the present in Bompeh. Mr. Coker was one the Exhibitors of farm produce of several kinds at the Indian and Colonial Exhibition and was awarded a diploma for the part taken in that affair.

OUT-LOOK FOR PEACE.

It has been circulated that Dawah who is carrying on war in the upper Kittam, is in secret league with the Chiefs lower down, and that he says he cannot stop unless they bid him to do so. We cannot say this is the case but somehow he continues it seems his operations. We have however this hope in the case and that is His Excellency, has visited in person the lower district and held a Meeting of the Chiefs and they have come to an agreement to break down their War fences which means the cessation of Hostilities. Hence if they are truly in league with Dawah and were sincere in their agreement it is to be hoped that as soon as they can communicate with Dawah that he will at their instance cease to make war and peace will ensue.

A NEW SEWING MACHINE.—A remarkable step in advance in simplifying the sewing machine has been made by a German gentleman, and the practical nature of the invention was recently demonstrated. The new machine has not a wheel in it, and may be described as the working parts of a good sewing machine deprived of all extraneous details, and condensed within the smallest possible compass. It measures only eight inches high by about two inches wide and one inch deep. It is fitted at the foot with a screw clamp, by which it can be fixed to the edge of a table, and fairly worked by a child. The working motion consists of a vertical plunger pressed downward by the finger from the top, the plunger being returned into position for the next push by a spring. It makes a perfect lock-stitch, and will sew all kinds of fabrics, fine or coarse, within certain reasonable limits. Beyond its efficiency, it possesses an advantage which appeals to all, viz. that of economy in price. So small is its cost that it can be purchased for about 21s.

IMPORTANT TO TEACHERS.

OF S. AND M. MISSIONS.

1. Persons applying for the position of School-teachers shall be required to present a certificate showing that said applicant has passed a master's examination or an acquivalent examination. MANDO ITEMS.

Bp. Flickinger D.D., and the Rev. J. Gomer, we are informed called at Mando station on their way from N'charmany and Tonkohloh to Avery station on the 19th inst.

Traders are seemingly most of them absent from Mando at present. Their whereabouts we did not learn, except that we understood that Mr. C. T. Cole was over on the Damah side while Mr. Jas. E. Finch we heard was at another place more interior from Mando.

The Toomah that has been holding forth in a grand way about the place is reported to have been rather a failure this year and its adherents are rather gloomy over the prospects and some say the medicine is spoiled this time and is therefore no use; this however is only another triumph for the Rev. R. C. Taylor.

Canray Church, a trusted employe in the Shaingay Mission for several years, but who has lately resided near Mando, we understand was drowned with another man off Faise Cape last month.

Itinerating.—Itinerants reached or visited 15 towns outside of Mando on the 19th and 20th inst, and reported good success.

Mr N. J. Macauley with two other Carpenters (John T Williams and Eward E. Frith) left this place on the evening of Wednesday the 23rd for Shaingay to reinforce the already large corps of Mechanics employed on the Training School Buildings.

We regret to note the rather protracted illness of Mr. S. A. St. John Photographer, who prior to the 22nd inst had been suffering for some 15 days, he has since left for Freetown.

Mr. W. A. John we regret also to note has for some weeks been unwell but we believe he is now recovering.

MISCELLANY.

WASHINGTON AT YORKTOWN. One who was in the army at the time relates an incident that came under his notice:

"A considerable cannonading from the enemy; one shot killed three men, and mortally wounded another. While the Rev. Mr. Evans, our chaplain, was standing near the commander-in-chief, a shot struck the ground so near as to cover his hat with sand. Being much agitated, he took off his hat, and said: 'See here, General!' 'Mr. Evans,' replied his excellency, with his usual composure, 'you'd better carry that home and show it to your wife and children.'"

Indeed it seemed to many that Washington bore a charmed life, and it was often said that he was under the special protection of God. He was fearless, and constantly exposed to danger, but his constant escapes made him cool and self-possessed and the admiration of his men. He was excited by the events which were hurrying the war to the close, and he watched with intent earnestness the several assaults which were made on the works. Once he had dismounted and was standing by Generals Knox and Lincoln at the grand battery. It was not a safe place, for, though they were behind a fortification, it was quite possible for shot to enter the opening through which they were looking. One of his aids, growing nervous, begged him to leave, for the place was very much exposed.

"If you think so," said Washington, "you are at liberty to step back." Presently a ball did strike the cannon, and, rolling off, fell at Washington's feet. General Knox seized him by the arm.

"My dear General," said he, "we can't spare you yet."

"It's a spent ball," replied Washington coolly. "No harm is done." He watched the action until the redoubts which his men had been assaulting were taken; then he drew a long breath of relief and turned to Knox.

"The work is done," he said emphatically; "and well done."

On footing up the Chart of the Annual District meeting for the past year we have the enormous aggregate of 4959 Communicants and Seekers which gives an increase over last year of 1967 but as many of the Seekers have been received recently, and at new places where the population is somewhat transient; we think it would be fair to estimate the increase at two thirds or Thirteen hundred and eleven. Agreed that this shall go on journal and be put with Secretary's Chart or, close to it.

Correspondents or those who write for our columns, we are pained to note are gradually forgetting that we can not insert articles that are too personal in their nature unless they are or may not be offensive. Nor can we afford to publish the suspicions of persons in the community. Matters relating to police or Government affairs would be better referred to the Governor or Commandant or other Officials as the case may require.

BRITISH SHERBRO ISLAND,
Bonthe, Feb. 13, 1887.

Dear Sir,

As a subscriber of your valuable periodical I forgot enclosed in my last paper received from your publishing Office a notice and list of names of gentlemen members of a Committee of Sherbro District on the all absorbing topic of the day namely the Celebration and commemoration of the Colony of Sierra Leone Centenary and the Jubilee of the reign of our Beloved Sovereign Queen Victoria of the United Kingdom and Empress of India.—I read the notice with interest: but in what way the Sherbro District intend to celebrate and commemorate these grand and most interesting projects, the notice did not say.—As such then it seems to me an open subject for discussion and suggestion. To my mind I think something permanent, beneficial and of vital importance to our growing community can and should be done or at least be attempted by us to celebrate as well as commemorate the above mentioned projects.—Let us see Triumphal Arches! Illuminations! Holidays festivals! may all be in time and well in celebrating; but best of all something permanent and beneficial to the growing importance of the Sherbro District in which all poor and rich will alike be benefited for all time should be attempted by the hon'ble Board of Committee for which the rising generation as well as generations unborn will honor rise and call the promoters of the scheme "Blessed" and (i.e.) Let the Committee think of the feasibility and propriety of endeavouring at this juncture to form a "Steam Navigation Company" to ply or run a boat between Sherbro and Sierra Leone. A Company of this nature will be of infinite service to the community to all classes in the District and of great advantage to all concerned.—If such a company be formed to commemorate the Centenary of Sierra Leone in conjunction with the Jubilee of Her Majesty's Reign I think it would be no disgrace whatever to the Sherbro District.—Such a company adjusting into shares say from £2 10 a share to a £50 or £100 upwards will soon secure a decent sum of money with which it will be in a position to purchase a small steam boat about the size of a little larger than the S.S John Brown of the Mendi Mission.—Some they say was not built in a day but after it was built it was large and most magnificent. So let the committee not despair nor be in a hurry to obtain their wish.

If to obtain the end of their object inaccordance with this proposal it does not make much difference; for the designation of the Company and the name of the boat will make amend for the delay.

Mr. E—to be here in Sherbro and express sympathy for our people who have to travel in all weathers between Sherbro and Sierra Leone is no easy matter; but if you but to travel as they do yourself in such a boat as they often do, and which I had the better pleasure of undertaking recently in the contract boat; you I be-seeming intelligence and growing civilisation devise means for better and safer travelling!

Presently celebrating Centenary & Jubilee offers a high way to the idea of commemorating Sierra Leone Centenary and the reign of Jubilee substantially till the next Centenary when the people of that time will take a lesson from the present and so end their dye. Dear Mr. Editor,

I have read several interesting articles in your valuable Journal, from Manly, from the pen of Messrs. J. J. Dorcasberry and R. C. Taylor. The former their apparent to the Chiefdom of that country and the later an ambassador of the word of God to the inhabitants of their country. I, the writer, as a native of the country, I agreed with my friends in every sentence that they have written but that. And that is the article written by Mr. R. C. Taylor respecting our worthy Commandant of Sherbro to station a Police Constable at Manly which article was seconded by Mr. J. J. Dorcasberry, and published in your valuable Journal. Let me first ask this: Can the power of the civil and imperial Government's Christianity or Religion a connect or will the stationing of a Police force in a country christianize it? If my friends and dealers say yes, then let me refer them to this Bargrave country where there has been a Police Station for a period of over ten years; I am really against that article. If the peace of the country is disturbed refer it to the recognized Chief of that country; if no satisfaction is received then refer the matter to the British Government. I believe it is an insult to us for these trifling country matters to the British Government without first consulting with the Chief of the country. But let me tell you Dear Readers that the Gentleman was only a little too hasty and zeal in position as he wishes to do the work of his Master with true sincerity; forgetting that Satan cannot be conquered in a day. Our Lord while on earth preached for three years travelling from place to place and at a certain time he spread to Capernaum and other towns. The christian religion had been brought in Sierra Leone 100 years ago and still they have secret societies that are worse than the Tomb. But the christians there are not without faith that there shall be a time when the Almighty God will wipe away all these things. So hope, trust, and pray and the Lord will help you. Why have you not cried more earnest christian workers to him who will help in banishing away the power of the evil one? You have made a requisition for something you will be sorry for. Pray to your God that the Demon Rum and all his ambassadors be banished from the country in which you labor; and not that ogricals of drunkards be brought in the country it is too full already. Mr. Editor I will not tell you what I mean by myriads of drunkards as I think your Readers will understand more in my next. Thanking you for space occupied.

THE SEA-WATER TREATMENT.

Some of the Paris physicians

tion of sea water, combined with a residence at the seaside. It is urged that the sea-water, taken internally, acts like diuretic and purgative salts, a remarkable fact being that the diuretic effect increases when the purgative diminishes. The water is to be obtained, when possible, from some depth, and far from the shore—being then left to settle for six or twelve hours, and filtered. It is to be taken three times a day, in doses of a small tumblerful, or in half that quantity at a time with fresh water or milk. The claim is that sea water thus used facilitates the oxygenation of the blood, and that it hastens the elimination of the effete materials. In combination with this treatment, seawater baths are to be taken, free exercise is to be carried out and at the same time fattening foods are, of course, to be avoided.

A NEW YORK letter says: "A few days, while a number of prominent lawyers of this city were looking at Puck's cartoon on the members of Congress affected by Senator Beck's bill to prohibit Congress men from taking fees from corporations having business with the Government, some one asked Simon Stevens what he thought of the plea made in oppositions to the bill by Senator Edmunds and others. Mr. Stevens replied: 'It is quite Bacon, you know.' The reply caused a roar of slaughter from the lawyers who recognized the reference to the great impeachment trial of Lord Bacon for bribery, where his Lordship made this defence; 'I confess you, my Lords, I took the money, but it was to facilitate not to prevent justice.'"

When Dickens was last in this country he said the Americans were themselves out by constantly speaking "words" Writing "words" seems just as useless. George Alfred Town send-estimates that he has written on an average of 30,000 "words" a week for the last twenty-five years.

MISCELLANY.

WASHINGTON AT YORKTOWN. One who was in the army at the time relates an incident that came under his notice:

"A considerable cannonading from the enemy; one shot killed three men, and mortally wounded another. While the Rev. Mr. Evans, our chaplain, was standing near the commander-in-chief, a shot struck the ground so near as to cover his hat with sand. Being much agitated, he took off his hat, and said: 'See here, General!' 'Mr. Evans,' replied his excellency, with his usual composure, 'you'd better carry that home and show it to your wife and children.'"

Indeed it seemed to many that Washington bore a charmed life, and it was often said that he was under the special protection of God. He was fearless, and constantly exposed to danger, but his constant escapes made him cool and self-possessed and the admiration of his men. He was excited by the events which were hurrying the war to the close, and he watched with intent earnestness the several assaults which were made on the works. Once he had dismounted and was standing by Generals Knox and Lincoln at the grand battery. It was not a safe place, for, though they were behind a fortification, it was quite possible for shot to enter the opening through which they were looking. One of his aids, growing nervous, begged him to leave, for the place was very much exposed.

"If you think so," said Washington, "you are at liberty to step back." Presently a ball did strike the cannon, and, rolling off, fell at Washington's feet. General Knox seized him by the arm.

"My dear General," said he, "we can't spare you yet."

"It's a spent ball," replied Washington coolly. "No harm is done." He watched the action until the redoubts which his men had been assaulting were taken; then he drew a long breath of relief and turned to Knox.

"The work is done," he said emphatically; "and well done."

Loss during the year.

Gain during the year.

On footing up the Chart of the Annual District meeting for the past year we have the enormous aggregate of 4959 Communicants and Seekers which gives an increase over last year of 1967 but as many of the Seekers have been received recently, and at new places where the population is somewhat transient; we think it would be fair to estimate the increase at two thirds or Thirteen hundred and eleven. Agreed that this shall go on journal and be put with Secretary's Chart or, close to it.

Correspondents or those who write for our columns, we are pained to note are gradually forgetting that we can not insert articles that are too personal in their nature unless they are or may not be offensive. Nor can we afford to publish the suspicions of persons in the community. Matters relating to police or Government affairs would be better refered to the Governor or Commandant or other Officials as the case may require.

BRITISH SHERBRO ISLAND,
Bonthe, Feb. 13, 1887.

To the Editor "Early Dawn."

Dear Sir,

As a subscriber of your valuable periodical I send enclosed in my last paper received from your publishing Office a notice and list of names of gentlemen members of a Committee of Sherbro District on the all absorbing topic of the day namely the Celebration and commemoration of the Colony of Sierra Leone Centenary and the Jubilee of the reign of our Beloved Sovereign Queen Victoria of the United Kingdom and Empress of India.—I read the notice with interest; but in what way the Sherbro District intend to celebrate and commemorate these grand and most interesting projects, the notice did not say.—As such then it seems to me an open subject for discussion and suggestion. To my mind I think something permanent, beneficial and of vital importance to our growing community can and should be done or at least be attempted by us to celebrate as well as commemorate the above mentioned projects.—Let me see Triumphal Arches! Illuminations! Holidays festivals! may all be in time and well in celebrating; but best of all something permanent and beneficial to the growing importance of the Sherbro District in which all peace and rich will alike be benefited for all time should be attempted by the hon'ble Board of Committee for which the rising generation as well as generations unborn will hence rise and call the promoters of the scheme "Blessed" and (Lo!) Let the Committee think of the facibility and propriety of endeavouring at this juncture to form a "Steam Navigation Company" to ply or run a boat between Sherbro and Sierra Leone. A Company of this nature will be of infinite service to the community to all classes in the District and of great advantage to all concerned.—If such a company be formed to commemorate the Centenary of Sierra Leone in conjunction with the Jubilee of Her Majesty's Reign I think it would be no disgrace whatsoever to the Sherbro District.—Such a company adjusting into shares say from £2 10 a share to a £50 or £100 upwards will soon secure a decent sum of money with which it will be in a position to purchase a small steam boat about the size of a little larger than the S.S John Brown of the Mendi Mission.—Some they say was not built in a day but after it was built it was large and spot magnificent. So let the committee not despair nor be in a hurry to obtain their wish.

If to obtain the end of their object in accordance with this proposal it does not make much difference; for the designation of the Company and the name of the boat will make amend for the delay.

Mr. E—to be here in Sherbro and express sympathy for our people who have to travel in all weathers between Sherbro and Sierra Leone is no easy matter; but if you had to travel as they do yourself in such a boat as they often do, and which I had the better pleasure of undertaking recently in the contract boat; you I believe will witness the need for better and safer travelling [illegible] my candid views proper what of most seeming intelligence and growing civilisation devise means for better and safer travelling [illegible]

The Early Dawn.

BONTHE, SHERBRO.

MAR. 15, 1887.

THE DEATH OF BISHOP GLOSSBRENNER

Which sad event took place in the early part of January, at his home in Churchville Virginia, (U. S. A.) was the source of great and wide-spread grief to the U B church and many without its pales in the United States, and many too have been the expressions of feeling among our people in this country. And well indeed might such an event cause sadness, when we consider the life of the great prelate who commenced his labors in the ministry when but a youth, became an Elder while a young man, was elected a bishop at the early age of (we believe) 32 years, was a popular preacher from the first to the last of his pulpit career, and as another has wisely observed, it may be well to state here that the bishops of the U.B.Church are not chosen for life, but for a term of four years Bishop Glossbrenner was ten times chosen to this exalted position. He was an able Theologian, but modestly declined the degree of D.D., saying, "he could do as much good without it." The writer's recollections of the great and good bishop are of the most pleasant nature and as he pens these lines there is the feeling of sadness at the thought that we shall never meet him again on earth, but it is a consolation to think that the great prelate has left us a bright example of a beautiful life; so full of sympathy and sweetness; so free from those ruffings of passion that so often mar the lives of some of the best men. But like all the best gifts of time the dear bishop has passed from earth. It is well however here that we should remind our readers and especially those of the U. B. C. Missions that the venerable bishop was the president of our Board of Missions, an office which he has held for many years, and the cause of Missions was dear to him so much so that among the things that he clung to, as desiring to do before his death was that he might be spared to attend the meeting of the Board of Missions next May. As this privilege was not spared to him by the all wise providence of our kind Heavenly Father, we may only bow in submission to His Will and pray him to raise up another to take the bishop's place at the head of our Board.

Mission Services, held at Good Hope Chapel on this place on Sunday 6th, and Wednesday evening the 9th, although not largely attended, were a success. The Public Meeting of the 9th was kindly presided over by G.H Garrett Esq., and interesting speeches were made by Rev. G.G.M Nicol, B.A., Rev. J. C. Thomas, and Messrs Crown and Pashaw which were listened to with great interest, and much applauded by those present. We have not space to say more than that the sum of £12. 13. 11½ in cash was realized with good promises of more for which the Committee and Church return their thanks to the friends who have so kindly contributed to the success of this movement,

SOURIE BEHYO AGAIN.

—oo—

It has been reported to us here and in the rivers that Sourie Behyo, who obtained judgement against Chief Beah Boome for the payment of £25 and who also received a present from the Covernment, we are told, has since become very important in the Gbargroo, plundering and seizing the property of others as may best satisfy his rapacity. We have now a paper from a reliable Correspondent about a sezure made by this war chief of the goods and effects of a Mr. Ketell, a trader of Gbangbaltooke Imperch and not only this but numerous reports confirming this and other information of the depredations of Sourie Behyo; which if true it would seem ought to be checked. and whether true or not should be investigated, ere Serious trouble arises in consequence of these reports.

Dear Mr. Editor,

You will be doing me a mark of favor, should you allow this short article to find a small space in your valuable columns.

Everything that is of honest and of good report, however long its fame may be unheard of and scarcely spoken of, however much it may probably be thought of as scant, one thing is certain, that a time will come when everything which is of true, honest, and good report, will undoubtedly be brought to the front and will be thought and spoken of in a manner which it justly merits.

The success of the American Mission work on the Tucker, Shaingay and Boom's Rivers, is one of honest, true and excellent report one can scarcely imagine the mighty work which is being carried on by this Enterprising Mission among our poor Country people—The Mendies, Sherbros and Timnehs—No reason would I have had, to believe, excepting as the case has been from ocular demonstration, and I can under one circumstance testify to the fact, that this special Mission is doing special missionary work amongst us, which is worthy of our special notice, and support in our prayers. All right thinking Africans, who have got in their hearts the real love of the Redeemer's cause should lay their purse open, to contribute willingly and largely towards the support of this mission.

Let it be borne in mind that the work belongs to all professed Christians in Africa, it is a duty incumbent upon every individual who has had the gospel's light and privilege, and let it also be strictly borne in mind that whatever may be our Denominations, rank, or profession—irrespective of any distinction of race or colour, one thing is certain, that we are all "Children of one Father, the great God who reigns above" Jesus instructs Peter in these words —"When thou art converted strengthen thy brethren" There are various ways in which this can be done. One may be in a position to give freely from a portion of the blessings which he receives from the hand of the Lord. Another may wrestle hard in prayer that God may continue to prosper the work and bestow sustaining Grace on those who are employed in it, another who may have the gift and talent may make himself useful by teaching the heathen and thus, here a little, and there a little, the mighty work will increase rapidly and God's Name will be abundantly glorified.

It has been my privilege Mr. Editor to visit all the principal Stations in connection with this exalted Mission during the months of December 86, & January 87 I hope will not be time for me to go into any detail here; but may do so in my report for "Dayton Ohio" U. S. A. In each of these Stations, especially Avery, Good Hope, Shaingay & Rotufunk. Much has nevertheless been done and fresh efforts are being put forth to retain continued success. In each of these stations but one, I had splendid opportunities of doing a little spiritual work amongst the people and have also examined the children in connection with the schools. I do not believe I can pen sufficiently how much satisfaction I realized in the course The Avery station deserves doubtless about 400 fathoms each way East, West, North and South with its grand Mission House, Stores, Chapel, and Saw Mills are indeed worthy of notice. The Danville Station is being specially worked up in a good locality and very healthy. Good Hope Station with its trust worthy manager is in a fair way to do something and continued success and in Mr. Hero, there is no shadow of doubt they have an excellent teacher, Christian man, and a good pulpit man. The Revd. J. A. Cole a man of deep Christian piety is living and much beloved by both his flock and agents Kenbongo under the management of Mr J. A. Richards is thriving and promises to yield much Fruits in can a of time.

Shaingay seems to be the Grand father and the Revd. J. Gower's work in this Mission can scarcely be paralleled. Mr. Gower is an energetic worker, and a real Missionary at heart, he labours for the love of the work and looks to no place but Master. He is a man of very good constitution ready for action at all moments. The work in this Mission, is in a prosperous condition and in addition to the Normal Training Institution which is now in course of erection. It promises to take a bold stand and to remain in future a pattern to copy I have been credibably informed that the building is going on rapidly and the date of its completion is scarcely distant.

The Revd D. F. Wilhelm was ordained of the Rufus Clark Training Institution is a worthy young man and well informed with him, there is no doubt the Institution will be a success, because he is a good and able teacher, and the right man in the right place. It would have been a boon to the Mission for all their troubles had they start at least 4 due on Wilberforces on whom they could depend to assist in working up the Mission and push it in front as much as possible.

S. ALBERT St. JOHN.

To The Editor of "Early Dawn"

Mr. Editor—During my stay in this place I have been privileged to visit each of the Government Offices, and I must here give an opinion on the working of each department, and I trust your readers will find it of much interest, and that some reform be made by the Government in such departments as require changes.

1st. The Commandant's Office is adjoined to the Court House as also the Police Office. Aboriginal Department and Bailtd's Office.

The Duties of the Police's Office, Aboriginal Department, Summary Court, and Commandant's Office, are performed by only two per ons.

I must remark that the duties of these Officers are of so much importance that it would require more Officers than those who are at present performing the work. In the absence of one, the other does all the work, which you will admit would be tiresome, for if it is actually a hard work for two persons to perform several duties at the same time, how much harder or will it be for a single person to do the same amount of work. Oftentimes the public have had to wait a very long time for Police Courts and Court of Requests Summonses, Official letters, &c. &. when the time of these two officers are otherwise engaged. An additional staff is therefore very much needed in this Department.

2nd. I pass on next to the Custom's Department. The duties of the Customs and Treasury are performed by the Clerks of Customs, who are only four in number viz—1 Indoor Officer, and 3 Outdoor, taking 1 from the 3 officers to perform duties at the Treasury we have only 2 Officers to attend the public at the Customs, when it is remembered that the business of the Customs and Treasury are the most important Office or they are the life of the Government, it is necessary that that the staff be increased, especially at this present time when 1 of the Officers are occasionally required to perform duties at the outstations of Sumbuh Salijah and elsewhere; I hope therefore the Government will see the necessity of increasing the present staff.

There are youngmen of good qualifications and literary attainments to be had here, who could be employed to assist the present small staff in the Aboriginal and Judicial Department, and also at the Custom House.

CENTENARY AND JUBILEE.—For the past few weeks much stir was made here for the celebration of the Centenary and Jubilee, Meetings have been held, suggestions made and glowing were made by several gentlemen. But may I ask what became of the suggestions &c. I fear the whole scheme has died a natural death, this leads me to believe that the people of Sherbro always suggest and propose but never carry out, but always end in nothing. If this is a fact me ask. Is this the way we are to honour Her Majesty's Jubilee, and the freedom we have enjoyed for 100 years!

I hope every effort be put forth by the principal inhabitants who are well disposed to carry out these suggestions.

I wait to see what will be done.

To The Editor "Early Dawn"

Mr. Editor,—When persons in private or public office of trust has achieved success in his undertakings to the satisfaction of the general public in securing peace and order such person's action should be highly commended and appreciated. Not later than the month that has passed have several Mendi people from the interior, rushed into the town of Mambimah, in the Bargeroo District and plundered and kidnapped the peaceful and quiet inhabitants of that town. The Desperadoes would have escaped the hands of justice, but for the immediate exertion put forth by Corporal Peacock, who is in charge of Konoonay Station, when two of them were arrested by him, and brought down and tried in the Police Court at Bonthe where they have been sent to Freetown to take their trial at the next session, and I hope when these people shall be found guilty, the law will award such punishment as would deter others of the same class from perpetrating such foul deeds, then the land will be at rest. Much praise is due to Corporal Peacock for the exertion he displayed in the matter, which I trust the Commandant will not overlook

From some delicious old romance;
And then he turned the perfumed leaf,
And straight his countenance grow yellow

Love!
This same lines made him wild with grief,
To be written by another fellow!

Personal

Mr. T. J. Alldridge, formerly Agt. of Randall & Fisher in Sherbro; but more recently of London England has lately visited the Coast arriving in Sierra Leone about the 15th of last month where he remained for about ten days a mention of which we should have made in last Issue but for the fact that we had hoped to give notice of his visit to Sherbro. It has been rumored that Mr. Alldridge expects to return shortly again to the Coast, and some say to Sherbro to open business at Bendoo. If such be the case we wish him the greatest success.

Rev. J. C. Thomas and wife returned from Freetown on the 6th inst. per s. s. Volta and Mr. Thomas gave us a pleasant call on the 8th inst and we were pleased to learn from him that his connection had enjoyed a pleasant Annual District meeting.

Mr. James T. John formerly for a time connected with our Journal called on us on the 7th inst, he was on his way to Lagos per "s. s. Volta."

Mr. Henry John Davis, Blacksmith an old resident of this place called on us on the 10th inst. to say fare well as he was finally leaving Sherbro that day for his old home in Freetown.

Mr. J. W. Pratt of Shaingay was in this place about the 5th inst. we believe trying to arrange with Mr. H. J. Davis Blacksmith for his shop with a view to opening business; Mr Pratt is good workman and we trust will receive the patronage of the public.

Mr. M. Z. Macauly gave us a call on the 11th inst he had but recently returned from the river.

Mr. A. H. Richards has returned this way from the Small Boom and left here on the 11th inst via Tallie for Shaingay.

To the Editor "Early Dawn."

Mr. Editor,—In the month of April last we were blessed with the presence of the Rev. James Johnson, the indefatigable Missioner, who did all his best to win souls for Christ at Bonthe and everywhere. Although (Victoria in particular) many souls who had been long in the thraldom of satan's power seemed then by the preaching of the Missioner to be set at liberty, yet I regret to state that notwithstanding the bitter tears, and the faithful promises they had made, it appears, as if they were moved by a kind of histerical fit —for not even a month after the expiration of the Mission services, they had again enslaved themselves to satan, and spared no pains to do the service of their master the devil, by their vicious and illicit habits. Formality is existing in every form and shape in this place; for men who were once prominent in the house of God, who ought to set bright examples (as christians) to the poor perishing souls around them, would be seen hand in hand with the heathen by their adulterous and bigamous practices. It is advisable it they would give due attention and consideration to the words of one of the apostles, in Romans vi–16, "Know ye not that to whom ye yield yourselves servants to obey, his servants ye are to whom ye obey; whether of sin unto death, or of obedience unto righteousness" God be thanked; "though the field be lost, all is not lost;" many still keep to the faith, who were once unchaste and intemperate in their manners, now devote their whole service to God, and are working earnestly for the Master.

I trust every one will now awake to the sense of his duty, and no more indulge in sensualism, but strive to obey the blessed mandate, "Love thy neighbour as thyself."—Thanking you Mr. Editor for the space I have occupied.

Yours
Victoria, OBSERVER.

HOW DOES THIS HAPPEN?

Mr. Editor,—There is progress in discouragements. I make this assertion as regards the spiritual work in the District I was laboring. I for one who is for the good work of itinerating and preaching have been made to experience this. Indeed we are glad whenever we have good attendance and marked attention paid to us in towns and farkies as we go to dispense the word of truth. There are a kind of gospel tired people in some of the outstations if not all; and it is lamentary that I refer right here to a case or two. Well, I happened to question some people at a certain time when they were careless about attending Divine Worship, and they told me that the Sunday morning Service was held too late (that is 10 o'clock, a.m.) at another time that I preached too long sermons. As the majority of those who always attended gave that as their reasons for being irregular, I however ever changed the time for morning Service on Sabbath to 8 o'clock, and from thirty to twenty minutes preaching. Despite of the reports we make so encouragingly of the progress in the midst of great discouragements that ought not to be omitted. The most of discouragements to be met with are secret societies, superstitious customs and many other prevailing evils which are barriers in the way to God. How does these things happen I cannot tell. There is a great work yet to be accomplished, I am always awed with reference to the great responsibility that rests in the hands of him who is chosen to preach the gospel to the heathen, seeing that "he that winneth souls is wise."

With these, I am as usual,

FIVE STATIONS VISITED.

Dear Bro. Evans you must not conclude that because I have not written of the work that nothing is being done. Since the New year commenced I have visited 21 villages of my District, ten of these I visited on foot, many miles have been traveled under a burning Sun and the sand in some places so hot and deep that it burns my feet through my shoes. I do not mention these things to excite sympathy or to hold myself up as a martyr, but simply that your numerous readers as well as yourself may hear that we are still at work. Of these 21 Towns visited only five are regular stations. Rembee is in charge of Mr. G. Bright and though he had only been there six weeks he knew nearly every person in the town old and young by name. The Purrow was in full blast here and the meetings were not well attended only the faithful few were out. The school here is small, Mr Bright is very hard to build it up, hope he will continue as he has begun. During the three days that I was there the good sisters of the church and some out of it kept me well supplied with choice dishes of food, the best the country afforded, these sisters have been partaking largely of spiritual food of late, some months ago they organised a Womans Prayer Union and they introduced early Morning prayers from house to house and they are growing in grace. Mambo was the next regular station visited, Rev. J. C. Sawyer and wife are in charge here and as usual at his station all was life crowded houses & good interest, four adults and seven children were baptized one of the adults Karry Boom not less than sixty years of age took the name of Joseph Gomer has been a member of the Seekers' Class for over nine years the adults all united in full membership. The day and S. School is flourishing here, but the thieves and monkies steal the corn and cassada so that they can scarcely raise food enough to feed the children. Two young men were on Rev Sawyer's recommendation appointed itinerants—J. GOMER.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENT.—We have received from Mr. M. J. Stoner, of Manheim, Penna. (U. S. A.) a nice letter and parcel which we have forwarded to Mr T. N. Joah formerly of Manoh; but now of Konoonay Station. The parcel contains a lot of nice story Books for children, which are designed, by the donor to be given to pupils for regular attendance in Mr Joah's day school and are sent in response to an Article written in the Early Dawn of Dec. 15th '86, in which bro. Joah regrets the irregular attendance of his pupils. Mr Stoner's gift is a nice and appropriate one and we have no doubt is much appreciated by Mr. J. We have also a letter for publication from Mr Stoner which we hope to give to our readers in our next issue.

Mr. Charles Smart of Rotofunk called on us on 14th instant he is looking well, and reports all well and quiet in the Bompeh District. Mr. Smart is passing to the Gallinas Rivers to exchange Rice for Country Cloths.

Rev. R. N. West of the Bompeh Mission is still busy with the Repairs of the Rotofunk Mission House, himself and Mrs West are reported well and enjoying their Work

THE SIERRA LEONE & SHERBRO SAW MILL COMPANY.

LUMBERS, SCANTLINGS, BOARDS &c, &c, &c.

The above COMPANY having been recently established, would, from about the middle of next month, be prepared to receive and execute all Orders for every description of LUMBERS and BOARDS of choicest Hardwood, at the shortest notice.

Some of the advantages offered by the Company in executing Orders are the following:—

I.—Their Mill, which is not to be worked by manual power, will turn out nothing but regular sawn Lumber and Boards equal to any European or American.

II.—Lumbers &c., could be cut exact to any given dimensions so that the great waste generally experienced and complained of by Builders will be totally avoided.

III.—On account of the very powerful capacity of their Mill, which could yield thousands of feet per day, the Company would be in a position to supply at prices quite favourable to buyers; and no order would be too large for them to execute within a few days after the receipt of same at their Works.

In a word, Lumbers and Boards would be regularly cut to any given dimensions and supplied at low rates; and Orders for same promptly executed.

The company would also execute Orders from Badagri Gambia, Lagos and other ports of the Coast, where they expect in course of time to have a presence by Agents.

Orders for Sherbro are to be forwarded to the Company's Factory to

MR. WM. N. LEWIS,
Manoh Bargroo, Sherbro.

All Orders, to the Company's Office at 209, Bissy Street, Freetown, to Mr. C. A. Cole, who would be ready to receive all Lumber Contracts, and enter into any arrangements with Buyers.

Dear Brother Evans,

At your well meant request, I am writing you a report of this place, and its needs for spiritual instruction.

The large part of our church members, even those of full Bishops' standing, converted through the grace of God by the preaching of Rev. J. P. Hendervandy speaking, have had their own souls saved, and are now endeavouring to save the souls of the Mendee people in our midst here. In this important engagement, they have to contend with horrible, swallogs, and heart rending disappointments. To them (i.e. the Mendee people) religious meetings are quite packs of offences, and shame of shambling. They think (Satan contravening them) that religion is something not befitting them. Liquor drinking, gambling, Sambah dancing occupying mostly their time, attention, and money. "We are born and not made as they often say." No wonder we could never walk about, without a sword dragging at his side. A band of armen, headed by my wife, and Mrs. Elizabeth Emanuel, are assembling once a week, and making special appeals to Almighty God, for the pulling down of Satan's deeds, and strong holds among the benighted tribe.

At no distant past period I had my spiritual rounds in Moreamah river. The first night was Friday. I anchored together with my wife, and over a dozen of Mendee children in Moreamah town. Chief Bai-nah Bone did good himself and family out of his house, and civilly made its comforts

No wonder we could never walk about, without a sword dragging at his side. A band of armen, headed by my wife, and Mrs. Elizabeth Emanuel, are assembling once a week, and making special appeals to Almighty God, for the pulling down of Satan's deeds, and strong holds among the benighted tribe.

At no distant past period I had my spiritual rounds in Moreamah river. The first night was Friday. I anchored together with my wife, and over a dozen of Mendee children in Moreamah town. Chief Bai-nah Bone did good himself and family out of his house, and civilly made its comforts its occupants. We spent four days in it during which time, I spoke to 199 persons in four different villages. In Mobbonah we met a little girl, named Sally Caulker, a relative of Chief Neale Caulker's, wife and who had been educated in our private day School at Shalegay. She is now in the above named village, under medical treatment. She acted as an introducer, and interpreter for us to her country people. She led us to a house, where we met a man in a most deplorable neglected and starving state. After having read and prayed with this man, as I were riding from our house, he said to us with tearful eyes "Pray on, read more." One of the Mission boys accordingly prayed.

Early on Monday morning I was attending by the bank of the river close by Moreamah town, I saw two men paddling towards me; on approaching one of them said in a very sad and expressive tone "Rev Shaner, we come to you, we want our own." What is it that you want from me? asked. He said, "These joyful words and prayers you threw among our people yesterday. Little Sally told us all, for we were not at home." Right glad was I to grant them their desires. This little girl, although a suffrer, as I in an unfavourable state in the stores of the common blessing of humanity, had power in her tongue and life to do good. &c. &c.

Our God loving, and humble consecrating Superintendent, officially wrote me to take charge of Rembee Station, which was then under a seeming dark cloud. Brother W. S. Macauley has laboured most resolutely laying a deep and solid foundation in the minds of the new converts. Were it not for the youthful and vigorous exertions of brother Lake not a vestige of any hope, would have existed in Rembee today. In obedience to my instructions a Seeker's class was arranged, and a few more names added. Such is the eagerness of the people that the place of worship was crowded in and out every Lord's day.

Parochial was then in its highest triumphs, movement only laying hold of its initials, without consulting their consents or remonstrants.

"The Son of Man is the Lord of the Sabbath." When Sunday arrived, King Bai was the chief and a true friend to the Gospel work, was consulted with. He ordered all songs and differing sales in favor of purchases, to be as quiet as possible on the Lord's day. This order was universally obeyed. Parties in Rembee has great assurance for the Lord's Day. The King alone of this world, shall been on the King dom of our Lord and Christ. Satan never got into the heads of some young persons one night after the services were ended, they were entranced hearing parochi drum drumming; a Mission boy went and stopped them. They waited about quarter of an hour, and then went to a christian heathen leader, saying, "Head Sendu gone out." She from within her house, (fearing for she dared not stepped out) told them "not yet—go and wait till each cross Town" trumpet agree, some what disappointed. They mad beat and danse to please Mr Parrott. They stood, marched, talked, sang and laughed, and gave a few hard, heavy, and rapid strokes on the large drum. Mr Parrott too kept grumbling muttering however and broke again and again as if complaining saying what are you waiting for I shall go it gone and I must save my shoes. These young men being so impudent, came once more to the door of this Lord's house, and said Mr Mooney your Sunday is not gone yet? No, no, answered the woman go and wait a little more. "Ah!"

Sunday day long this night also. Then they kept themselves and hearts beating and dancing with the voice of a creaking cock early on Monday morning. Of Rembee I can only say the Field is already white to harvest.

Yours in Christ,
J. C. Sawyer

INDIA LEADING THE WAY.

They began celebrating the Queen's Jubilee in India yesterday. The reason for beginning thus early is that in another month or two the chief English officials will have taken flight from Calcutta and the other provincial seats of Government to their delightful summer residences in the mountains. Two striking acts of grace mark the commencement of the celebration: A new Order of Knighthood has been created for the upper end of the Indian social scale, and a grant of 25,000 pardons to prisoners in Her Imperial Majesty's gaols, with the release of some 300 debtors, by Gov'nment paying their debts, will probably rejoice even more the hearts of the lower strata of India society. This wholesale emptying of the gaols will not, we are told, extend to letting loose any exceptionally dangerous criminals; or else the boon might not be very warmly appreciated by the rest of the population. The act is one strictly according to Oriental precedent, and is "what is expected of" a Sovereign on such occasions. The last instance of a similar exercise of Royal clemency occurred, it may be remembered, on January 1 1877, when the Queen assumed the title of Empress of India. Then amongst others who were released, a number of tottering old men, life prisoners in the Andamans, found their way back to the villages they had left in their youth, becoming living examples of Imperial mercy. In India, owing to the absence of any representative institutions that might modify the traditional conceptions of Royalty, the 250 millions that make up the total of the Queen-Empress's subjects have a stronger sense of dependence upon their Sovereign's "pleasure" than can be felt in this country, and, startling as it may seem, we do not hesitate to say that there is more loyalty, in the old feudal sense, in India than in England. This finds expression in such highly poetic utterances as those of the High Priest of Baidyanath, whose appeal contains such flights of rhetoric as these:—"May that august Empress, Victoria, live long! The lustre of her reign, which illumines the hollow vales of the wilderness and the concealed places, and which brightens the sight itself, has, like a second sun, made India blossom like the lotus, by dispelling the gloom of injustice originating from the severe tyranny of Mahometanism." But while recognising the value of such sentiments of personal loyalty as these, it is necessary to remember how fickle is the Oriental mind and how ready to change from unbounded confidence to utter distrust. The same tendency to believe evil of their European governors which provoked the Mutiny still survives, and is seen in such scares as quite recently prevailed in Calcutta and elsewhere. We see the other side of the shield when we are told that amongst the poorest citizens of Calcutta a rumour has been widely circulated that the Government requires a large number of human heads for the Jubilee Celebration, and that there is dismay, in consequence, among the low caste people whose heads would naturally be the cheapest. A similar panic arose lately among the Ganges boatmen, who thought the Supreme Government were collecting a pile of human heads as a foundation for the great Benares Railway bridge, which the engineers had found it difficult to fix by ordinary methods in the ever shifting bed of the Ganges.—The Christian World.

IMPERIAL INSTITUTE.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE.

"The committee having detailed the general nature of their suggestions under these heads, desire to add that they do not anticipate the exhibits in the collections remaining unchanged. They contemplate that as improvements are made from time to time the later and better results would displace those out of date. They have had to consider how the space should be distributed between the United Kingdom on the one hand and the Colonies and the India on the other, and they recommend that whatever portion of the buildings is not required for purposes is uniformly continued in two sections fairly in equal parts.

"C.—Government or Institute.

"The committee recommend that a new body entirely independent of any existing organisations should be created for the government of the Institute. This body should be thoroughly representative of the great commercial and industrial interests of the Empire. The Colonies and India should have a fair share in the government of the Institute, and each Colony should have special charge of its own particular department, subject, of course, to the general management of the entire Institution. The method of carrying this out would be prescribed by the charter after full consideration by her Majesty in Council.

"D.—Site.

"The committee being fully conscious of the advantage of a central position for the Institute, have considered the various possible sites, and have, as far as has been within their power, obtained estimates of their cost.

"To carry out the several objects which the committee have indicated a large space is necessary. The committee have been unable to find any such suitable site in the central parts of London, except at a cost which, looking at the probable amount of subscriptions, would, after the purchase of the ground leave a sum wholly inadequate for the erection and maintenance of the buildings, and for carrying out the objects of the institute.

"The site of about five acres recently secured for the new Admiralty and War Offices is valued at £420,000, or rather over £100,000 per acre; that now vacant in Charles-street, opposite the India Office, is less than an acre and would cost at least £125,000: probably another acre might be secured by private contract, so that the value of a limited site in this position would not be less than £250,000. It has been suggested that a single acre not far from Charing cross might be obtained for £224,000. Two and a half acres on the Thames Embankment have been offered for £403,000: and it is stated that six acres might be procured from Christ's Hospital at £300,000. Another good central position has been suggested, consisting of two and a half acres, which has been valued at £368,000.

"It is of course, probable that these sites might be obtained at somewhat less than the prices asked; but allowing for this, it is obvious that the purchase of any adequate area would involve the expenditure of a quarter to half a million.

"The committee have therefore been forced to abandon the hope of obtaining a central site within the limits allowed by any probable subscription.

"The attention of the committee was then drawn to the property at south Kensington belonging to the commissioners for the exhibition of 1851. This property was bought out of the profits of that exhibition, with the express object of offering sites for any large public buildings which might be required for the promotion of science and art.

FARM MAKING.

Our country people have divided their bush. Those who have low lands, mud or putter-putter farms have probably about finished their cleaning and planting, while those on the uplands have only cut down the bush and many in fact seems only to have commenced their farm work; we passed one place near Manoh Gbargroo, where on one side of the lake we saw what we supposed to be an entire farm plot already cut down; hearing a terrible yelling on the opposite side, we looked in that direction and soon understood that the noise was being made by some persons who were just beginning their work of farm bushing. Of course we should not fail to mention that the season for farm-making is beset with its difficulties. First of all to get a piece of land or bush to cut, which almost invariably causes disturbance, quarrelling sometimes at other times fighting; within jurisdiction these troubles are sometimes, we believe, settled by the Civil authorities. Beyond this limit by the Chiefs or otherwise the stronger party prevails. The next trouble we may mention is for a country man to get all his family to engage in the work of brushing and cleaning the farm. It sometimes occurs that there is another farm near by and it being ready before the other is burned, which sometimes sets the other on fire too soon, and trouble ensues from imperfect burning. A poor burn arises at times from other causes. Early rains being perhaps the worst of all, as these sometimes hinder the burning of farms in a whole district, many fear this will be the case in the Gbargroo this year, as much rain has already fallen in that district.

Birds are a great annoyance to our country farmers too, especially what are called rice or palm birds. They originally did not trouble the Gbargroo, but since the late wars in the Galliras, Impereh and Bompeh, they seem to have followed the path of the Refugees to Gbargroo, and are now as plentiful in that region as elsewhere. Drouth too sometimes affects the African farmer as much as it does those of other countries; while it is true he cannot lose so much in pounds shillings and pence, as European and other farmers; yet it is a question whether he does not suffer, at least, proportionately as great a loss, for when the crops fail generally in any district of the country the staff of life seems cut off and great suffering ensues hence meagre as may seem the crude agricultural efforts of this coast yet they are of vast importance to the well being of the people. And it is very much to be hoped that Missionary Societies operating in this country may soon give more attention to agricultural pursuits in connection with their work of civilization and Christianization.

Dear Bro. in Christ,

Through the kindness of the Rev. J. M. Lesher, of Shaingay Africa, I was enabled to subscribe for the Early Dawn, of which I have already received the second paper.

I wish to express my satisfaction in having subscribed for the paper. I think a great deal of the little sheet, and eagerly read all it contains, as soon as I receive it. My desire in subscribing for the paper was two-fold, to help swell the subscription, and also to become better acquainted with the people in Africa. Brother Lesher delivered a lecture in our church, some time last fall on the condition of the people of Africa, and from that time I became deeply interested in them. It is true, I am not able to do much good financially or otherwise, but I am willing to do just all I can. In reading the communication of T. N. Joah of Manoh station, in the paper of Dec 15th 1886, I notice he regrets the irregular attendance of the the children in the Day school, he reports 25 children on roll. Will you please forward to brother Joah, what I send you and have him use the same to the best advantage in getting the scholars to attend the school regularly. I would like to do much better, but being a poor man, cannot. He also says the people have ready and willing hearts to receive religion. The people of Africa seem to be more grateful for the gift of Jesus than the people of America are, according to the enlightenment they have received.

May God bless Africa.

But I may have taken too much of your time and space, yet wish to say that I find great interest in reading the letters from your different correspondents. At this writing we are having an itinerating Revival of religion in the United Brethren Church of this place, not so many converted yet, but we are having some Pentecostal showers from God. Some 20 miles west of this place, Middletown, there has been over 200 Convertions since their revival started.

Again praying for God's blessing on Africa.

I remain,
Yours in Christ,
M. J. STONER.

LETTER OF S. ALBERT St. JOHN.

Concluded from our last.

The donation of one thousand pounds was given by Mr Rufus Clark for the erection of the Training Institution Denver Colorado U. S. A. through the instrumentality of the good Bishop Flickinger who has been labouring off and on in this Mission for about thirty years—the action speaks of itself and can only wish the Bishop continuous spiritual blessings.

The Bishop with the Revd Mr Lesher are out this time expressly to see about the erection of the Institution it is the duty of all to wish them success and excellent health while they are amongst us.

The Revd R. N. and Mrs West of the Bompeh Mission Rendfurk are really pushing on the work and they are very good and loving Missionaries. Mrs West pays much attention to the children and they are very decently clothed, amongst the children are two little girls Mary and Alice on whom special care is bestowed and these two have been adopted by Christian ladies in America, the girls are very interesting and good to look at, they are smart and clever and their spiritual wants are kindly observed. The Station is a very grand one and a comfortable home and without doubt the property is valuable.

The Bompeh Station is the best landing Station of all of any of the Mission Stations and much can be done there in every respect. The soil is very rich and the Liberian coffee grows there as equally as it would in Liberia if not better, fruit can be cultured there in great abounjance there are teeming populations about that locality and with a good mission house and chapel much good will certainly be done there. The town has plenty of people who are quite open to hear the word preached to them. There are at present a small Barre where services are conducted by Mr. Coker who is living his best. The stations in connection with the Bompeh Mission are marmoo, Bompeh, Palli and Rotufunk This particular mission is supported only by good Christian Ladies in America. In conclusion Mr. Editor I subscribe my heart felt congratulations to this mission for the success which has attended them in their noble and praiseworthy enterprise, and my prayer is that Heaven's blessing rest upon all their efforts in the Savior's cause and that before long their longing expectations in regard to the spread of the gospel amongst my country people may have an extensive sway and that multitudes of souls may turn from their sins and wickedness to the only true and living God and further that all professed christians who name the name of Christ shall make it their duty when trading amongst the poor heathen, to let their light shine before them and endeavour to cease introducing the accursed obnoxious drugs (Rum and Gin) the introduction of which has been entailed on the shores of Africa a trafic which is altogether Vile Sinful and most abominable and it is one of the material hindering cause of the spread of the gospel of Christ, and an enticement to a bad display of bloodshed and disturbance in various directions.

Thanking you for the time and space
Mr. Editor, I remain yours faithfully
S. ALBERT St. JOHN.

Mr. Editor,—Permit me a space through the medium of your valuable journal to state some of the prevailing evils which tend to demoralize this country.

For the past few months, I noticed about four young women in a delicate state at Bonthe; from pity, I asked, by whom are these immoral deeds done? to my surprise I was told that it is done by respectable married gentlemen in this place.

Mr. Editor, it is heart rending, shameful, and disgusting, to see these men of family, whose names stand foremost in Society, partakers of the Holy Communion, who ought to be as ensigns in the church, because they are blessed with a little of this world's goods, which is transient, and "soon make to themselves wings and fly away," would make by their immoral practices, promising young women to become profligates, a disgrace to society, and of no reputation. It would be better, for men who have such uncontrollable passion for immorality, to retire to some of the remotest wilds in the interior of this country, with the unchristian and uncivilized men his where they may practice better their polygamous and licentious habits; than to mislead the peaceful and moral homes of christians in this locality.

Parents should be very careful how they are setting examples for their children, and how they are paving their way in this world; for, if they by their examples instil immoral principles in the minds of their children, they will have to rue it, and their children following the footsteps of their parents, will by and-by participate in the awful consequences.

Persons who have attained to the mediocrity of their age should respect themselves and family; and never allow themselves to be publicly censured nor make themselves nuisances; for there is no gain in immoral traffick;—therefore let "Cease to do evil, learn to do well." Learn to cultivate good principles; for he that is so careless in his course, oft sells his reputation at cheap market. If you sow carnally, you shall "reap corruption," but spiritually "life everlasting. Yours ANON.

Bonthe,
Mar. 25, 1887.

Mr. Editor,—Without any reluctance I venture as a duty devolving upon me to give you an adequate information of the elaborate and well got up sermon preached to a gathering of the Shaingay community on Sunday morning the 13th inst, by the Rev. D. K. Flickinger D.D. His text was taken from St. Luke ix. 30.-31. I can assure you Mr. Editor, that the style and tenor in which this Rev. gentleman delivered his sermon is one worthy of notice. I have often times heard the rev. gentleman preach, and I could not bring to my recollection of any sermon of such a prominent style or tenor has ever been preached to my hearing. I must furthermore state that although it is his duty to preach to his members sermons that will always rouse each member to consider their position in this world, yet I must say that much praise is due to him for this special effort, and in conclusion I must congratulate him for the energetic and efficient manner he delivered his sermon, and I hope through the assistance of God he may always have the tongue of fire to enable him always to consider the very duty that is incumbent on him and that he may be like a tree planted by the river side.

Thanking you for space favored me in your valuable columns.—Yours faithfully,— NATH. J MACAULAY.

Dear Mr. Editor—Yarmama was a town belonging to a woman by the name of Yarmama, who told my predecessor not to hold any service in her town because it was not God that made her. What do you think Mr. Editor, a few months after this she ran away from threatening war that was then pending and left this place desolate and without inhabitant; I went to itinerate to the next town, some of her people that ran for refuge were there who readily received me. They told me to come there every time if possible my self when writing this was just on the entrance of Yarmama's ruined house. She is now at the Bompeh River. The work is in a prosperous state, in the Sarkies, only in the town Charmahy itself we cannot get the people to attend service as they ought. The former teacher Mr H. J. Williams has done, not only a great work here in this circuit but a good one. Eight scholars on the school register, one came the day after the Bishop and Bro. Gomer left. I intend to get more very soon I have visited all my towns except two. Your prayers are needed for Charmahy town.—Yours J. W. Domingo.

NEWS ITEMS.

A Grand Sermon—we are informed was preached on the evening of the 13th inst by Dr Fredericks, the New Pastor of Zion Chapel Wilberforce Street, Freetown; his text or subject "there is a friend that sticketh closer than a brother." The Doctor we believe is doing a good work among the people of his charge and the A. M. E. Church may well be proud of such a man.

The Star—that arose, or rather shone more brightly after the Sun went down, at Chicago, Ohio, has appeared to us over the vast expanse of the Atlantic. The Star is a quarto sheet of 16 pages of very interesting matter Edited and Published by Rev. W. A Kersy Chicago O. U. S. A.

The Agency—A fine little 4 page weekly Published at the EXPRESS Office Freetown has reached our table and we have been greatly interested in its contents.

Danville Station near Gbangbiah Impereh was visited on the 20th inst. by the District Supt. of the Mendi Mission; who preached twice during the day and assisted by the Pastor Rev. W. S. Macauley Baptized 19 persons (2 adults and 17 children) and administered the Sacrement of the Lord's Supper to quite a large number of persons. The afternoon services at 4 p. m. were held in the Town of Gbangbia and were very interesting indeed.

March 18th. Mr. P. A. Barnister formerly the Chief outdoor officer of the Customs has been appointed the Asst. Examining officer of Manoh Salijah, vice O. J. Thomas dismissed. He left this place the same day for Salijah.

From Kooloonge,—Mr J. A. Richards has sent us a good report of quarterly meetings and other interesting services especially of a grand sermon preached by the Revd D. F. Wilberforce of the Training School Shaingay.

Bishop Flickinger D.D. expects to leave the coast for England about the 1st of April next. This we believe is the Bishop's tenth departure from these shores and we wish him a prosperous journey and a safe return to us again.

Personal

Rev. D. F. Wilberforce Principal of the Training Schoo' at Shaingay, was in this place about the 6th inst, he reports that the Buildings are being pushed on to completion with all possible Expedition with a view to opening the Institution at an early date; already we believe some preparatory class work is being done.

Mr. Wm. N. Lewis on leaving for Freetown about 10th inst. gave us a very pleasant call which by some means escaped our notice in last Issue. Mr. Lewis is the Manager of the New Saw Mill Co's Mills in the Manoh Gbargroo.

KONCONANY.—Rev. W. S. Macauley held interesting Communion Services at the Chapel in that place on Sunday the 13th inst, several persons were also Baptized by him on the occasion.

Mr. E. Edwards of Bendoo gave us a very pleasant call on the 22nd inst., he was indeed looking fresh and well, so much so that we were puzzled to recognized him at first.

Mr Moses A. Le'evre of Bowmah was in town last week he gave us a call on the 25th inst.

It is reported that Boolloo of Baligh, nephew to the late Mormordoo Gooramah who was recognized as Chief of the Imperreh land during His Excellency's last visit to Sherbro died on Sunday the 27th inst.

FIVE STATIONS VISITED.

Concluded from our last issue.

From Mambo to Lawanah we had to foot it; we passed through Marcorma and another town, I forget the name The Regent Chief was carried in a hammock he went by another route passing through Mo'Tinkie and Bondom, there was to be a special gathering at Lawanah of the chief men of that part of the District. Rev. Sawyer and myself went as invited guests, it is about fifteen miles from Mambo though it is one of our preaching stations the people are mostly Mohamedans, yet our itinerants are always welcomed, and are kindly treated. The chief man here is a Mr. Moibe, he gave us a large two story mud-house for our quarters i.e. the first story about eight feet high, was a foundation of solid dirt, on top of this was a house with two rooms and a piazza all round, about seven ft. wide; whilst we were here we were kindly cared for by our landlord: This is a very nice town, the houses are large and mostly the people are mostly well clothed, and have an intelligent appearance, the town is clean, but for the Parrah devil who was visiting the place at that time, and made the nights hideous with his unearthly yells, the place would have been tolerably quiet. Our stay here was only two days. The Chief announced that he must leave to meet other engagements; a three hours' march brot us to Moyah, as the sun was hot, and the road bad, I was quite ready to halt; here we secured a small boat that took nineteen of us to Mambo, and from here I returned to Shaingay, spent one and a half days at Shaingay, thence to Freetown, to defend our watchman who was arrested and taken there for knocking out a man's eye in defending himself against four men, they were stout young men from Freetown—the watchman is over sixty years of age; the magistrate dismissed the case at once. Two days were spent in Freetown, making purchases to the amount of over £100, arrived at Shaingay some day and left for Mofuss the next day. Mr. Mc'Kie is doing good work on this District, also Mr. French at Mocaba, that was my next station. Space will not allow me to enter into details.

My next station on the plan to be visited was Tongkolloh. The Bishop wished to see some of the stations, and proposed to take a trip with me; this was to be simply a trip of inspection, and no quarteries to be held. At 8 a. m. We were under way, and Kooloong was to be visited first; the tide was out and the Bishop had to ride on a human horse whilst I waded it, all was in good trim at this place. Bro. J. A. Richards and his new wife have surely made a good beginning, the grounds were in good condition, a fair school and good order.

We next called at Ghendamah on the Tucker River, the bishop preached here to about 50 or 60 people and we went on as the person we wished to see was not there At 5 next morning we were at Tongkoh thence to Charmah, both of these Stations have new men, and time will tell how it will go with them these are both good Stations and many souls ought to be led to Christ throughout them, next we called in at Manoh on the Mendi side here we were kindly received by Bro Taylor and wife on our way from the town to the farm we met Yeanny Yankain a more faithful servant of God I dont believe there ever was, what she has suffered for the gospel the judgment alone will reveal 14 years ago she was made to pay a large sum of money for letting me sleep in her husband's house where he kept his medicines, she walks about half a mile every morning to attend prayers at the Mission, Mando Station under Bro Taylor has grown wonderful by tho the Tonah devil joins his own yard and they have tried to run him out of the Chapel he stands his ground and is continually gaining in numbers, from here we went to Avery Station and were most hospitably entertained by Bro S. B. Morrison we greatly enjoyed the sabbath spent there, wherever we have been we have endeavored to let our light shine for eternity will tell. We are home.

JUDGE NOT THAT YE BE NOT JUDGED.

Mr Editor—To me the words of the above written sentence are very striking: they appear to me to be of a peculiar nature. They are but seven words viewing in a glance the history of the Bible we find that seven is an uncommon Number. The Almighty God was six days in performing the works of Creation, and he rested the seventh day and blessed it and from thenceforth it has been blessed there are many instances however in holy writ in which the number has been mentioned as my dear readers know. But I must come to the point, these words come to us as escaping the lips of our Lord and only on your when he was about closing his Sermon on the mount as a direct command Examine them closely and give them their emphasis.

JUDGE not that ye be not JUDGED How piercing are they to our hearts, now my dear readers having had a personal examination on the above, I will endeavor to give you in a few words what has led me to write. Mingling myself with the vulgar Rude and Base class of people of which class I can readily place myself, I have heard these strange expressions—You shall die and go to hell You are satan's sons or daughters. God will not forgive your sins. And have even heard some venture to use these words to others "I I meet you in heaven when I die I will plunge myself into hell. These I say forget the words above uttered by Him who died to save them. I had heard christians or professors of religion utter some words, which though base as I am will not dare to on account in my heart or lips in utterance to.

I heard a Rev. Gentleman a few days ago while preaching say "I had a friend who died and is now in heaven—I was preaching in a certain church and had a good number of sinners before me and etc. How does this sound. I pitied him very much; but there and then I thought that he had forgotten the words of Him for whom he was an ambassador.

The very gentleman who has judged the sinner and righteous according to worldly appearance met a number of poor boys some time ago carrying water to their home and stopped them by questioning them as to where they got the water we drew it from pump we replied they. By whose consent asked he in anger we went to you but did not meet you nor any one else and so we drew the water with hopes to tell you, replied the boys. Turn back says he in anger and put that water back in the well. The poor boys plead hard but could not prevail and so they retraced their steps and put the water back in the well, and went back with no water.

Tell me now Can such a man tell the sinner from the righteous? Let us leave all judgements to God, and

"So let our lips and lives express,
The Holy gospel we profess,
So let our works and virtues shine,
To prove the doctrine all divine.
Thus shall we best proclaim abroad
The honors of our Saviour God
When his Salvation reigns within
And grace subdues the power of sin
Thanking you for the valuable space occupied.

Dear Mr. Editor,—On the night of the 14th inst. a man named Gbanah and wife at Mogbarah (Victoria) went to fish as for as Bobie, when a man named Bosh Fey of (Bumbay) allegedly appeared in the water as an alligator, seized the man and gave him some terrible wounds with the deadly fangs of God on that purpose he would have succeeded in his misdemeanors action, had it not been for his wife, who caught hold of the supposed alligator's person and thereby disabled him; though she was severely wounded. During the struggle, two men came to their assistance, and have the man tied and taken to the police in charge of the Station. He is now for trial at Bonthe I trust the law will punish him well for this atrocious deed.

IMPERIAL INSTITUTE,

"Under these circumstances the committee submit to your Royal Highness that the Imperial Institute may well establish a claim for the grant of a site of sufficient magnitude on property bought and reserved for public institutions of this character.

"Though sensible of the objections that may be urged against the situation at South Kensington, the committee think that advantage must be obvious of obtaining a sufficient site virtually free of cost, so that the whole of the subscriptions may be devoted to providing a building for and establishing and maintaining the Institute.

"The committee, whilst guided in the recommendation of a site by the considerations they have indicated, think it right to add that there are some incidental advantages connected with that at South Kensington.

"In that locality are combined the city and Guilds Technical College, the Royal College of Music, and the Government Museums and Schools of Science and Art, which ought to be in immediate proximity to an Imperial Institute of the character which we have described.

"The technical character of the collections and exhibitions of the Imperial Institute has natural connection with the collections of science and art in the Government museums.

"E.—General Observations.

"An Imperial Institute for the United Kingdom, the Colonies, and India, would fail in its chief object if it did not constantly keep in view that it ought to be a centre for diffusing and extending knowledge in relation to the industrial resources and commerce of the Empire.

"The necessity for technical education is now fully appreciated, because the competition of industry has become in a great measure a competition of trained intelligence. The committee, however, do not recommend that the Imperial Institute should aspire to be a College for Technical Education. Many of the large towns in Great Britain have recently established Colleges or Schools of Science and Art. The Imperial Institute might serve to promote technical education in these, and to unite them with colleges of larger resources which have been founded or formed branches for the purpose in the metropolis. It is too much to hope that an active cooperation of this character between the provincial centres of London could be at once undertaken by the Imperial Institute. But the committee bear in mind that, in their last report, the Commissioners of 1851 have indicated an intention to assist in carrying out such a scheme. If the commissioners would contribute three or four thousand pounds annually, it would be possible to establish scholarships which might enable promising candidates of the working classes to attend the local institutions, and even, when it was desired, to complete their technical education in colleges of the metropolis. In addition to this aid, the imperial Institute might be able in other ways to promote the foundation of scholarships both in connection with the Colonies and provincial centres, in the hope of still further extending these benefits to the working classes.

In conclusion, the committee submit that an Imperial Institute such as they have sketched in broad outline would form a fitting memorial of the coming year, when her Majesty the Sovereign of this Empire will celebrate the Jubilee of her happy reign. It would be an emblem of the Unity of the Empire, embracing as it does all parts of the Queen's dominions, and tending to promote that closer union between them which has become more and more desired It would exhibit the vast area, the varied resources, and the marvellous growth, during her Majesty's reign, of the British Empire. It would unite in a single representative act the whole of her people; and, since both the purpose and the effect of the Institute will be to advance the industrial and commercial resources of every part of the Empire, the committee entertain a confident hope that her Majesty's subjects, without distinction of class or race, will rejoice to take part in offreing this tribute of love and loyalty.

Hearing a noise at night, Jones descends, with a lighted candle, and discovers a burglar escaping with a full sack. "Hello!" he cries, "Come back, you!" "Eh, what?" returns the burglar. "Ah, yes—the silver candlestick! Permit me." He takes it from the hand of the astonished Jones, and puts it into the bag. "Ten thousand thanks. Have I forgotten anything else?"

"I don't believe we are ever going to get things in better shape until Almighty God will help every preacher in this land to stand square and hew the line, no matter where the chips fall. If it cuts off all my bankers and all my moneyed men, God help me I will starve to death trying to have one pure church in the world."—Sel.

Dear Bro, Evans,

As we have but recently had our Quarterly Conference in the unavoidable absence of the Presiding Elder (Rev J. Gomer) Bro. D. F. Wilberforce was deputed. He arrived here in the afternoon of the 5th inst quite in trim for business.

At 7. p. m. we had the usual preliminary service, when the Deputation preached from 2 Cor. xiii 5. Quite a lelling and very impressive sermon it was, and I among others, was only too sorry when the preacher concluded. The Conference was then called to order. The spiritual conditon of things all round though not quite what we would wish, (for there are some hard places like Bompeltombe, Bowomah, &c, where the Devil has a stronghold on the people) is nevertheless encouraging. The interest manifested in most of the Towns and Farkies through which we itinerate, has been very much cool; and with God on our side (for he has promised to be with us even unto the end—Oh, what a consoling thought!)

'We hope to win the day'

The Day & Sabbath Schools are both interesting and hopeful. Mrs. R. superintends the latter, and in her Report prayed that something should be done to encourage the children in the way of distributing Tracts and other useful Books. Here's a splendid opportunity for some of your readers at home and in the States, nay, even in England to do some good.

New life has been thrown into the Day Schools by the New Code introduced since the return of Mr. Wilberforce from America, it is few who can or have endeavoured to lay their books and are doing their utmost to improve, (Others are so circumstanced that they hardly can't afford to. I shall be more than thankful if also in this department of my work some friends at Home or abroad will interest themselves. Too much attention cannot be bestowed on our Day Schools, knowing as all will admit, that they are the life of our work. We look up to them for those, who not only head but heart educated, will go forth to shine as burning lights among their benighted brethren. We shall be thankful for Wall Maps and other essential School materials from any and all quarters, to help push on our work. We have been very badly off for children's clothing. I think we would have more children coming to school, if we had clothes to induce them with. There are many in the towns near by who ought to be in school.

Statistics were as follows

Appointments	35
Full Members	18
Seekers.	509
S. School Scholars	53
Day " "	35

out of which number there are 17 Boarders. There have been certain removals of families which have effected our numbers.

Early on Sunday morning the 6th inst Rev. Wilberforce and I visited Mo Pieh where he spoke to the people from portions of 2 Kings 5 urging on them the necessity of conforming to Religion in God's own way. Thence we came to Sanchoo where I took the service and spoke from Isaiah 55 Chap. last—here also we had a good congregation this W. spoke from Ps. xxiv, and the gathering which was rather a mixed one, Sherbro and Mendi, were very attentive, as the preacher in their own tongues respectively showed them whose they were and what He expected, of them, and all His creatures. We then hurried home, and were in good time to make ready for the 11 o'clock service. At the appointed hour we repaired to Glossbrenner Chapel (which edifice I trust, though of native structure, will stand many a long day, in memory of the dear sainted Bishop whose name it bears) and in a few minutes the house was crowded to full; Bro W. having in course of our itineracy urged on the people the necessity of coming here for worship, even though we might have gone to them in the mornings, as in our own every Lord's day (In the part the people in the near towns have been very indifferent in that respect.) Quite up to the occasion Bro. W. conducted the service and preached from Gen II. 8-9, Ch. 1 & 5. a very able and soul stirring sermon indeed, the effects of which I trust will never be lost. Then followed Baptism. There were three infants and seven adults, Children eleven all told. One of the female adults, said to sister R. and myself when we spoke to her about joining the Church, that she was too poor and that God did not require her. We spoke with her and ultimately convinced her that she was also included in the Gospel "Whosoever" Thank God she has been able to grasp that truth! and today she feels that "God is no respecter of persons" and that truly "Jesus came into the world to save sinners" and that she will not be despised or in any wise cast out. At the close the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper was administered, when several partook of the elements of the Lord's dying. Oh the gracious influence that hovered around us! Bless the Lord!!

In the afternoon we went to Bonpeltook, but as the folks were busy (absorbed) with the Purroh nearly all having repaired to the Lodge, we had a rather poor gathering, to whom Bro. Wilberforce preached from portions of Gen. IV., following up the thread of the mornings discourse closing here, we took leave of each other. Bro. W. proceeded on to Mentibye, Gaindamah, Mosaru and several others of the appointments in connection with this station, whence he returned only on Tuesday noon the 8th inst and later on started overland for Shaingay, his boat unfortunately having been driven ashore and damaged through the carelessness of the boat men.

The Rev. D. F. Wilberforce is a worthy man! worthy of the U. B. C, worthy of the Union Biblical Seminary; his country and people! And most cordially do I endorse every wit of Mr. St. John's remarks about him in your issue of March 15.

Long may his life be spared, and prosperity attend his every step for "Country House and God"! It would indeed have been a boon to the work of the U. B. C. in this country if there were many more of his stamp forthcoming, but we are not without hope, as since his return from the States

The Purrow is now over, and our three boys who had been deceived away have paid us two visits and expect to return to school in short.

In a few more days and it will be five months since we were appointed to this charge. Though we have nevertheless no less sufficient reasons to be thankful this day by day we are more and more impressed, as Father Gomer told us, that the work is one of personal consecration and devotion.

We ask the prayers of all.

Yours in the Faith

J. ARTHUR RICHARDS.

Mr. Editor,—I am not do otherwise than expressing my sentiment on the aspect which the Shaingay Mission now assumes, True the need of a higher Education in this department has been long felt and discussed from time to time; and now it seems that God has in his own time made a way by which the problem is solved and that through the liberality of a Christian Lady in N. America. At first it seemed that the question had died a natural death, not knowing that God was making a way by which the sons and daughters of this country will receive a higher culture. With what earnestness do the youths look foward to the completion of that building as it is rapidly towering!

There must be the fullest development of the young minds so as to fit them for usefulness in life. With the feeling of appreciation and gratitude I crave the attention of the general public to the philanthropic efforts of Dr. D. K. Flickinger n.d. who is much interested that the boys and girls of this country be raised and elevated to such a standard as to rank others of civilized cities and countries in christianization and literature.

It is indeed a privilege now offered and worth embracing. I know and am conscious of the fact that there are many who were anxious for the establishment of such an Institution and who have been praying for it. In a word the building as it rises adds grace and dignity not only to the Sherbro country but more so to the Shaingay Mission Station.

APRIL 15, 1887.

THE COMMD'T OFF AGAIN TO THE GALLINAS.

Mr C. H. Harley Moseley Commandant of Sherbro returned from his sick leave to Freetown, by the s. s. Mandingue about the last of March, after a few days here, he left for Gallinas on Monday the 4th inst, and as we believe to look after the further perfecting of the peace arrangements lately entered into by the Chiefs of the Gallinas. We understand further that the work and journey undertaken is very difficult and that it will require three or four weeks to accomplish it. We can only hope that it may be successful, and that Mr. Moseley's health may be spared to accomplish it.

STEAM COMMUNICATION.

This subject has been stirred afresh by an Article that appeared in our issue of Mar. 15th, from the pen of "A Sierra Leonean" which Article despite the many obstacles that lie in the way of such a boon as a regular Steamer between this place and Freetown, has excited no small amount of interest, and though many of us have been so accustomed to Sherbro talk, that we have little hope of anything growing out of the proposal of the writer, and almost as little faith in the prospect of regular Steam communication between this place and Freetown. But we must still confess that the the interest taken by many persons in the article referred to; and the acknowledged need of such communication leads us to believe that it could be accomplished. Four to five hundred tons of freight per month, with the passengers available for a steamer, and the Mails with a subsidy of say £1,000 a year, "as was previously paid for carrying them, which is not too much —considering the large revenue of this place; in fact the inhabitants are entitled to receive every facility, and consideration from the Government in the matter; and some portion of the revenue derived from Sherbro should be expended on the place, instead of, as it is now, made the milch cow of Sierra Leone," ought to be sufficient for a paying business between this port and Freetown. There is annually about 15,000 tons of produce shipped from this port and surely there would be no difficulty in procuring the a bove quantity.

Of course the two Company's at present carrying the Mails along the coast, and whose steamers have occasionally to call at Sherbro, should work in connection with a Branch Steamer of a tonnage of say 200 to 250 tons plying weekly between Sherbro and Sierra Leone; and receive the cargo here to be transhipped from the Branch to the Main line steamers in Freetown Harbour for European ports; Bills of Lading for same signed here; Such an arrangement would be free from many of the objections heretofore raised against shipping produce in large quantities viz Freetown on account of the expense of transhipment. Passengers too could be graded, and have superior accommodation if they so desired as the vessel would be of ample size to provide the necessary space for their convenience.

Now as there is abundance of capital and plenty of steamers in Europe seeking investments and employment; We suggest that the trial of a Branch steamer in such connection with the regular line of steamers from Sierra Leone be made; hitherto owing to the irregularity of Steam Communication with this place most shippers have been unable to forward cargo to their correspondents in Europe, thereby causing them great inconvenience. By such a co-operation, we cannot see why a paying business could not be done. Moreover it would be the means of collecting a large quantity of produce for the Main line steamers, which they otherwise would not obtain. Of course every information connected with the steamers should be supplied by some one on the spot, this would facilitate shippers in getting their cargo ready for any of the weekly departures. Such additional cargo should be of great consideration to the Company, as we believe that for some time past most of the steamers have been going to England half full. If time permits, we hope to speak again on this line, meanwhile we shall be glad to hear from others on the subject.

EXPORT DUTY & CUSTOMS FEES.

Sierra Leone is, we believe the only portion of Her Majesty's Possessions paying Export Duties, and apart from the heavy burden entailed by this, Merchants are compelled to pay unnecessary Fees to officials for duty performed within business hours. If the officials are not already sufficiently paid, why not increase their salaries, and do away with a vexatious system of Fees so oppressive in its application.

What are our legislators doing; that this Subject should be postponed from June 1884.

"Sierra Leone Papers also please Copy."

The Editor of the "Early Dawn."

Dear Mr. Editor,—Can Sherbro rise from her state of lewd idiosyncrasies, when the people who inhabit it, or rather the majority are provoking every diurnal as well as nocturnal minute the spirit of God by their diabolical deeds—deeds not worth naming, but I am forced through their very frequent transactions to allow my pen to sorrowfully point out one of these evilly vile deeds—what should I call it—pshaw! pshaw!! pshaw!!! I must needs take refuge in the vernacular—Sam-sow-wah.

I really do agree with Mr. Anon in your last publication, for no sooner I read his communication, I fell into obstreperous cryes of sorrow. It will not be surprising if we one day assist in the fire and brimstone of Sodom and Gomorrah.

Thanking you for the space allowed me, I am Mr. Editor,
Yours sincerely

LETTER TO CHIEF SEYLOLO

Transmitting copies of Correspondence which passed between the HON. SAM LEWIS B. L., and The COLONIAL GOVERNMENT relative to the right of succession to the Rulership of Eastern Bargroo.

PUBLISHED BY REQUEST.

Oxford Street,
Freetown,
Mar. 19th 87.

Sir,

I Herewith enclose, you copy correspondence which passed between myself and the Government relative to your right of succession to the Rulership of the Eastern Bargroo Dist.

I am Sir, Yours truly,
(sign'd) Saml. Lewis

Chief Seylolo
Manoh Bargroo.

Oxford Street, Freetown
March 8th '87.

Sir,

On the 5th instant, I addressed a letter copy of which I herewith enclose on behalf of my client Seylolo, the present Chief of Manoh Bargroo, to the Civil Commandant of Sherbro, requesting to be informed of the decision of the Secretary of State as to the right to the Rulership of that District.

As owing to the absence of the Comm't from Sherbro through illness, it will probably be sometime before I may have a reply from him, and as I would like to inform my client who is now in town of the decision of the Government in the matter so that he may return to Sherbro at an early date, I would ask if you would be pleased to communicate to me the information which I desire to obtain from the Commandant of Sherbro.

I have the honour to be, Sir,
Your most obedient Servant
(signed) Saml. Lewis.
Solicitor for Seylolo.

The Hon. T. Risely Griffith
Colonial Secty. & Treasurer,
&c. &c. &c.

Oxford Street, Freetown,
March 5th 87.

Sir, On behalf of Seylolo the present Chief of Bargroo, who was appointed to act as such Chief pending His Excellency the Administrator in Chief's decision as to the right of succession to the Rulership of the District, I have to request that you will be so good as to inform me what decision has been arrived at by the Government.

I learn that in the course of a conversation which Mr. E. A. Lewis had with His Excellency the Administrator in Chief at Sherbro, His Excellency stated that the matter had been referred to the Secretary of state for the Colonies and that his decision had been communicated to you by the Colonial Secretary by His Excellency's command.

I ask for the information of the decision of the district and to ensure protection against insidious and conflicting claims it is desireable that that decision should be made generally known.

I have the honour to be, Sir,
Your most obedient Serv't
(signed) Saml. Lewis.
Solicitor for Chief Seylolo.

C. H. Harley Moseley Esq.
Civil Comdt., Sherbro.

Colonial Secretariat,
No. 150 Sierra Leone,
19th March 87.

Sir,

I am directed to acknowledge your letter of the 8th inst transmitting a copy of a letter you addressed to the Civil Commandant on the 5th instant in respect to the decison in regard to succession of the Rulership of Manoh Bargroo.

His Excellency the Administrator in Chief requests me to inform you that, that Capt. Daniel when acting as Civil Commandant and pending His Excellency's decision appointed Seylolo and Pean Karl to hear all little country palavers in the Eastern District, and that Captain Daniels action was approved by the Right Honourable the Secretary of State for the Colonies.

I have the honour to be, Sir,
Your most obedient Serv't,
(signed) T. Risely Griffith
Colonial Sec. & Treas.

Hon. S. Lewis B. L.
Freetown, Sra. Leone.

It is reported here this morning that war has destroyed some towns in the Kittam. That Queen Nyaroh is a prisoner—That Mr. Davies of the Customs Sulymah, had to seek safety in flight. That the Civil Cammandant has gone to Sulymah with a few men, of course we cannot tell whether further information will confirm this report.

FROM SHENGAY.

Mr. E. F. Hollist has recently returned from Waterloo, where he was married to Miss Maria Barrow, daughter of Mrs Thos. Tucker—they are a happy couple.

Regent Chief T. N. Caulker who had been spending some days at Bompehtooke in looking after the Purroh, has returned.

Mrs. Thompson of the Lesher School at Senehoo has opened a branch school at Cattah, in charge of her eldest daughter Miss Florence. Here is a fair specimen of female perseverance, she surely imbibes the spirit of her father Bishop Crowther; she has opened this very interesting little school purely on her own account, trusting in God for her pay, how very different from the average teacher whose 2nd question always is how much do you pay, may the God whom she trusts put it in the hearts of christians to send small or large contributions to help on this noble work.—Address Mrs Juliana Thompson, Lesher School, Shengay, W.C.A.

On the 5th inst. Remmie G. Caulker with his young American bride landed here. Both are full of zeal and anxious to be at work. They will reside in the Mission until the lady is acclimated. In the mean time Remmie will be on the look out for a position. His preference is for Mission work, Mrs. Caulker has a fair education, I have seen specimens of both her plain and fancy needle work, she would be the very person to teach girls. I would gladly employ them both if we only had the money to pay them. Mr. Caulker speaks Mendi, Sherbro and English fluently, this together with the zeal he has for the Mission work would make him a valuable acquisition to any Mission. J. G.

Mr. Willberforce and family have removed to Eastbourne's Grove their new residence.

Mr. Jasper Caulker of the Freetown Customs department accompanied Mr. & Mrs. Remmie Caulker from Feetown to Shaingay

Mr. & Mrs. Remmie Caulker are receiving many presents from his numerous relatives & friends. Mrs. Remmie's courteous manners wins the affections of all.

Dear Mr. Editor,

I feel it as a duty incumbent on me to express myself to your Readers and your worthy self, the feelings of my heart as touching the departure of our indefatigable Bishop The Rev. D.K. Flickinger, n.n. which took place on the 31st day of March or the last ult. We welcomed the glorious presence of this Venerable man on the 13th of December '86 and we were pleased to see him. To me Mr. Editor it is indeed a matter of grief for I have known him for the past 14 years and know that he has ever been a friend to me. I have witnessed his seventh arrival on these shores and I do not remember the time that he has left these shores without given me a present that will make a lasting impression on my mind. Yes! Dear Readers you might say that his kindness to me has awakened my conscience to pay a debt of gratitude. But I tell you no. Who has raised Shaingay from its savagery to its present civilized position? Flickinger. Who has given Shaingay the name that it now has as touching Christianity? Flickinger. To whom is due the praise for the education of that worthy man now appointed by the Home Board as Teacher and Principal of the Training School? Flickinger. There are too many acts of kindness done by this Noble Veteran which I cannot just now name. So,

Farewell our Dear Dear Bishop
Who now is on the Waves
May the kind hand of God Protect thee
And safely guide thee home.

Farewell oh! noble Veteran
We may no more thy kind face see
We may no more thy sweet words hear
Thy Fatherly Advices giving

Farewell oh! thou noble man
Who has borne it on sea and land
Who has fought through Affliction
Africa to civilize.

Thanking you Mr. Editor for the space allowed me in your valuable Journal. I am, Yours.

OUR INFLUENCE.

Dear Mr Editor.—Influence is a word in common use, the import once of which is seldom considered. My object in this article is not to show the vastness of its importance, for that would fill volumes, but to show that none are so situated in God's world, but that he exerts a wonderful influence for good or evil. I have heard it often said by well meaning men, "I am my own master I can do as I like." True it is that God our all wise Creator has made us free moral Agents, and that we can do as we like. But after we have done it, it is beyond our power to change what influence such course of action should exert on society. Sin as well as righteousness is of a very prolific nature. Viewing ourselves as centres from whence proceed an ever-radiating influence for good or evil, and taking a retrospective as well as a prospective view of our lives from the moment we first entered this world. If we are honest at all as men, floods of penitential grief will burst from every eye, which may be an earnest of self-condemnation to God, and we will labor earnestly to counteract the onward current of evil influences which we have set agoing, by stopping to ask ourselves the question at each stage of action. What influence will it exert on society? We are all dependent one on another as the links of a chain, and that link interdependent on us for as it relates to the human family is part of an original plan is obvious. Was the ques tion once put to Cain, to be put to most of us, whether living among loved ones at home or among the untutored and ignorant.

"Where is thy brother?" I presume in the event of our dwelling to answer, our course of action if animated, will readily return that selfish answer, "Am I my brother's keeper?" God is wise who has created one man as the common father of mankind. It is easy for Him to create each man in the Universe as He created Adam, But then our selfishness would have forbidden us to form a Society and if your readers will allow the use of a Sherbro word the world itself would have been too small to contain the Fa k l s s of individuals, It is an immutable principle in man to imitate the object of his admiration. This has been sadly transformed into one of the greatest barriers to the evangelization of the world and rencers the work of the Missionary many times more discouraging than it naturally would have been. I am the fruit of Missionary labor and as much as lieth in me I will patiently preach the Gospel to my own brethren who are still in the dark. But it always sounds awkward in my ears as now and again my dear heathen brethren, as well as Sierra Leoneans who fell in argument to produce a license from the Book of God to deal in the accursed drink traffic and using it as a beverage, they summarily send me off to America to first convert the rum manufacturers there. I cannot go, but I can pray for God's blessings on the arrows that are being sent forth unceasingly from the columns of the good old Telescope, Christian Herald and our own dear Early Dawn and other periodicals which cannot come on compromising terms with the unfruitful works of darkness but would rather reprove them. I cannot go but these, can go. Am I exerting an influence for good or evil? Should be a daily question. We are all sowing seeds now. But what! oh what shall the harvest be? John Caulker the mohammedan tried to extinguish the gospel fire kindled at Shengay many years ago but totally failed, and finally got into trouble with his accomplice. The Forgiving Slave.

A slave in the West Indies was raised by his master to a situation of some consequence in the management of his estate on account of his integrity and good conduct. On one occasion, wishing to purchase twenty additional slaves, he employed him to make the selection. The man went to the slave market and commence his scrutiny. He had not long surveyed the multitude offered for sale before he fixed his eye upon an old and decrepit slave, and told his master that he must be one.

The master was greatly surprised at his choice, and remonstrated against it. The poor fellow begged that he might be indulged, when the dealer remarked that if they were about to buy twenty he would give them the old man with the bargain. The purchase was made, and the slaves were conveyed to the plantation of their master: but upon none did the selector bestow half the attention and care he did upon the poor old African. Astonished at the attention this slave bestowed upon a fellow slave, his master questioned him on the subject.

"You could not take so much interest in the old man unless he were a relation: perhaps he is your father!" "No, massa" answered the poor fellow; "he no my father." "He is, then, an elder brother!" "No, massa: he no my brother." "Then he is an uncle, or some other relation?" "No massa: he no be my kindred at all, or even my friend." "Then," asked his master, "on what account does he excite your interest?" "He is my enemy, massa," replied the slave. "He sold me to the slave dealer; and my Bible tell me to forgive my enemy, and when he hunger feed him, and when he thrist give him drink. Sel.

THE DEATH OF NERO.

DR. FARRAR says: There is no need to dwell on the miserable spectacle of his end, perhaps the meanest and most pusillanimous which has ever been recorded. The poor wretch who, without a pang, had caused so many brave Romans and so many innocent Chrstians to be murdered, could not summon up resolution to die. He devised every operatic incident of which he could think. When even his most degraded Slaves urged him to have sufficient manliness to save himself from the fearful infamies which otherwise awaited him, he odered his grave to be dug, and fragments of marble to be collected for its adornment, and water and wood for his funeral pyre, perpetually whining, "What an artist to perish!" Meanwhile a courier arrived from Phaon. Nero snatched his dispatches out of his hand, and read that the Senate had decided that he should be punished in the ancestral fashion as a public enemy. Asking what the ancestral fashion was, he was informed that he would be stripped naked and scourged to death with rods, with his head thrust into a fork. Horrified at this, he seized two daggers, and after theatrically trying their edges, sheathed them again, with the excuse that the fatal moment had not yet arrived! Then he made Sporus begin to sing his funeral song, and begged some one to show him how to die. Even his own intense shame at his cowardice was an insufficent stimulus, and he wiled away the time in vapid epigrams and pompous quotations. The sound of horses' hoofs then broke on his ears, and venting one more Greek quotation he held a dagger to his throat. It was driven home by Epaphroditus, one of his literary slaves. At this moment the centurion who came to arrest him rushed in. Nero was not yet dead, and, under pretence of helping him, the centurion began to staunch the wound with his cloak "Too late," he said; "is this fidelity?" So he died, and the bystanders were horrified with the way in which his eyes seemed to be starting out of his head in a rigid stare. He had begged that his body might be buried without posthmous insults, and this was conceded by Icelus, the freedman of Galba. So died the last of the Cæsars! Sel.

PROVIDENTIAL LEADING.

Mr. Editor,—The leadings of Providence are so manifest, in the Mission work which the United Brethren is doing in Africa, that this should be a source of great encouragement both to the Board in America, and to Missionaries on the field.

It was a marked providence which gave us our first Mission Station near Shengay, though this was not obtained until a second company of Missionaries sent from America landed, two years after the first reached Africa. Equally so that the first Mr Williams felt it his duty to resign a position as first clerk, which paid him more money than he received while he labored for us, though for several years he was the only Missionary at Shengay during our Civil war. The manner of Mr. T. Tucker's coming to the Mission, and his conversion from heathenism, as well as the long years of service he rendered as Brethren, and Missionary, as well as the conversion of the Chief, who gave us the Mission Ground at Shengay, in old age, and but a few months before his death; the circumstances which led to the saving the name of Daniel Flickinger Wunderboree to him, when but a few hours old, and which took him to America, when fourteen years old, and kept him there until he graduated from Dayton City High School and got him a wife when he was about 21 years of age, the pending events connected with Mr. & Mrs Billheimer's valuable services in Africa, and afterward Mr. and Mrs Hadley & Mr. Evans, and not the least to be mentioned Mr. and Mrs Haines, and Mr. Evans again with a wife and later Mr. & Mrs Sage, & Mr. and Mrs Lesher, and still later Mr. Lesher again this time without a wife and to sanctified building of Training [illegible] Africa and [illegible] coming, and enhearing shows conclusively providential guidance

The location of the Bonthe mission by the Women's Missionary Society, of our Church, about 60 miles on the one side of it, were not accidental, but provident tial occurrences.

The late gift of $5000 from mr. & mrs Clark of Denver Colorado, and the peculiar concumstances which lead to the location of the much needed school at Shengay, to be known as the Theological Training School, are striking illustrations of providential interposition. And now that the building is completed, and the school is soon to be commenced let the efforts be to induce such men and women to enter it, as God can use for the advancement of the cause in Africa. Let much prayer ascend to God for success in every department of our work.

D. K. Flickinger.

WHAT IS TO BE DONE.

Dear Mr. Editor—Permit me a space through the medium of your journal, that I may without any reluctance, as one who is concerned in the welfare of Sherbro rivers, to give you and your readers, an immediate information of the prevailing evils, which tends to debar Sherbro's future progress by Chief Mackiah of Sargan in the Mendi District.

Information reached me two days ago, that this above named chief, has been and is still receiving up to date, a good sum of money from the Government chest, with hopes of assisting the Government in keeping the country quiet and peaceful. Not knowing that the very money which chief generally receives is what he is taking to put the the country into uproar. A messenger (Police Corporal) who was ordered to him by the Administrator-in-Chief, whilst on his way from Pujeboo to Lagor, heard, that a gang of War boys, from Mackiah were passing the bush to besege Mannee (viz Bandasuma) with the intent to destroy Bandasuma town, in revenge of Corbah and Torco Gekeh's (his warriors,) which the Governor has given him all necessary ammunition for shooting him, that it is Corbah's own hands that bought his death (although he himself is very sorry for it) notwithstanding all the necessary satisfactions and reasons given to this Mackiah by the Governor, which he said he agreed to, not knowing, that he is a wolf in sheep's clothing, saying one thing and meaning another. His wars are now destroying towns in the Sulymah District. From information just received Bandasuma is taken, and that Queen Nyarroh is taken captive with many other people; no doubt the poor woman will be killed. This Bandasuma is the town which the Governor had sai l, that no war is to disturb, and all the chiefs had agreed to. I tell you Mr. E. there is no little consternation around the Districts of Sulymah and Lavansh. We do not know what the Authorities will do with this Mackiah who sent out such wars after promising faithfully the Governor that he will not carry out any war. From what my informer told me if Mackiah is not taken or removed from that country, there will not be peace in the country. "He is the most provoking and deceiving man I ever heard of, and he is in a strong house with [illegible] [illegible] wicked designs. I hope that the Authorities will at once put a stop to this, by showing those people who they are, for these Mendi people have never yet seen the English power. Meanwhile I stop to see what steps the Authorities will adopt in this wicked and most treacherous acts of this two-faced and doubled-tongued Chief. Thanking you for space occupied.

Yours much interested,

Sherbro, A. E. C.
14th April, '87.

To the Editor of the Early Dawn.

"Against the head which innocence secures"
"Insidious malice aims her dart in vain."

Sir, The expectation of the public which had waited with anxiety for the decision of the Government in the matter of the dethronement of Conah Cambeh by Captain Daniel (when acting as Civil Commandant of Sherbro, and the appointment of Seyolo and Pah Karl to act pending His Excellency thy Administrator-in-Chief's decision) will now be realized when I intimate that Correspondence on the subject now in the possession of Seyolo, is I understand to be forwarded for publication in the columns of your valuable Paper. I hope this will be done without delay.

You will remember that sometime in July last, certain correspondence appeared in your esteemed Journal in reference to this matter, which was then rumoured, was referred to the Secretary of State for the Colonies, and that his decision had been communicated to the Authorities in Sherbro five months ago.

Since this new appointment was made by Captain Daniel, many have been the machinations of some ill-disposed persons to worry the inhabitants of the little District by false rumour, threatings of war, and lawless and disputable claims. We may therefore no doubt justly ask the question, [illegible] Secretary of State been publicly made known, especially to the inhabitants of that District, in order to ensure peace, quietness and satisfaction?

I am informed that in connection with this decision of the Government, there was embodied in that Despatch an important question as to whether the Authorities here considered any steps could be taken to punish the writers of the fictitious letters by which the late Mr. Laborde appears to have been deceived into pleasing Conah Cambeh in authority in Eastern Bargroo; and that no reply up to date, as yet hath given to that enquiry, and that it has been treated as a waste paper.

1. May I ask what could be the object of this silence?

2. Was it to shield somebody as has been surmished by some?

You may perhaps Mr. Editor be able to enlighten the public on these points.

Seyolo who had passed through many ordeals of criticism, and been falsely and maliciously represented as "having not a follower in the country," will now be seen by the public as recognized by the British Governm'nt as the right successor to the Rulership of Eastern Bargroo.

Thanks to the right Honorable the Secretary of State who has given to a poor man his rights.

To the untiring energy and zeal of the late seting Civil Commandant Captain A. North Daniel who was well known, has shown similar wisdom on the Gold Coast, during his tenure of office as Commissioner &c. of Cape Coast &c., it must be admitted that the highest commendation is due him. He has shown himself not a novice in political matters, and to have depended on his own judgment in the discharge of his duties.

Thanking you for space already occupied, and with hopes of hearing from me again.

I am, Yours truly, CÆSAR

CHARACTER.

It is not said that character will develop in all its fullness here. That were a time too short for an evolution so magnificent. In this world only the coarsest ear is seen; sometimes only the small yet prophetic blade. The sneer at the godly man for his imperfections is ill-judged. A blade is a small thing. At first it grows very near the earth. It is often soiled and crushed and down trodden. But it is a living thing. That great dead stone beside it is more imposing, only it will never be any thing else than a stone But this small blade—it doth not yet appear what it shall be.—Sel.

BONTHE, SHERBRO.
APRIL 30, 1887.

Unfortunately, perhaps we may say, we had gone to press the day before "The alarm of War," in the Kittam, was sounded from the Government Quarters, in this place at 11 p. m., or nearly midnight; and the next morning information, of an exciting nature poured in from every Quarter; but we could only then, by the hardest, crowd into columns, by taking out other matter, a very short notice of the "Recommencement of Hostilities in the Gallinas, hence we have given space in this issue to some papers relating to the affair that should have appeared before; we do this that our readers may have an idea, from the pens of those on the ground, of what kind of feelings were experienced in the rivers, by this sudden out-burst of savage wrath; as the unexpected upheaval some subterranean fire, or Opening of a Volcano, it came upon all in those regions who were peaceably disposed; and were feeling confident that peace was about settled. It is no wonder that one of our correspondents above refered to headed his paper "WHAT IS TO BE DONE?" and truly what is to be done for the assurance of peace in the rivers; it certainly seems that it must be something differing from the policy of the past, that of holding peace meetings, giving presents, and Breaking down stockades—for it must be very evident now that the present raid could not have progressed so rapidly or perhaps extended so far in its ruinous work had the stockades in its course not have been previously broken down.

STEAMERS BETWEEN N. YORK & FREETOWN.

It hardly seems possible that such a thing could be; and yet we have information from reliable sources that the celebrated Firm of Messrs F.& A. Swanzy, for so many years established on the Gold Coast and who are probably the oldest Firm doing Business on the West coast of Africa; are about extending their business northward, and in so doing will immediately commence operation in Freetown under the management of our esteemed friend Mr. T. J. Alldridge, in the American Trade which we understand they purpose working by means of fast steamers direct from N. York. We hear further that this renowned Firm has rented the fine corner premises in Oxford and Howe Streets Freetown belonging to the Hon'ble S. Lewis B L. and that Mr. Alldridge would leave England by the mail of the 16th instant. The first cargo which will comprise an unusually fine selection of choice American Goods is expected to arrive at Sierra Leone early in the month of June next. In view of the fact of the ever increasing demand for American Goods of almost all descriptions on this coast. It does seem that Messrs Swanzy have hit upon the right idea of importing the same by steamers instead of the old slow plodding sailing Craft which have often been from 20 to 30 days behind time in arriving, which has made the Trade very difficult and unsteady in past years but now we may hope for a regular and constant supply of American Wares and in greater variety than ever before.

DISTURBANCES IN THE SULYMAH DISTRICT.

VISIT OF THE COMMANDANT.

The Civil Commandant of Sherbro, C. H Hatley Moseley Esquire, is on the eve of gaining distinction in addition to the unbounded thanks of the people as an efficient public officer. Being specially favoured by fortune an opportunity is now afforded him of earning a Medal as the reward of timely and effective action in the Sulymah District in checking the progress of a public calamity and affording security to life and property.

On the 7th of March, in obedience to instructions received from Head Quarters the Civil Commandant left Bonthe on a peace mission to the Kittam, Gallinas, Gbemna and Barrie countries attended by a staff of Police Constables and Boatmen sufficient to ensure respect. Mr. S. W. Adams assistant clerk, an officer specially gifted by nature as a scribe, was also in the staff The journey to and fro was calculated to occupy six weeks all being well.

Having been conveyed as far as Lavanah with the aid of the Senegal Company's steam launch, the Civil Commandant on the 6th began his overland journey up country all being well on the sea coast. For sometime past there had been discontent and occasional overt acts of lawlessness among our newly registered friends the Treaty Chiefs of those regions, and it was foreseen by those who study native politics that matters were getting ripe for a second outbreak in those distracted countries, the inhabitants of which were more or less in a prostrate condition as the effect of the first outbreak which was healed up in May 1885 at Lavanah by the Queen's officer His Excellency Sir Samuel Rowe, K.C.M.G.

It was on the 10th while the Civil Commandant, leaving Pugehoo, was on his way to Largoh the stronghold of the warrior Chief Mackayah, that the first intelligence reached him of an outbreak in the country that, that Mackyah's war boys had overrun the towns on the Sulymah River taking advantage of their defenceless state, that all the towns in the neighbourhood were already deserted and that the war seat was at Mannee. The Civil Commandant continued his march, determined to see Mackyah and personally learn the facts of the case so as to be able to report definitely on the details of the situation. While on the march further intelligence reached him that Chief Darwah's war boys were let loose by their master and that Bandasuma the town of Queen Nyarroh was already in their hands. The situation was growing serious. If the disturbance resulted from action on the part of the notorious war chiefs who for years had plagued the country an paralysed innocent trade in spite of repeated protests by the Government prudence would dictate immediate return to the coast to report to Head Quarters as hastily as circumstances, permitted the state of affairs. This the Civil Commandant resolved on. Retracing his steps with his handful of men, (including only 6 Police constables) the party reached Mesmah late in the evening. At midnight a third messenger arrived with more serious reports. Official information was received stating that Sulymah within the Settlement, the principal Government Station in that District, had been visited by the war party, that the few officers on the spot were powerless to resist the marauders and that the other stations were threatened. Losing no time the Civil Commandant called out his men in proper military fashion and after reviewing the whole led the party from Mesmah and by a rapid march reached Lavanah at 4 in the morning. The occasion called for immediate display of tact and judgment and decision, and the energetic Civil Commandant was equal to it. Lavanah was safe but the excitement was intense, the place being crowded by refuges from the disturbed localities. Our officer in charge of Sulymah being among the number. Hastily collecting a force made of about Thirteen Constables fully armed, and of Boatmen and labourers in old fashion malitia-jackets with short swords, each man breathing determination and prepared for the worst, the whole presenting an imposing force, sufficiently formidable to disperse the undisciplined plunderers, the Civil Commandant commenced his grand march to the relief of Sulymah and the adjacent stations. Time would fail to describe the order in which the march was conducted, how the Civil Commandant was carried in his hammock armed to the teeth with leggings and boots becoming a General. The wings of his little army as well as the front and rear ranks so arranged as to impress a beholder with the thought that the occasion makes the man. Cheered at frequent intervals by parties of refugees during the march the relieving party arrived at Sulymah at 10 p.m. on the 13th inst. With admirable talent for Organization and management the Civil Commandant set to work and in less than two days having been reinforced by 20 men under Sub Inspector Betts cleared the war boys from the Settlement, strengthened the stations of Sulymah, Manoh Salijah and the French Factory, saved as many lives as were in danger as well as property to the value of £23,000

In the mean time the S.S. Icarus man of war arrived affording further means of defence which also was duly utilized by the energetic Commandant.

The next step we are told will be the pursuit of the marauders to their very strong holds with a view to capture and punishment as well as the entire demolition of those barracades within which for long years hitherto lawlessness and outrages have been planned and fostered and which year by year have sent out armies of "ragged rascals" to the detriment of commerce in the Gallinas and neighbouring countries.

To be Continued.

We have received the following Letter from Rev. J. W. Hott D.D., Editor of the "Religious Telescope," Dayton, Ohio, U.S.A., together with the donation to our Work by the friends and Brethren of Edenburg Circuit Va. Conference for which we express our most heartfelt thanks to Dr. Hott, Rev. J. E. Hott, and the friends of Edenburg Circuit, may the Lord bless them all.

DAYTON, OHIO,
Mar. 19, '87.

Rev. J. A. Evans,

Dear Brother; Your Contributions have come to us for the Telescope from time to time, also your letter to Va. Conf. It was read to the Conference, and he as signed you are enrolled in the heart of these brethren. By the Telescope you will have learned that the freedmens Mission did well last year. The preacher, Brother Clifford was received into conference.

While at va. conf. I recieved, from friends on Edenburg circuit va. conf. Though Rev J. E. Hott of Stephens city Frederick Co. va. $11. 50 which was to be sent to you direct for the support of your work I have bought a postal order on London payable to you, which I enclose. I presume you can get it cashed the same as a draft. Will you acknowledge its receipt to Rev J. E. Hott, as stated above. If you can not get it cashed there is Bishop Fleckinger can do so in London there is no postal arrangements with Africa, for postal orders, so I buy on London.

Bear my kind regards to your family. Al so to the Brethren in Africa who know me. God bless you all, and bless your work more and more.

Your Brother,
J. W. HOTT.

Revd J. M. Lesher of the Shaingay Mission, who arrived on the coast early in December last; for the purpose, of erecting the Rufus Clark Training School Building, at Shaingay, has we believe completed the work that he came out to do and will shortly leave the coast first for England and thence go to Germany where he may spend a short time and after attending the Annual meeting in that country will proceed to America; we must confess that although Bro Lesher, has finished his work among us for the present; yet we feel sorry to part with him even though we are sure he will do good work for the African Mission at home and may yet return to us again.

ADVERTISING BUSINESS.

Men of any importance in the commercial world must have realized the large advantage of advertising their business and keeping it constantly before the public, in other lands; but it is not considered worth while by many leading men of Business in this part of Africa because it is usually thought that people do not read enough in the papers to be benefited by it; and really the absence of these very advertisements is one reason for their not reading the papers; let men but once awake from their slumbers on this subject and place their Business before the public and let our various Journals carry with them information of Local Business of all descriptions and then many more will read. These notices should not at all times be so much in detail as many have imagined but should be in good clear Type and variously arranged to attract the attention. If a man has a Trade he ought to make a business of that Trade and advertise it let somebody, yes let the public know that he wants work and just where to find him. And if there is any work to be done in his line he will get it.

IDLENESS.

Dear Mr. Editor,—If there is anything in this world which tends to make a man unfit for society, a reproach to his neighbours, a nuisance to the public is "Idleness." We have six days in the week before us to earn our livelihood, and to do such work that may tend to promote our families' welfare and happiness; but alas! how many there are around us, who would be seen the whole week, day after day from house to house, recklessly spending their time in slandering and saying everything detamatory of their fellow creatures. Truly it is said that "idleness is the parent of many vices;" for if the hands were usefully and busily employed, there would be no spare time for gossiping and slandering. This world is a busy world and we are made to work; consequently our first parent Adam was not idle, but was placed in the garden to dress and to keep it; whose industrious example we his children are to imitate, and to improve every moment.

"Hands were made for honest labor,
Not to plunder or to steal."

Mr. Editor how pitiable to see, that a man who carries about him a mother, a wife, children etc., despite of the many cares and responsibilities that he has daily to encounter with, would not seek for employment, nor pursue vigorously the professions he follows, but busily roving about in the street to attend closely to every one's business except his own; he knows all the stories of all the families that live in the town; a legal adviser, a brawler, an intermeddler, a futile band of the, house etc; and cares not to procure his family's bread and his; and thus every day he be bustles through his multifarious idleness. "Empty vessels make much noise."

No wonder times are hard with us, many shattered homes and constant complaining, in our streets; for notwithstanding we may be the door keepers, or the very first to be in God's House every morning, yet if we are indolent, haughty and loose, we are sure to suffer privations, and the devil must make instrument of us. "To be sorely pressed down with adversity has nothing in it of disgrace; but it is disgraceful to lie under it like a supple dog. "Seest thou a man diligent in his business he shall stand before kings, he shall not stand before mean men."

It would be endless to describe the miles of idleness; therefore let us be up and doing, and not be tittle-tattling day after day, but attend carefully to the profession we follow, thereby we shall be enabled to support family and to do every thing that ries in our power, for the furtherance of the gospel.

Many thanks Mr. Editor for the space I have occupied.

PRIDY'S EYE.

Since there are so many Criticisms on Shaingay Mission and as Mr Pridy has so many friends I think is but just to the Mission, that I explain our side. Mr Pridy with other masons, was engaged by Rev J. M. Lesher Nov 16th 1886 and he received advance of £1. 10. but on account of a death in the family, he never set to work until Dec 30th when the engagement was made. Mr Lesher asked me to explain to them the Mission rules which I did, the 7th item in our rules reads as follows any person in the employ of the mission convicted of fighting, stealing or getting drunk, or of having in their possession intoxicating liquors shall forfeit their situation and whatever pay may be due them, all of this I explained to all of them and at the mission these printed rules are posted in several public places the day before Mr Priddy left Freetown for Shaingay he received from Bishop Flickinger one pound more advance making an advance of £2. 10. before he struck a lick of work. It was on the 8th of January that a traders boat landed at the Mission wharf I was told that the masons bought two cases of grog, that night between 8 and 11 o'clock the Masons assisted by one carpenter, attacked the old watch-man, over 60 years of age and took his gun from him, the report was carried to Mr Lesher who ordered them to their quarters on pain of being fined some left but later four of them attacked the old man again and in defending himself he hit Pridy over the eye with a cane with a lead head, there are several persons that saw the affair that say the masons were drunk. I did not see them. If they were not drunk why should they attack a harmless old man, that never troubled any one, after taking his gun from him why should they, four strong young men attempt to beat this old man? as soon as Pridy was hit he withdrew, but his eye was ruined. The next morning this poor old man whose only crime was that he was an old American that would not give a rout of Mission Cassada to save ones life was promptly arrested by the Police from Shaingay, he was taken to Shaingay and tied with his hands behind him around a post, his hat taken from his head, and it took good argument to get the Coporal to loose the old man from the post and allow him to go inside a hut. Jan 7th, the prisoner and the wounded man with two Constables were started to Freetown I took them in a Mission boat. On the 11th the case was called in the Police Court, Mr. Pridy could not be present as he was suffering from his eye, the Doctor had operated on it, the case was put for Feb. 11th. A couple of Merchants kindly went the old mans bail, I took him back to Shaingay this trip took me six full days it cost the society (not counting my salary) three pounds twelve shillings, or as we Americans would say $17 24. Feb 9th I started for Freetown again with the prisoner the case was called on the 11th Mr Pridy was the only witness called though we had taken in 8. The Magistrate saw through the matter and at once dismised the case. This trip for boat and hands witnesses and fees cost the Mission £9. 5., not counting my time. Total cost to the Mission of £12 17. or $61. 00, besides a balance due from Priddy £1. 4. 0. and yet we hear people say "what a shame that those American Missionaries should make that man lose his eye and give him nothing, another said we shall see now how much sympathy these American Missionaries have?" After the case had been dismissed, Mr. Pridy sent Mr. Emery a lawyers letter threatening to prosecute him for the loss of his eye, but he has not done so, these are the facts, if the Mission has done wrong in any way the Lord must be our judge: My only regret is that we were compelled to waste so much time and money.

A GRAND SERMON.

Dear Editor.—I am moved to communicate you in consequence of the elaborate, powerful, insuctive and well-got-up sermon preached yestterday, (Easter morning) by the Rev. D. F. Wilberforce. The morning was bright and the sun shone in colors of brilliant lustre which pedicted a fine day. The Chapel was crowded by natives and Sierra Leoneans. After the the preliminary services were over the revd. gentleman announced his text. The very manner in which he began made me to listen with markel attention. I admired him as he was bursting forth in the choicest language the arguments in favor of the necessity, and possibility of the resurrection of Christ. His thrilling voice penetrated through every board, and kept those who are usually asleep awake, I cannot help but make a frank acknowledgement that the gentleman possesses a talented mind, and he is full of eloquence as I looked aroqnu the aspect that the congregation assumed, substantiated the fact that each one was interested. I believe that each individual went home satisfied "It is not in vain to be found waiting upon the Lord." The long and short of it, is the Rev. gentleman deserves praise.

I remain Dear Editor,
Sincerely yours,
A WATCHMAN.

MARCH QUARTER 1887.

At the commencement of the Quarter, the Devil went to work with renewed efforts and so far cast a gloom over the general future of the work. We were not without our doubts and fears. Yet He who has said "I will never leave thee nor forsake thee" "I am with you alway even unto the end of the world" has verified His promises to us and before the middle of the quarter all gloom was wiped away and we found out that the clouds we so much dreaded were big with mercy.

THE WEATHER EARLY RAINS.

Hot and chilly weather with wind high at times seems be the order of things for the present on the weather line. One day we have sun and heat the next is a blue windy day and then the sky is over cast with cold gloomy appearing clouds with showers and even heavy rains in Bonthe and the Delta of the Gbangroo. These rains seem to every one very early indeed and some say they are ominous but really we can hardly regard them as omens for indeed they seem to be causative and will undoubtedly be followed by effects which must prove detrimental to the country farmer who has either cut his bush or is cutting it. As it seems some have not yet finished.

THE CHURCH ANNIVERSARY.

It was our great pleasure to attend the St. Matthew's P. E. Church; on the evening of the 25th inst., when an Anniversary of the Sierra Leone Native Pastorate & Church Missions held their Public Meeting, presided over by Mr. G. H. Garrett Sub-Treasurer & Collector, in the most able, christian-like and satisfactory manner, his remarks were of the most appropriate kind, he is a gentleman in every way gifted as a Chairman of a religious meeting. As we publish in this issue a full report of the proceedings, we need not go into detail, but may only remark, that the meeting was in every particular a success, and that while all the speakers spoke well, yet the Rev. O. Moore of the Grammar School, Freetown, and Mr. C.B. Collier Merchant of this place excelled.

Dear Mr. Editor.

On Sunday the 24th inst., two interesting Sermons were preached at St. Matthew's Church on behalf of the Sierra Leone Native Pastorate and Church Missions:—

The sermon in the morning was preached by Mr. M. D. Pasha the Catechist. He selected his text from Prov. xi 11 25. "The liberal soul shall be made fat &c." The old gentleman did not fail to handle the subject as it deserves, He pointed the necessity of those who are possessed with the world's goods, to show their liberality by supporting the preaching of the everlasting Gospel of Peace, and that he who extends his liberality to the relief of his fellow-man will be more prosperous in all his undertakings. He further reminds us not to limit the bounds of our liberality. He referred to the history of Joseph, how his liberality saved his family from perishing with hunger, and that he exercised a feeling of unbecoming benevolence towards even those who had ill-treated him. The Preacher divided his subject into three parts:—1st, Liberality. 2nd The blessings flow from it, and 3rd The lesson it inculcates.

After doing justice to his sub-division he invited the congregation by his powerful eloquence and oratorical powers to the necessity of supporting these two institutions, as they directly concern us, and should not look to foreign agency for support; that the Church is a national Church, a negro Church. He also points out the dark shades, and over hang the Church at the present moment in a pecuniary point of view.

The old gentleman did not fail to amuse the congregation by displaying some of his lexicographic powers during his discourse.

In the evening of the same day, the pulpit was occupied by Mr. C.S. Brown (scenior) Catechist of Bendoo, who selected his text from St. John's Gospel x. chap. 16 verse. "Other sheep have I which are not of this fold, them also I must bring &c." This gentleman after making some observations about his absence from this place for 21 months and the progress made &c. &c. he called the attention of the congregation to the fact that the duty of bringing the natives adjacent to this place and Freetown to the saving knowledge of the gospel is not on us who have received similar advantages from the Europeans &c. &c. and he hasten the time when war shall cease in all the lands, and when the borders of the Kittim, Boom, Gallinas, Krim, and other places shall be filled with the knowledge and Glory of God as the waters cover the sea.

The public meeting in connection with the above took place on Monday evening the 25th at 7 o'clock. The Chair was occupied by G. H. Garrett Esq. Sub-Collector & Treasurer. On the platform were Revds. G.G.M. Nicol, J. A. Evans, (U.B.C.) Mission W. D. Pasha, C. S. Brown, (Catechists) Wm. Hughes, J. D. Macauley, W. B. Coker, E.W. Parkinson. After singing a Hymn Prayer was offered by the pastor G.G.M. Nicol.—Mr. Pasha read the lesson from Philippian 1st. chap. After which Hymn No. 106 was sing. The Pastor having made some remarks about his failing health &c. introduced G.H.G. as Chairman for the meeting.

The Chairman made some very appropriate remarks, and called on Mr. Pasha to read the list of subscriptions which were as follo?s:—Bonthe £111 9s 4d.—Bendoo 14/ 12s. 7d. Victoria 9/ 15s. 9d. New Year's Thank Offering £17 3s. 4d After reading the list the following gentlemen addressed the meeting. Revs. J. A. Evans, O. Moore, Messrs J. D. Macauley, W. Hughes, W. B. Coker, E. W. Parkinson, C. B. Collier. Vote of thanks to the Chairman was moved by Mr. Brown and seconded by Mr. Pasha and unanimously carried after the Chairman's closing remarks. Meeting closed at 10 p.m.

JUSTITIA

Bonthe,
April 26th, 1887.

Mr. Editor, Sir.—Please insert this for the public benefit, as well as for the information of our Government, that unless shrewder and more prudent steps be taken by them all efforts to bring the Kittam and Gallinas District to a state of peace will prove abortive.

Our Government are not yet quite up to the double dealings and deceitfulness of the Mendi and Gallinas tribes; for when our Government acted on one side, and yet they would assure our Government and make them to believe that they are really what they are. It is a fact admissible by all that these natives are a deceitful race of beings. Terms of Treaties, and Stipends allowed them are only a farce. The stipends allowed them 'tantamounts to our Government furnishing them with swords and implement of War, to disturb, molest, and kill individuals located in the jurisdiction of our Queen; and it is no wonder that some of Her Majesty's representative may one day fall a victim to their swords, after having received a stipend to purchase or "Buy War" from the interior.

You may hear from me again Mr Editor. I am yours truly.

RECOMMENCEMENT

OF HOSTILITIES IN THE RIVERS.

We have (this day) received information that war has again broken out in the Rivers. Makayah who has been some time in negotiation with the Looboo tribe for the purpose of purchasing war, had sent, it is said, 9 slave monies to the king Naloh for that purpose. The war has been despatched in two directions, one on Bandajumah and the other, it is said, on Gbannah Gomboo's town this party to run down as far as Topan, kong Makoorah's town.

We also learn that two constables whilst on their way to perform duty in the interior met with one war party (we are not told in which direction) and were pursued, they at first took to their heels, but after runing a short distance they right about and met their pursuers with a few shots from their rifles which had the effect of dispersing them; they were then able to reach the nearest town for concealment. It is said that some lives were lost on the part of pursuers.

As this Makayah is one of Makafooreh's men, the king of Tikonkoh should be held responsible for his good conduct, and be made to understand that what is said is meant. These people still cling to the idea that our governm't can do them nothing so long as they ke'p from the water's edge. This outbreak may have the effect of driving trade from the gallinas and Kittam river towards Hootkan.

The following account referring to Mr. J. A. Cole, Author of the Revelation of the Secret Orders of Western Africa appeared in the Richmond Daily [illegible] We republish the same for the information of our readers.

PROFESSOR J. AUGUSTUS COLE.

And His Wonderful Lecture on Africa and the Negro Race.

Last evening before a crowded audience in the Wesleyan Methodist Church, of this place, Prof. J. Agustus Cole, a pure Negro native of Western Africa, and a man of extraordinary ability, delivered a lecture on the above subject, and held the assembly spell-bound for nearly two hours.

The meeting was opened by singing and prayer, by the Rev S. M Smothers, who introduced the Negro scholar, five feet high, a robust figure, of a dark olive color, and large bright, large and intelligent eyes. Professor Cole, after testifying to the audience his knowledge of the classics, by reading and translating audibly a chapter in Hebrew, taken from Genesis, a chapter in Greek from Luke's gospel, and Latin from Harkness's Latin book, at the special request of the promoters of the lecture, led the audience into the field of theology, and proved the origin of idolatry, and then unconsciously drew them away into ethnology, by which he proved that the Egyptians are Negroes, and that the continent of Africa belongs only to the Negro race and those who are not Negroes in Africa are Fellahas or foreigners.

The Professor in a very learned way proved that the Negro race is destined to [illegible] possession of and to rule their country until the end of time. This he did by explaining the meaning of the names of the fathers of the three races of mankind—Shem Ham and Japheth.

He first asserted and proved that ancient names were prophetic. Shem means renown, Japheth enlargement, and Ham means black or burn. Shem is still renown as being the ancestor of Christ; Japheth is enlarged, for he is not only in his division, which is Europe, but is dwelling now in Asia and America. He continued. "There will never be a home for Japheth in Africa, God never designed that country for them. The prophecy runs "God shall enlarge Japheth and he shall dwell in the tents of Shem," but never in the tents of Ham."

"God has truly enlarged Japheth. They have now the possession of Europe, India, the islands of the seas, and if the theory that the American Indians are a lost tribe of the children of Israel is true, Japheth in America is literally dwelling in the tents of Shem, as we find them this day in possession of America, by which act Shem or the American Indians are driven into the woods. The Professor gave a brief sketch of American heathenism and contrasted them with those of ancient Greece and Rome and then winds up the lecture in a very pathetic style.

I cannot speak much of this genius, but some of the white scholars of America have been naturally attracted to him by his ability like the magnet to the steel.

He had an hour's conversation with Rev. James Woods Pogue, of Cincinnati University, who, before leaving him, confessed by saying "you have made me this day to have more respect for the Negro race."

The Professor will be here only two days and will be proceeding to Cincinnati to lecture in the Theological Seminary on Monday, but will lecture on Sunday afternoon at the Phillips Opera House, at 2.30 p.m. free.

ACCIDENTAL DEATHS.—A woman went yesterday through an overgrown thick bush to pick Pine and Igbeh palm nuts, saw palm tree, around which were fluttering bees, she examined closely and discovered that their hive was heavy with honey. Returning home in the evening, she reported her good luck to her husband. Accordingly both of them went today to the spot. The husband ordered his wife to keep at a certain distance, while he climbed the fancied fortunate tree, with his axe to cut down the fancied part. In the act ripe nuts and honey were dropping and flowing down [illegible] right under the tree. He looking downward saw her dangerous position urged her to withdraw. But the nuts and honey attracted her attention, and she moved slowly.

He kept [illegible] shout, for death was near. The Already chopped part of the palm tree branches and all, fell instantly on her back and waist. The husband clung to the stump. The crushing pile [illegible] called out for deliverance. He descended with the swiftness of a flash of lightening and cut a stick with sincere love, and main strength disentangled her. He was [illegible] with grief, he ran to the near-by farm and obtained help from another man. They carried the helpless and dying woman to a hut in the farm. Here she called for a drink of cold water, muttered or spoke a few words, and made many signs with her fingers and head. They succeeded in getting a rough made hammock and she [illegible] her into the town, and when within a few yards of her dwelling, groaning, she departed to her long home. This occured today about 1. 30 p. m.

Not two full months yet a man at St'Rapp town fell from a palm tree and had one of his legs fractured. For want of a practical and experienced surgeon, the man died after two days. The remedies used by so called native doctors, were cutting a cavity in the ground and filling it with singed leaves, chaff of palm nuts, and various useless stuff. The painful leg was then placed in it, and covered over with loose earth and live coals; the body also smeared all over with palm oil. Of course the man sweated profusely and all terminated in his death.

To the Editor "Early Dawn."

Mr. Editor,—It has been currently reported that a Meeting of some of the leading Merchants of this place was held in the Pagoanga on the 26th ult., under the Directorship of the Pastor of St. Matthew's Church.

The Meeting (we understood) was to effect reconciliation between two leading merchants of this District, who had been for some time past at variance with each other. If the report be true, it is a move in the right direction and we hope it will be productive of good results. The time has come when men who profess the name of Christ should learn to live better, and to cease from malice, hatred, bickerings and jealousies one with the other. Surely these tend in a great measure to hinder the commercial as well as religious progress of Sherbro District, and spread pernicious evils through the length and breadth of the land. It is hoped that the reconciliation thus brought about will be a permanent and durable one, and that from henceforth the parties concerned will turn a new page in their existence each one—if I may be allowed to use the term—closing up their ears, and learn to live in peace and unity, remembering that Isolation is weakness, but combination is power. "United, we stand divided, we fall." Meritorious praise are also due to the movers of the promotion of peace; but more particularly to the energetic Pastor for his indefatigable exertions from time to time to promote peace among his people, though sometimes at personal risk We wish him success among his flock and the public in general.

"Blessed are the peace makers, for they shall be called the children of God."

Thanking you Mr. Editor, for [illegible] space.

I am, yours, truly.—H.

VISIT TO SCHARMANY.

Mr. Editor,—Having had occasion to go to that station and of taking a little notice of its present prospect, I therefore thought it necessary to acquaint you with facts of the same. My arrival there was one of gladness to the natives and also to Mr. J. W. Domingo who is in charge of that station and his assistant N.B Opesigna Thompson. Infact I received a Cordial reception from these two brethren; they made my stay a pleasant one. On questioning Bro. J. W. Domingo about the present condition of his field, I was cheered to know that "Every prospect pleases"

"And only man is vile."

The day following my arrival was Saturday, when Bro. Domingo says to me "I must leave today as I have purposed to visit nine towns this time." Notwithstanding that the morning was a bright one, yet when almost noon the cloud apparently seemed to blast all hopes of a fine day. He then started accompanied by a little boy for his itinerating tour; and immediately after he started, it rained, and it was a heavy one. As I stood at the piazza of the Mission House, I said within myself, oh, what an exposure! But we should not consider any sacrifice too hard for the sake of the gospel.

Sunday came on, and at 8 a.m. a little hand-bell was rung around the town announcing service hour. We then repaired to the barra which was crowded by natives, and I had the honor to speak unto them out of God's word. I can assure you that I felt satisfied from the way in which special attention was paid to the hearing of blessed truths. In the afternoon of the same day, Bro. Domingo arrived, and had made a round of about thirty five miles, and visited nine towns. It was my good fortune to know from that Brother, that he visited two of those towns in connection with Mr. R. Blake's District, as I informed him that Mr. Lake was not quite well when I left Shengay, I would that those in charge of stations will do the same whenever it is practicable; for it requires united effort in the conversion of our benighted brethren. We should always pray for success in this glorious work and always lend a helping hand to one another.

SULYMAH DISTRICT.

THE DISTURBANCES.

RUMORS & Reports.

We naturally suppose that the reading publie will be expeating much more upon this subject, than we are prepared to give, we have interviewed different parties from the District and tried to learn the facts which would seem to amount to about the following: that since our last Issue, the Civil Commandant an able officer indeed, has been awaiting definite Instructions as to what course to pursue in the present emergency, meanwhile he has vigilantly watched the passing events and guarded e very point of attack with all the means at his command; but so far as we can learn, no further steps have been taken since the affair at the French Factory, to expell the war-boys, nor does it appear possible for any steps to be taken under the present circumstances—i.e. while the Government seems to be asleep in regard to the matter—We do not know how long such inactivity is to be continued.

But from rumors now afloat currently, delay may prove disastrous, and really delay does seem to imply some indifference on the part of the general Government; which may possibly lead to another, and more serious outbreak; as soon as the warriors see that no measures are being taken for their proper chastisement; for it must be evident now, to every person of ordinary intelligence, that what civilzed and enlightend men, regard as leniency, on the part of the British Government, is regarded by the savages of the Interior of this continent as either cowardice or inability. And from many reports it would appear that the native Warriors are becoming every day more acquainted with the tardiness of the Government to act and consequently less afraid to violate their treaties.

We regret very much to note the death of Mr. J. N. Lefevre of Bompehtook an old and esteemed friend of the writer for the past 16 years. He had been suffering for some time, as will be seen from a personal notice in this Issue; he finally died on the 7th inst. a bout 6. p. m. and was burried on Sunday the 8th We have the promise of a more extened account of his death hereafter.

Dear Mr. Editor,—Your Issue of the 30th April gives a very long account of the recent disturbances in the Sulymah District; but I am shocked to find that your informant is rather inclined to be selfish whoever he is. The report of the war and its devastations is perfectly true havock and destruction appear everywhere people are homeless, towns and villages have been laid low by the marauders; your informant gives you correct information so far, but coming to the Old Motto "Honor where honor is due" that is what I wish to speak of. The report reached Manoh Sulijah on Easter Monday April 11th that the war had destroyed Jaring, a town on the Sulymah River, and that one wing was on its march to Manoh Factory to plunder it. The Customs Officer (Mr. P. A. Banister) equal to the emergency gathered his staff consisting of two constables, (Coker & Jones) four boatmen inside the Palma Trading Coy's Factory and with the assistance of the Factory people and two more constables (Webber & Finlay) sent by sergt. Taylor from Sulymah kept the wolves at bay and drove them back. During the time the fighting lasted and everything was thrown into confusion our little party stood arm to arm and defended themselves together with countless refugees.

Report reached us that our worthy Commandant was hurrying to our relief but we had not the pleasure of having any additional assistance from either the Commandant or Inspector Betts until about three days after the fighting. Now Mr. Editor your informant must really indeed be gifted by nature as a seriis to send you such a report where all the praise is due to absentees. In all honor to the few Constables commanded by Sergt. Taylor at Sulymah they done their duty well and it was only when their amunitions was expended to three rounds, Sergt. Taylor saw the advisability of withdrawing his men from protecting the French Factory and through this neglect on the part of some Officials part of the goods to the amount of £300 to £400 were plundered. The Commandant is now on the spot but is utterly powerless to chastise the miscreants having to wait the Governor's arrival. And while Government is sleeping British lives and property are endangered by deceitful and lying chiefs who receive their Stipends from our Government, and with this money procure war materials to the annoyance of peaceful Subjects.

I am, Dear Mr. Editor,

"One who was in the Fight."

The Early Dawn of Jan 15 seems to have been much esteemed by our American readers the Southwestern Christian Advocate March 24th of new Orleans speaks well of it and has copied in full the Item from Shaingay relating to the disturbances in that district. The religious Télescope of March 9th Dayton; Says the Early Dawn—our African Mission paper for January is one of the best numbers of that paper we have seen. These notices of our little Journal by such great church periodicals as the above named, are very encouraging to us and we thank Drs. Taylor and Hott very much for the high compliment they have thus paid to our paper.

We clip from the South-western Christian Advocate one of our esteemed American Exchanges the following which may interest many of our readers who have often enquired of us about Mr. Hall who was formally a Missionary in this place:—

"Rev. J. M. Hall, of Jonesboro, Tn. (Holston presbytery) who is Missionary to the Freedmen, is doing a good work, preaching to three churches and teaching a flourishing school at Freedmans Chapel near Jonesboro. He, during the past year has travelled nearly 3,000 miles in this work, distributed more than 4,000 religious Tracts and papers, and had many additions to his church on their profession.—Africa American Presbyterian."

CONAH AND THE COW.

Conah is the country name of one of the girls at Kodoonge Station, who about nine months ago was christened by the name of Emma Stauffer at the request of a Rev. Henry Stauffer of Ammerica, who about said time in correspondence with the Rev. J. Gumer P. E. asked that two children be named —one girl, Emma Stauffer, and one boy, Jabaz S. Littel Emma or Conah is the daughter of a woman at Semehou, a small town about ten or fifteen minutes tramp, back of Kodoonge by name Kafuay Boye, who is supposed to be a slave of the late Kong Matty, Chief of Bompehtooka. Soon after the late session of the Mom-tronu Parrish at Bompehtooke, information reached Kodoonge that the Chief apparent, had sent and arrested Kafuay Boye for not having come to the "Cry" for his late father, (she being a slave) though it was widely known that this poor woman had been laid up with a bad leg ever so long, and as a penalty she should give up all her children to be sold. Conah it was thought (doubtless) being young and tender in years, would pay nearly if not "Cow" at salt Pond, with which the minuess of the "Big Cry" would be made up.

This woman was urged upon to send for Owen the Mission, and as there was no alternative, she did; but the Agent would not under any condition whatsoever comply with such a request, knowing as he did that the young Chief had previously made attempts to decoy Conah but with no success. Several schemes were devised to take Conah, but all were futile. The mother at length came in person, but the agent stood his grounds. The proprietor of the "Cow" who is himself one of the many Chiefs of Bompehtooke like they are being plagued a stratagem, but failed most signally, and thus the matter has been left in abeyance. Conah is a girl of about 9 or 10 summers, has fine ability, and could pray and speak for Jesus. Emma Stauffer knows the great difference between herself and a "Cow" that nothing would be given in exchange for her soul, that not all the cries and slaughtered cows would save a lost soul—that Nothing but the Blood of Jesus could atone for man's sins.

GBANNAH GROME.

Three intersting Lectures were delivered in St. Matthew's Church School Room on the 10th, 11th, and 13th instants by Mr. C. R. Arden Thompson.

The Subjects were as follows:—

May 10.—TRADE IN SIRERA LEONE &c. &c.—T. E. Macfoy Esq. Chairman.

May 11.—EDUCATION IN S. LEONE &c.—Rev. G. G. M. NICOL C.

May 13.—CENTENARY or S. LEONE &c. &c. Dr. M. L. JARRETT. Chairman.

It would have taken up much time and space to report the whole proceeding in this issue, but suffice it to say that on the whole, the Lectures were ably prepared and masterly delivered, As the meetings were opened for discussion the following gentlemen took active part in the discussions on several points of importance to some of which the Leaturer replied.

Revds. O Moore and G. G. M. Nicol, Mr. D. M. P. Thorpe; also on the 13th Revds. G. G. M. Nicol & D. W. Thorpe (who had that day arrived from York) and Mr. D. M. P. Thorpe.

You may hear from me again on this subject, when I shall be able to enlarge on the three day's Lecture.

NAILED IN THE HEAD.

Mr. Editor—Permit space in the columns of your Journal for a passing reference to a recent communication bearing the signature of "Cæsar," which appeared in your Issue of Ap'l 30, also others of like purport and spirit whish have appeared at different times. The long silence maintained by the friends of Conah Cambeh is not due to a conviction of wrong or guilt, nor is it from an inability to accept challenges so rantingly held out by the champions and would be defenders (!) of right. Please attribute this silence, to a contempt for that dawardly meanness and disposition which taking advantage of a more technicality, would carry on nefarious attacks, and create false impressions under a Nom-de-plume, I must undeceive the public minds with regard to a single fact and but one, without pretending a reply to articles bearing names that may be counted with villanous or gentlemanly intentions.

The statement I would make is this, "Conah was first made known to Mr. Laborio early in May 1884, when she appeared before him to answer to a summons that had been taken out by one Tommy Davis, supported by Pich Kahi and others. The decision rendered upon the following day, making Conah Cambeh head-woman of Manoh was a direct result of that investigation. Any statement to the contrary is utterly false, and may be branded as goods direct from the "Father of lies."

INFIDELITY.

Mr. Shaw (Josh Billings,) in his pleasant way, has said many good things, and among them are his remarks on the infidel. "Did you ever hear of a man's pronouncing Christianity on his death-bed, and turning infidel? Neither gamblers nor freethinkers have faith enough in their profession to teach it to their children. No atheist, with all his brazted bravery, has ever yet dared to subscribe his unbelief on his tombstone.

"A man may learn infidelity from books, and from his associates, but he cannot learn it from his mother nor the words of God that surround him. Unbelievers are always so ready and anxious to prove their unbelief, that I have thought they might be just a little doubtful about it themselves. The infidel, in his impudence, will ask you to prove that the flood did occur, when he save his life, what makes one apple sweet and one sour, or tell why a hen's egg is white and a duck's egg is blue.

"When I hear a noisy infidel proclaiming his unbelief, I wonder if he will send for some brother infidel to come and see him die. I guess not. He will be more likely to send for the orthodox man who engineers the little brick church just around the corner. Impudence, ingratitude, ignorance, and cowardice, make up the creed of infidelity."

Mr. George Rose the Travelling Evangelist has been holding meeting at the Court Hall from the 2nd to 6th inst.

It is reported that Mr. W. Hughes, senior Clerk to the Commandant left here on the 13th inst for Gbambiah on special duty.

Personal

Mr. J. W. Johnson of Bomp Lake gave us a pleasant call and Paid his subscription for the year to the "Early Dawn"

Mr. Tambaca Agt. General of Fisher & Randall (Ltd) we undarstand was on a visit to their York Island House about the 30th Ult.

Corpl. Nicol gave us a pleasant call on the 3rd inst. he had seen much of the War Troubles in the Sulymah District; I aving been with Comdt Moseley, when the news of the out break reached him.

Revd. O. Moore of the C.M.S. Grammar School, Freetown, gave us a call on the 4th inst Mr. Moore speaks of his work as very encouraging, which is indeed very pleasant for us to note as the Educational Department is one in which we take great interest; as well as in the ability of natives to carry it on successfully.

Mr. T. E. Macfoy also called on us on the 4th inst. He has never much say about his business; but from the number of canoes that go to Yandahoo we should infer that he is doing a fine business.

Mr & Mrs Chas. A. E. Campbell of Mosam, gave us a short call while in this place or just as they were leaving on the 4th inst for Mosam we are always pleased to see Mr. Campbell.

Mr. R. N. Smart trading at Gbangbahtooke Imperch called on the 5th inst. He reported all quiet in that quarter.

Mr. J. N. Lefevre of Bompehtooke, Shaingay District, we regret to learn was still suffering from fever and general debility at our last hearing from him on the 6th inst.

Mr. George M. Domingo was here on the 6th inst. and called on us the same day; he reported all quiet at Bompehtooke.

Mr. S. W. Adams Comd't's 2nd clerk, who left here on the 4th ult. with Commandant Moseley on an Extended Tour to the Interior, returned to this place on the 3rd per the Government launch and called on us on the 7th conveying the Comdt's compliments and to say that His Worship was well when he left Lavanah.

Mr. F. E. B Bucknor Bailiff of this place called on us on the 7th inst.

Mr. E. Donaldson Palmer of the Tucker River was in town about the 7th inst and gave us a look in.

Mr. R. G. H. Domingo black smith of Shaingay called here on the 7th inst. He was seem ingly in good health and looking fine.

Mr. F. A. Heroe Head-master of the Mendi Mission School has, we regret to note been quite unwell for sometime past. He left for Freetown on the 13th instant.

Mr. T. J Alldridge, Agent for F. & A. Swanzy, we understand arrived in Freetown per s. s Congo on the 2nd inst we further learn that Mr. Alldridge expects to visit Sherbro shortly.

Mr. E. A. Lewis arrived in this place from Freetown, whither has been for a considerable time past, and we understand he has brought with him his instruments and will be prepared to take Photographs for those who may wish his services.

Mr. E. A. Lewis gave us a pleasant call accompannined by Mr Thorpe the Druggist, on the 14th inst.

Mr. J. G. Quaker, not having been well for some time past, left on the 13th inst. for Kent per s. s. John Brown for a change.

BUNDO DEVIL BURNT BY FIRE.

Dear Mr. Editor,

Please find a space in the column of your journal for this piece of news which I trust will interest your readers.

A medical examination was held on the 2nd inst, on the body of a girl who died at Yandee farkie on the 29th ult. The circumstances attending her death were as follows:—

She left her town for the purpose of digging Cassada in the neighboring village, while there she was invited to a dance, she accepted the invitation. She being considered a Bundo Devil, was asked to dress herself in their usual uniform, which she did, and being expert in the art of dancing, she was applauded, being tired, she went into a house to rest herself, while another rival, was dancing outside. Being excited at the applause given by the spectators, to her rival, she left the house to continue the dance, and as she was coming out of the house, her dress caught fire and before any assistance could be rendered, the fire had reached her heart, a few hours after she died. The Coroner's Jury returned a verdict of "Accidental death by fire"

DISTURBANCES IN THE SULYMAH DISTRICT.

CONTINUED

From frequent reports received from the disturbed districts, it would seem that things were having a quiet move up to the 4th inst., the lawless hordes erroneously called "war boys" were in their camp (Jarnah)

Mendingrah a friendly chief who was waiting to see what measures the Government would adopt for the suppression of the out-break has cooked his own war. It is authentically reported that he has taken Mandamah (Momo-kiekie's town)

It may be interesting to state that Momo kiekie a professed Treaty Chief is regarded as no other than a "spy" under cover against the Government. It was his war boys that pillaged Sulymah and Bandasumah causing wide spread distress to many Momo Jah who was notorious for his treachery is now on the side of the Government.

It is to be hoped that the Government will speedily come to a final decision in connection with this complication so as to enable the Commandant to adopt decisive measures to quell this important out-break.

The Early Dawn—Our African mission paper, for January—is one of the best numbers of that paper we have seen. It contains the minutes of Sherbro Conference, also a communication from Bishop Flickinger, which refers to the increase of 1,311 in the membership of the Church last year, swelling the present membership in Africa to 3,940. This growth is indeed wonderful. This issue of the Early Dawn also contain the following item of interest; "Mr. Albert St. John, photographer, who has just completed a round to the principal mission-stations of Shpingay and Mendi missions, has taken several views of narrow-bush, devil-houses, and various other sketches of African life. Rev. J. Gomer is having these taken for private purposes. Mr. St. John is a fine artist, the sketches are good. Amongst them is a group of all the members of the district meeting, including the preachers, teachers, and Itinerants. Bishop D. K. Flickinger and Rev. J. M. Lesher, are both very prominent in the group. There are thirty-seven persons, all told, in the picture." Ref. Telescope.

Dear Sir,

In reading over your Issue of the 15th ult., I was glad to find mention made in an Editorial that some interest was manifested in the subject of Steam Communication between Sierra Leone and this district in some quarters stirred by the suggestions made by a Sierra Leonean in a letter published by you in the 15th ult. Would that the interest were more general may it be more wide spread and like a contageous disease spread over and affect the community so as to find effect and vent in the Establishment of such a company in honor of the Jubilee of the Reign of our Gracious Sovereign Victoria.—

To my mind Sir, facilities for carrying out or promoting the interest of the subject and its consummation are abundant; only let Sierra Leoneans learn or try to learn to come out for themselves for once by laying aside all petty feuds broils, and tribeship and join common cause for the nation. The interest of a common country. Now did I say facilities for promoting the object in question are abundant? surely yes.—Cast a look on, or rather across the River; and there you will find the Squire of Yelbanna & York Island Mr. A. M.—Then look around here and there are squires R.T.C., C.B.C., J.A.W., J.B.T., C.J.C., T.E.M., J.N.C., W.E.B. Then across the lagoon there are sq'rs J.B.W. & brother &c. Besides many others up the rivers men of moderate means all of whom are more or less capable of taking the lead. Then again there are very many others to be found who would be willing to become share holders of from £5 to £20 Then other facilities are to be had readily in the way of work. For instance I believe there is a fair percentage of stokers and engineers to be found among Sierra Leoneans.—There are also some very good seamen among us.

Now, it is attempting it is found that it cannot be completed in a year that will make no difference when all things shall have been properly adjusted. Now Dear Sir I would humbly ask what are these men of affluence doing to benefit mankind? Do they intend contentedly to continue in the steps of their predecessors in wealth, to be forgotten as soon as they are dead? have they no relish for Progress? Most of these squires are smokers and I do believe they must very often when they put their hands in their pocket for the match box have said blessings on the memory of the inventor of matches. Who has not had this thought? I have often. Then let them examine this project and not suffer it to fall to the ground. Let them endeavour to promote this object that succeeding generations will rise and bless them for giving to them such a boon as a precious legacy or an heirloom. With many thanks.

I am, Dear Sir, Yours

A SIERRA LEONEAN.

ELECTION SERVICE.

Dear Mr. Editor—A meeting was held at the St. Matthew's Church on Monday after Easter the 11 inst.; the gathering was very small, the number of persons attended were not more than 20 including four young ladies. In a church which contains about 300 should be so thinly attended especially when the meeting is convened for the purpose of electing officers to serve for the current year; but the reason for this may be attributed to the fact that they were not properly made to understand the object for which the meeting was summoned, for, to my surprise, no sooner than slips of paper were handed round, the whole of the females with a few men left the meeting and never returned to cast in their votes. Now let me come to the point, notwithstanding the small number who were kind enough to wait for the election, the Chairman, instead of adjourning the meeting for another respectable gathering allowed the meeting to proceed.

After the slips of papers were returned, 12 members were elected, as Committee members, 2 as sidesmen, 1 pastor's warden and one people's warden.

Having given the results of the proceedings of the meeting, I must make a few observations:—

1st. The meeting was not constitutionally qualified to form a decision or to vote, as the number of members was very small, in proportion to the number of members that are in the church. How can 20 members vote for 300, especially when it is considered that one third of these 20, are members of a peculiar family and who does not understand the importance of the slips of paper put into the hands of each one.

2nd. The other two gentlemen who were appointed as Wardens were nominated by the Chairman instead of being elected by the people, (notwithstanding the excuse offered by one of them (W. H.) for declining his post as he had served many years and requires a little rest). This is not the ordinary or usual way in which election meetings are generally conducted. I can assure you Mr. Editor that the whole affair of that evening was a mere farce, and I must say that the proceedings of that meeting do not meet with the consent and approval of the general members of the church. This should be looked into.

One excuse that I can make for this kind of strange proceedure is owing to the unavoidable absence through illness of our worthy pastor, under who's guidance the election service has always met with the unanimous approval of the members of the Church. Let the Chairman in future "Live to Learn."

Yours,

A CHURCHMAN.

Why Eve did not keep a hired Girl.

Some gentlemen has asked why it is all the women have to keep a hire l girl. Eve did not keep any help.

I will give a few reasons why Eve did not keep a hired girl. There has been much said about the faults of women, and why they need so much waiting on. Some one (a man, of course) has the prosumption to ask: "Why is it, when Eve was manufactured of a spare rib, a servant was not made at the same time to wait on her?

She did'nt need any. Adam never came whining to Eve with a ragged stocking to be darned, buttons to be sewed on, gloves to be mended right away, quick now, I have'nt a moment to wait! He never read the papers until sundown, and then stretching himself, yawn out, "Well are you never going to have supper ready!? Not he. He made the fire and hung the kettle over it himself, we will venture; pulled the taitshes, peeled the potatoes, and did everything else he ought to do. He milked the cows, fed the chickens and pigs, and never brought half a dozen friends home to dinner when he knew Eve was washing and had no bread baked.

He never stayed out until eleven o'clock at night, and then scolded because Eve was looking for him and uneasy about him.

He never sat around stores, shops, and on the fences, talking politics while Eve was rocking little Cain's cradle at home. He did not call Eve up from the basement to hunt his hat or gloves and find them right where he had put them. Not he. In short, he did not think she was especially created for the purpose of waiting on him, and he was'nt under the impression that it disgraced a man to lighten his wife's cares a little. That's the reason why Eve did'nt need a hired girl.—Sel.

THE LATE J. N. LEFEVRE.

To you Mr. Editor and your numerous readers, and many that may perhaps not be readers, the telligence of the death of the above named gentleman, at precisely 6 p. m. on Saturday the 7th inst, and which has already been communicated, would sound as a tremendous thunder-clap. So much affected have the natives been here, that they could only express their sorrows by saying a "Big Tree" has fallen. The deceased who spent several long years in this country, and with whom doubtless, all our returned Missionaries (in America) and those now in the field were acquainted, had been ailing since the commencement of the year, chiefly suffering from general Debility. Little did he or any one think it would result so seriously, though he was so far advanced in years. I made personal visits and very often we went in a body to read, sing and pray with him; and each time we left, hopeful of his recovery; but Death was making slow advances, and only on the morning of the 7th when I last called, I apprehended the end was near. After a few exchanges, I asked him "Are you praying?" "yes" he said I am trying I then read the lxxvii Psalm, exhorted and prayed with him; and though very weak, he joined in the Lord's prayer. When we rose from our knees, he revived a bit, sat up a while and conversed with Bro. A. F. Campbell and myself and then went up to his couch again. After spending in all about four hours, we retired, promising to return shortly; but alas! 'twas to see the last of him! Accompanied by Bro. Humphrey we again called in the afternoon and found to our dismay, bro. Lefevre passing from "Time to Eternity." He was however conscious to the last; for no sooner he saw us than he recognized us and as usual (but 'was for the last time on earth) greeted us warmly, calling us alternately by name. Seeing life was fast ebbing away, I enquired "Bro. how is it with your soul?" The reply was "God is with me; but ——there are certain encumbrances trying to impede my way." Said I, "And what are those encumbrances?" "Dont you believe if you cast all your burdens on Jesus He will sustain you?" After a pause, he replied "I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that He alone can save me." "Glory be to God" while we gladly responded "Amen."

I then read Job. VI & VII Chap. after which Bro. Humphrey led in prayer and again he joined in repeating the Lord's prayer.

On rising we sang the hymn "Jesus lover of my soul" Though breathing out his last, he summed up all the strength remaining and joined with us, laying stress upon

"Other refuge have I none
Hangs my helpless soul on Thee
Leave ah! leave me not alone
Still support and comfort me."

After the hymn was sung through his last request was that I should pray and as we were thus engaged, he breathed his last, and we believe to be,

"Safe in the Arms of Jesus,
Safe on His gentle breast:
There by His love o'ershaded
Sweetly his soul shall rest."

Thus, full of days, passed away the man renowned for his devotion to the country, his fellows, and the Church; much will be said, and many the regrets to mourn the loss of a father and a friend to us as a Church the blow has come down heavy indeed! Since it is widely known, that for many long years, the late Mr. Lefevre undertook the entire support and oversight of Otterbein Church at Bompehtooke and but for him scarcely any trace of that building would now be visible.

Otterbein Church stands (and long may it stand) as a living testimony of the fact that the deceased was a true and tried friend of the U.B.C. Mission in this country. He also served this country politically. He was instrumental, along with the indefatigable Rev. Joseph Gomer P. E. many years ago in effecting peace between the late Chief George S. Caulker of the Shaingay and Plantain Districts, and Richard Caulker Chief of the Bompeh.

His remains were interred just about the entrance of the town of Bompeh—tooke a few yards from Otterbein Church at his request, in the presance of several chiefs, headmen and women besides scores of Sierra Leoneans and natives all of whom bewail the loss of Bah Fefore as he was familiarly called.

The deceased has left a widow and several children, besides numerous relatives and friends to lament their loss. They have our sympathies and prayers.

J. ARTHUR RICHARDS.

LEARNING TO SING CHURCH-MUSIC.

Many persons with excellent voices think they cannot sing But to learn to sing in Church, in Sabbath-school, or in prayer meeting is within the reach of almost every person not past the prime of life.

In common conversation and in reading the rising and falling inflections are used correctly, and often under the control of the will, and different rates of speed are adopted by speakers and readers to suit the sense of what they read or say. Many things show that the sense of time is not lacking. The voluntary motion of the foot or hand often betrays a musical capacity in those who think they can never learn to sing.

A chorister in New England took forty men and women over thirty years of age, not one of whom had never sung a tune, and in twelve rehersals brought them to a point where, with the assistance of a few excellent singers, they could sing without any appreciable error twelve of the standard tunes of the church.

Let it be remembered that we are not undertaking to show that there is no difference in musical abilities There is a great difference. Some are defective in tune and others in time, and many in both; but those who are capable of the variel intonations which we hear in conversation, need only a little instruction and much perseverance to be able to join in the high praise of God in the sanctuary.

We call again for a revival of old-fashion'd singing schools. Wherever congregational singing exists the people should meet together to sing. Some of the sleepy congregations would find it greatly to their advantage, even in the temporal point of view, to hire a good singing-teacher and have a dozen meetings in the autumn months. They would find that it would promote sociality, increase the interest in the prayer-meeting and make a great change in the general spirit of the Sabbath-services.

Nothing is more unreasonable than to suppose that congregational singing can maintain itself merely by singing in the Sabbath-services.

—Christian Advocate.

Dear Sir,

I feel to express myself to you and your readers, that it is my incumbent duty to corroborate the truthful statements made by Mr Observer in your Issue of the 30th ult. I for one was against such nuisance carrying on in this place. That a man who make himself through laziness an idler when from his bed at 6 a.m. going about from house to house till 9 & 10 at night, which is his habit that cannot be broken; especially when he has his belly filled with palm wine a thing so common in this place. There he enters his pandemonium together with his paraphrast, consulted for to listen and busy body upon every family matter. He is also a legal adviser.

Dear Mr. Editor, don't you think it is proper and most important that every man is to be attentive to his own business? Yes I think so which will be prudent on the part of Mr. Idler to dissipate such manner of life from his person.

Thanking you for time and space occupied.

I am, truly Yours,

Victoria, An Eye witness.

THE SITUATION.

Since our last Issue, very little seems to have been done, in the way of settling, the disturbances in the Kittim or the Sulymah Districts; in fact nothing worth mentioning has reached the ears of our reporters so far as we know, and matters remain about the same, however it appears that there are conflicting reports of the past: especially has it been reported to us, that Momo-Jah (a notorious character, reported in last Issue to be on the side of Government,) is not on the side of the Government at all and that he is not to be trusted; and it was our own opinion from the first that a very great deal of duplicity was being practiced by many of the professedly friendly chiefs in those quarters and that most any of them would profess friendship to the Government as long as they are sure thereby to secure valuable presents from the Government Chest, with which to employ new bands of plunderers to invade the District to the annoyance of peacable British Subjects and while ever the Government continues the present policy in its dealings with the Native Chiefs, we shall continue to hear of Wars and Rumors of wars and the country will continue in an unsettled state.

For since our last, War Reports have only multiplied and now from every quarter almost comes the wail of distressed refugees who have left behind their Blazing hamlets, Captive friends, or relatives, and dying Intants. Such is the woeful picture of the various places on the Borders of the West Africa Settlement. How long are these things to be endured without any check being put to them.

JUVENILE ANNIVERSARY.

It was our pleasure on Sabbath the 29th instant, to attend the Wesleyan Methodist Juvenile Missionary Anniversary held at 3 p.m. in their Chapel in Lime Street, in this place. There was indeed a very fine large gathering—After the usual preliminary devotion, Rev. J. C. Thomas after a few brief remarks relating to arrangements, called on the Rev. D. A. Johns, (Deputation from Freetown) who took the Chair amid the cheers of the House, and after a few appropriate remarks, called on Mr. W. D. Pasha the able and gifted catechist of St. Matthew's P.E. Church, who with some effort kept down to Juvenile level and made a very impressive address, understood we believe by all Messrs Thorpe (D. M. P), May and Hughes followed each in the order named, and made interesting but very brief speeches There was also Music Vocal and Instrumental interspersed Mr. Wilhelm the Day School Teacher presided at the Organ and rendered well his part. There were a number of distinguished persons present but we shall not attempt to note them, but may only say in conclusion that we congratulate the Rev. Mr. Thomas and his Church upon the success of their Juvenile Missionary Anniversary.

FURTHER WAR-REPORTS FROM SHAINGAY DISTRICT.

Mr. J.C. French arrived here late on Saturday evening the 28th instant from Shaingay with Mrs. French and their infant son. Mr. F says that on the Wednesday previous he left Mocobo, his grandmother's town in the upper Kargborrah River and that there were strong rumours of an outbreak headed by the notorious Wm. T. G. Caulker, and that it was reported at Mocobo that Lawanah had been taken by the war. As he(Mr. French)came down the river a distance of 60 miles to Shaingay he heard repeated reports of the depredations of William's War Boys at different points, he also met some refugees at Singabool, a town near the mouth of Karboroh (Cockboroh) river, these were from Moyeh, Mambo, Marthin and other places that way, all of these reported that war had reach'd the vicinity of their towns and that they had fled for safety. Mr. F. A. Heroe who arrived here on his return from Freetown a little earlier than Mr French also reports that there were a number of refugees on Plantain Island awaiting an opportunity of escape to Kent. Other persons have reported here that most of the people have left Shaingay (native town) of course the Missionaries are there and expect to remain at their post as usual.

THE RIGHT 'HEAD NAILED' ON FORGERY EXPOSED.

"Oh, Wad some power the gittie gie us
To see ourselves as others see us."

Sir,—I have read with mingled emotions of surprise, pity, and contempt, the letter signed D. A. Niel, in your last Issue. It is a marvel that any respectable person, as your correspondent has made himself to appear, could attempt to publish a letter to the world containing (to say nothing of its low vituprations) such a gross misrepresentation of "a single fact" with which he appears to be so well acquainted, with certainly no other object in view, than to deceive the public and also, as he thinks, to screen the writer of the fictitious letter of May 22th 1884. from the punishment due to his crime. But sooner or later he may yet find to his sorrow that he is only hastening the doom of the misleading supporters of Conah Cambeh.

1. I want to know what has Tommy Davis' case that was decided in Court at Bonthe, to do with a forged letter, to which I referred in my last communication, purporting to have been written at the Gbargroo dated May 24th 1884 and bearing the names respectively of Chiefs Peah Karl—Bah N'Dow—Quch Thessnch—Gbannah Will—and Seyloko? Can Mr. D. A. Niel deny that such a letter was written? and can he conscientiously say that he had nothing to do with it?

2. Can Mr. D. A. Niel deny his knowledge of another letter dated 17th July '84 and written at the request and from the dictation of Conah Cambeh to the Government, wherein the names of the above Chiefs were signed without their knowledge and request, and that this very letter was transmitted by the well-known principal mover and supporter of Conah Cambeh?

3. Mr. D. A. Niel accuses me of attempting to "create false impressions under a Nom-de-plume." But Mr. Editor, may I ask who is the person at Shaingay that bears the name of D. A. Niel? Is not this assumed name a Nom de plume? Surely, it requires no extraordinary ingenuity on the part of your sagacious readers to discover that this signature is a mere trickery of orthography, and that if they will only drop off the punctuation inserted by your wily correspondent between the letters D.A.N., the name DANIEL will at once appear, which is but the Christian name of a well known personage residing at Shaingay. Now I challenge your correspondent, with all his "gentlemanly intentions" to deny his identity with this Daniel.

I await his reply.

PASSING THOUGHTS.

Dear Sir,—In looking over your paper of the 18th instant, it contains many remarkable incidents that are interesting for every individual who prize this life, that each one should be instructed. How many of us who prize the life that now is, this mortal life, this life of uncertainty; this life that is now fleeting away, this life with all its environments, with all its limitations with all its aches and pains and disappointments. How withal we love this life, how we long to retain it, how we would like to invest it with immortality and dwell here forever, how loath are we to part with it, with what reluctance with what unavailing protest we yield to the inevitable! Yet this life to which we thus cling is not worthy of mention in comparison with the life promised to us, the life we have now and shall forever have. If we have Christ, we shall have a life unlimited, a life that has all eternity for its fuller expansion, a life that knows no aches no pain, no disappointment and no death. Is it not strange that so many may be found who have no appreciation of it, no deep anxiety for it who prize it so little that they refuse to accept it although it is offered without money and without price, then listen to the warning voice today while it is called today, harden not your hearts lest the message meet us in an unguarded moment; it is sufficient to say that Jesus is willing to save.—Yours,

W. S. M.

THE LIVING WORD
(Selected.)

The Word of God is the foundation of the works of God. He spake, and it was done, He commanded and it stood fast. "By the Word of God the heavens were made, and the earth all that is therein." By that same Word through which God made all things at first, He shall make them new again. Hence when man wrecked by sin, is to be restored to righteousness, the work is done by the Word of God. His Word is as a fire and hammer which breaks in pieces the flinty rock. His Word is quick & powerful, sharper than a two-edged sword. His Word is a lamp to our feet and a light to our path. His Word is the sword of the Spirit, wherewith we fight our battles. His Word is the incorruptible seed by which we are begotten to immortal life. His Word is the sincere milk whereby the babes in Christ may grow. His His Word is able to make us wise unto Salvation, through faith that is in him. By His Word the man of God is to be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works.

Any system of faith or practice, which ignores or sets aside the Word of God, is without root or foundation, without strength or substance. Heaven and earth shall pass, but God's Word shall not pass away. He has magnified His Word above all His name. Forever His Word is settled in heaven, and those who dishonor it, or reject it or cast it aside, will find that they have made a fatal mistake.

A gentleman said that in nearly one hundred successive religious meetings which he attended, held under the auspices of laymen professedly famed for revival work, not a Bible was opened, not a single passage from its pages read. Doubtless Scriptures were quoted, but a large proportion of the exercises consisted of hymns addresses, & prayers, and, to say the least, the Word of God was too much left out of sight. Such revivals as these are like shaving-fires in sheet-iron stoves, they burn, they blaze and they die. Men are saved by faith, but faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the Word of God. Men are saved by hope, but it is through "patience and comfort of the Scriptures" that we have hope. Men are saved by grace, but it is the Word of God's grace that shows them the way of Salvation. Let those who would labor successfully take heed that they know the Word of God. There are many revivalists who, with all their spread of canvas, lack the solid ballast of the Word of God.

Mr. Editor:—It is to my greatest surprise to see that a young man is so ungrateful, after having passed through many troubles and much sickness seems hardly to know himself, and that such a young man would leave his business in the shop to go and talk with a lady that does not care anything about him. We young men ought to be more particular in our businesss, and try to improve, so that when we desire employment in the service of any business we can be admitted. —Yours AM NOT WONDERFUL ESCAPE! PROVIDENTIAL DELIVERANCE!!

Sir,—Please permit a space in the columns of your periodical craving your sympathy to give publicity to the following incident of my Wonderful escape and Providential Deliverance by a "one eyed friend" and motto, "be courageous"

At the recent raid in the Sulymah District, in the month of April last, I left my dwelling about 6 a.m. and went a church to visit my sub-factory in a town called 'Manwo' on the banks of the same River Do we were at it, discharged the two canoes I took with me with goods and had them loaded with palm kernels. Evening came on, and the night appearing foggy impossible for me to start. I procured a hammock suspended it under a tree to pass the night there; we were ten in number.

At midnight the war watchmen came without any alarm, and had the contents of the canoes discharged into the River, and used them to cross their war boys from the opposite side of the town where I was, the engagement was quickly prosecuted without detection. Later on, I awoke and observed a few men by the water's edge, thinking they were robbers; I proceeded to give chase but unfortunately fell into the hands of these miserable conscripts (they were not soldiers) who stripped me of my clothes, loaded me with blows and lashes with their swords and intended to inflict wounds or the forfeiture of my life; i.e. if I had made any resistance. in affecting my escape which was successful. I fell among other ramblers who treated me worse all I could do was only in devising plans to rid my life of these insolent and never ending rascals, but all were futile: these war boys took me to Mosoe, intending to deprive me the liberty of making a second escape, I was in this posture suffering from the two elements against my will waiting the awful moment when the sentence of death will pass on me a memorable day indeed, the Lord being merciful as he will not suffer his innocent children to die such death, whilst the sword was dandling over me continually and about my destruction the majority succeeded, deferred the matter for the arrival of M'Barpeh the leading general of Makaish, fortune curiously gave birth again in the person of "a war boy" who approached me and enquired if I knew him whilst a trader in the Lugboo country Big Boom River, my reply was in the affirmative although I never in my existence had seen such a "one eyed friend" he requested his fellows to put me in Stock, rather than keeping me close with ropes whilst they were about to procure a stick, my "one eyed friend" planning out my escape there were only present my partners "captured prisoners" I followed the advice and ran into the River immediately without scruple, following the current to Sulymah, and was about four hours swimming. Oh! who can conceive my feelings in this sad condition and dilemma! ere I met again another gang in a village by the water's edge, a conspicuous for concealment oh! I remember my "one eyed friend" for his advice to escape, these my motto were be courageous. Bearing presence of mind, I made my way finally to cross over to the opposite side of the river, all was calm this day no war whatever; your readers will be surprised to perceive the dreadful conflict that caused whilst crossing my incisoria enemy (like the war boys) an alligator, caught hold of me and plunged its teeth into my flesh on the right side, making me an infirmited, all were fruitless attempts made to evade the scourge of the cruel monster; perceiving the consequence to follow if I should remain inactive; I persevered not to succumb but remember still "my one eyed friend's" advice; being deprived of his presence. I resumed my motto be courageous, I swam with great difficulty and struggled towards the shore dragging along—with his teeth on my side as two fair partners, my failing strength mercifully revived soon as I set my feet on the sand bank, I loosed its teeth from my side which was all torn, defending my position of being over turned. Regaining strength with all excitement I diligently returned the courtesy with blows and having the villain miserably dead on the bank, with its jaw bone fractured in compassion of my side that he had torn, making my way into the high way from thence to Sulymah and reported the occurrence to Mr. Songo Davis, officer in charge of that Station who deeply sympathised with me.

It is reported and I was informed by some distressed natives, that they were urged upon by the government to pull down their stockade which they consented to; and hence their country lies open so that their enemies now made incursion and over run them in a day only, leaving many a wanderer exiled from their native country, they would not have been so miserably placed if objection was raised to do without their stockade. To my observation Mr. Editor about 200 or more of the Gallinas were taken captives (my escape exempted me) Sandasunah is also taken. Queen Nyaroh captured and transported to Teeconkor for what? conscience known.

My losses sustained in this conflict amounting to £64 7s. 8d. May I ask Sir, will the marauders of peaceful traders be allowed to go away without a check from our Government, our lives and property ever being at stake? who is responsible for these losses of Loyal British subjects who are ready to do anything at the Governor's bidding; hope the authorities will soon adopt measures to satisfy the minds of the sufferers and punish the culpable aggressors.

Thanking you for space occupied.

I am, Sir, Yours sincerely,
Manoh C. H. Barrow.

Comdt. Moseley who had been reported some what unwell and was expected to return from Sulymah District last week, has not yet arrived. Mr. Moseley had been expected to preside at the Public-meeting of the Wesleyan Missionary Anniversary, held last evening in this place; but was we understand, prevented by circumstances over which he had no control. His absence was much regretted by all concerned. Dr. M. L. Jarrett however filled the Chair with ability.

We regret to note the illness of Mr G. H. Garrett Sub Collector and Treasurer, as well as at present officer in charge at this place; but were glad however to learn last evening 30th inst that he was something better, and able to be out a little yesterday.

THE LAST MATCH.

It is wonderful how important sometimes are little things. A life may hang by a thread, and no man can tell to what little things he may be indebted for his safety or his prosperity. The man who despises the day of small things may soon be brought to realize his utter dependence on something which seemed too trifling to be worth a thought.

Some years ago, when the Pike's Peak gold craze was luring so many men to wealth, to madness, and to ruin, a young man mounted his pony and started one frosty morning to travel a distance of some forty miles over the waste, bound for that famous region of gold. The day was chill; but he was young, bold, and ambitious, and with his trusty pony he saw no danger and felt no fear.

He journeyed on awhile, until at length a few snow flakes were seen floating in the air. Ere long they increased and thickened, until the sky grew hazy with their myriad hosts; the sun was hidden from view, the trail became obscured, and the weather was cold, chilly, and uncomfortable. And still, hour after hour, the snow came dropping, dropping on every thing around, until at last he found himself lost, bewildered, in a desert waste, utterly unable to guide his pony or direct his course, and without the slightest knowledge as to the right direction for him to take. The weather grew colder, the snow continued to fall, night was coming on, and he began to feel the chill and stupor which indicate the approach of that sleep that knows no waking until the resurrection day.

And now what was he to do? He could not find his place of destination; there was no shelter that he could reach; the storm was pitiless, and he was helpless. Scattered around him on the waste were patches and tufts of dried grass and sage-bush, the materials for a fire. If he could only kindle a fire he might be saved! Could he do it in the midst of snow? Feeling in his pocket, he found one single match,—the last one. He had used a hundred of them in lighting cigars, he could purchase a hundred of them for a penny wherever they were for sale, but he was there, a lone wanderer in the storm, at nightfall, and on that single match hung his only earthly hope. It with that match he could kindle a fire, he was safe; if that match failed him he was lost; he should never look on friends or home again, and desert snows would drift above his lifeless form,—his whole future hung on that one match. Never before did he so realize the value of such a little thing. It afforded him his only chance for escape.

Dismounting from his horse, he gathered with his chilled fingers some of the dried grass and brush that were scattered about, shaking the snow from them and heaping them together; and then kneeling down upon the ground, with a solemn awe and with a hope and a prayer such as the most Godless do not fail to offer in the hour of their extremest need, he struck the solitary match! Through God's mercy it lighted, the grass kindled at its touch, and in a moment a cheerful flame was blazing in the midst of the storm. He watched it, tended it, fed it, warmed himself by it, passed the dreary hours in safety and in comfort, and when the storm was past and daylight came so that he could see his course, he resumed his journey and safely reached his place of destination, leaving in his memory a solemn lesson, which time could never efface.

He had brought himself into trouble and danger where he had no other recourse or way to escape; there was but one thing that saved him,—and that one match was the means which Providence ordained for his deliverance. Had he scorned it as insignificant, had he cast it aside as worthless, had he carelessly missed the opportunity that it afforded, his life would have been forfeited.

There are other men who are in danger, exposed to storm and sorrow, to calamity and death. There are those who have squandered privileges, neglected opportunities, and rejected mercy, and are now in such danger as they themselves perhaps scarcely begin to appreciate. And for them there is one hope, one means of deliverance, one way of salvation. It may seem to them as simple and as insignificant as was the instrumentality by which this man was saved, but their life hangs on that single thread, "Neither is there salvation in any other; for there is no other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved" but the name of Jesus Christ. If men reject him, they do it at their eternal peril; if they despise him, they "wander and perish," cut off from earthly blessings and from heavenly hope. Ah, it is not a light thing to reject a way of salvation which God has appointed to us; not a light thing to despise the richness of his goodness and forbearance and long suffering; for "how shall we escape, if we neglect so great salvation?"—The Christian.

GREELY'S NORTH-POLE EXPEDITION.

Seventeen more human lives sacrificed, and the north pole problem is still unsolved. When the news was first flashed over the wires that only seven of Lieutenant Greely's exploring expedition had been saved, there was a general feeling that no more of these life-killing enterprises should be undertaken, but further details modified this impression, as the expedition proved to be more successful than any that had preceded it. The two or two explorers enjoyed excellent health during the long arctic winters, and every one would have returned alive had Lieutenant Greely's wisely laid plans been followed by congress and the Navy Department. But some official blundered. Hence the needless suffering and loss of life. A few days more and the whole party would have died of starvation. It is exasperating to think that the death and suffering were at a point only thirty miles distant from a depot of provisions and a shore where there was an abundance of game as well as a tribe of friendly Esquimaux. But geographical results of the expedition are exceedingly valuable. Lockwood, one of the party, dragged his sledge two hundred miles northeast of Discovery Harbor, four miles north of the highest latitude previously attained, and eighty miles farther than the point reached by Beaumont on the same route. He sighted land that he named Cape Robert Lincoln, about three hundred and eighty five miles from the north pole. It is to the credit of the United States that the two most northerly bodies of land yet discovered are named after Grant and Lincoln. One important point was settled. Kane claimed to have discovered an open polar sea. Nares, the British commander who followed him, insisted that the polar basin was a sea of ancient, immovable, everlasting ice. They christened it the Palæocrystic Sea. But the Greely explorers found it full of broken ice for two successive seasons. There may be points toward both the north and south poles where the ice never melts, where it is maintained in its crystallized form for millions of ages; but clearly Nares was much more mistaken than Kane as to where this Palæocrystic ice could be found. There is no hope that man will give up his search for the pole. A new expedition is organizing in Siberia. It will go by land, with dogs and sledges. The mystery of the poles will some time or other be solved—that is, if there is any mystery about it; but we may have to wait until serial navigation is accomplished before every spot on this earth is thoroughly known to the race that inhabits it.—Demorest's Monthly.

THE INFLUENCE OF THE BIBLE.

Suppose all the good people of this town should try the Bible, say for a single year. Suppose you start to-night, and say, "We have heard about that book, and now we will begin and practice its teachings just one year." What would be the result? There would be no lying, no stealing, no selling rum, no getting drunk, no tattling, no mischief making, no gossiping no vice nor debauchery. Every man would be a good man, every woman a good woman; every man would be a good husband, father or brother; every woman a good wife, mother or sister. Every one in the community would be peaceable. There would be no wards, no quarrels, no fights, no lawsuits; lawyers would almost starve to death; doctors would have light practice, and plenty of time to hoe in their gardens; courts would be useless, jails and lock-ups empty, almshouses cleared out of their inmates, except a few old stagers left over from the past generation; taxes would be reduced, hard times would trouble no body—all would be well dressed and well cared for; and presently the news would go abroad, and we should hear in Boston, "What wonderful times they are having up there in old Spencer. The people have all gone to living according to the Bible." It would raise price of real estate twenty-five per cent in six months taxes would come down, property go up and good people from far and near would want to move into town, and nobody who was worth having there would want to move out. And this would be the direct result of reading and obeying this book.

When we look at these facts we see that this is no man's book. When Columbus saw the river Orinoco, some one said he had discovered an island. He replied: "No such river as that flows from an island, that mighty torrent must drain the waters of a continent." So this book comes not from the empty hearts of impostors, liars, and deceivers—it springs from the eternal depths of divine wisdom, love and grace. It is the transcript of the divine mind, the unfolding of the divine purpose, the revelation of the divine will. God help us to receive it, to believe it, and be saved through Christ our Lord.—"Sel."

SHOT AT IN THE PULPIT

A Colored Preacher Narrowly Escaped A Pistol Bullet.

Pittsburg, PA. A dispatch says—While the congregation of the Brown African Methodist Episcopal Chapel in Allegheny were holding services a shot was fired apparently at the pastor. It was about 8.55 o'clock, and Rev. L. Lowry had opened the sermon for the evening with the text: "Thy word is a lamp unto my feet and a light unto my path." He was telling the congregation that he was not afraid, as he trusted in the Lord as his light.

"No matter" he said, "if there are thousands of thieves, murderers and assassins prowling around and lying in wait for me under the cover of darkness."

Here he was interrupted by the window crashing, the glass flying in all directions and a ball whizzed about a foot from his head and lodged in the wall a few feet away from him. The people jumped to their feet as if lifted by an electric shock. Women screamed, children howled and pandemonium reigned. The pastor exerted himself to the utmost to calm his flock and finally finished his sermon. He then hunted for the bullet and found a 38 calibre ball hidden about an inch deep in the wall.

Rev. Mr. Lowrey said to a reporter that he did not know of any one who acted him sufficiently to attempt to kill him.

It is a shame for a rich Christian man to be like a Christmas box that receives all and nothing can be got out till it is broken in pieces; or like unto a drowning man's hand that holds whatsoever it gets.

A man can do what he ought to do; when he says he can not he will not.

One can not always be a hero, but he can always be a man.

SYSTEMATIC GIVING.

THE BENEFITS & RESULTS.

We need sentiment and method in respect to christian giving, a sense of duty and a plan for performing it. This must be the idea for the next general discussion of christian reformers, the sinews of warfare; for the greatest obstruction now laid before the chariot-wheels of christian propagandism is mammon, the last idol of modern heathenism.

Why is the church not more progressive? It can not be for want of power or willingness of God to speed the gospel. It cannot be on account of geographical barriers while every heathen land is open to the christian missionary. The difficulty is no longer without, it is within the church. There lies unsanctified and unused the mighty artillery of its aggressive warfare. A proper use of its financial resources is all that is yet needed to hasten on the millennium.

We need to educate our people in the right standard of pecuniary liability. We should agitate, preach, and write upon the subject. The church has robbed God of millions of dollars by with-holding from him his tithe of our increase. We cannot make restitution, but we can repent of our sin and

Surely the Christian world needs new convictions on the subject, and one of the hopeful signs of the times is that systematic giving is beginning to be the theme of the pulpit and the press. Among the many benefits accruing from the adoption of a system of giving we mention

1. The condition of the giver and the cause to which he gives would be improved.

System would save the giver the annoyance and indecision which results from an impulsive, unregulated, and casual mode of giving. By adopting such a rule as I recommended in this series of articles, every christian would keep an accurate book account with the Lord, the same as he would with any other creditor in his ledger, placing to his credit the tenth of his annual net income as the Lord's share of profits, and pay out at intervals as duty seems to dictate. When charitable solicitations are made, he need not hesitate whether or not he owes anything to the Lord. His account will tell. This would at least be dealing honestly with the Lord. God will surely bless and prosper the financial condition of such a systematic giver more than the one who carelessly robs him of his just dues. "Thou must remember the Lord thy God, for it is he that giveth the power to get wealth." He would also prosper him spiritually, making him not only rich in earthly goods, but "rich toward God." He would be a happier man in every relation of life.

Besides, our philanthropic enterprises would flourish as a young tree by the streams. By our present old standard of spasmodic liberality, they must be stinted and embarrassed by uncontrolla ble liabilities. By the new method, religion would be advanced, missions extended, the Christian ministry better supported, and more ably replenished, church debts paid, and our institutions of learning would no longer fine, would show the mighty energy of its new revolution, and turn the moral world in a state of siege.

2. Such a system would save the Church the painful necessity of resorting to the questionable and ruinous methods of raising church finances now in vogue. When every christian shall feel that the cause of God has a reasonable and uniform demand upon the results of his honest employment, and will meet it in the christian spirit, the church will greatly rise in the estimation of the public. But what does the world think of fairs, festivals, harvest homes, excursions, and other social traffices conducted by God's people for the purpose of raising church funds? God's "House of Prayer" is thus often turned into a "den of thieves." The world is brought into the church, and the church is sold to the world, while piety leaves the temple weeping at the sight. Do we not soon need another Luther to inveigh against this new method of supplying the Lord's treasury?

It is a shame that Christ's modern church, flushed with wealth, should stoop down to such demoralizing methods under the guise of christian liberality. It is the mouth to pour that it has to peddle melons and sell ice cream and vend articles which it has no license to vend? So indigent that it needs to dispense button hole bouquets, and have a dancing floor, and raffle away ring cakes! so straightened in circumstances that it is driven to maintain a bar where intoxicating liquors are sold (as a Catholic church did a few years since!) So oppressed by poverty as to justify the selection of a handsome young lady who agreed to be kissed by any one who desires the felicity, at 25 cents for each privilege (as a Protestant Church did?) So poor that it may have gaming-tables (as in New York City at the Cathedral! fair) So deeply embarrassed that it has to submit to a betting contest in the very sanctuary, between two fire companies, for the possession of a dog, the affair ending in a row which was quelled by the police (as in a Baptist church in a certain city?) So indigent that it may have a neck tie and apron festival, amusement being created by mating incongruous persons by the color of the articles purchased (as a Presbyterian church has done!) So distressingly embarrassed that it may be excused for weighing the young ladies of the parish, and after recording each weight on tickets and throwing them into a box, allowing young gentlemen to draw a ticket and escort the distinguished lady to supper, paying for the meals according to the weight of his partner—three cents per pound (as a Congregational church did!) So amazingly poverty stricken that it may desecrate the Sabbath by an excursion down the river and bay, and sight-seeing in a city, refreshments and brass band and preaching on board the boat, tickets sold by pastors and church officers (as has been done by the united devotion of several Methodist congregations!")

So pitifully penniless that it must hold a pedestrian contest for boys, offering as a prize a handsome pair of pigeons, trance fee of ten cents, which is to go to the church, and the dores go to the winner (as a United Brethren church did!) No wonder that many secular papers denounce this modern innovation which has crept into the church as the "amusement heresy." This is not God's method of raising money. He says "bring your tithes into my store house, and I will pour you out a blessing," etc. Adopting the modern usage, this passage might be made to read, "Bring all the colored neck-ties and aprons, all the Japanese ware, all the fancy articles and ring cakes, have a grand social time, and see if I will not open the windows of heaven and pour you out a blessing." It sounds badly. Let us adopt God's plan instead of prostituting religion to money-making, and so depriving men of every chance of giving in a legitimate way.

3. Finally, the Bible method would abundantly supply our present demand. Let us calculate a little. The government officials estimate the annual income of the entire population of the United States to be a little over seven billions of dollars. This gives to every man, woman, and child an annual income of a little more than $175 or $35 per year for each member of a family of five. There are in the United Brethren Church, according to latest statistics, 165,000. Multiply this by fifty-five cents, the average daily income of each member, and you have the round sum of 100,000 dollars as the daily income of the United Brethren Church. The Lord's dividend, or one tenth of this amount, is 10,000 dollars. Multiply this by the number of days in a year, and we get the munificent sum of 3,650,000 as the one tenth of the annual income. This means that the church should pay every year for the charitable, benevolent, and religious purposes over three and a half million dollars, not including free will offerings. The fact is, last year, we paid only about 850,000 dollars. We must double this amount in order to claim the promise in Mal. iii-10. Who will prove the Lord in this way? God, give us open hearts and open hands so that we may also have an "open" heaven, and that this church may overflow in blessings and showers of divine grace.

If all christians of all denominations tithed their incomes, how long would it be until the gospel would be heard by every man, woman, and child on the face of the earth? How long until the millenium!—By Rev. J. W. ETTER, D.D. in the Religious Telescope.

Dear Mr. Ed.—Allow me a little space if you please, in your valuable paper. Is there any impropriety in allowing small dogs to be in the house so long as they do not disturb anyone? I have seen it allowed all my life, but now a day some people would like to set up new customs.

I wait an early reply.

WAR REPORTS.

Mr. and Mrs. P. Humphrey of Kooloonge Station Shaingay Mission, arrived here on the 1st inst also J. W. Domingo of N'Charmany Station with others including several members of the family of the late J. N. Lelevre; all fleeing from the constant rumours of war that are current in the Shaingay district.

Mr J. A. Richards, pastor of Kooloonge Station also arrived here on the 10th inst with his valuables to place the same in safe keeping until the Shaingay war is over.

Rev. J. Gomer of Shaingay writes in a private letter that there are rumours of all sorts and sizes afloat in that Quarter: not only William's war but Thomas Golah's war &c., are reported as coming, and he says further that they have heard so much, that now he can believe nothing except what he sees, and although expecting an attack at any time, yet he proposes with Rev. D. F. Wilberforce to stay and see the matters out. Mr. Wilberforce and several others among whom is Mr. R. G. Caulker; speak in like strong language of braving the thing in the strength of God of Missions and we must say that we like their faith and pluck, and believe if there were a few more such, we should hear of less plundering.

EXPORT DUTY.—As it is Centenary, but especially, Jubilee year, it would seem very fitting if Her Majesty's Government would consider the matter and remove the duty on exports from this colony; it would certainly meet the approbation of all the Queen's most loyal subjects and many others who are under her most gracious Majesty's protection. For this is certainly a source of no small amount of inconvenience, as well as expense, to shippers especially of small quantities of produce, having to pay in some cases perhaps nearly as much in fees for attendance in shipping as the duty Amts to in revenue.

CUSTOMS FEES.—This unnecessary appendage on the customs regulations is rather a hard thing to understand: men public servants employed and paid from the Government chest, who have so few office hours, ought not to be allowed fees for every particle of extra time, or if so then it would seem that the Government should extend the time of attendance on duty or otherwise pay the fees. By these remarks we do not wish to say that Customs Officers should not be paid a full compensation for their labor, or for extraordinary services rendered but we do seriously object to paying Customs' fees for every trifle.

FROM SHAINGAY.

June 2nd 1887.

We are having a mammoth war scare here for the past week; we have been hourly expecting an attack; a large number of villages have been destroyed and many prisoners taken, mostly women and children. The author of the raid is William T. G. Caulker as usual, he has sent word several times that he must destroy Shengay. How long are we to be left to the mercy of these fellows, we cannot tell nor can we tell why our chief permits things to go so far without putting forth some efforts to arrest the disturbance. The Mission house at Mambo was entered and plundered by the brave war boys, and when the Rev. Sawyer fought the man that took his coat from his back, a man who spoke good English, said, "I will split your head with my cutlass," "here's my head," said Mr. Sawyer holding his head down "split it now, you dare not touch my head," the man let him go with his coat. Mr. Sawyer and Chris. Stone remained to protect the Mission house until I sent and brought them away.

Mr. Wilberforce, Mr. Bradley and Remmie Caulker volunteered to go to Mambo and bring them away. The war-boys attempted to frighten them but sadly frightened themselves and took to the bush as our men went well armed. May 31st Mr Metzger brought 10 constables and stationed them here to protect Shengay he then proceeded to Mambo intending to go to Lawaah to see William, but he returned last night about 10 p.m. reported about 500 war-boys at Motinkle and as they gave him some trouble there, he thought best to return and write to William, he has left this afternoon for Freetown, and now that he has gone it is the general belief that the war will come in force, people are constantly urging us to flee for our lives I restrain no one but can't see my way clear to go just yet, the Lord will show us what to do and how to act in the matter. Him we trust.

Yours,

J. Gomer.

Dear Mr. Editor,

You will kindly allow me a small space in the column of your Journal for the following which I trust will be read with interest by your readers.

1st. In your issue of March 31st., I read an article signed "Observer" in which the writer reports a very striking incident which happened at Debia of a person who disguised himself into an alligator and who attempted to snatch a man from a canoe for the purpose of using his flesh for meat, but who was afterwards captured and sent to Bonthe, the matter was investigated and the prisoner sent to Freetown to be tried in the last session, when he was found guilty and sentenced to 10 years imprison't.

I am sure every one in Sherbro will be glad to hear of the sentence passed on this supposed Alligator. I am sure when the news shall have been spread all over the country especially at Tormah (the place notorious for canibalism) the people will cease from committing such foul deeds.

Instances are not wanting to prove that the law has been dealing very mildly with these wretches as was the case from Gbargroo, and of Besh High from Tormah above named, who were tried and acquitted on a similar offence. I hope the law will ever continue to show them fellows that man's flesh was never made by the Creator for food, and whenever an attempt is made by any of them to take away life by such or any other means, they may meet with similar punishment. I must remark that some years ago the Magistrates here never interfere with any one who is charged with using gree-grees or fetish to injure each other, but the late Commandant Laborde,saw that such practises were being exercised to a great extent, and believing that unless the law interfered, men's lives would be in danger, he therefore thought it necessary to set an example. He had occasion to imprison two notorious characters who charged for "using undue influence on the mind of certain of Her Majesty's subjects; to take away their lives. Since then these criminals found out that the law could not be trampled upon with impunity, and in the Freetown "Weekly News" I read of cases of a similar nature tried in all the Police Courts and were punished.

I am glad to read from the "Weekly News" of the 21st May that the Colonial Government at Freetown have entered into a contract with the Newly Established Firm of P. & A. Swanzy for a steamer to convey Mails and passengers between Sherbro & Freetown to commence operation in the early part of the next year. If this is so Mr. Editor, I must congratulate a "Sierra Leonean" for his able article on the subject which appeared in your Issue of March 15, and yourself for your Editorial and valuable suggestion given in your Issue of April 15. I wish abundant success to the noble undertaking.

By the way; I see the Centenary and Jubilee movements has taken the attention of three of our big men in this place, who are to be seen in the morning and afternoon walking from house to house for subscriptions, this I must say is a move in the right direction; for no other person could have been more fitted for the work than the three just mentioned: by that means the lower or middle classes become acquainted with these great heads, and they also, by their sweet words and winning countenances soon gain the minds of the people.

I wish them success as they are determined to show to the world by their self denial and exertion that Sherbro is not behind hand in this grand movement.

Thanking you for the space I have already occupied.

Yours as usual

JUSTITIA.

QUEEN'S BIRTHDAY.

[COMMUNICATED.]

In honor of Her Majesty's Birthday, a public Holiday was granted to all the public offices as an observance of the ome.

The members of the "Bonthe Mechial Improvement Club" (The only recognised existing Club) gave a very social and agreeable dance at the Court Hall under the kind patronage of Dr. M. L. Jarrett.

The Hall was tastefully decorated with flags and evergreens and was well lighted. On entering the Hall, it puts one (who is just from Freetown) in mind of the grand decorations which always attend the Court Hall or the Model School on such occasions.

Amongst the guests we noticed the Patron (Dr. M. L. Jarrett.)

Mrs. William Hughes, Alex. S. Yorke, and J. B. Parkinson.

Misses—M. Brown and Colliers J., R., S., & D., S. A. C. Davies, P. M'Cauley, S. Thomas, & M. Williams.

Messrs J. A. Williams, J. B. Parkinson, R. T. Collier, C. B. Collier, (C.J. Cole, C. W. Beetz, Directors of the Club) T. E. Macfoy, M. Z. M'Cauley, C. S. Brown, William Hughes, H. R. Williams, H. Coker, J. A. Dennis, and others, besides the members of the Club.

The Band-set was in attendance and began duty at 8 30 p.m. Very choice Programme was provided consisting of 22 dances which found work enough for the brisky feet to perform till the little hours of the morning.

We congratulate the promoters of the Club for the success of their first public dance given at the Court Hall and hope that the similar success will attend the Jubilee and Centenary Celebrations.

Mr. J. M. Stoner of Manheim Pa. (U.S.A.) has recently sent us another parcel of 16 story Books for Manoh Station Shaingay Districts: he has also sent us a nice prize book for Sallie Caulker of Mamboe a girl mention by the Rev. J. C. Sawyer in an article published in our Issue of March 15th '87. Mr. Stoner is much interested in our paper, and offers a prize for subscribers: see his letter in this issue.

Revd D. W. Thorpe leaves for Freetown today. (15th)

NEWS ITEMS.

FROM MANDO.—It is reported that a number of refugees from the Shaingay district had been, and some still are hiding there, from the ravages of the war that is going on in Chief Neale's territory; among these also we understand that there are several teachers of Shaingay district, that have escaped thither for refuge; also a good many notable people; further report says that war from another quarter also threatens Mando.

FROM KONCONANY.—We learn that some stir had been created, recently, in consequence of various war-rumours that were beginning to circulate from the Karghorro'n on the one side, and the interior (or may be we should say the upper Gbargroo) on the other; however it seems difficult to get at the truth in the matter; the officer in charge, Mr. G. H. Garrett, accompanied by Mr. Wm. Hughes, chief clerk, visited Koconany about the 4th instant to enquire into the cause of the rumour.

FROM SHAINGAY.—We learn that most of the people have fled from about the place; but while an attack is hourly expected from a strong party of War-Boys, yet, the Missionaries, Revs. J. Gomer, D. F. Wilberforce and others remained at their post.

From Sulymah.—The sudden death by drawing, is reported of a boy, who was trying to circulate a false alarm of war, in order that the people might run away from their goods when he hoped to profit by stealing the same. Such unscrupulous vagabonds are plentiful and they greatly augment rumours of war in the disturbed Districts; if they, in many cases, do not actually start them and in this way much of the consternation among the people is produced.

Mr George Rose the Travelling Evangelist left here on the 4th inst after conducting six weeks successful Gospel and Temperance meetings at Bonthe York Island, Bendoo, Victoria, and several open Air Services in the Farkies and other places at Sherbro, he is proceeding after the rains to Bathurst Gambia for similar services, where we wish him all success.

U.B. Missionary Board Meeting—We learn from the Dayton Daily Herald that the Board of Missions of the U.B. Church, began its thirty-eigth Annual Session, at Lagonda Ohio, (U.S.A.) on the 5th ultimo.

More books for our Mission Schools, are very much needed; American friends wishing to make large or small donations to our Missions could do no better than to send us New or second-hand School books such may easily be sent by Mail from any Post Office in the United States.

BIRTH.—At the U. B. Mission House, Mando, Mrs. J. Arthur Richards of Kooloonge Station on Wednesday the 8th instant at 10 p.m of a still-born daughter.—Friends abroad will please receive this information.

Personal

Mrs A. L. Williams of the Mendi Mission School of this place was quite unwell but is better again.

Revd G. N. Jowett pastor of Good Hope Station has also been suffering from pains in the limbs.

Mrs Revd J. C. Thomas was also quite unwell, but we believe she is something better.

Sergt C. N. Taylor the hero of the fight during the early part of the disturbances in Sulymah districts; gave us a call on the 2nd inst. We were pleased to congratulate him upon his success, in repulsing the savage hordes at the French Factory.

Mr. J. W. Domingo of N'Charman who arrived on the 1st inst. left here on his return on the 2nd he proposes to hold the fort at N'Charman.

Corp'l J. W. Nicol arrived here from Sulymah on the 9th inst., he promised a call but we suppose duty prevented.

Capt. A. North Daniel who arrived per s.s. Mandingue on the 10th inst., gave us a pleasant call the same day. We were much pleased to see him again in Sherbro. He left on the 11th per Govt. Steam launch for Sulymah District to relieve Comdt. Moseley.

Mr Langley Grant formerly of the West African Reporter Freetown, but who we believe is now engaged in business in the rivers, gave us a call on the 11 inst. before leaving for Meenah.

Mr. G. H. Garrett officer in charge and Mr. Wm. Hughes Comdt's Chief clerk left here with a few police for Koconnay on the 13th and we understand the police are to be stationed about the Head waters of the Kargborah.

Mr. E. A. Lewis Photographer called this morning; he has had, we are glad to learn, a good run of business in Photographing, and his work gives satisfaction.

Miss Florence Thompson cousin of Rev. G. G. M. Nicol, lately arrived from Shaingay, left per s.s. Mandingue for Freetown on the 12th inst.

RUM DRINKING.

Sir,—Among the many prevailing evils, which tend to demoralize a country, city, or town, the drinking of Rum is most injurious; for thousands had met with an untimely grave, by the incessant drinking of this alcoholic, and poisonous liquor, 'Rum.'

A few weeks ago, in this place, they had what we call a three days funeral wake, and among those present were three intemperate friends; (a trader, fisherman and cooper) who, through the permission of the hostess, would make the house of a certain man, (working a little distance from this place, and could not possibly be at home every day) a rendezvous, for the purpose of drinking rum, gossiping, etc. These men from the wake-house to their place of meeting, being inebriated, not in their proper humor, spoke every thing ill, and detrimental to the trader, respecting a young man who had been acquainted with the trader, sometime ago; after they had talked a good lot of falsehoods the trader was annoyed; went home and took a double barrolled gun loaded about 12 o'clock night went out intentionally to shoot the young man; he would have succeeded in committing the action, had it not been that the young man that night did not come outside from his house.

Mr. Editor, what would have induced this trader to attempt to commit such base and atrocious action if not the drinking of rum? It is a fact, that Sierra Leoneans, who have left home for many years, and have made the wilds of Sherbro country their home, must of necessity be naturalized to the habits and customs of the heathens. I would therefore advice the trader, and his confreres drunken partners to give up drinking rum, to make themselves respectable in every possible way, and learn to adopt better principles.

"Prevention is better than cure."

"A word to the wise is sufficient."

Thanking you Mr. Editor, for the space I have occupied. Yours

Mocolo, NEPTUNE

13 June '87.

Dear Mr. Editor,

During the space of a month, three clerks were dismissed, and one sent to prison for dishonesty in this place.

It would be out of place for me to justify the acoused parties for the mean and base action they have committed; but viewing the matter in the right way, the action is caused indirectly by the employers; for, in a business where the annual transactions come up to £1000 or £2000 such business if properly managed, ought to employ about three clerks, at the rate of £110 per annum; but I regret to find, that our so-called Merchants of Sherbro, employ clerks and book-keepers, when they are indigently disposed, and thereby seize the advantageous opportunity by offering them twenty-five or thirty shillings per month.

"It shows an evil disposition to take advantage of a man in distress," for "Necessity knows no law."

Mr. Editor, it is an erroneous idea in the part of our Merchants if they think that by offering their clerks low wages because they are in need, they have more gains, and expenses lessen; they forget that as the clerks are not satisfactorily paid, so they would never seek the interest of the business: the goods are not safe; a little pilfering of the till now and then: last of all the business becomes reckless, for the sake of employing 'Cheap clerks.' I therefore consider these so-called Merchants or dealers, as Novises, and need to be taught the rudiments of Merchandising; for if this error is not corrected, like others who had attained to the height of Mercantile pursuits, will surely make a wreck of their business through their own folly.

I would therefore as a friend advise our so-called Merchants or dealers, to employ respectable and trust-worthy men, who are sober, dutiful and strictly honest, with hand-some salaries, than having dishonest men who have to be sent to a penitentiary, for the sake of cheapness.

"Birds of the same feathers, flock themselves together."

Thanking you Mr. Editor, for the occupied space.

I am, Dear Mr. Editor,

Bonthe, Sherbro, FACT.

13th June '87.

Dear Bro Evans.—It would be doing a piece of gross injustice to the cause and our dear Bro. Taylor of Mando, should I hesitate for a single moment to give publicity to the fact that I was pleasingly surprised, when a few days ago I was under the painful necessity of quitting our much loved Station at Kooloonge in consequence of the war disturbances which just now seem to interrupt in a great measure sacred and secular progress in Sherbro land, and sought shelter at Mando, to find how in every department of the work Bro Taylor (by the grace of God) had succeeded before this I could scarcely fully realize all I had read about Mando and our work there especially considering the many labor difficulties which one has to contend with in these parts of the master's Vineyard I could but say, "Praised be the Lord"

I had the pleasure, in the midst of my flight, of speaking for the master to a very orderly and encouraging congregation on Sunday morning the 29th ult from 1 Kings xviii–21 We had quite a glorious time of it.

And while congratulating Bro and sister Taylor on the large success which has attended their united humble efforts for the establishment of the "Kingdom" and the pulling down of the strong holds of sin and Satan we should also be thankful to Almighty God for vouchsafing these successes. May the day soon dawn when the prophets of the Parrots, Temne, Yassie, and other secret Societies (which are all to be found in the one town of Mando, beaming in the Temple of God on all sides) and their devotees, exclaim like Israel The "Lord He is the God" "The Lord He is the God!"

Thanking you for space occupied.

Yours in the faith

J. A. RICHARDS

Bonthe 13th June 1887.

Dear Mr Editor,—What do you think? My uncle Thomas Kaglar Caulker came here during my absence, to ask our people here together with my brother to aid him in capturing Mr. Neal Caulker chief of Shaingay, he adds that I was bearing some grievance against the chief of Shaingay respecting the letters he wrote to the commandant to have me doomed, or sentenced for Freetown gaol without judging me. Now the strength of this he knows if I were at home, I would have no fily given him war to go to Shaingay in reply this to Mr Editor I wrote him that had I the power to help Neal Caulker I would do so, but would not be against him. He is the one that has raised me up let him do with me, what seemeth good, either evil or good, but I wont carry war to him even had I the power.

Kaglar has sent repeated messengers to say if we at Tombay are not going to join him we are to give a slave money or three pounds, so he will not bring the war here.

Now Mr Editor as my Mission is all for peace, I am not going to carry any war, nor give it if I had the power But if any of my relatives do to bring it to us because we refuse, to aid them I fight and protect myself, after which if I die, I'll die contended. Thanking you Mr Editor for space occupied.

yours truly

TEMPERANCE.

Charge of the Rum-Brigade.

Through the streets, through the streets,
Through by the hundred
Into those traps of hell
Swept the boys onward.
"Here every one is free,
None dare to hinder me,
And they have licensed me,"
The rum seller thundered.

"Here every one is free,
And the court licensed me;
What though my business be
Death to the hundred?
What though my bright saloon,
At night-time and at noon,
Ruin boys in their bloom,
By the hundred?"

Rum shops to right of them,
Rum shops to left of them,
Rum shops in front of them,
Shining and curs'ained!
Beckoned by love for fun,
Lured from their quiet home
Into those dens of rum,
Their fate is certain.

See them to ruin go!
Hear the wild shrieks of woe,
"Rum has debauched us so!"
(Good people wonder-d.)
"Now 'tis too late to save!"
Now yawns a drunkard's grave!
Drink! drink! is all we crave!"
Slain by the hundred!

Rum shops to right of them,
Rum shops to left of them,
Rum shops to rear of them,
Welcomed and beckoned
Who can condemn them now?
They were seduced to bow,
In their frail youth, you know,
To the saloon. That's how
They were ruined.
Rum-shops were licensed to Strike them with fatal blow—
Blow that them ruined.
Licensed by men who pray!
Licensed by judges, yes,
Licensed by votes that say,
No guilt is reckoned—
Reckoned 'gainst those who sell
The foul cup of hell!
Even when they know so well
Thousands are ruined—
Ruined in home and purse,
Ruined in name, yea, worse,
Ruined with blighting curse,
Ruined forever!

Who, then, shall bear the blame?
We ask in Heaven's name,
On whom be hurled the shame
Of this destruction?
All who have licensed rum,
All who have dealt in rum,
All who have voted rum,
All who have failed to come
Prompt to the action.

Throttle this enemy;
There's but one remedy,
'Tis prohibition.
This preach and vote and pray,
'Tis God's approved way;
Vote as you preach and pray,
Vote prohibition.
Woodbridge, California. Sel.

THE LIVING WORD.

Concluded from our last.

Their Bibles are far too well preserved they bear few marks; they preach, but they do not "preach the Word," they speak, but not "as the oracles of God," and the words which they utter to the people are not the words which God has promised to bless. God is pledged to stand by his own word. As the rain descendeth and watereth the earth, and causeth it to bring forth and bud, that it may give seed to the sower and bread to the eater, so shall His Word be which goeth forth out of His mouth; it shall not return to Him void but it shall accomplish its destined Work.

It will be a happy day for us when we preach less of self and more of Christ, less of the words which men's wisdom teacheth, and more of the words which the Holy Ghost teaches. The converts who are first converted by the Word of God, who have not felt that Word like a fire and hammer breaking their heart, and who are not nourished up in the words of faith and sound doctrine, too often go to swell the ranks of the openly apostate, or the worldly members of the church who have a name to live and are dead. Only those live who partake of the life of the living Word of God, only those grow who are fed upon the sincere milk of the Word. Only those are strong in whom the Word of God abideth, and who have overcome the Wicked One. Only those who are sanctified by the Word of truth, and who through the washing of water by the Word, are fitted for the presence and the glory of the heavenly Master.——The Christian.

SUPERSTITION.

Mr. Editor,—It is a fact that the Mendi and Sherbroes, but especially the former, adhere with great tenacity to their former notions of things for not long since, I was walking along the waterside on Heddle Street in this place when my attention was drawn toward a monster Alligator, floating leisurely, with the tide toward Mocolo, his head was well up, and in fact his whole length was slightly visible, as he moved on, along the surface of the nearly smooth river, while looking at the monster several natives (Mendis) approached me, and when I noticed their coming, an elderly woman who could speak a little English, said "see alligator." I said 'yes,' she then proceeded a step or two peering all the while at the creature, and then remarked "he da inside small canoe! see um! see um! he da go Debia side;" of course her meaning was that the object seen was a witch alligator and that it was going to the vicinity of Debia, for the purpose of catching people, and while there is very little doubt about a nefarious cannibal traffic going on in that quarter at times; under the guise of alligators, yet it is quite as certain that the monster referred to above, was a real crocodile, and that the canoe was only in the woman's imagination, which has its foundation in her superstitious nature.

Yours truly, J. ALBERT.

[COMMUNICATED.]

Mr. Editor,—I was privileged to be present at the Anniversary of the Wesleyan Missions which took place on Monday evening the 30th ult. The Chair was occupied by Dr. L. M. Jarrett M.R.C.S.

The following gentlemen appeared on the platform: J. C. Thomas, D. A. John, G. G. M. Nicol B. A. (pastor of St. Matthew's Church,) J. A. Evans (U. B.C.) and S. W. Adams Esq.

The report was read by the pastor Rev. J. C. Thomas which showed that the Amount collected during the year amounted to £67.

The following gentlemen addressed the meeting, Revs J. A. Evans, D. A. John, G. G. M. Nicol & Mr S. W. Adams. The speeches were ably delivered and listened to with marked attention. Mr. Nicol remarked that this was the first time he had be'n invited to attend a meeting in connection with this Society and that he was happy to be present and to take part in the meeting. He spoke a great deal of the work done by the mission and recommended every one present to support the noble cause

Mr Adams gave a very touching incident of what he saw during his stay in the Kittam, how some people suffered under their cruel and heartless masters without any one to interpose on their behalf, and he hastened the time when the society will extend their mission throughout the borders of the Kittam, Gallinas, and when oppressions will cease in those regions.

After vote of thanks to the Chairman was returned, the meeting came to a close at 9 p.m.

MISCELLANY.

The bread of life is love; the salt of life is work; the sweetness of life is porverty; the water of life is faith.

No great characters are formed in this world without suffering and self denial.

Be loving, and you will never want for love: be humble, and you will never want for guiding.

Four things come not back—the spoken word, the sped arrow, the past life, the neglected opportunity.

As when the bird flies, new evidence is within its reach that God is, and that he rewards those who diligently seek him.

A holy life is made up of a number of small things. Little words, not eloquent speeches or sermons; little deeds, not miracles or battles; nor one great heroic act of mighty martyrdom, make up the true Christian life. The little constant sunbeam, not the lightning; the waters of Siloam "that go softly" in the meek mission of refreshment, not the "waters of the river, great and many," rushing down in noisy torrents, are the true symbols of a holy life. The avoidance of little evils, little sins, little inconsistencies, little follies, indiscretions, and imprudences, little foibles, little indulgences of the flesh: the avoidances of such little things as these go far to make up, at least, the negative of a holy life.

All death in nature is birth; at the moment of death appears visible the rising life. Death and birth is simply the circling of life in itself in order to present itself ever more brightly and more like to itself.

As when the bird flies, new evidence is within its reach that the air will bear it up, so, when the soul becomes Christian, new evidence is within its reach that God is, and that he rewards those who diligently seek him.—Sel.

IS IT A BUG?

by the burden of Cæsar's correspondences so obstinately maintained, of an amusing incident said to have occurred in one of the Western States of America. An individual with a rather peculiarly shaped nose, went into the fields one morning to hunt for game. Approaching a tree he espied what he took to be a coon. Without much ceremony he opened fire, but the little animal was obstinate and refused to take shots and come down, exasperated our would-be huntsman poured out more shots upon the tree. A gentleman in a neighbouring field startled by so many shots, hastened to the place to ascertain the cause. In answer to his questions, the huntsman pointing to the tree exclaimed, "There! there!" (bang!) "dont you see him!" (bang!) "he is there yet!" The stranger failing to detect anything in the shape of a living animal upon the tree, and fearing there was a "screw loose" somewhere, turned with a searching gaze upon the face of the huntsman. He burst into an almost uncontrolable laughter; for upon the promontory of the peculiarly shaped nose he discerned a little animal that might have been a housedog—the innocent cause of so much waste of powder and shot. I shall not condescend to reply to Cæsar's last. Let him fire away, only bid him be careful it is'nt a bug on the ridge of his nose.

Manheim, Pa., U. S. A.
May 9th, 1887.

Dear Brother Evans.—Manheim is a town of about 2,300 inhabitants, it lies 14 miles north of the Susquehanna river, 30 miles east of Harrisburg, the Capitol of this State. Philadelphia the second largest city in the United States is 80 miles east of us, and Washington the Capitol of the United States is about 110 miles south of this place.

We have six churches, one of them having no congregations, the Salvation Army is using it for their place of worship.

I must say I am as much interested in the "Early Dawn," as when I first saw it. I have been receiving it regularly since I subscribed for it, and I do not desire to stop the paper.

I believe I stated in my letter that I take pleasure in reading the different correspondents. I noticed in the different letters that rum and Secret Societies are two great impediments to the advancement of the cause of Christ, rum is also a curse to us here. We have members in our church who are being led away from Christ, and back to sin through satan's rum. Some young men are so addicted to the use of rum, that it seems impossible for the Church, kind parents, or any thing else to draw them from the curse. Only this week the mother of a young man contemplated, and was about to commit suicide through her sons continual drinking.

Secret Societies or Purrohism, is commenced, I do not know the nature or object of the order, but from all accounts it is quite different from our Secret Societies here. We have six Societies here, but we do not consider them enemies to religion, they frequently go to the House of God in a body and have a sermon preached to them. They are purely beneficial organizations, attending to the wants of sick and disabled members. The Bible I believe, is used in each order

I would be pleased to know that the subscription list of the Early Dawn is increasing, & in order to help to do that I desire to make your readers an offer. To any one sending to the Editor of the Early Dawn, the highest number of yearly subscriptions in three months from the time this appears in the paper I will send for one year, the Manheim sentinel, a weekly, thirty six column paper published in this place, it is a four page paper 22 by 28 inches, now let us see who gets the paper I must ask pardon of the Editor for using so much space in the paper,

Wishing the Dawn success, and praying for the advancement of Christ's kindom in Africa.

I remain your brother in Christ,
M. J. STONER.

Dear Mr. Editor,—Is it a pity that our merchants, traders, &c, of the present day do not employ qualified persons to perform the duties of writing clerks in their business, but those whose knowledge of business communication is not worth the name. By this means these people offer their services for a nominal salary thereby depriving others of better qualifications from obtaining employment. I subjoin specimen of a Receipt given by an individual in a locality to one of his Debtors, and leave your readers to judge for themselves.

"May 29, 1887.

"Receive from Mr. GILLPING the "some of Three and six for Mr. "ISCAH COLE.

Now, in the name of conscience what could you or your readers make out of such a paper? Yet the merchants are satisfied to pay such clerks 10s. to 15s. per month. I hope the merchants &c, will soon see the necessity of employing competent clerks.

Yours,
A CLERK.

Dear Editor,—The watchman sees, and hears what he should report; and I dare say that if my mouth were to be closed by two hands I would surely say something audible for the present miseries demand it.

Rainbah of Manyah town, and the notorious William T. G. Caulker (who when he was at Bonkan, Bome River called him-self William the devil,) have put the country in a shaking position. There is no standing still now by the majority of natives and Sierra Leoneans, but just a look out by those who have not yet gone away for a place to go to, and when to go. The above-named men have employed "ragged rascals" who at the same time are cowards and who are now busy in perpetrating their lubarous actions viz. plundering and kidnapping &c. Ah! the present condition of natives on that side of the country is to be pitied and more miserable than those of Shingay, for, I have seen a good number of those from the eastern side of chief T. N. Caulker's district, who were forced to take refuge in mangrove swamps and on the beach for the rain without food when it is time for the natives to sow their seeds, besides, these cowardly scoundrels are destroying what has been sown, and laying waste some of the towns and farkies. What will be the result of this depredations &c? I answer it will result in great starvation. Have you not heard that many have gone to Mando, Damah Islands, Yainkain, Bembelloh, and even Bonthe for refuge? If you were to see the present condition of some deserted towns, and where the average attendance in divine services used to be 60, tears will trickle down your cheeks. What must the chief now do? Here is William T. G. Caulker the usurper, within chief T. N. Caulker's territory, subtly gaining influence over the majority the subchiefs and head-men of towns and farkies, so much so that the most reliable ones are turned against chief Caulker and are on William's side. The question now is what must the chief do to put an end to these troubles? The true policy in this case would be just what the natives dont like but that is what those who are not for chief T. N. Caulker, but for W. T. G. Caulker deserve.

To be continued in my next.

THE WAR AT SHAINGAY

THREE ATTACKS.

Saturday 18th & Sunday 19th June.

SOME KILLED, MANY WOUNDED.

ARRIVAL OF CAPT. HALKETT.

For some time past, the notorious William T. G. Caulker, had been busily engaged in overrunning the Shaingay District, the different reports of his operations, but especially of his intentions, were very conflicting; yet the work of overrunning chief Neal's Territory was pressed with rigor and the emissaries of crime and ruin, had been dispatched in every direction. Treason and Arson, Blood-shed and Rapine had been proclaimed, believed in, and practiced in all quarters; until it seemed Chief Neal was bereft of every hope for the safety even of his capital. Meanwhile the savage hordes at the instigation of William and his Villainous accomplices poured into the Territory. Sword and flame, played wild havoc with Towns and Farkies, while the people were captured, plundered, killed in cold blood, or trying to make their escape. They fled in all directions from the Territory. The utmost confusion prevailed; police were sent, the Manager from Kent was sent, but to no purpose. The war raged in every quarter fury until only Shaingay town seemed to remain and at length, on Saturday the 18th inst. nearly sacked as it was the native town of Shaingay was taken by the war-boys, the few people remaining were captured without resistance. But further on was the Mission town with at least two strong holds.—The Mission House, the residence of the Rev. J. Homer, and Eastbourne grave the residence of Rev. D. F. Wilberforce—each of these, strongly kept by vigilant and brave men. Yet these places were greater objects of plundering than any others; so the war-boys had to try them and about 2 p.m. of the 18th, attacked very subtilely the Mission House; but they were so warmly responded to, by the braves within, that they fled in precipitate flight to the native town, where being joined by others they attempted to fight their pursuers who had followed them from the Mission House, but by that time. The Easthourne's grove boys had come on the scene rough and ready and joining the Mission company under Corp'l Fype, soon completely routed the war boys and sent them rapidly to the bush. But the next day (Sunday 19th) the enemy appeared again: met the people in waiting for them about F. Chapel the war-boys opened fire but it was of no avail they were soon obliged to run the second time. But not being satisfied returned for the third attack which they were just making when Capt. F. C. Halkett landed with 20 police from Freetown to reinforce the Station; which together with those on the ground soon put the war boys to flight again but this time they were hotly pursued quite a number of them were killed, and many wounded as it would appear from the reports that have reached us by persons who were on the ground during the fight and a day or two afterwards. The last rout of the war-boys seemed to be complete, and report says they made for the interior haying in view to recruit their numbers and return strong enough to drive the English people, who they report killed many of them at Shaingay. Of course we have no fears of their returning to drive away the English, but do believe that if the place is not kept well protected for a time that like their cowardly selves, they may return stealthily and take midnight revenge on a defenseless people; hence the Government should pursue and arest the leaders of such a Murderous movement, as this Shaingay war has been, and when they have arested them, they should be severely punished, as their brutal crimes richly deserve.

MY VIEW OF THINGS.

JUBILEE OF HER MAJESTY

THE QUEEN,

AND

Centenary of Sierra Leone,

SHERBRO.

DEAR Mr. Editor,—Never in the annals of Sherbro's history, has there been such a manifestation of popular rejoicings as was witnessed during the past week from Monday the 20th to Friday 24th inst.

On Monday the 20th the booming of cannons and display of flags of various colours at the early hours of the morning, announced to the anxious public the dawn of that long expected and auspicious day. The natives who had had previous notice and for whom preparations were made by the Executive Committee of the Celebrations commenced to play their own part at 3 p.m by the beating of drums and other enjoyments. The premises of Mr. Farmington was the first visited, next Messrs C. J. Cole and C. B. Collier—Among the native enjoyments were 6 Bundo devils from different towns, who danced and amused themselves to the satisfaction of the general public. During the day the whole town was astir. Men women and children were to be seen strutting in graceful appearance which demonstrated to the public their loyalty to their august Queen and joy for the Centenary.

This day having been set apart for amusement and enjoyment of the natives, those at Bonthe, as also from Mocolo, Victoria, and York Island came in a group and played their own part in the Celebrations. They were to be seen at the Government compounds, the Commandant and Doctor's quarters, the residences of Messrs C.B.C C.I.C., J.B.P. and others, where they were luxuriously supplied with all kinds of spirits to which they did ample justice.

Tuesday the 21st was the day set apart for the enjoyment of the Day School Children in the District—The Mendi Mission School were the first to be seen with their Band playing some sweet music, which called the attention of the general public—Next followed the St. Matthew's School children and the Wesleyan School, then the Mocolo and York Island children which numbers on the whole about 600. These sat to a splendid repast prepared for them in the spacious Shed erected for the occasion by the energetic Overseer of Works A. G. Walker.

The Commandant and the Sub-Collector (Mr. Garrett) graced the place with their presence. On entering the Shed the whole assembly stood up, and with one voice sang the "National Anthem" after which the Commandant made some very appropriate speech suitable for the occasion and retired.

Mechanics of all grades for whom preparations were made sat to a splendid repast in a room provided in the shed for them, under the superintendence of Messrs (Coopers) Sil C. Davies and J. G. Williams of the Senegal Company where they enjoyed themselves most satisfactorily. Other persons who are not mechanics were invited to enjoy themselves.

Wednesday 22nd in consequence of the death of Mr J. B. Brown a merchant of this place, who was buried this day the women deferred their enjoyment for the following day.

On Thursday the 23rd the women who had formed themselves into a body for the purpose of dancing on the occasion were as follows.

Mrs. R. V. Johnson (patroness) Rose Minister Fetitia Davis, Nancy Cole, Yorke, Macauley, Leigh Misses Turner, Davis, &c.

They marched in procession from the residence of the patroness with a beautiful banner prepared in letters of pink, blue &c., by Mr. Dennis the Gaoler with the following inscription, "Hail Queen's Jubilee and Centenary of Sierra Leone" with a picture of the Royal family and Her Majesty the Queen among the group. They were dressed in native costume as follows:—Loose short gowns worked with rich lace and embroidery, flourishing silk hilfs of various colors wrapped with black velvet, and richly worked wrappers. They paraded along the streets to the Government yard, where they continued dancing till the evening. Concourse of people gathered to see these ladies of beauty.

Conspicuous among the dances of this class were Mrs Minister, Davis, Macauley, Brown and Miss Davis, these danced special fine dance; the other females who are not of this body danced also the Goombay, Battah &c. which were well performed. A splendid repast was provided for them to which they did ample justice.

The men also participated in the repast and enjoyments, 2 Agoogoos appeared on the scene.

In the afternoon of the same day, a few gentlemen of the upper classes formed in procession by twos and paraded the streets from Victoria Road round to Heddle street with the band of the Juvenile Club playing. As ensign held by one of the members A banquet was given the same evening at the residence of the Commandant, to which many were invited.

On Friday the 27th the women again paraded the streets with their banner, singing and dancing all along. In the evening of the same day there was a Torch light procession in which are to be seen men, women and children of all grades, the rich as well as the poor all enjoying themselves in unison. After the Torch light procession was over a Grand Ball was given at the Court Hall which brought the ever to be remembered Jubilee and Centenary season to a close.

It is well to note that during the Celebrations perfect order was maintained by all classes.

God save the Queen.

Bonthe, Yours

June 27th, '87. JUSTITIA.

[FROM A CORRESPONDENT]

Now, the Jubilee and Centenary celebrations, like all other Festivals, the advent of which was so enthusiastically waited for with all anticipation, by the public in general, have, in the natural course of things, come, past, and gone; leaving behind the mere remembrances of them. Now, let us take a bird's eye view of the whole and see their effects as far as Sherbro is concerned—for every thing must have an effect, good, bad or indifferent.

At Bonthe, among the series of enjoyments stands conspicuous, the wrapper dance or fancy-dress goombay of the women. Those who have in charge the religious welfare of the people, ought to be able, by this sudden insight into the inclination of their real nature, to see that the pretension made to religious scruples is a protracted farce, and that the universal rejoicings of late was just a fit opportunity to throw off the mask and appear in their true colours—if only for a short time.

Our heathen brethren are surely entitled to their own share of praise in the late celebrations, for though they may not quite understand the cause for such turnings up—yet they really believe in the rule of rejoicing when others rejoice. It would be worth awhile to know whether they would be so ready to weep when others weep.

At Bendoo, the only notable thing done to celebrate Her Majesty's Jubilee and the Centenary of Sierra Leone, was the giving of a treat to the—school-ren! On the occasion of which lavishable affair, Darby and Joan had all the day to themselves; and, in their own way elaborate, and unique, was all the affair; and the evening part of the business went off in such a style as would put a villager in mind of Christmas at Waterloo in olden times.

GERMANY DISTRICT MEETING

Mr. Editor,—I am just back from Germany, leaving Rev. J. M. Lesher there to hold first round of quarterly meetings. He reached London from Africa May 20th at night, and on the 23rd we started to annual district meeting, which met in Gallnow Germany May 25th, the two days spent in attending to business and worshiping God were busy, happy days. All passed off well, Mr. Lesher did so well preaching German that I dont think he ought to preach in any other language very much.

The past year was one of the most successful in the history of our German mission work. There was more money raised for the different interests of the work, than ever before, and a larger increase of members. There was a net gain of 144 members after deducting 98 as losses by expulsion, removals, and death, much the larger part of this loss was by removals.

There were nine men employed last year, but ten given work for the present year. Two of these are single and two others young married men, the single men get the enormous salary of 83 dollars each a year one of the young married men twice this, and the other one 178 dollars, the largest salary paid is 388 dollars, and that only to two of the missionaries, the one has a wife and five children to support, and the other one has extra hard work, and expense.

Here, as in Africa, we are taking collections regularly, the missionary collection taken the last night of our meeting was good, though by a strange mishap it was not announced the previous night. Failure to do this, brought to light the following good quality, among these German United Brethren (1) Those who had not money to give then came and told us, that they were sorry they did not know of the collection, but would bring it next night, for a protracted meeting was in progress, and what our people in Germany promise they do faithfully. Truly God is with us in our foreign work.

London England,

June 15th '87. D. E. Flickinger.

Mr. Editor,—We have had a little taste of country war. Saturday the 18th inst., about 1 o'clock between 2:00 to 3:00 of the war boys took the village of Shaingay; a few of the people left there were captured by them. A part of the war boys then started for the Mission, where they arrived about—1. 30. p. m., we were watching for them, and when they were n sareenough to the Mission house as we thought we ordered them to turn back. Mr. E. T. Bradley and Police Corporal Fyne, commanded the front and west sides of the Mission house whilst a few Mission boys with myself and labourers managed the rear. Six Police were equally distributed on the piazza outside, and the Shengay Carpenters attended the Brass cannon that Remmie Caulker brought from Shaingay loaded and has pointed out of one of the basement windows he (Remmie) mammed his own room with a couple of boys: the two men and children were sent up to the garret and basement, as the warrior did not turn back when ordered a rifle was raised on them from the dining room window the two men that were in the advance with a white flag, turned back and started to run. I told the men they might fire to frighten them which they did; there was a general stampede of the whole party: many were crawling through the cassada and coffee thinking they were hid but we could plainly see them from our back piazza and kitchen window all of our boys and the police begged to be allowed to follow them Mr. Bradly and the Corp'l both said let us go and drive them from Shaingay. No quicker said than they were off on a double quick. A part was kept however at the Mission for fear of a surprise at Shaingay the Mendies had a strong force they were armed with swords and spears, here they turned and showed fight, Mr. Wilberforce hearing our fire had taken his boys and gone to Shaingay being thus strengthened they made short work with the Mendies they soon took to the bush, they kill'd one of our men and wounded two; they left two dead behind them, when one of their men fell two or three men would catch him up and run with him.

At 9 o'clock Sabbath morning they returned again with guns: our boys were out watching for them near the Chapel, they opened the fire on our boys, fired three shots without effect, then the Mission boys opened on them one man fell the others fled they were followed a short distance. Between 11 and 12 o'clock they returned again with a stronger force by this time the Gun boat Gashawk had landed Capt Halkett with 20 more Constables these joined our men and drove them again, in going over the ground yesterday our men saw three of their dead still lying. A krooghah of theirs was that which they carried off; an escaped prisoner brought word that they were coming yesterday for their pay they have not yet appeared.

J. Gomer.

P S. This flag of truce is only a sham to deceive people after the fight a man came to us at the Mission said they came to him with the same flag beckoning him to them he went not thinking of mischief they seized him and tied him the cord was still on his on his neck. Crp'l Fyne and his men played their part well and deserve Credit as well as our own boys and Mission laborers.

Mr Editor,

I beg to inform you (as a subscriber of the Early Dawn) that the mispenned name W. E. O. Thompson is N. E. O. T. Will you be pleased as to change it?

I also ask your favor to insert the death of (my grand mother) Mrs Louisa Williams, died on the 12th inst, aged 70 years. She died a christian death—was a full member of St. Edward's Church, Kent. Leaving encouraging words to her bereaved children and "sleeps in Jesus."

May this meet you well and love to Mrs and children.

I remain ever

REFORM.

Dear Mr. Editor,—I have been reading with a great deal of interest in the columns of your contemporary the "Methodist Herald," a good deal on the above subject as dealt upon by one of the leading authorities in Freetown, with regards to "Name" and "Dress." I thought it was taken a step in the right direction too, and heartily do I support the motion. Now that Sierra Leone is entering into another important epoch of her history, I think is a fair opportunity to make a good start; since a 'good beginning ensures a good end,' at least, generally. But I would venture to say further that "Reform" as far as Sierra Leone and some other countries in the West Africa Settlements are concerned, but the former in particular, is highly needed not only in "Name" and "Dress" [which do not constitute a nation's greatness] but in a good deal more than these.

Reform is needed in the "Church"—Pulpit ministrations will be meeting their ends better, if those who administered them were more careful about the spiritual results of the seed they sow in the name of the Lord Jesus, than as at the present for the carnal criticisms the fops who go to Church barely to catch the grammar and not the spirit of the word dispensed. Reform is needed in preachers and hearers.

Reform is needed in the Social, Political and all sorts of Circles in Sierra Leone. There is a great deal of unreality in many things; and while I give my vote for reform in dress and name [for Africans, or at least those in the West African Settlements, should learn to be original.] I would give ten thousand more for total reform in those of more vital importance.

Congratulating Her Majesty the Queen on her Jubilee and Sierra Leone at her Centenary.

I subscribe myself Mr. Editor Yours obligingly

BEATRICE.

Mr. Editor,—It has just come to my knowledge that Darwan's War Boys scattered over the Upper Kittam are causing great distress to Traders in that part of the country—Messrs J.B.Brown of Mo'Palmer and G.A. Taylor of Cumberland have been all but plundered of the Goods they had in their stores—They have attempted, I am told, to remove a portion of their Stock, but were given plainly to understand, if they did so, they would be plundered.—Mr.S.B. A. Macfoy's Factory at Bandakor has been treated likewise.

Darwah is preparing an attack on Makayah, and I presume his boys are thus making provision, for the struggle these two giants are about having.—On the other hand I learn that Makayah has brought over to his side no end of warriors from all parts of the country and that famous Sourie Beyoh, so well known in the Impereh, is on his way with about 200 followers to Makayah's stronghold, to receive instructions—It is said Fah Woondoo's town is "pointde mire."

It is likely there is a double intent Darwah himself being doomed for attack; as I also learn that Mendi Ngirah is to dispatch his war, and come down by way of the Gallinas whilst Makayah's war goes by way of Boom and Kittam.

It is also reported that Gberohwar has bought war against Gberry, who is his nephew, I cannot vouch for the veracity of this, but as I intend paying a visit to the Boom in short, I shall be able to write more certainly on the matter, at a future date. Why the Government has not yet taken steps to punish the marauders who ran through the Gallinas into British soil is beyond my comprehension.—They have allowed these people to do what they like and to select their own time to disperse to their respective towns. I am certain some Commandant would have taken the responsibility on his shoulders and gone with the force at his disposal (40 constables) to attack the enemy whilst at hand at Mannee. But I presume, our Commandant was unable to proceed further than Sulymah; armed as he was with "Boots & leggings" after his Grand March from Messmah to Lavanah. I regret however to learn, that he is unwell as a result, I presume of this Grand fete, which ought to make him rank next to Sir F. Roberts.

We hear that Sir Samuel Rowe is in Freetown and may be up this way in two or three weeks, by that time the whole country may also be on fire, but let us hope he may still be here in time, to avert the great conflagration and give these people what they deserve—A good thrashing.

A Looker on.

RELEASED BY THE WAR CHIEF.

Mr. Edward C. Philips, native of Godrich was captured in the martin Creek with a canoe load of rice, by William Caulker's war boys who took his rice had tied his left hand to his neck put an iron pot filled with palm oil on his, head marched him overland to Lawanah. Head quarters for the war. Being a Sierra Leone man he was kept from the Chief who had given orders that they must not make prisoners of Sierra Leone people, they striped off his clothes and with a knife cut off his beard and then gave him a good flogging & chained his feet to keep him from runing off They next quarrelled amongst themselves as to who should have him finally William got to hear that they had a Sierra Leone man he ordered him to be brought before him, this was done after much contention and he was released having been six days with them.

Damba of Pamkra who to avenge himself of some grievance ordered a detachment of war boys from Mendi and began plundering vilages and carrying off property and people to satisfy himself suddenly came in contact with William T. G. Caulker's war boys who made him (Damba) a prisoner and sent him to their master.

LEND A HAND.

"Selected by R. Cookson Taylor."

Lend a hand to one another
In the daily toil of life
When we meet a weaker brother
Let us help him in the strife
There is none so rich but may
In his turn be forced to borrow
And the poor man's lot today
May become our own tomorrow.

Lend a hand to one another
When malicious tongues have thrown
Dark suspicion on your brother
Be not prompt to cast a stone
There is none so good, but may Run adrift in shame and sorrow
And the good man of today
May become the bad tomorrow

Lend a hand to one another
In the race for Honor's crown
Should it fall upon your brother
Let not envy tear it down
Lend a hand to all we pray
In their sunshine or their sorrow
And the prize they've won today
May become our own tomorrow.

SMALL DOGS IN THE HOUSE.

Mr. Editor,—Some one in your last Issue, signing as "Enquirer" most pitifully asks "Is there any impropriety in allowing small Dogs to be in the house so long as they do not disturb anyone?" and the same writer remarks further "I have seen it allowed all my life, but now a days some people would like to set up new customs." Now as to the propriety of the matter; circumstances would have much to do with it; If the dogs were very small, not too young, very clean, free from fleas, no tendency to hydrophobia, then it might be proper enough to allow them to be in the house provided it be agreeable to all the inmates; but I should object to their being in the parlor or dining room even then, with all the above prescribed decency.

As to "Enquirers" having seen it allowed all his life, that may be true; since I have seen 'cows,' 'pigs,' & 'sheep,' allowed to be in the houses, more or less, of careless filthy people; many times in my life, but I must confess that I have never felt like forming such Associations. The mere fact of having seen a thing or even its propriety, according to long established custom, does not make it right. Nor does the liking or opinion of one person or even a number of persons for any given custom, prevent any other person from disliking or seeking to change that custom although the usage be of long standing. Therefore as I dislike dogs, I oppose the custom of keeping a lot of filthy curs, either in or out of the house. Hoping this reply may be satisfactory. I remain Yours.

A holy life is made up of a number of small things. Little words, not eloquent speeches or sermons; little deeds, not miracles or battles, nor one great heroic act of mighty martyrdom, make up the true christian life. The little constant sunbeam, not the lightning; the waters of Siloam "that go softly" in the meek mission of refreshment, not the "waters of the river, great and many," rushing down in noisy torrents, are the true symbols of a holy life. The avoidance of little evils, little sins, little inconsistencies, little follies, indiscretions, and improdences, little foibles, little indulgences of the flesh; the avoidances of such little things, as these go far to make up, at least, the negative of such holy life. KONCONANY STATION.

There is reason for us to be thankful to Almighty God for His continual grace and strength to carry on this good work. Although we have only a few members here, yet on the other hand we are glad of repeating success that we have met with both here and abroad. At present, life seems to breathe in our midst, and the evil one as it were is disappearing from among us and the House of Jehovah is properly crowded with people. The Sabbath is properly honored, both by the Sierra-Leoneans and the natives.

The out Stations have been properly visited duridg this quarter; except that on the latter part of April when struck with the sudden departure by death of my elder son then there was an embarrassment in my feelings, which caused some little disappointment in the freely visiting of the other stations. But at present, I feel to submit to the will of the Almighty and rely on him for strength and true courage to persevere in this precious work set before me. The day school is thinly attended, caused by the fewness of children stationed here. These children are doing well in their lessons.

We had a precious time last Sunday the 26th last in our Sabbath School, when these questions were put forth by those present respecting "The intermediate state of the righteous, and With what bodies will man rise from their graves in the morning of the resurrection?"

These questions were properly explained, although there were some who were trying to go against truth.

On the whole, we are having good times here, fellow help and sympathise with each daily be in our midst, and enrich us with his blessings, and help us to be faithful in all that we do.—Yours in Christ,

Konconany Station, 30th June 1887. T. N. JOAH

My dear Bro.,

You will be glad to know that our work in this District has by renewed efforts been very encouraging. Mr. T. R. Avery has rendered very valuable services to the Itinerating work and relieved me occasionally from some engagements that might prevent my visiting round the District; and since the commencement of this month I have made two trips out in the small boat; the first of which is as follows:—

Late in the evening of Friday the 3rd Inst., I was actuated to make a trip to Bendoomah River (between this and Konconany station.) Venturing however against the flood-tide from Avery, it began to ebb ere we have got to Yoker (the first town on the West bank of Konconany river) I resolved to stay at Gerrehoon here we spent the night. About 5 a.m. we made out again with a favorable tide; landed at Ghundumah in Bendoomah river at 9 25 that morning, expecting then to find Mr. Morgan at home; but on being told of his absence to the town Bendoomah we proceeded to meet him. This was indeed a pleasant ride. Gliding into Bendoomah Creek we were fortunate to meet him in a small canoe with Mrs. Reader going to the next town (Mistro) about the head of the river, with their consent to enjoy my company thereto they got into my boat. We landed there 10 minutes after 10 when with Mr. Morgan as my guide I visited a few of the Sierra Leone friends and others with whom I have been acquainted and then announced to hold preaching service about half an hour afterwards. At 10.45 the Barrie was put in order and there was a gathering of 28 persons besides others that refused to be present. Being in a most manner listened to the solemn address made from these important words "There is no discharge in that war" &c, Ecclesiastes 8 8. I am happy to state that all have been edified; four Sierra Leoneans who before had been indulging malice and would not speak to each other, were in the presence of the assembly reconciled together soon after the address. May the God of Peace enter fully into their hearts and abide with them continually. At the close of the service I conversed with a few of the principal men about the building they had set up for the worship of God; encouraged them in a few words and parted. We left this place at 1.15. and arrived at Avery 7 p.m. You will hear from me again.—Yours in Christ,

S. B. MORRISON.

THE ATTENTION OF ALL!

Dear Mr. Editor,—Allow me space through the medium of your JOURNAL to free my mind of the great doubt which surpasses me respecting books and need some individual to put me in to light.

In perusing over the issue of June 30th I espied an article signed by a correspondent "Justitia" under the head of "My view of things," mentioning the enjoyments by various classes of people, nations and languages, mechanics of all grades, during the happy season of "The Jubilee of the Queen" and the Centenary of "Sierra Leone," which Sherbro from its state of infancy up to the present, had never yet enjoyed. It is a fact which no one who was present from Monday the 20th to Friday the 24th could deny. But to my surprise and sorry to find, that a certain class of people who ought to be the first to be noticed, and who are to be on the leading parts of these enjoyments, as they are the fit thorough, and true representatives of our Queen, have been sadly neglected, dispitefully treated, and shamefully disgraced. (The Constables) Mr. Editor, why this class of people have no share in these Enjoyments? Are they not the representatives of the Queen? Is it not the Queen's Jubilee, the Centenary of "Sierra Leone" our attention has been called to participate? Why then the Enjoyments are not properly and perfectly extended to all as the Queen desires and commands! Is it because the reputation of this people are of a low standing in this country, hence no notice taken of them? I hope not. I believe that we shall read something about the foreign Constables how they were treated, from the London News papers now expected. Our Constables who wear the Crowns of Her Majesty daily, upon their bodies showing to the public their zeal to prosecute the duties incumbent upon them, ought to come out like great and mighty Heroes for the Queen, and not to be less looked upon or be behind. If the Executive Committee could thus think of the natives, who merely could assist in the rejoicings, but know not for what purpose they rejoiced; should also think of the enjoyments, it matters not if their own were to be in their Station-house, as it is certainly known that their Station-house doors would never be closed on any pretence whatever, but it is not yet late to let the Constables have from the Executive Committee, or from the fatherly feelings of our beloved Commandant, a good treat so as to encourage them to know that they too are loyal subjects of our blessed and gracious Queen. Thanking you Mr. Editor for space occupied.

Yours on behalf of the Constables,
Bonthe, Sherbro, VOX POPULI.
July 4th, 1887.

Dear Mr Editor—Please allow me a prominent place in your valuable columns, to solicit aid for a School opened at a town called Beeow in Lavanah, over nineteen months ago by one T.G. Macarthy (trader) of the said town, above mentioned, under the management of no connexion since that period: And I thought it necessary to inform the public and Missionaries in general, that they will please give a call to this part of the Vineyard and see the progress of the young and children to their greatest delight. There are on the rolls two girls and ten boys making a total of twelve; and there would have been more than that number had the School been a public one. For some of the children are paying sixpence each month, who are not Mr Macarthy's. And I do sincerely believe, that if the School be under the kind management of a Mission, success is sure to be obtained the place and crowded with children.

I wish the Missionaries may not give a deaf ear, but join together in heart and mind to strengthen the illumination of the heathens in this part of the Vineyard.

Let your light so shine before men
That they may see your good works
And glorify your father in Heaven
I close to be most earnestly
A. P. FREEMAN

THE WICKED BIBLE.

A name given to an edition of the Bible published in 1632 by Barker and Lucas, became the word not was omitted from the seventh commandment. The printers were called before the high commission, fined heavily, and the whole impression destroyed.

Man-like is it to fall into sin,
Friend-like is it to dwell [therein,
Christ-like is it for sin to [grieve,
God-like is it all sin to for- [give!

The doctrines of grace humble a man without degrading him, and exalt him without inflating him.

TIMELY MOVEMENTS.

We refer to the prompt action of G.H.Garrett Esq Officer in charge, during the absence of Comdt Moseley, so long detained on our Southern Frontier; the Report it would appear, having reached him of the approach of a war party from the upper Gbargroo that were trying to get down, either to Shaingay District or Themdale Country, it does not appear which, but Mr. Garrett ascended the Gbargroo at once and investigated the matter about the 4th of June and subsequently placed constables along the frontier between the upper Gbargroo and the lower country, which secured the entrance from that way; but as all danger did not seem to be over, or perhaps to prevent a flank movement of the enemy by the way of the head-waters of the Kargborroh Mr. Garrett again about June 13th ascended the Gbargroo with additional police to strengthen the force and thus the approach of the enemy from the upper Gbargroo was secured just in time to prevent great destruction, at least in the Themdale region. Shortly after this we are informed that he made equally as timely a move in visiting the Tucker river and placing police along that frontier which prevented the robber bands of William T. G. Caulker from ruining the Themdale country; an account of which has been communicated to us and will appear in our next issue. One Merchant trader, of large capital, said to us the other day that the prompt movement of the officer in charge Mr.Garrett in placing constables along the Yal Tucker, had saved him at least Two thousand pounds; while it had also saved numerous lives, with the property of many other Merchants and Traders; It is needless to say that Mr. Garrett has the grateful thanks of our informant and the many others interested in the Themdale country for his timely efforts, in their behalf. As for our own part we have ever commended prompt and judicious action, on the part of Government officials, and it is one of the things that has often led us to speak in praise of our worthy commandant C. H. Harley Moseley; and we are glad now to add to our list of praiseworthy Officers the name of G. H. Garrett Esq: who of late has shown such abillity in the management of the affairs of Government as to call forth the spontaneous gratitude of so many of Her Majesty's subjects.

Rev. and Mrs. Sage, who were appointed by the Board as our missionaries, will go out to Africa about the first of October. They are both graduates of Union Biblical Seminary, and have been in Africa under the general Board. On account of exposure at a very unhealthy station, Mr. Sage broke down in health, and they returned. The physician who knows Brother Sage best, says, "He has entirely recovered from his malarial troubles, and is at par in every respect." Rotufunk is higher and more healthy, and, with their experience, they will undoubtedly render us much better service than any others we could have secured. All who heard them speak at the Board meeting, and witnessed the impressive consecration service, will give them their sympathy and prayers. They will spend the time until they sail in preparation. The Trustees asked them to do only such work as would not interfere with their strength and best preparation for their journey.—Woman's Evangel.

DIED.—We regret very much to note the death of Mrs. Wm. Lewis Junr., which sad event occurred on the 1st inst. in Freetown, we believe. Mr. Lewis her husband, who has been for some time engaged in erecting a Saw-Mill was suddenly called to go to her bed-side, but we have been informed that Mrs Lewis had passed away ere he reached home; we sympathize with Mr. Lewis and family in their affliction.

FROM SHAINGAY.

Our latest from the District gives a sad account of the condition of the Country, all the best towns have been burned and with them several Mission Stations, we believe, have been plundered and one N'Charmany has been burned. Some of the teachers have been badly used, books and School-furniture destroyed; and Chapels in some cases made use of as Garden-houses, by the filthy war boys. Some Itinerants have barely escaped with their lives, having been met by war parties, while traveling in prosecuti'n of the work of pre'ch ing. Many of the Itinerating Towns have be'n burn'd & nearly all are without inhabitant. The whole of the land has been ruined by the ruthless hands of lawless Brigands, under the leadership of the unprincipled William T.G. Caulker aided by the treacherous Kogbah, who we are glad to learn are now in the hands of the Authorities and we hope they deal with them as they deserve. Since the capture of William and Kogbah we are continually hearing of threats from the interior and now and then from Cbf Humpah Rango.

FROM GBARGROO.

Dear Editor,—We have now and again had war threats in this District. Last Sunday at 3 p.m. there was more than enough to scare out an elephant from the woods. Great numbers of men and women from the firkies with their children baggages and all in a flight rushed into the Mission premises for safety. You would then imagine from experience the sudden mass of confusion that took place in less than 10 minutes. This disorder was caused by three persons.

1. A woman named Yamah Kye went from Mopampi of Manoh Gbargroo to see some of her relatives at Palma in the Timber regions when she happened to meet with a man who after enquiring of her whereabouts said "Go from this place, dont sleep here to night; the war boys will pass off to Manoh Gbargroo before the break of day."

2. A man was sent by Soree Cammerah to inform Chief Seylolo that the war boys have succeeded with the chief of Palma who gave them a pass and that they might likely cross over that Sunday to Manoh Bargroo.

3. A Mr. James Cole who was returning then from Mo-Tassoe having got this information by the way confirmed it so persistently that none dare stay about the way.

There were more than sixty persons besides children that took lodging with us that night and despite their courage to return home to their houses yet their valuables still secured in our store and for which they are very thankful. I need hardly mention the complete order and manly spirit manifested by the police constables & some of the men to defend the right if the news had been true, but we owe a great deal more to the kind providence of our Heavenly Father for preserving mercies. Still we are on the look out in cased emergency as the state of the country is rather unsettled. You will hear from me again. Thanking you for the space occupied.—S. B. M.

Avery Station
13th July 1887

We regret to note the illness of our Comdt. C. H. Harley Moseley, although not confined to his room yet quite out of order for work, and ought to have a change for quiet and better air; which would no doubt bring him around alright in a short time.

We learn from recent reports, that Capt.A.North Daniel is officer in charge at Shaingay at present, he is in every way fitted for such a trying position as Shaingay now presents. So many rumors and false alarms almost every day,, some, near, and in some cases startling report is raised just now, it seems that all fear or expect a horde of wild Mendies from the interior.

Mr A. P Doomahbey arrived here from Mando on Saturday night the 9th inst. he confirmed the report of the capture of Wm. T. G. Caulker near Rembee by Corp'l Fyne of Shaingay.

Dear Editor,—Will you or any of your readers be so kind as please to inform me why is it the Mail Boat homeward bound from Bonthe does not touch at Shaingay although it is one of the Postal points? and why it is outward bound she simply delivers the letters into the hands of the Postmaster and sets sail again, without any time being allowed to owners of letters to reply? and may I further be permitted to ask, why is it that so many Police men are to be seen about the streets of Bonthe with banded ears?

Now that the rains are very heavy and so much water settled about the streets, would it be out of the line of duty if the Government Authorities should cause proper drains to be made all over the town? Awaiting your reply, with kind regards.—Yours truly,

Bonthe, BATHURST.

11th July '87.

Dear Sir,—I trust you will very kindly permit me to correct an oversight in the "Personal" of your last issue and which is to say that Rev. R. C. and Mrs Taylor returned to Mando, but that Mrs Richards and myself are still here. With kind regards and thanking you for space occupied. Yrs humbly Bonthe, 11th July '87. J. A. Richards.

Personal

Mrs Moseley arrived here on the 2nd inst from Freetown per s. s. Foutah; and we are pleased to learn that she has been greatly benefitted, by the change, although we understand, that she has not been out of the colony.

Mr. Allen Caulker, of Shaingay was in this place about the 6th inst and gave us a pleasant call he reported the capture of the war chief W.T.G. Caulker also Kogbah an accomplice in the diabolical tragedy enacted in the Shaingay district of late.

July 2.—Mr. Roques examing officer at Lavanah arrived from Freetown pr s. s. Foutah.

Mr. Chas Gilpin (Doctor's cook) was attacked by a huge alligator on Saturday the 2nd instant at the cut over when crossing over to Mocolo. He had a narrow escape. The attention of the commandant is called to this, as repeated complaints have been made in this journal about the bad and dangerous state of the crossing.

July 5th. Rev. G. G. M. Nicol returned from Freetown today feeling much better for even the brief change and sea travel; but were sorry to learn almost missed the Jubilee and Centenary Festivities having reached Freetown rather late.

Mr. J. Walenstien Domingo of N'Charmany Station Shaingay District, left here on the evening of the 5th returning to his station after which he will proceed to Shaingay to see Rev J. Gomer the Supt. and receive further instructions. Mr. Domingo has displayed great courage, energy, and devotion under severe trials and in the face of great dangers.

5.—Miss Cassandra Parkinson arrived from Freetown.

Mr. Obadiah J. Thomas left this day for Freetown.

Mr. C. T. O. Davis paid a special visit to Mokate on important business. He has since returned.

8th. Sergt. Taylor arrived this morning from Gbangbiah with the dead body of police Constable Johnson who he had been to arrest for an assault on another Constable, but met other parties in the way, we believe, coming with the dead body of Johnson, who it appears had shot himself.

8th Sergt. Hamilton gave us a look in this afternoon, we had not seen him for sometime, he having been away to Sulymah for a time.

Collector G. H. Garrett Esqr leaves today 15th inst for the Sulymah district on a visiting tour of the Customs Stations he expects to return in few days.

Dear Mr. Editor,

Permit me through the medium of your Journal to express my views on the article signed by "Fact" in your column of the 15th inst. the object of which seems to be a tincture produced from a dishonest mind in tendency of which is evil, otherwise I am at a loss to know why "Fact" cannot be fair in his statement; and let the candle light of Truth be the supreme in this intelligent account.

The writer has succeeded by his able pen to point out to the world defects in the management of business by Merchants in Sherbro thereby having cause to dismiss about three clerks (from different employ as doubt) he says, from dishonesty and the cause of this crime he attributes to be the want of high salary by which the offenders are induced to become dishonest. He has been kind enough also to point out proper remedy that £30 should be the minimum salary for three clerks per annum which must of necessity, it appears to be in a business where the annual transactions (not income) comes up to £1000 or so although the business in its solid basis may or not afford it is a question Mr. "Fact" has not solved. He suggests that our "so called Merchants" open no 'he' twight that it appears that he sees it practicable to be disposed to teach and Novices to learn the better Method for the rudiments of Merchandising, as wonders never cease, so we must live to learn. Now Mr. Editor your readers could not otherwise consider Mr. "Fact's" capacity than a man of business, as he could not be a business man.

Reviewing this subject on neutral grounds although not a Merchant myself, I can constentiously observe the cause attributable to the tendency of demoralizing the moral principle which Fact has, or may intention ally fail to prove in the habit conduct, and practice of these clerks the gentlemen, assignable to sensuality, indiscretion, Extravagance, and Luxury. Having gone beyond my limit in the space already occupied Mr. Editor, an instance alone I shall confine to this time. Let Mr. "Fact" prove how can Mr. A., who is earning £60. monthly and must be in love with "Four" in playing the big reality with pride enters with arrangement to keep the Misses L., with 10s. O. 7s. 6d. V. 5s. 4 F. 2s. 6d. monthly if not more as circumstances may offer, besides round need must be supplied and can easily go into debt for a pair of Ladies Boots, Shawl, & Hat. He himself must be attired sumptiously in costly dress to make himself the more respectable, his domestic expense I leave for you and your readers to imagine for a Gentleman of such Ladies honorable positions besides his dignity to rank with Elites. The higher the wages the higher the sin, responsibility increases, honor rises, what must be the result but dishonesty is not the old adage that teaches us to take care of the Farthings and the Pounds will take care of themselves? If the wages fails to prove a man's honesty I cannot guarrantee him for £25. As the Ethiopian cannot change his skin, so it is not possible for anything inductive to reform a dishonest mind. I would simply furnish "Mr. Fact" without admiration to our African Agents managing business for Firms whose principles are on the other side of the globe. These men are entrusted with thousands of pounds without fear, but they do not look from shop boy over the counter to the preferment of an Agency they have perseveringly began at the foot of the ladder from one stage to the other gaining confidence by their humble interestedness and honest services merited the honor from low salary to what they meritoriously deserve. They were polished, refined, and well bred men in matters not of age, race, and position of their lives; treat them respectfully and they shall condescend with nothing inducing to tarnish their character, there being no royal round to literary attainment as there is nothing to polish them better than honesty.

I admit as such that an honest man should be well and fairly supported. But how can the so called Merchants offer the legal salary Mr. "Fact" suggests when on a mere test on the first stage, confidence is betrayed. These clerks do not merit it. Unless Mr. Editor Fact is clad in such phases as a proof of his improvement to the Centenary as "Birds of the same feathers" would certainly submit and prejudice Truth.

OUR PRESENT TROUBLE.

Mr. Editor—I promised in my last to continue the subject, and since then things have come to the worst. I cannot give in detail what has transpired since I wrote, therefore allow me to be brief. We had an attack yesterday by William T. G. Caulker's warriors, and glad to say they were routed and driven back. They killed a young man named Joseph Will on the way from the Mission to Shaingay. Today they made another attack and were severely beaten by our party about six of them were killed besides those who ran away wounded. It is said to hear that Thomas Kobor, Franklin Caulker, Richard Caulker, Krembah and others, members of the same Caulker-family are flaked together to destroy and if possible exterminate the Mission. But one thing I know the Lord is with us and we shall gain the victory." We are not the least frightened for when we stood with them this morning hand to hand, they could not withstand as they supposed. Back of all these they were encouraged by Franklin Caulker. We came with them and stopped at Pa'ne a fatkie about a mile and a half from the Mission premises and told them to proceed to Sinogay, that there is no danger. A man of war and the Government steam launch from Freetown reached this port with Capt. Halkett and 20 constables who have gone up to where William is I believe to arrest him and others who have combined to kill the chief and lay this country in utter desolation.

The facts of this matter are obtained from four of those who were left captives by them but who escaped and reached us yesterdight. At first William pretended by his sayings to some Sierra Leone traders that he means nothing against Sierra Leoneans and English people but sir they caught five Sierra Leoneans at the town of dauwo who are now in their hands, receiving brutal and bararous treatment.

The whole of chief T. Neal Caulker's territory is already being pillaged by William's war band only Shaingay Mission Station remains. Words cannot express the present condition that those rascals have put the town Shaingay, it is only good for one to see her himself. The Shaingay Mission is indeed a blessing to this country in an indescribable measure. There are over a hundred refugees now at Easthourne's Grove Shaingay, Residence of F. W. Heatherfore and about some number at Rev J. Gomer's Mission House. We are miserably situated at present. Watch must be kept both day and night as the scoundrels are expected every minute. Sunday the 19th was a day that they seized advantage of, they thought we would be in service and so get us, therefore they came first at service hour. We knew very well that that would be the case as there are many among the rebels, many who are half civilized and know a great deal about Sunday. They made the first to fire at us and we were so engaged with them that there was nothing about us that shows the solemnity of the Sabbath day. In conclusion, let me add that this puts us in mind of the many battles that the Lord in days of old fought for his people and the two engagements that we have had with the war boys are evidence of the fact that the Lord is with us.

We had commenced a week of prayer and was almost through the week before we were interrupted. You will hear from me again,

Mr. Editor,—In perusing the Articles written on the 15th and 30th of May last, I observed that there is a contention between a Mr. D.A.NIEL, and a C.ESAU. In comparison, it seems to me that each individual maintain their grounds on good reason, nevertheless Mr. D.A.Niel thought that because he was silent some time, Cæsar may think that he is a coward. It is to imitate every admonition contained in the Sacred writings "a still tongue will make a wise head" the common proverb is "cowards keeps sound joints" Mr. D.A.Niel should always have in memo. the words of the Apostle Peter "if you suffer for evil or for well doing he should bare it patiently" patient should be his grand theme. In reading a part of that wonderful Lecture delivered by J. A. Cole therein it is said that the negro race is destined to govern themselves until the end of time, why not we as African children be unanimous!

There is abundance of intelligence around the community of Sherbro District to insert in the "Early Dawn" the conducts of the native chiefs how they sometimes appear before the Civil Commandant in sheep's clothing, all these are sufficient—Now Mr. Cæsar, it is wisdom in you if you remain quiet and be looking after your personal interest; there is more of the world before you to be planning and experiencing, since you have started life's journey as a man, there were many trying events which you have come to, at would be wise for Cæsar and D. A. Niel to face each other like brave generals putting down the old man with his deeds—and take up the new man which is renewed in righteousness for his paths are paths of peace.
